vittapūrṇam, "full of wealth." The commentators who share this reading understand, "preceded or accompanied by gifts of wealth (vittadānapūrvam—so Ck, Cg, and Ct; Cr similarly)." D6,7,10,11,T1,2,G3,M3,5,7–9, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read for vyasarjayat, "he had [them] dismissed," a second gerund, visṛjya ca, "and having dismissed [them]." In this reading, the syntax of the succession of subordinate clauses is not resolved until the finite verb praviveśa, "he entered," in 3d.

Following verse 2, T1,M3, and GPP (in brackets, unnumbered, between 7.99.5 and 7.99.6), KK, and VSP insert a passage of one line [1379*]: "And when Rāghava had concluded the sacrifice in this fashion, according to the ritual injunctions . . . (evaṃ samāpya yajñaṃ tu vidhivat sa tu rāghavaḥ)."

3. "Then" tataḥ . . . / . . . tadā: Literally, "after that . . . then." The critical reading is redundant. Ñ,V,B1,D5,6,10,11,T3,4,M6, and GPP and NSP read sadā, "always," for tadā, "then." This then lends the line the sense "always cherishing."

"Rāma" rāmaḥ . . . / . . . saḥ: Literally, "Rāma . . . he." The pronoun saḥ is marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition. Ś,Ñ,V,B1–4,D,T3,4,G1,M1,2,4,5,7,10, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the verse filler or emphatic particle ha.

"cherishing Sītā in his heart" hṛdi kṛtvā . . . sītām: Literally, "having placed Sītā in his heart."

Following verse 3, T1,M3, and GPP (in brackets, unnumbered, between 7.99.6 and 7.99.7), KK, and VSP insert a passage of one line [1380*]: "Having offered that sacrifice, the lord of the Raghus,[1] together with his two sons . . . (iṣṭayajño raghupatiḥ putradvayasamanvitaḥ)."

[1] "the lord of the Raghus" raghupatiḥ: GPP, KK, and VSP read instead narapatiḥ, "the lord of men."

4. "took no wife after Sītā" na sītāyāḥ parāṃ bhāryāṃ vavre: Literally, "he did not marry a wife different from Sītā." Cr glosses "different (bhinnām)" for the parām. Cs is the commentator who is most invested in the issue of Rāma's monogamy. He offers several possible explanations for Rāma's failure to take another wife. He sees the verse as a response to the question as to why Rāma did not, after all his troubles, extend his hand in marriage to another long-eyed lady. He argues first that Rāma does not remarry because, glossing the term sītāyāḥ as elliptical for "because of Sītā's presence (sītāyāḥ sākāśāt)," he understands that Sītā is not truly gone. Alternatively, Cs argues that the goddess Kamalā [Lakṣmī] has taken birth in visible form at the time of the incarnation [of Rāma] and was not born in any other form. Or [assuming the inseparable bond between Rāma and Sītā] he does not do so because of the unsuitability of taking what he already possesses. Cs then quotes several verses from an unnamed purāṇic version of the Rāma story to support his argument: "Approaching the roots of the aśoka tree, Rāma showed himself to Jānakī, his constant consort, although she looked away shyly. He then appeared to renounce Jānakī. Although she remained in Rāma's presence, the goddess was not visible to the dull-witted. Taking another form, his eternal consort repaired to Mount Kailāsa. When Rāma could constantly gaze upon his inseparable lady, he was filled with great joy, but when the goddess was not to be seen, he was as if in a dire state." This passage, Cs continues, demonstrates that although Rāma openly manifests the pangs of separation from Sītā, he is secretly united with the lady of Videha, and so one should not even imagine his union with any other woman. Therefore, Cs concludes, in response to the question as to how Rāma could perform sacrifices, the poet repeats the term yajña, "sacrifice," to dispel the erroneous notion that because Rāma was separated [from his wife] he was able to complete only one aśvamedha. (iyatāyāsena kiṃ kim aparām āyatākṣīṃ pāṇigṛhītīṃ nātanod rāghava ity ata āha—neti. sītāyāḥ sākāśāt. avatā- rāvasara evālocyakamalaitadrūpiṇī jātā na jātānyā tadrūpiṇīti svasvīkārāyogyatvena vā. aśokamūlam āsādya darśayāmāsa jānakīm / nityāviyoginīṃ devīṃ rāmo mandadṛśām api /—tatyājeva sa jānakīm—rāmāntike sthitā devī na mandaiḥ samadṛśyata / rūpāntareṇa kailāsaṃ gatā nityāviyoginī / nityaṃ paśyan nijāṃ devīṃ pūrṇasaṃtoṣasaṃbhṛtaḥ / rāmo na dṛśyate devīty abhūt saṅkaṭavān iva / ity ukteḥ pradarśitasītāviraho rahovidehajāsahita eveti vānyakāminyāsaktir nety mantavyam. tarhi kratukṛtiḥ katham ity ukteḥ vyavahitatvād uktam evaikāśvamedhaparyavasāyiteti bhramabhraṃśanāya yajñe yajña iti vīpsoktyā vivṛṇoti yajñe yajña iti.)

"a golden Jānakī served in the role of his wife" patnyarthaṃ jānakī kāñcanī bhavat: Literally, "for the purpose of a wife, there was a golden Jānakī." Ck, Ct, and Cr correct the augmentless imperfect (lañ) bhavat, "there was" (bhavad abhavat). Cr explains that in every sacrifice there was a Jānakī made of gold for the purpose of accomplishing the duties that are to be accomplished by a wife (yajñe yajñe sarvasmin yāge patnyarthaṃ patnīsādhyakāryasiddhyarthaṃ kāñcanī suvarṇamayī jānakī bhavad abhavad). Cg argues that this verse shows both that Rāma had taken a vow of monogamy and that he performed his sacrifices through the means of a surrogate for Sītā (na sītāyā ity anena rāmasyaikadāravrataṃ sītāpratinidhinaiva yajñanirvartanaṃ ca darśitam). See 7.82.17–19, and notes.

5. "For ten thousand years he performed the aśvamedha" daśavarṣasahasrāṇi vājimedham upākarot: Literally, "for ten thousand years he undertook a vājimedha." The sequence karot of the word upākarot, "he performed," is marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition. D7,10,11,T3,4,M5,7,8, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read athākarot, "then he performed," for upākarot, "he undertook." D6,7,10,11,T3,4, and Lahore, Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read the plural vājimedhān for the singular vājimedham. The commentators are concerned about the length of time specified in this verse, as well as the number of the different types of sacrifices that Rāma performs. Ct quotes Ck to the effect that the mention of the period of ten thousand years indicates the duration of the [aśvamedha] sacrifice and not the period of time during which Rāma performed sacrifices after his separation from Sītā. It would thus appear that Ck, whose text frequently reads with the critical text, perhaps reads with the critical edition here as well, although the text of his commentary available to us omits this discussion entirely. In response, Ct argues, while one might debate the objection as to the duration of the sacrifice following [Rāma's] separation from Sītā, it is absolutely incorrect to say that this refers to the period following Sītā's entrance into the earth. (daśavarṣasahasrāṇīti yāgakālamāryādeyam na tu sītāviyogānantaraṃ tāvān yāgakāla iti katakaḥ. tatra sītāviyogānanataraṃ tāvato yāgakālatve kiṃ bādhakam iti cintyam. na tu bhūmau sītāgamanottaram iti vaktuṃ yuktam.) Cg's understanding is that when the poet talks of the ten thousand years during which the sacrifices were performed, it was at the first of these, the aśvamedha, that Sītā entered the earth (daśavarṣasahasrāṇīty anena prathamayajña eva sītāyā bhūpraveśa ity uktam). Cm understands the apparent contradiction of this verse with the version given in the Padmapurāṇa as an expression of the variances in historical events as they recur in the course of the repeated cycles of the cosmic eons (sītāviyogānantaraṃ daśavarṣasahasrāṇi vājimedhān akarod ity etad vacanaṃ kalpabhedavivakṣayoktam iti draṣṭavyam). See critical apparatus on 7.89.5 (p. 483). Cr understands that the verse is not only about the number of sacrifices Rāma performs but about the complex issue of the duration of his reign. In his comments to 6.116.82, he argues that Rāma rules the kingdom for three periods of ten thousand years each, and following each such period he performs sacrifices for one thousand years, yielding a total of thirty-three thousand years. The problem for Cr is that the current passage would appear to be in contradiction with 1.1.76, where Rāma is said to rule for eleven thousand years, and with the Padmapurāṇa, where he is said to rule for ten thousand years while making love to Sītā. Cr's effort therefore, unlike Cm's, is to harmonize the seemingly differing calculations. He begins by noting that the verse informs us about the enumeration of Rāma's sacrifices. He then reminds us of his previously stated position at 6.116.82 that Rāma actually ruled and performed sacrifices for a total of thirty-three thousand years. He insists that we insert the phrase "he ruled his kingdom" after the words "for ten thousand years." Then we are to understand that Rāma performed aśvamedhas for three thousand years and that these were replete with sacrificial fees of ample gold. Moreover, Rāma performed ten times as many vājapeya sacrifices as he did aśvamedhas, so that up to the end of a period of three thousand years, he performed ten aśvamedhas and ten times that many, that is to say, one hundred, vājapeyas. For this reason, Cr argues that this passage is not in contradiction with the passage [at 1.1.76] in which Rāma is said to have ruled for ten thousand years and a thousand years. Moreover, Cr concludes, the passage is in conformity with the Padmapurāṇa's verse according to which ten thousand years passed while Rāma was ruling and making love with Sītā. (yāgasaṃkhyāṃ bodhayann āha—daśeti. daśavarṣasahasrāṇi triṃśadvarṣasahasrāṇīty arthaḥ. rājyaṃ cakāreti śeṣaḥ. athānantaraṃ trisahasravarṣāṇīty arthaḥ. vājimedhān akarod bahusuvarṇakān vipulasuvarṇadakṣiṇākān daśaguṇān aśvamedhāpekṣayā daśaguṇādikān vājapeyān akarot. kiṃca varṣasahasrāṇi sahasratrayavarṣaparyantam ity arthaḥ. daśavājimedhān daśaguṇāñ chatasaṃkhyākān ity arthaḥ. vājapeyāṃś cākarod ata eva daśavarṣasahasrāṇi daśavarṣaśatāni cetyādinā na virodho 'ta eva—evaṃ praśāsatas tasya rāghavasya maheśvari / atyayād daśasāhasraṃ ramamāṇasya sītayetī padmapurāṇaṃ saṃgacchate.)

Our versions of the Padmapurāṇa do not specify how long Rāma performs the aśvamedha, only that he performs three such sacrifices with Sītā (PadmaP [ĀnSS] 4.69.25). Our versions of the Padmapurāṇa also specify that Rāma rules with Sītā for one thousand eleven years (ĀnSS 4.5.45) or one thousand years (ĀnSS 6.271.1) before performing the aśvamedha sacrifice[s] and then rules for eleven thousand years (ĀnSS 6.271.26,41), presumably without Sītā. See 1387*, note 1, following verse 15 below, and 7.92.16 and notes. See, too, notes to verses 6.116.82,90. On the vājapeya, see 7.99.2 and notes.

"as well as" tathā: The reading is marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition.

"in which there was a distribution of much gold" bahusuvarṇakān: Literally, "which had much gold." See Cr's comments above.

6. "And majestic Rāma offered the agniṣṭoma and the atirātra, as well as the gosava rites, at which great wealth was distributed, and other rites as well, accompanied by ample sacrificial fees." agniṣṭomātirātrābhyāṃ gosavaiś ca mahādhanaiḥ / īje kratubhir anyaiś ca śrīmān āptadakṣiṇaiḥ //: Literally, "He, the majestic one, sacrificed with the agniṣṭoma and the atirātra and with gosavas—possessing much wealth—as well as with other rites in which there were full fees." On the agniṣṭoma, see notes to 7.25.8. The atirātra is a type of soma sacrifice. See Kane 1974, vol. 2, pt. 2, p. 1205. The gosava is a one-day soma sacrifice. See ManuSm 11.74; MBh 3.31.16; 5.120.13; 13.106.1; and 13.134.57. See also Kane 1974, vol. 2, pt. 2, pp. 1212–13, note 2644.

7. "And" tu: The reading is marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition. V2,B2,3,D6,7,10,11,T3,4,G1,2,M1,2,4,5,7,9,10, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead ca, "and."

"ruled the kingdom" rājyasthasya: Literally, "while he was situated in the kingship."

8. "The apes, monkeys, and rākṣasas remained under Rāma's rule, and the kings were devoted to Rāghava, day in and day out." ṛkṣavānararakṣāṃsi sthitā rāmasya śāsane / anurañjanti rājāno ahany ahani rāghavam //: Note the hiatus between pādas c and d. Ś,Ñ,V,B,D1–4,8,9,12,M6, and KK and VSP read instead anurañjanti rājānam [Cg's variant] ahany ahani rāghavam / ṛkṣavānararakṣāṃsi sthitā rāmasya śāsane // by transposition.

"apes" ṛkṣa-: On the term ṛkṣa as "ape," see 6.28.1–3; 6.22.32; 6.54.14; 6.55.45; 6.102.21; etc. Compare, however, 7.31.18–19 and notes, where the term is translated as "bear." On the use of this term, see notes to 1.16.10 and R. Goldman 1989.

"the kings" rājānaḥ: Ś,Ñ,V1,3,D1–5,8,9,12,T,G1,3,M3, and KK and VSP read instead the accusative singular rājānam, which would then modify Rāghava, lending the line the sense "the apes, monkeys, and rākṣasas . . . were devoted to king Rāghava."

"were devoted to" anurajyanti: Ñ,V1,2,D6,7,10,M3,6,8,9, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the synonymous first gaṇa form, anurañjanti. Ct and Cs read the simplex in the sense of the causative, in other words, "the kings pleased or gratified Rāma." (anurañjanty anurañjayanti.) Cr understands the verb to govern not just the kings but also the apes, monkeys, and rākṣasas mentioned in the verse (ṛkṣādayo rājānaś ca rāghavam anurañjanti).

"day in and day out" ahany ahani: Literally, "in day after day." D6,7,10,M1,2,4–10, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press insert the pleonastic particle hi [hy] before ahany ahani, "in day after day," to avoid the hiatus between pādas c and d. Cs understands the particle hi in the sense of iva, "like or as if," interpreting the phrase to mean "every day as it seemed." (hir ivārthaḥ.)

9. "Parjanya brought the rains at the proper time" kāle varṣati parjanyaḥ: Literally, "Parjanya rained at the [proper] time." Compare verses 9 and 10 with 6.116.84–89 and notes, where virtually identical conditions are described. See, too, 7.40.13–17 and notes and 1.1.71–73 and notes for other descriptions of the Rāmarājya.

"there was abundant food" subhikṣam: Literally, "good food." We agree with Ck, Cg, Ct, and Cr, who add a copulative verb (abhavad iti śeṣaḥ—Ck, Cg, and Ct; astīti śeṣaḥ—so Cr).

10. "no one suffered an untimely death" nākāle mriyate kaścit: Literally, "No one died at the wrong time."

"nor . . . did illness afflict any living creature" na vyādhiḥ prāṇināṃ: Literally, "there was no disease of living things."

"at that time" tadā: The word is marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition. D6,7,10,11,T2,G1,2,M1,2,4–7,10, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead tathā, "as well."

"nor was there any breach of righteousness" nādharmaś cābhavat kaścit: Literally, "there was no unrighteousness whatsoever." D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read nānārthaḥ for nādharmaḥ, lending the pāda the sense "there was no calamity whatsoever."

11. "succumbed to the law of time" kāladharmam upāgamat: See note to 7.69.7 for other occurrences of the phrase kāladharma in the Rāmāyaṇa. Cr, continuing his identification of Sāketa as the heavenly abode of the House of Ikṣvāku, inserts a negative (possibly carrying over one of the negatives from verse 10) and glosses the phrase as "Rāma's mother went to the place where there was no law of time, that is, Sāketa (rāmamātā na kālasya dharmo yatra taṃ sāketam upāgamat)."

12. "Sumitrā followed her" anvīyaya sumitrāpi: Literally, "Sumitra, too, followed." Ñ1,V1,3,D2–4,6,7,9–11,T3,4,M2,4,6,7,8, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead ca, "and," for [a]pi, "too."

"who, after performing many different acts of righteousness, was established in the highest heaven" dharmaṃ kṛtvā bahuvidhaṃ tridive paryavasthitā: Literally, "having practiced dharma in many ways, [she was] established in the third heaven." The reference to Kaikeyī here no doubt obliquely suggests her rehabilitation after her infamous betrayal of her husband. Cr subjects the term tridiva to an analysis that is in accordance with his larger project. Deriving the term divaḥ, normally, "heaven," from the root √div in its sense of "praise," he explains: "tridive means in that [place] which has the praise of the three, Brahmā, etc. [i.e., Brahmā, Viṣṇu, and Śiva], that is to say, in Sāketa (tridive trayāṇāṃ brahmādīnāṃ divaḥ stutir yasya tasmin sākete . . .)."

13. "were established" pratiṣṭhitāḥ: B1,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead pramuditāḥ, "joyous or delighted."

"in heaven" svarge: Cr once more identifies the heavenly abode as Sāketa (svarge sākete). See notes to verse 12 above.

"resumed their wifely duties" sahadharmaṃ ca lebhire: Literally, "they obtained the shared duties." D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read sarvadharmam for sahadharmam, lending the pāda the sense "they attained every righteousness." Ck, Cg, Ct, and Cr understand the term sarvadharmam here to mean "the enjoyment of all pleasures that are to be accomplished through righteousness (sarvadharmasādhyasukhabhogam—so Ct; Ck, Cg, and Cr similarly)."

14. "gave generous donations . . . on behalf of his mothers " tāsām . . . mahādānam . . . prayacchati / mātṝṇām: This appears to be the only reference in the Rāmāyaṇa to the practice of memorial donation.

"to brahman ascetics" brāhmaṇeṣu tapasviṣu: So we understand the sequence. Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 611) understands that there are two separate groups of recipients: brahmans and ascetics. He translates, "Brahmanas and anchorites." The term tapasviṣu is marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition.

"without distinction" aviśeṣeṇa: We understand with Cr that the term refers to Rāma's equal reverence for all of his three mothers. This also reinforces the fact that Rāma appears to harbor no ill feelings toward Kaikeyī. See, for example, 2.96.15, where Rāma is said to grasp the feet of all his mothers. See, too, 6.115.39 and notes to 6.70.14.

15. " made offerings of many precious things to his ancestors" pitryāṇi bahuratnāni . . . / . . . cakāra: We read cakāra, "he made," in pāda c to govern both objects: pitryāṇi, "rites to the ancestors," in pāda a and yajñān, "sacrifices," in pāda b. D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead pitryāṇi brahmaratnāni, which Ck, Cg, and Ct take in the sense of valuable articles given to brahmans in connection with rites to the ancestors. They further understand brahmaratnāni to be the object of the verb prayacchati, "he gave," which they bring down from verse 14 (pitryāṇi pitṛkarmāpekṣitāni brahmaratnāni brāhmaṇadeyottamavastūni ca prayacchati smety anukarṣaḥ—so Ck; Cg and Ct similarly). Cr understands somewhat differently. He takes pitryāṇi to mean "causing pleasure to the ancestors" and brahmaratnāni to mean "excellent things suitable for brahmans"; he then supplies the verb "he [i.e., Rāma] gave." (pitryāṇi pitṛsukhakārakāṇi brahmaratnāni brāhmaṇayogyottamavastūni dadāv iti śeṣaḥ.) Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 631) understands the term ratna in its sense of "gems," translating, "accompagnées de joyaux pour les Brahmanes." In this he is followed by Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 620), who renders, "accompanied by gifts of gems to the Sages," and Benoît (1999, p. 1418), who offers, "en distribuant des bijoux aux brāhmanes."

"supremely excellent" paramadustarān: Literally, "supremely unsurpassed." The word dustara can also mean "difficult to accomplish," and some translators have understood it in this sense. Thus Gorresio (1870, p. 290) translates, "sacrifizi cui é difficile oltremodo il compiere" and Dutt (1894, p. 1914) offers, "of a very difficult sacrifice," while Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 611) renders, "many a difficult sacrifice" and Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 923) translates, "most difficult to perform."

"gratifying" vivardhayan: We follow Cr, who glosses, "pleasing or gratifying (saṃtoṣayan san)." Ct glosses, "worshiping (pūjayan)."

Following verse 15, Ñ,V1,3,B,D1–7,9–11,S, and Gorresio insert a passage of two lines [1387*]: "In this fashion, many thousands of years[1] passed happily, while he constantly[2] promoted righteousness through many types of sacrifice[3] (evaṃ varṣasahasrāṇi bahūny atha yayuḥ sukham / yajñair bahuvidhair dharmaṃ vardhayānasya nityadā //)."

[1] "many thousands of years passed" varṣasahasrāṇi bahūni . . . yayuḥ: As earlier (see notes to verse 5 above), the mention of the duration of Rāma's reign or any part of it arouses the exegetical energies of at least some of the commentators. Ct now raises the issue of the Padmapurāṇa verse according to which ten thousand years passed while Rāma was making love with Sītā, arguing, of course, that this refers to the period during which Sītā was present on earth and Rāma made love with her while ruling the kingdom. Ct understands that in the Padmapurāṇa variant of the compound daśasāhasram, the word sāhasram must be understood in the sense of its prātipadika, or base form of a noun [without derivation or terminations added to it], to mean simply "one thousand." Thus he understands the compound daśasāhasram to mean "ten thousand years." Ct further notes a variant to this compound, varṣasāhasram, in which we must take the term -sāhasram to mean "a collection of thousands," which, he believes, amounts to saying ten thousand, as in the other variant. This, Ct believes, is in harmony with the tradition that Rāma's lifespan was eleven thousand years. Compare 1.1.76, where Rāma is said to rule the kingdom for eleven thousand years. (yat tv evaṃ praśāsatas tasya rāghavasya maheśvari / atyayād daśasāhasraṃ ramamāṇasya sītayeti pādma uktam. tatra sītayā bhūmau sthitayā sthitasya ramamāṇasya rājyaṃ kurvata ity arthaḥ. sāhasram iti svārthe 'ṇ. atyayād varṣasāhasram iti pāṭhe sahasrāṇāṃ samūhaḥ sāhasraṃ sahasrasamūha ity arthakatayā daśasahasrety arthakam eva. āyus tasyaikādaśasahasravarṣāni.) Compare Cr's comments to verse 5 above. Cs is exercised as much by Ct's interpretation as by the passage itself. He argues that the phrase "thousands of years" should be understood to mean thirty thousand years on the basis of a quotation from the Mahābhāratatātparyanirṇaya (9.16) to the effect that Rāma ruled for that length of time. Cs then anticipates an objection based on the Padmapurāṇa passage quoted above by Ct and Cr (see notes to verse 5 above), to the effect that if Rāma made love with Sītā for ten thousand years, then how would one come up with the figure thirty thousand? He refutes this by quoting a saying that the cardinal numbers run up to ten and claims that if you accept that the number is a statement of a different measure, then there is no contradiction between the two passages. Cs concludes by derisively quoting Ct's argument and advises those who share that position to be aware of the fact that he, Ct, appears to be unaware of the Pāṇinian sūtra [4.2.47] that specifies the use of the derivational suffix ṭhak to indicate a group of inanimate objects by which the derivational term in this sense ["a group of thousands of years"] should be sāhasrakam and not sāhasram. (varṣasahasrāṇy evaṃ trayodaśasahasrasamā ityādyuktaprakāreṇa jñeyāni. nanu pādma evaṃ praśāsatas tasya rāghavasya maheśvari / atyayād daśasāhasraṃ ramamāṇasya sītayety ukteḥ kathaṃ trayodaśety uktir iti ced mukhyā saṃkhyā daśaparyantam iti tathoktiḥ. mānāntaroktasaṃkhyāgraheṇāvirodhopapatteḥ. atyayād varṣasāhasram iti pāṭhaṃ dhṛtvā sahasrāṇāṃ samūha ity arthakatayā daśasahasrety arthakam eveti nāgojibhaṭṭaḥ. tatrācittety atra sūtre 'cittaḥ sa iti taccittair mantavyam.) See notes to verse 5 above. See, too, notes to verses 6.116.82,90.

[2] "constantly" nityadā: D6,7,10,11,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the synonymous sarvadā.

[3] "righteousness through many types of sacrifice" yajñair bahuvidhair dharmam: GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read bahuvidham for bahuvidhair, lending the phrase the sense "many different forms of righteousness with sacrifices." This variant is not noted in the critical apparatus.

Sarga 90

1–3. "Now after some time" kasyacit tv atha kālasya: Literally, "now of a certain time." The phrase is elliptical. We agree with Cr, who proposes expanding the phrase to mean "when there was a passage of some time (kasyacit kālasya apagame satīti śeṣaḥ)." Compare 7.93.1 and notes.

"King Yudhājit Kekaya" yudhājit kekayo nṛpaḥ: Yudhājit Kekaya is the brother of Kaikeyī, of whom we have heard earlier at 2.1.1ff., when Bharata and Śatrughna go off to visit him in his city of Rājagṛha.

"out of affection . . . gift" prītidānam: Literally, "a gift of love." The idea here is that Yudhājit sends these gifts out of pure affection rather than as tribute. The term is found only five times in the Rāmāyaṇa, here and at 2.110.20,21 and 2.111.13,14. See notes to 2.110.20. On their comments to 2.110.20 (= GPP 2.118.21), Ct and Cr note that Sītā's acceptance of a gift of love from Anasūyā is acceptable despite the general prohibition on kshatriyas' accepting gifts (prītidānam ity anena pratiṣiddhapratigrahāṇāṃ kṣatriyāṇām api grahaṇārhatvaṃ sūcitam—so Cr; Ct similarly). Compare 7.67.12 and notes.

"ten thousand horses" daśa . . . aśvasahasrāṇi: Yudhājit is also known, as we learn at 2.1.6 and verse 4 below, as Aśvapati, "lord of horses." Thus this particular gift seems highly apposite.

"jewels" ca ratnāni: Literally, "and jewels." The syllables ca and ra- are marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition.

"garments of varied hue" citravastram: The compound is marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition.

"many" bahūni: D6,7,10,11,T1,2, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead śubhāni, "lovely or splendid."

4–5. "that the great seer Gārgya was approaching" gārgyaṃ maharṣiṃ samupāgatam: Literally, "that the great seer Gārgya had approached." The context indicates that Gārgya is still at least several miles outside of Ayodhyā when Rāma learns of his visit. D6,7,10,11,T3, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead dhīmān maharṣiṃ gārgyam āgatam, lending the line the sense "when wise Rāghava heard that the great seer Gārgya had come." V3,D1–5,9, and KK and VSP read brahmarṣim, "brahman-seer," for maharṣim, "great seer."

"he had come as the beloved emissary" priyaṃ dūtam upāgatam: D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead prahitaṃ tan mahādhanam, "that great wealth that had been sent," while KK and VSP read the synonymous prahitaṃ tan mahad dhanam.

"of . . . Aśvapati" aśvapatinaḥ: Ck, Cg, Ct, and Cr all correct the irregular genitive form to aśvapateḥ. Ck and Ct note the irregular epic form. (num ārṣaḥ. aśvapater ity arthaḥ—so Ct*; chāndaso nakāraḥ. aśvapater ity arthaḥ*—so Ck.) Cs makes a valiant effort to rationalize the form as correct. He treats it as a bahuvrīhi in the sense of "he who possesses a leaping or jumping up by means of horses (patam utpatanam. aśvaiḥ patam asyāstīti tatpatī. tasyāśvapatinaḥ)." See notes to verses 1–3 above.

"two miles" krośamātram: A krośa (Hindi kos) is a measure of distance generally thought to be one quarter of a yojana, which we have elsewhere translated as "league." Thus, the distance is approximately two miles. See notes to 1.5.7 (yojana) and 2.48.25 (krośa).

"along with his retinue" sahānugaḥ: Ñ2,B4,D6,7,10,11,T1–3,G3,M3, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead sahānujaḥ, "along with his younger brothers."

Following 5c ("he honored Gārgya [gārgyaṃ saṃpūjayāmāsa]"), Ś,Ñ,V,B,D,T3,4,G2, M3,9, and Lahore, Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert, while G1,M6 insert line 2 only following 5c, a passage of two half lines [1391*]: "just as Śakra would Bṛhaspati. Then,[1] having honored that seer, . . . (yathā śakro bṛhaspatim / tathā saṃpūjya tam ṛṣim)."

[1] "Then" tataḥ: D6,7,10,11,G1,2, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead tathā, "in this fashion."

6. "affectionately" prītidam: Literally, "granting affection." We read the term adverbially, although it can also be read adjectivally to modify kuśalam, "well-being," in the sense of "well-being, which gives pleasure." D10,11,T1,2,G3,M3, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead pratipadam, "at every step," i.e., "one by one." Ck, Cg, Ct, and Cr all gloss, "individually (pratyekam)." The idea here is that Rāma inquires about the well-being of everyone within Yudhājit's household. Cs makes this explicit, glossing, "with respect to all the people who are to be inquired about (pratipṛcchāspadaṃ janam)."

7. "the blessed one" bhagavān: G3 and KK and VSP read instead the vocative, bhagavan, "O blessed one."

8. "the brahman-seer" brahmarṣiḥ: Ñ,V1,2,B,D2,6,7,9,11,T3,4,M2,3, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead maharṣiḥ, "the great seer."

"in detail the extraordinary mission that was to be undertaken" kāryavistaram . . . / . . . adbhutasaṃkāśam: Literally, "a full description of what was to be done, which resembled something extraordinary."

9. "bull among men" nararṣabha: Ñ2,V,B2 (second time),D6,7,10,11,T2,3,G2,3,M1,5–7,10, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead the nominative singular nararṣabhaḥ, which would then refer to Yudhājit.

10. "There is a country" ayam . . . deśaḥ: Literally, "this country." Ck, Cg, and Ct all understand the pronoun ayam here to indicate that the country under discussion lies adjacent to that of Yudhājit. (ayaṃ deśo 'smaddeśasamīpa ity arthaḥ—so Cg; Ck and Ct similarly.)

"of the Sindhu" sindhoḥ: Ck, Cg, Ct, and Cs specify that this is the river Sindhu, i.e., the Indus (sindhoḥ sindhunadyāḥ—so Ck and Cg; Ct and Cs similarly).

"kingdom of the gandharvas" gandharvaviṣayaḥ: The gandharvas are a well-known class of semidivine beings often associated with the musical arts. See 7.91.10 and notes, where this region is said to be that of Gāndhāra, the area in the northwestern part of the Indian subcontinent encompassing what are today parts of Afghanistan and Pakistan. The name Gāndhāra is reputed to be the source of the name of the modern province of Afghanistan known as Kandahar.

"it is richly endowed with fruits and roots" phalamūlopaśobhitaḥ: Literally, "beautified by fruits and roots." V2,3,D5,11, and GPP read instead the awkward phalamūlopaśodhitaḥ, "purified with roots and fruits."

11. "The thirty million" tisraḥ koṭyaḥ: Literally, "three koṭis or crore." A koṭi is ten million. KK and VSP read instead trikoṭyo vai, "the three koṭis indeed."

"heroic" vīrāḥ: Ñ,V,D1–7,9–11,T1,2,G2,M2–4, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the singular vocative vīra, "O hero," which would then refer to Rāma.

"of Śailūṣa" śailūṣasya: Ck, Cm, Cg, and Ct identify Śailūṣa as the king of the gandharvas (śailūṣo gandharvarājaḥ). At 4.40.41 we are told that the name refers to one of the five kings of the gandharvas. At 7.12.22 we are told that Saramā, the wife of Vibhīṣaṇa, is the daughter of Śailūṣa, the king of the gandharvas. Saramā, of course, is the woman who befriends Sītā in the Yuddhakāṇḍa (6.24.1ff.).

"protect that country" taṃ ca rakṣanti: Literally, "and they protect it."

12. "kingdom of the gandharvas" gandharvaviṣayam: Ñ2,V1,3,D2,3,5–7,9–11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead gandharvanagaram, "the city of the gandharvas."

"two cities" dve pure: Ñ2,V1,2,B,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead sve pure, "your own two cities," while KK and VSP read the synonymous svapure, a reading not noted in the critical apparatus.

13. "No one else can accomplish this." anyasya na gatis tatra: Literally, "of another there is no way or means of success there."

"That country is extremely beautiful." deśaś cāyaṃ suśobhanaḥ: B1,D10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead deśaḥ paramaśobhanaḥ, "The country is supremely beautiful."

"great-armed hero" mahābāho: Literally, "great-armed [one]."

"I would not lie to you." nāhaṃ tvām anṛtaṃ vade: Literally, "I would not tell you an untruth." Ñ2,V1,2,B1–3,D6,7,10,11,M1,5,8, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read ahitam for anṛtam, lending the line the sense "I would not tell you anything that was not beneficial." Cr understands the phrase to refer to the fact that the unconquered gandharvas pay Rāma no tribute (etena taiḥ karo na dīyata iti sūcitam).

14. "He . . . fixed his gaze upon" anvaikṣata: Literally, "he kept looking at or gazed fixedly at." Cr glosses, "he looked intensely (atyavaikṣata)." Ck and Cg understand that Rāma looks intently in order to judge or size up [Bharata] (paryālocanārtham ity arthaḥ).

"thus" evam: Ś,Ñ,V,B1,2,D4,6–12,T3,4,G1,2,M3,6,10, and Lahore, Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the emphatic particle eva, here, "just that or simply."

15. "his hands extended and cupped in reverence," prāñjalipragrahaḥ: Literally, "extending a prāñjali." This phrase is used elsewhere in the Uttarakāṇḍa in the sense given here (see 7.47.10; 7.50.7; 7.73.13; and notes). D10,11,T3,M6,7,9, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the nearly synonymous sāñjalipragrahaḥ, "with an añjali gesture held before him."

"to the twice-born brahman" dvijam: Literally, "the twice-born [one]."

"will conquer" vijayiṣyataḥ: D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead vicariṣyataḥ, here, "these two will march against or attack."

16–17. "These two, Takṣa and Puṣkala" takṣaḥ puṣkalaḥ . . . / . . . tau: Ñ2,V2,B2–4, D10,T1,2,4,G1–3,M3,10, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read tu, "and or but," for tau, "these two." Compare 7.91.9 and notes, where the variant Puṣkara is given for Puṣkala.

"and focused on righteousness" dharmeṇa ca samāhitau: Literally, "and focused through righteousness." Ś,Ñ,V,B,D1–5,8–12,G2,M6,7, and Lahore, Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead dharmeṇa susamāhitau, "[those two] very well focused through righteousness."

"Then they will divide the two cities between them." dve pure vibhajiṣyataḥ: Literally, "those two will divide the two cities." As will be made clear in the following sarga, the idea is that Takṣa and Puṣkala will each be established in the rulership of one of the two cities.

18. "established his two sons in them" ātmajau saṃniveśya: Literally, "having established the two sons."

"the extremely righteous Bharata" atidhārmikaḥ: Literally, "the extremely righteous one." Cs believes that by the use of this adjective Rāma is suggesting that his younger brother [Bharata] would never entertain the evil thought "Because of the charm of the [new] country, what use have I for Rāma or Ayodhyā?" (atidhārmiko 'nena taddeśamānoramyāt kiṃ rāmeṇa kim ayodhyayeti durdhiyaṃ na tanuyād anuja iti sūcayati.)

"will . . . return to me" āgamiṣyati me . . . sakāśam: Literally, "he will come to my presence."

19. "consecrated the two princes" kumārau cābhyaṣecayat: The idea is that Rāma consecrates the princes as kings of the respective cities and realms that they will establish. For another example of Rāma's consecration of someone as king before he is in control of any kingdom, compare the passage in which he has Lakṣmaṇa consecrate Vibhīṣaṇa as king of Laṅkā before the battle that deposes Rāvaṇa (see 6.13.7–9 and notes).

20. "And . . . set forth" ca niryayau: V2,B1,D7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead viniryayau, "he set forth."

"under an auspicious constellation" nakṣatreṇa . . . saumyena: Literally, "with or by an auspicious constellation." Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 633) mistakenly takes the adjective saumya, "benign or propitious," as the name of the constellation, rendering, "Sous la constellation de Saumya." In this he is followed by Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 622), who, in a footnote, identifies the constellation as the planet Mercury, since saumya, "derived from or the son of the moon," is, indeed, an adjective that may be applied to Mercury.

21. "As if commanded by Śakra" śakrayukteva: Literally, "as if accompanied by or subject to Śakra." Ck, Cg, and Ct gloss, "like the army of the gods commanded by Indra (indraniyuktā devaseneva—so Ck and Ct; Cg similarly)."

"even by the gods and asuras" surāsuraiḥ: Literally, "by the gods and asuras." Ś,Ñ,V,B,D,T,G3,M3,6, and Lahore, Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead surair api, "even by the gods."

"it was accompanied for a long way by Rāghava himself" rāghavānugatā dūram: Literally, "followed far by Rāghava." Ck, Cg, and Ct understand that the term rāghava- here refers to Rāma. Ck and Ct understand the adverb dūram, "far," to mean for a distance of one or two overnight encampments. (rāghavānugatā rāmānugatā. dūram ekadvivāsaparyantam ity arthaḥ), while Cg understands, "up until one or two overnight encampments (ekadvivāsaraparyantam)." Cs explains that the army is followed by Rāma for a long way because of his affection for and lack of anxiety concerning those he is sending so far away (rāghavānugatā rāmeṇa dūrapreṣaṇapremanairbhayeṇa dūram anugatā). One would expect Rāma to lead the army, rather than follow it, if he had any concern for its well-being.

22. "Flesh-eating creatures" māṃsāśīni ca sattvāni: D6,7,10,11,T3,G1,2,M5,7,8,10, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead the masculine plural māṃsāśinaś ca ye sattvāḥ, "those creatures that were flesh-eaters." V1,3,D1–5,9,T1,2,G3,M3,9, and KK and VSP read the synonymous māṃsādāni for māṃsāśīni.

"thirsting for blood" rudhirasya pipāsayā: Literally, "because of a thirst of blood." Cs notes that the blood is that of the gandharvas (rudhirasya gāndharvasya).

"shadowed" anujagmuś ca: Literally, "and they followed." The sequence "[a]nujagmuś ca" is marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition. D6,7,10,11,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead [a]nujagmur hi, "indeed, they followed." Ck, Cg, and Ct insist that the carnivorous creatures actually preceded Bharata's army, noting that when flesh-eaters precede an army, it is a good omen, whereas when they face, i.e., follow, an army, it is a bad omen. (senāyā agrato yayuḥ. piśitāśinām agrato yānaṃ suśakunam. abhimukhād gamanam evāpaśakunam iti bhāvaḥ).

23–24. "of . . . jackals" -śṛgālānām: D6,7,10,11,T4,G2, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead -varāhāṇām, "of . . . wild boars."

"while carrion birds circled in the sky" khecarāṇāṃ ca pakṣiṇām: Literally, "and of winged sky-goers." Both terms are used as kennings for birds. The reference here clearly is to carrion birds, such as vultures, crows, and kites, which flock to the gory battlefields.

25. "for a month and a half" adhyardhamāsam: The journey to Yudhājit's kingdom appears to take an inordinately long time, although it is difficult to move quickly with a large army. However, at 2.65.14, at the end of the elaborate description of Bharata's hasty return from Kekaya's capital of Rājagṛha to Ayodhyā, we are told that, pressing his troops and his horses, Bharata spent only seven nights on the road.

"troops" -jana-: Literally, "people."

"Kekaya" kekayam: The commentators differ somewhat as to whether this refers to the country of Kekaya or to its king, Yudhājit. Ck and Cg understand the latter, while Ct offers both as alternatives (kekayaṃ kekayadeśaṃ yudhājitāṃ vā—so Ct).

Sarga 91

1. "Gārgya" gārgya-: V3,D6,7,10,11,G1, and GPP and NSP read instead garga-, "Garga."

2. "marched forth . . . he advanced against" sa niryayau . . . / . . . abhicakrāma: Literally, "he went forth . . . he advanced." Cs distinguishes between the actions indicated by the two verbs. He understands the first to refer to Yudhājit's exiting the city and the second to his departure [for the country of the gandharvas]. (niryayau grāmād bahiḥ. abhicakrāma gatavān.) Cr similarly attempts to avoid any redundancy. See the note immediately below for his comments.

"the godlike gandharvas" gandharvān devarūpiṇaḥ: Literally, "the gandharvas, who had the form of gods." T1,2,G2,3,M3,6, and Gita Press, KK, and VSP read kāmarūpiṇaḥ, "who can take on any form at will," for devarūpiṇaḥ, "who had the form of gods," lending the phrase the meaning "the gandharvas, who could take any form at will," while D10,11, and GPP and NSP read the redundant kekayādhipaḥ, "the lord of the Kekayas." Cr attempts to avoid the appearance of redundancy by arguing that we should read pādas ab and cd as separate sentences describing different actions on the part of the king. In the first line, Cr argues that Yudhājit goes forth with his army to meet Bharata, while in the second he understands that Bharata advances against the gandharvas. (kekayādhipo yudhājij janaughena saha niryayau bharatasamīpaṃ jagāmety arthaḥ. ardhaṃ pṛthak. tvaramāṇa iti kekayādhipo gandharvān abhicakrāma.)

3. "Together, swift-striding" sametau laghuvikramau: Literally, "[those two] who had light or swift paces [and had] come together." Ś2,D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead sametau laghuvikramaiḥ, "[those two] together with the swift-striding ones." Ct understands the reference to be to their soldiers. (laghuvikramaiḥ. yodhair ity arthaḥ.)

"along with their troops and their retinues" sabalau sapadānugau: Ck, Cg, and Ct understand the former term to refer to the troops that make up the classic army of four divisions (see 6.3.24 and notes) and the latter to refer to the attendants who belong to the śūdra, vaiśya, and other lower social classes. (sabalau caturāṅgabalasahitau. sapadānugau śūdravaiśyādyanucarasahitau.) Cs glosses sabalau as either "with an army of four divisions" or "with the strength of their arms" (sabalau sacaturāṅgau sabāhubalau vā).

4. "roaring" vinadantaḥ: D10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead the finite imperfect (laṅ) vyanadaṃs te, "they roared," while M3 and KK and VSP read vyanadan vai, "indeed they roared."

5. "without either side gaining the victory" na cānyatarayor jayaḥ: Literally, "and there was no victory for either of the two."

Following verse 5, V3,D6,7,10,11,S, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert a passage of two lines [1397*]: "Rivers with blood for their currents and with swords, javelins, and bows for their crocodiles flowed in every direction, bearing the corpses of men[1] (khaḍgaśaktidhanurgrāhā nadyaḥ śonitasaṃsravāḥ / nṛkalevaravāhinyaḥ pravṛttāḥ sarvato diśam //)."

[1] "bearing the corpses of men" nṛkalevaravāhinyaḥ: Some of the corpses, of course, would be those of the gandharvas, who are not technically human.

6. "employed Kāla's . . . divine weapon-spell, known as the saṃvarta" kālasyāstraṃ . . . / . . . saṃvartaṃ nāma . . . abhyayojayat: As Ck, Cg, and Ct point out, saṃvarta is the name of the fire of Kāla, or Time, that destroys the universe at the end of a cosmic era (saṃvartaṃ nāmeti pralayakālāgnyākhyam ity arthaḥ—so Ck and Cg; Ct similarly). For a discussion of the meaning of the word astra, see Goldman and Goldman 2009, p. 112. D6,7,10,11,T1,M3,5,9, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read abhyacodayat, "he drove or impelled," for abhyayojayat, "he employed." Cr glosses, "he shot or hurled (prākṣipat)."

7. "Caught by Kāla's noose and torn to pieces by the saṃvarta" te baddhāḥ kālapāśena saṃvartena vidāritāḥ: We follow Cr in understanding that there are two separate agents in the first line. The noose of Kāla, kālapāśena, we believe, is not the same as the s*aṃvartāstra* of Kāla but is used, as elsewhere in the literature, metaphorically, to refer to the sway of death or doom, while it is the saṃvartāstra that actually cuts to pieces the bodies of the gandharvas. Among the translators consulted, Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 634) understands that the noose of Kāla and the saṃvarta are one and the same and that it is the hero Bharata who cuts the gandharvas to pieces. He renders, "Enchaîné par le lien de Kāla, Samvarta, les trois Kotis (de Gandharvas) succombèrent dans un instant, mis en pièces par le héros." In this he is followed by Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 623), who, however, omits mention of the name saṃvarta. He offers, "Caught in the noose of destruction, three hundred thousand [sic] Gandharvas were slain in an instant, cut to pieces by that hero."

"by great Bharata" mahātmanā: Literally, "by the great one." D6,7,T1,3,G1,3,M2,4,5,7,8,10, and KK and VSP read instead the genitive plural mahātmanām, lending the line the sense "thirty million of those great [gandharvas] were annihilated."

8. "The gods, denizens of heaven" divaukasaḥ: Literally, "those heaven-dwelling [ones]." See notes to 7.5.23.

"could not recall" na smaranti: Literally, "they do not remember." Cg and Ct take the phrase to mean that the gods stood there thinking that the slaughter of thirty million gandharvas in an instant was impossible (na smaranti nimeṣamātreṇa trikoṭigandharvavadho 'saṃbhāvya iti sthitavantaḥ—so Ct; Cg similarly). This interpretation is reflected in the translation of Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 613), who renders, "The gods could not bring themselves to believe that such a terrible battle between such mighty forces could have been thus concluded in a trice." Cr understands that by saying that the gods could not remember a battle of such great warriors that took place in a mere instant, the poet suggests that the mere memory of it produced terror [in them] (divaukaso nimeṣāntaramātreṇa pravṛttaṃ mahātmanāṃ tad yuddhaṃ na smaranti tena smṛtasyāpi tasyāpi bhītijanakatvaṃ dhvanitam). On the comparison of this battle with others in the Rāmāyaṇa, see R. Goldman 2008.

"such a ghastly slaughter" taṃ ghātaṃ ghorasaṃkāśam: Literally, "that slaughter of such dreadful appearance." D6,7,10,11,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead tad yuddhaṃ tādṛśaṃ ghoram, "such a terrifying battle."

"of such great warriors" mahātmanām: Literally, "of the great [ones]."

9. "Once those heroes had been slain" hateṣu teṣu vīreṣu: D6,7,10,11,G2,M2,4, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead hateṣu teṣu sarveṣu, "Once all of them had been slain."

"Kaikayī's son" kaikayīsutaḥ: V1,D2,9–11,T1, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read the synonymous kekayī- for kaikayī-. Both terms are variants of the more common Kaikeyī. See notes to verses 12–14 below.

"establishing Takṣa in Takṣaśīlā and Puṣkara in Puṣkarāvatī" takṣaṃ takṣaśīlāyāṃ tu puṣkaraṃ puṣkarāvatau: Literally, "Takṣa in Takṣaśīlā and Puṣkara in Puṣkarāvatī." We follow Cr, who observes that we must add the verbal phrase "he established." (saṃsthāpayāmāseti śeṣaḥ). Alternatively, one could by anukarṣa read the verb niveśayāmāsa, "he established," from pāda c. D6,7,10,11,T1,2,G2,3,M3–6, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read puṣkalaṃ, "Puṣkala," for puṣkaram, while D10,11,G2,3,M2,5,6, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read puṣkalāvate, "in Puṣkalāvata," for puṣkarāvatau, "in Puṣkarāvatī." Compare 7.90.16–17 and notes, where the prince's name is given as the variant Puṣkala.

10. The critical reading of this verse differs significantly from any of the printed editions. Pādas cd are omitted in D6,7,10,11,T,1,2, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP. Pādas ab, while similar, have all nouns and adjectives in the nominative in the critical edition, while the various editions all read them in the locative except for Lahore, which mixes the locative and nominative.

"Within five years . . . was filled with provinces and their inhabitants" varṣaiḥ pañcabhir ākīrṇo viṣayair nāgarais tathā: The meaning of the term viṣaya is unclear. In the present context it can refer to regions or districts, perhaps even principalities. It can also refer to sense objects, that is to say, valuable commodities. The term nāgaraiḥ means "with people or things belonging to the city." Here we understand it to refer to the inhabitants of the districts or cities of Gāndhāra. This line is omitted in D6,7,10,11,T1,2, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP.

"the lovely country of the gandharvas, now the kingdom of Gāndhāra" gandharvadeśo ruciro gāndhāraviṣayaś ca saḥ: Ñ1,B4,D1,4–7,9–11,T4, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read gandharvadeśe rucire gāndhāraviṣaye ca saḥ, which must construe with 9cd, lending the verse the sense "establishing Takṣa in Takṣaśīlā and Puṣkara [v.l. Puṣkala] in Puṣkarāvatī [v.l. Puṣkalāvata], within the country of the gandharvas, that is, the kingdom of Gāndhāra." Ct and Cr understand 10ab to refer to two separate countries, Gandharva and Gāndhāra, in which, respectively, Takṣa and Puṣkara [Puṣkala] are established in their capitals, Takṣaśīlā and Puṣkalāvata [Puṣkarāvatī]. (gandharvadeśe takṣaśīlāyāṃ takṣaṃ takṣākhyaṃ putram. gāndhāradeśe puṣkalāvate nagare puṣkalam—so Ct; Cr similarly.) All translators of the southern recension—except for Dutt (1894, p. 1917), who omits the reference to Gāndhāra entirely—interpret similarly. We, however, believe that Gorresio (1870, p. 293), who understands that the entire country once known as that of the gandharvas is now, after the destruction of its former inhabitants, known as Gāndhāra, is correct. He translates his verse (7.108.11) takṣas takṣaśīlāṃ caiva puṣkaraḥ puṣkarāvatīm / gandharvadeśe rucire gāndhāraviṣaye ca saḥ //, adding the verb "obtained (ottenne)," as "Taksa ottenne la città Taksasīlā, Puskara la città Puskarāvatī la nella splendida regione dei Gandharvi nella contrada che or si noma Gāndhāra." We believe that the point of this episode is to provide an etymological explanation of the name of the region of Gāndhāra. Note that in the critical reading the description of the region as becoming filled with people and objects is in the singular (ākīrṇaḥ). For a similar explanation of a place name in the Rāmāyaṇa, compare the episode at Uttarakāṇḍa 62, where Śatrughna founds the city of Madhurā (Mathurā) after slaying the demon Lavaṇa, son of the asura Madhu. See 7.90.10 and notes.

11. "Both cities were filled with masses of wealth and jewels and were adorned with parklands." dhanaratnaughasaṃpūrṇe kānanair upaśobhite: Literally, "The two were filled with masses of wealth and jewels or fine things; the two were adorned with woodlands." V,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read the more or less synonymous -saṃkīrṇe, "[the two were] crowded," for -saṃpūrṇe, "[the two were] filled."

"Their competition over the extent of their respective virtues made them rivals of each other." anyonyasaṃgharṣakṛte spardhayā guṇavistare: Literally, "They were made to be mutual rivals by competition in the extent of their virtues." One could also understand, "These two, possessed of an extensiveness of virtues, were made to be mutual rivals by competition." D7,10,11,T2,G2,3,M1–3,5, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read guṇavistaraiḥ, "by means of the multitudes or quantities of [their] virtues," for the locative singular guṇavistare, "in the extent of their virtues." Ct explains: "Because of the great number of their virtues, they were made to have mutual rivalry, that is to say, they made a mutual rivalry. The meaning is 'They appeared as if they had engaged in mutual debate [in which each claimed], "I alone am superior in virtues." ' (guṇavistarair hetubhir anyonyaspardhayānyonyasaṃgharṣakṛte kṛtānyonyasaṃgharṣe. aham eva guṇottaram iti kṛtānyonyavivāda iva dṛśyamāna ity arthaḥ.)" Cr understands somewhat similarly to Ct. Cs offers two interpretations. The first is similar to that of Ct and Cr. In the second, he takes the term spardhā in the sense of "emulation" rather than "rivalry." He understands that in the large number of their virtues, both [cities] emulated the assembly hall of Brahmā. Cs concludes by saying that we are to understand that the statement of the rivalry of the two cities is made in order to express the rivalry of their inhabitants. (guṇavistaraiḥ kāraṇair anyonyaṃ saṃgharṣakṛte ahaṃ mahīyo 'haṃ mahīya iti spardhākṛte. guṇavistaraiḥ spardhayobhe brahmasabhe iva vā. tatratyalokaspardhāvivakṣayā puraspardhābhidhānam iti jñeyam.)

12–14. "and all transactions there were honest" vyavahārair akalmaṣaiḥ: Literally, "[resplendent] by virtue of transactions that were without taint or immorality." Ś2,3,Ñ,V2,B,D1,3–5,7,8,10–12,T1,2,G1,3,M3,6, and Lahore, Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the nearly synonymous vyavahārair akilbiṣaiḥ, "with transactions that were without sin or injustice." Ck, Cg, and Ct gloss, "transactions such as buying and selling, etc., that were without deceit, that is to say, that were in accordance with righteousness and law [i.e., both moral and legal] (akilbiṣair dharmanyāyopetair vyavahāraiḥ krayavikrayādivyāpāraiḥ)."

"They were filled with large numbers of parks and vehicles" udyānayānaughavṛte: Ś,V2,D7,8,10–12, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead udyānayānasaṃpūrṇe, "filled with parks and vehicles."

"their central markets were well laid out" suvibhaktāntarāpaṇe: Literally, "[the two cities] in which the inner shops or markets were well proportioned."

"adorned with great wealth" vistarair upaśobhite: We take the term vistara, which is repeated twice in this passage (here at 13b and at 14b) and was also used in verse 11 above (see notes to verse 11 above), in its sense of "abundant wealth or riches." Ct understands it in its sense of "abundant" to refer to the abundance of other articles that are not mentioned specifically in the passage (vistarair anuktapadārthavistaraiḥ). Cs, with his typical ingenuity, understands the term vistaraiḥ to be an adjectival compound (bahuvrīhi) in the sense of "possessing nesting places for birds, such as pigeons." This he then understands to modify the compound gṛhamukhyaiḥ, "with . . . mansions," in pāda c. Perhaps Cs is thinking of the popular practice of pigeon-keeping, or kabutar-baz, practiced by Indian elites at least since Mughal times. Cs also quotes the opinion of Ct here without his usual derisive remarks. (vistarair vīnāṃ pakṣiṇāṃ pārāvatādīnāṃ stara āstaraṇaṃ yatra tāni vistarāṇi taiḥ. sanīḍair gṛhamukhyaiḥ. vistarair anuktapadārthavistarair iti nāgojibhaṭṭaḥ.)

"mansions" gṛhamukhyaiḥ: Literally, "foremost of houses."

"identical seven-storied palaces" vimānaiḥ samavarṇibhiḥ: We follow Cg, Ct, and Cs, who gloss, "seven-storied palaces (saptabhūmiprāsādaiḥ)." D10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead bahubhir vṛte, lending the line the sense "[the two cities were] filled with many seven-storied palaces and extremely beautiful mansions."

"Having established them over a period of five years" niveśya pañcabhir varṣaiḥ: Literally, "having established by five years." Cs comments on the phrase pañcabhir varṣaiḥ, saying, "It took this many days to build those cities (tāvanti dināni puranirmāṇe lagnāni)."

"son of Kaikayī" kaikayīsutaḥ: Ś1,Ñ2,V2,3,B,D8,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read the synonymous variant kekayīsutaḥ. See notes to verse 9 above.

Following 14ab, D6,7,10,11,T,G,M2–4,8–10, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert a passage of one line [1399*]: "Both were filled with sāla and palmyra trees and were adorned with campakas[1] (sālais tālaiḥ samākīrṇe campakair upaśobhite)."

[1] "Both were filled with sāla and palmyra trees and were adorned with campakas." sālais tālaiḥ samākīrṇe campakair upaśobhite: D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead tālais tamālais tilakair bakulair upaśobhite, "Both were adorned with palmyra, tamāla, tilaka, and bakula trees."

15–16. "just as they had transpired" yathā vṛttam: Literally, "as it had occurred." Although the adjective vṛttam, "occurred," is in the singular, we understand that it applies to both the slaughter of the gandharvas and the settlement of the region by attraction. Lahore, Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP all print yathāvṛttam, indicating that their editors understand an avyayībhāva (adverbial) compound in the sense of "in the way that it occurred," which would then construe with the verb śaśaṃsa, "he reported."

"When Rāghava had heard all this, he was delighted with him." śrutvā prīto 'sya rāghavaḥ: Literally, "Rāghava having heard was pleased with [lit., 'of'] him." We agree with Cr and Cs, who understand the genitive (ṣaṣṭhī) pronoun asya, "of him," to refer to Bharata, whom they take to be the adhikaraṇa of Rāma's delight (asya bharatasyopari—so Cs; Cr similarly). Ct, on the other hand, understands the pronoun to be a possessive genitive and supplies the word "speech," explaining the pāda as meaning: "When Rāma Rāghava had heard the speech of him, that is to say, of Bharata, he became delighted (asya bharatasya vākyaṃ śrutvā rāghavo rāmaḥ prīto babhūva)."

Sarga 92

1. "Rāghava . . . he" rāghavaḥ . . . /. . . rāghavaḥ: Literally, "Rāghava . . . Rāghava.

"together with his brothers . . . to them" bhrātṛbhiḥ saha /. . . bhrātṝn: Literally, "together with his brothers . . . to his brothers." Cv, Ct, and Cs are disturbed by the use of the plural for brothers, since, in the continuing absence of Śatrughna, only two of Rāma's brothers are present in Ayodhyā. Cv understands that the usage of the plural here is in the sense of "two." He observes that that is possible because of the opinion that the plural may be used for any number greater than one (tacchrutvādau dvitve bahuvacanaprayoga ekavyatiriktaṃ bahv iti darśanāt). Ct writes the usage off to epic irregularity (bhrātṛbhir iti bahuvacanaṃ dvitva ārṣam). Cs, on the other hand, offers a number of explanations for this usage. According to the first of these, the plural is used in reference to a class. As an alternative, Cs suggests that the plural has the sense of "starting with," so that he understands the two terms respectively to mean "with his two brothers, etc., and to his two brothers, etc." Finally Cs offers the possibility that by this usage the poet intends to include the two sons [Candraketu and Aṅgada] of his brother [Lakṣmaṇa] as well in the category of brothers. (bhrātṛbhir bhrātṝn iti jātau bahuvacanam. bahuvacanam ādyartha iti vā. bhrātṛbhyāṃ bhrātrādibhiḥ. bhrātarau bhrātrādīn ity arthaḥ. bhrātṛputrayor api bhrātṛtvena vivakṣaṇād vaivam uktiḥ.) None of the commentators consulted entertains the possibility that Śatrughna may have returned for a visit here, as he apparently did for Rāma's aśvamedha. Compare 7.83.6 and notes.

"he said . . . to them" bhrātṝn provāca rāghavaḥ: Literally, "Rāghava spoke to the brothers." M3 and KK and VSP read instead tadā provāca lakṣmaṇam, "he then said to Lakṣmaṇa."

2. "They are powerful bowmen and fit for kingship" rājyārhau dṛḍhadhanvinau: Literally, "the two are ones fit for kingship [and are] ones possessed of massive bows." V2,D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read rājyārthe, "for the sake of kingship," for rājyārhau, "fit for kingship," while D2,D9–11,T3,4,G1,2,M3,6, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead dṛḍhavikramau, "of firm valor." This lends the pāda the sense "those two are of firm valor for the purpose of kingship."

3. "I will consecrate these two as kings." imau rājye 'bhiṣekṣyāmi: Literally, "I will consecrate the two in kingship."

4. "please . . . seek out a country" sa deśo dṛśyatām: Literally, "let that country be seen."

"gentle brother" saumya: Literally, "O gentle [one]."

"of kings" rājñām: Cs specifies "kings who are friendly or compliant to us [i.e., the Ikṣvāku dynasty] (rājñām asmadanurodhinām)." KK and VSP read instead the singular rājñaḥ, "of a king." The reading is not noted in the critical apparatus.

"so that we may give no offense" nāparādhyāmahe yathā: Literally, "in such a way that we do not offend." Ck, Cg, and Ct add the phrase "against any creature whatsoever (yathā kasyāpi bhūtasyeti śeṣaḥ)." Cs similarly adds "through injury to living beings (bhūtaghātena)." Rāma is, evidently implicitly expressing remorse for the genocidal slaughter of gandharvas in the previous sarga.

5. "delightful" suramaṇyaḥ: Ś,Ñ2,V2,B,D6–8,10–12,T1,3,4,M3,6, and Lahore, Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the virtually synonymous ramaṇīyaḥ.

"the . . . country of Kārāpatha" kārāpatho deśaḥ: Ñ2,B1,3,4,D10,11,M6,7, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead kārupathaḥ for kārāpathaḥ. According to Ck, Cg, and Cm, this is the name a particular country in the west (kārupathaḥ kārupathākhyaḥ pāścātyadeśaviśeṣaḥ—so Cg; kārapathaḥ. tārāpatha iti vā pāṭhaḥ. pāścātyadeśaviśeṣaḥ—so Cm; kārapathaḥ kārapathākhyaḥ—so Ck critical edition; kārapathaḥ kārapatākhyaḥ—so Ck). Ct, however, places this country in the northwest (kārupathas tadākhyaḥ pāścātyaudīcyadeśaviśeṣaḥ). Compare RaghuVa 15.90, where the name is given as Kārāpatha. There Lakṣmaṇa makes his sons the lords of Kārāpatha (kārāpatheśvarau). Vallabha glosses the term as "the lords of Candrapatha (candrapathaprabhū)." According to Dey (1927, p. 92), Kārāpatha or Kārābhāg is modern Bāghān on the west side of the Indus River at the foot of the Salt Range in the Bannu district (now of Pakistan).

6. "a city for . . . Aṅgada" puram aṅgadasya: Literally, "a city of Aṅgada." Ck, Cg, Ct, and Cr all agree that, as is confirmed in verse 8 below, the city is to be called Aṅgadīya.

"lovely and" ca ruciram: D10,11,T,G3,M3, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead suruciram, "very lovely."

"called Candrakānta" candrakāntam: Literally, "Candrakānta." Note that the city whose name is given in the masculine here to agree with the term puram, "city," is given as the feminine candrakāntā in verse 6 below to agree with feminine noun purī, "city." See notes to verse 9 below.

"for Candraketu" candraketoḥ: Literally, "of Candraketu."

7. "having subjugated that country" taṃ ca kṛtvā vaśe deśam: Ct notes that this means that Rāma had Lakṣmaṇa and Bharata subjugate that country (vaśe kṛtvā lakṣmaṇabharatābhyāṃ vaśe kārayitvā).

"he established a city for Aṅgada" aṅgadasya nyaveśayat: Literally, "he established of Aṅgada." The verb lacks a direct object. Ct and Cr supply one, "a city" (purīm—so Ct; puram iti śeṣaḥ—so Cr).

8. "for Aṅgada . . . delightful" ramyā aṅgadasya: Literally, "delightful . . . of Aṅgada." To avoid the hiatus, Ñ1,B3,4,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press insert the particle api, reading ramyāpy aṅgadasya, while V1,D1,3–5,T3,4,M5,6, and KK and VSP insert the particle hi, reading ramyā hy aṅgadasya.

"Rāma . . . carefully guarded" suguptā . . . rāmeṇa: Literally, "well guarded by Rāma." Ct inserts the phrase "through the agency of Lakṣmaṇa (lakṣmaṇadvāreti śeṣaḥ)." In a similar vein, Cs observes that Rāma protected the city while avoiding the inconvenience of a long journey (rāmeṇa suguptāntarāyātāntarāyaparihāreṇa).

9. "And" tu: D1,2,9,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead the contextually synonymous ca, "and."

"in the land of Malla" mallabhūmyām: This is the region associated with the people known as the Mallas and is thought to be roughly the same as the modern district of Multan in Panjab, Pakistan. Ck, Cg, and Ct note that this is a northern region of this name (mallabhūmyāṃ tadākhya auttare). Ck adds that this is a northern region not to be confused with the southern Malaya region (mallabhūmyām amalayadeśe 'yam auttaraḥ). Cr remarks that the term refers to a region of that name that lies within the [previously mentioned—see verse 5 and notes] country of Kārupatha [Kārāpatha] (kārupathāntargatatadabhidhadeśe). See MatsyaP 163.67, where it is included among a list of various regions. Law (1954, p. 112) situates the Malla country as lying in the Panjab between the Candrabhāga (modern-day Chenab) and the Śatadru (modern-day Sutlej) rivers and identifies its capital city as Mūlasthānapura (modern-day Multan). Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 624), in keeping with his Roussel-inspired translation of the adjective malla (see below), footnotes the term here and defines the Mallas as "Giants."

"he established" niveśitā: Literally, "[a city] was established." We agree with Cr that the phrase "by Rāma" should be added (niveśitā rāmeṇeti śeṣaḥ).

"immensely powerful" mallasya: The term is an unusual one to be used of an Ikṣvāku prince, as it is most commonly found in its sense of "a man of the degraded kshatriya class of wrestlers or gladiators." It is, however, citable in the lexicons in the sense of "mighty or strong," and is, no doubt, used here to echo the name of the Malla country in which Candraketu is said to rule. We follow Cs, who cites the Viśvakośa, which gives the definition "extremely powerful" and "a species of fish" for the term malla (mallasya candraketor balīyasaś candraketunāmnaḥ. mallo matsyabhede balīyasīti viśvaḥ). Ck and Cg gloss, "foremost or excellent (śreṣṭhasya)." Ct glosses, "of firm or powerful body (dṛḍhāṅgasya)." Cr understands, "skilled in military actions (yuddhakriyānipuṇasya)." Translators are similarly divided in their understanding of the term here. Dutt (1894, p. 1918) ignores the adjective entirely. Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 635) understands the term to refer to Candraketu's size, rendering, "qui était un colosse." In this he is followed by Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 624), who translates, "who was a giant," and Benoît (1999, p. 1421), who appears to add the term's sense of fighter to Roussel's notion of gigantism. He offers, "ce lutteur à la taille colossale." Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 614), who evidently follows Ct here, renders, "strong and sturdy." Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 927) takes the word in its sense of "a wrestler." It offers, "For the wrestler Candraketu . . ." See ManuSm 10.22 and 12.45.

"which was like the city of heaven" svargapurī yathā: The reference is, no doubt, to Indra's heavenly city of Amarāvatī.

10. "those heroes . . . unassailable in battle" yudhi durādharṣāḥ: Literally, "those who were unassailable in battle." V2,D2,5–7,9–11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read the synonymous yuddhe for yudhi, "in battle."

"Bharata, and Lakṣmaṇa" bharato lakṣmaṇas tathā: D6,7,10,11,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read, by transposition, lakṣmaṇo bharatas tathā.

"performed the consecration of the two princes" abhiṣekam . . . cakrire: Literally, "they performed the consecration." As both Ct and Cr note, we must understand that this is the consecration of Aṅgada and Candraketu (so Ct) or, in other words, of Lakṣmaṇa's two sons (so Cr) (aṅgadacandraketvor iti śeṣaḥ—so Ct; lakṣmaṇakumārayor iti śeṣaḥ—so Cr).

11. "After they had consecrated the two princes, they sent . . . off" abhiṣicya kumārau dvau prasthāpya: Literally, "having consecrated the two princes, having dispatched." The verse lacks a finite verb, in the absence of which one is compelled to read the gerund prasthāpya, "having dispatched," as if it were finite. Cr attempts to make good the lack by adding the phrase "Rāma remained" (prasthāpyātiṣṭhad rāma iti śeṣaḥ). We, however, understand that the unexpressed subjects of the gerunds are the three brothers Rāma, Bharata, and Lakṣmaṇa, mentioned in the previous verse as having performed the royal consecration ceremonies. KK and VSP attempt to remedy the situation by reading the entire pāda differently, sa prasthāpayati rāghavaḥ, lending the line the sense "He, Rāghava, having consecrated [them], dispatched the two princes."

"the two" dvau: The reading is marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition. KK and VSP read instead saḥ, "he." See above.

"accompanied by their armies and retinues" sabalānugau: D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead susamāhitau, "who were well focused," while KK and VSP read [prasthāpaya]ti rāghavaḥ. See above.

"Aṅgada to the western country and Candraketu to the north" aṅgadaṃ paścimāṃ bhūmiṃ candraketum udaṅmukham: Literally, "Aṅgada to the western land, Candraketu, who was facing north." There is no parallelism in the references to the two princes here. Cr seeks to restore it by glossing, "The meaning is 'to the northern country' (udīcīṃ bhūmim ity arthaḥ)."

12. "served as the commander of Candraketu's rear guard" candraketoḥ . . . pārṣṇigrāho babhūva ha: Literally, "he became Candraketu's rear-guard commander." The term pārṣṇigrāha, literally, "the heel catcher," refers to the commander of an army's rear guard.

13. "when . . . unassailable . . . to Ayodhyā" durādharṣe ayodhyām: Ñ1,V1,D2–5, 9,T3,4,G1, and KK and VSP read instead hy ayodhyām to avoid the hiatus between durādharṣe and ayodhyām.

14. "yet one more year" saṃvatsaram athādhikam: Ck, Cg, and Ct all add the phrase "in the presence of Candraketu (candraketusamīpa iti śeṣaḥ)." We believe that the idea is that Bharata spent one year more in Candrakāntā than Lakṣmaṇa spent in Aṅgadīyā. That is, he spent a total of two years before returning to Ayodhyā. Ñ1,V1,3,D10,11, T1,2,G1,M3,6, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead saṃvatsaram ato 'dhikam, which can be interpreted to mean "a year more than that [year mentioned in the previous verse]," or, as most of the translators render it, "a year and more than that." Dutt (1894, p. 1918) offers, "more than a year." Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 635) renders, "une anné et plus," while Benoît (1999, p. 1422) has "plus d'un an." Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 615) translates, "more than a year" and Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 927) offers, "having spent a year and more." Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 624), alone among the translators consulted who share this reading, interprets as we do, rendering, "one year more."

"he approached" upāgamat: Ñ2,V2,B,D10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead upāsta saḥ, "he sat by the side of or attended upon."

15. "in their love for him" snehāt: Literally, "from or because of love."

"did not realize . . . how much time had passed" kālaṃ gatam api . . . na jajñāte: Literally, "those two did not know that the time [had] even passed."

16. "ten thousand years" varṣasahasrāṇi daśa: As previously, the commentators have their own interpretations of this phrase, which are designed to make it conform to other passages in the Rāmāyaṇa and the Padmapurāṇa regarding the length of Rāma's rule. See 7.89.5 and notes; see, too, 6.116.82,90 and notes. Ct understands that by citing this number it is clear that [Rāma's] life span was eleven thousand years (daśasahasrāṇy āyus tv ekādaśasahasrāṇīti spaṣṭam). Cr believes the number is to be used as a synecdoche [to stand for the period of thirty thousand years], thus harmonizing the passage with his previously stated opinion that Rāma ruled and performed sacrifices for a total of thirty-three thousand years (daśavarṣasahasrāṇi yayur upalakṣanam idaṃ sahasratrayasyāpi).

"constantly" nityadā: The reading is marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition.

17. "Having passed the time " vihṛtya kālam: Cr, the only commentator to note this phrase, takes kālam adverbially in its sense of "at the proper time[s]." He glosses, "at restricted or regulated time[s] (yathā niyamitasamayam)." Translators differ in their understanding of the phrase. The majority understand as we do. Thus, Gorresio (1870, p. 295) translates "Passando il tempo e mano a mano," while Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 636) offers "Ainsi employaint-ils le temps." Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 624), following Roussel, renders, "Employing their days in this wise," and Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 927) translates, "passed time." Others render variously. Thus Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 615), follows Cr's gloss and renders, "diverting themselves at the appropriate time." Dutt (1894, p. 1919) offers, "[attained to joy] in the fullness of time," while Benoît (1999, p. 1422) ignores the phrase.

"their hearts contented" paripūrṇamānasaḥ: Literally, "whose hearts or minds were completely filled." Cr glosses the adjective paripūrna-, "full," as "gratified with every object of desire (sarvakāmaiḥ paryāptaṃ)."

"fixed on the supreme path of righteousness" dharmapathe pare sthitāḥ: D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead dharmapure ca[su- —so KK, VSP] saṃsthitāḥ, "and [well—so KK, VSP] established in the city of righteousness." Ck, Cg, and Ct understand that the city—explicitly named as Ayodhyā by Ck, Ct, and Cr—is itself a means toward the practice of righteousness (dharmapure dharmasādhane pure 'yodhyāyām—so Ct; Ck and Ct similarly; ayodhyāyām—so Cr). Ck and Ct support this understanding of the dharmic quality of Ayodhyā by citing the well-known purāṇic verse that names Ayodhyā as one among the seven cities that confer spiritual liberation (ayodhyā madhurā [mathurā—v.l.] māyā kāśī kāñcī avantikā / purī dvāravatī caiva saptaite mokṣadāyakāḥ // —iti vacanāt—so Ck; Ct similarly). The verse is found in various purāṇic sources, for example, BrahmāṇḍP 3.40.91; GaruḍaP 2.38.5, 2.49.114; and Nāradapurāṇa 1.27.35.

"The three of them, resplendent with blazing energy, truly resembled the three sacred fires kindled and fed oblations in a great sacrifice." trayaḥ samiddhā iva dīptatejaso hutāgnayaḥ sādhu mahādhvare trayaḥ: Literally, "Possessed of shining blazing energy, the three were truly like the three kindled, oblated fires in a great sacrifice." The simile is confused, as it appears that the phrases referring to the upameya, i.e., the three princes, are awkwardly interspersed with those referring to the upamāna, i.e., the three sacrificial fires. Ś3,D7,10,11,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead trayaḥ samiddhāhutidīptatejaso hutāgnayaḥ sādhu mahādhvare trayaḥ, "the three [princes were] truly three oblated fires whose resplendent blazing energy was kindled through oblations in a great sacrifice." GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read sādhumahādhvare as if it were a compound with the sense of "a proper great sacrifice." Since this reading is so awkward and elliptical, Cr attempts to flesh it out and rationalize it. He glosses: "Those three whose blazing energies were made resplendent through kindled offerings in a great sacrifice, that is to say, the three oblated sacrificial fires, namely the dakṣiṇāgni, the gārhapatya, and the āhavanīya, they [the three princes] shone just like them. These last words must be supplied. (mahādhvare samiddhāhutibhir dīptāni tejāṃsi yeṣāṃ te trayo dakṣiṇāgnigārhapatyāhavanīyā hutāgnaya iva virejur iti śeṣaḥ.) Cs takes a characteristically contrarian stance on the passage and uses it as another stick with which to beat Ct, who, interestingly, has nothing whatever to say on the passage. Cs argues that we should read the term hutāgnayaḥ, "oblated fires," in pāda d instead as ahutāgnayaḥ, "fires that have as yet not been oblated," since the term could have lost an initial privative "a" as a result of the sandhi with the preceding -aḥ of -dīptatejasaḥ. This strategy, Cs believes, avoids the redundancy that arises if one reads samiddhāhutidīptatejaso hutāgnayaḥ. He understands, then, that the reference is to the fires to be kindled in general. The three are the three sacrificial fires, the āhavanīya, etc., which subsequently, during the sacrifice, are made to be such that their blazing splendor is made resplendent through kindling and oblation, in much the same way as those three, Rāma, Lakṣmaṇa, and Bharata.

Among the commentators consulted, only Cr comments on the variant that would lead to the redundancy with which Cs is concerned. It is perhaps he, who often echoes Ct, or even a predecessor of Cr, to whom Cs refers deprecatingly when he concludes his comment here by noting that this later interpretation belongs to those who, like Ct, are unsophisticated in the science of grammar, and is not his own. (ye prāgahutāgnayo 'hutāś ca te 'gnayaś ca te tathā. āhitāgnyādiḥ. te traya āhavanīyādayo 'nantaram adhvare samiddhāhutidīptatejaso yathā tathā trayo rāmalakṣmaṇabharatāḥ saṃsthitāḥ. itthaṃ ca yojanāyāṃ samiddhāhutidīptatejasas trayo hutāgnaya iti padayor apaunaruktyena vyākaraṇācāturī nāgojibhaṭṭādivan nāsmākam iti mantavyam.) M3 and KK and VSP read for pāda d the synonymous mahādhvare sādhu hutās trayo 'gnayaḥ.

The meter is vaṃśasthavila (vaṃśastha), with a defective second pāda in indravaṃśā.

Sarga 93

1. "Now after some time" kasyacit tv atha kālasya: Literally, "now of a certain time." The phrase is elliptical. We agree with Ck, Cg, and Ct, who insert the phrase "after the passage [of some time] (apagamānantaram—so Ck and Ct; Cg similarly)." Cr understands similarly. Compare 7.90.1 and notes.

"during which Rāma was steadfast in the path of righteousness" rāme dharmapathe sthite: Literally, "when Rāma was standing on the path of dharma." D6,7,10,11,M8, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read dharmapare, "for whom righteousness was foremost," lending the pāda the sense "during which Rāma, for whom righteousness was foremost, was established."

"Kāla" kālaḥ: As is usual, when theological issues are at stake, the commentators differ as to the exact identity of the incarnate figure here. Ct understands that the being here is dispatched as a "messenger of Brahmā (brahmaṇo dūtapreṣaṇam)." Ck elaborates at length on the identity of Brahmā as "Brahmā, the ruler of the universe, who is Rudra in the form of the fire at the end of time and the great life force, that is to say, the blessed lord four-faced Rudra (mahāprāṇamahākālāgnirudrasaṃrāḍbrahmā bhagavāṃś caturmukharudraḥ)." Compare notes to 4.42.56; 127*, note 5, following notes to 6.7.15; 6.40.43; 6.59.82; and 6.62.28. See, too, notes to 7.25.9; 7.33.8; 7.50.13; 7.61.21; and 1266*, note 2, following notes to 7.82.6. Cr, citing the support of the Śvetāśvataropaniṣad 6.2 and 6.16, which describes the Supreme Being as "the knower possessing all knowledge, possessed of qualities, and the ender of time," understands Rāma's visitor to be a particular form of Kāla (Time), which, acting on Rāma's command, sets the entire universe in motion (kālo rāmājñānusāreṇa sakalajagatpravarttakaḥ samayaviśeṣo rājadvāram upāgamat tathā ca śrutir jñaḥ kālakālo guṇī sarvavidya iti)." As noted by Olivelle (1998, pp. 626–28), Rau (1964, p. 45) suggests reading [a]guṇī, "without qualities." Olivelle follows this reading. Cs understands Kāla here to be Rudra, who arrives on the instructions of Vidhi (the creator), i.e., Brahmā (kālo rudro vidhinideśāt . . . upāgamat).

2. D10 and NSP omit the verse. GPP includes the verse, in brackets, unnumbered, between its 7.103.1 and 7.103.2, noting that the verse is added in the text of Cg.

"on a mission of grave importance" kāryagauravāt: Literally, "because of the gravity of the mission."

3. "For I am the messenger of the exceedingly mighty" dūto hy atibalasyāham: G3,M3, and KK and VSP read instead the similar duto 'smy atibalasyāham, "I am the messenger of the exceedingly mighty one."

"of an . . . great seer" maharṣeḥ: The commentators are in general agreement that the reference is to Brahmā. Cg simply glosses, "of Brahmā (brahmaṇaḥ)." Ck and Ct understand the reference to be to Brahmā because of his being the life force of the world, because of his four mouths [uttering] the four vedas, and because of his perfect truthfulness (jagatprāṇarūpatvāc caturvedamukhatvāc ca satyavacastvāc ca brahmātibalo maharṣiḥ). Cs observes that we are to understand that by referring to Brahmā as the exceedingly mighty and immeasurably powerful great seer, Kāla is making an oblique reference to the effect that what he has to say is secret information that is not to be disclosed to anyone other than Rāma. (amitaujaso 'tibalasya maharṣeḥ. rahasyaprameyaṃ rāmetarebhyo na kathanīyam ity ācchādyoktir iyam iti jñeyam.)

"immensely powerful prince" mahābala: Literally, "O immensely powerful [one]." GPP and NSP read instead the nominative singular mahābalaḥ, "the immensely powerful [one]." In this case, Kāla would be referring to himself as "the immensely powerful messenger."

4. "he . . . informed Rāma that an ascetic had something he wished to communicate" nyavedayata rāmāya tāpasasya vivakṣitam: Literally, "he reported to Rāma that which was intended to be spoken on the part of the ascetic." D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read tāpasaṃ taṃ samāgatam for tāpasasya vivakṣitam, lending the line the sense "he reported to Rāma that an ascetic had come."

"immediately" tvarayānvitaḥ: Literally, "endowed with speed or haste."

5. "May you . . . king, conquer . . . through righteousness" jayasva rājan dharmeṇa: Ś,Ñ2,V1,3,B3,4,D1,3–7,10–12,T1,3,4,G1,2,M2,4,7,9, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead rājadharmeṇa, "though the dharma of kings," for rājan dharmeṇa, "O king, through dharma," lending the phrase the sense "may you conquer through the dharma of kings." Cs, idiosyncratically, breaks the sequence into jaya svarājadharmeṇa. He thus understands the passage as follows: The two terms sva- and rāja- form an embedded dvandva in the sense of "what belongs to one's own [inner self] and the king." He then takes the larger compound to mean "by means of the proper practice of both the inner self and the royal [self]." He further understands that it is through the proper [spiritual] conduct of the self, that is to say, through the performance of sacrifices, etc., that Rāma will conquer the next world, while through his royal practices, consisting of martial valor, etc., he will conquer this one. Alternatively, Cs suggests that we may take the first two elements of the compound as forming a karmadhāraya compound in the sense of "through the practice of royal duties accompanied by one's own [religious duties]." (svarājadharmeṇa svaṃ ca rājā ca svarājānau. tayor dharmas tena. svadharmeṇa yajñādinā paralokaṃ rājadharmeṇa śauryādinemaṃ lokam ity ubhau jaya. svapūrvarājadharmeṇeti vā.) Ñ1,B2,G3,M3,10, and KK and VSP read rāma dharmeṇa, "O Rāma, through dharma," for rājan dharmeṇa, "O king, through dharma," lending the phrase the sense "May you conquer, O Rāma, through dharma."

"immensely splendid" mahādyute: The word -dyute is marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition.

"both worlds" ubhau lokau: Ct, who clearly understands, as does Cs above, that the reference is to this world and the next, argues that Lakṣmaṇa uses the salutation "May you conquer both worlds" to suggest that it is time for [Rāma] to enter the next world (ubhau lokau jayasvety uktyā paralokapraveśakālasūcanam).

"An ascetic, whose radiance is that of the sun" tapasvī bhāskaraprabhaḥ: Literally, "an ascetic possessing the radiance of the sun [lit., 'maker of light']." D7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read tapasā, "through austerities," for tapasvī, "ascetic," which must be construed with bhāskaraprabhaḥ, lending the phrase the sense "who, through his austerities, possesses the radiance of the sun."

6. "uttered by Lakṣmaṇa" lakṣmaṇenoktam: Ś1,D10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead the virtually synonymous lakṣmaṇoktaṃ vai.

"bid . . . enter" praveśyatām: Literally, "Let him be caused to enter."

"who is bearing someone's message" tasya vākyadhṛk: Literally, "bearing his message." T1,M3,7, and KK and VSP read instead the synonymous tasya vākyadhṛt. Ct (who reads -dhṛk) understands this to be an elliptical construction from which a relative pronoun is omitted. He understands, "bearing the command of him of whom he is the messenger (yasya dūtas tasyājñādhārīty arthaḥ)." In this he has been followed by Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 636), Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 625), Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, pp. 615–16), Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 928), and Benoît (1999, p. 1422), all of whom use some variant of the term "master." Ck (who reads -dhṛk) and Cg (who reads -dhṛt) understand the genitive pronoun tasya to refer to Rāma himself, so that the phrase "bearer of his words" refers to Lakṣmaṇa (tasya vākyadhṛg iti rāmasyājñādhārīty arthaḥ—so Ck). Cg makes it explicit that the reference is to Lakṣmaṇa [who is bearing a message for him, i.e., Rāma] (tasya vākyasya dhṛd iti rāmavākyadhārīti saumitriviśeṣaṇam). Cv and Cm (both of whom read -dhṛk) understand the pronoun to refer to the sage. In this case, too, the phrase must be a vocative addressed to Lakṣmaṇa as the bearer of the sage's words (tasya vākyadhṛn muner vākyadhṛk—so Cv; Cm similarly).

7. "who seemed to be shining with his radiant energy and was blazing, as it were, with rays of light" jvalantam iva tejobhiḥ pradahantam ivāṃśubhiḥ: Literally, "as if blazing with energies, as if burning with rays." GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read the emphatic particle eva for iva, "as it were," lending pāda c the sense "blazing brightly with energies." The variant is not noted in the critical apparatus. Ct argues that the two descriptions of the sage do not constitute a redundancy, since the two compounds respectively refer to the radiant beauty of the sage's body and to the actual rays of light emanating from it (tejobhir aṃśubhir ity ete pade śarīrakāntikiraṇapratipādake iti na punar uktiḥ). Cs takes the first expression to indicate that the sage is blazing with radiant energy like fire, while the second indicates that he is shining with rays like the sun. (tejobhiḥ pradahantaṃ vahnivat. aṃśubhir jvalantaṃ sūryavat.)

9. "honored him, gave him the guest-offering" pūjām arghyapurogamām / dadau: Literally, "he gave honor preceded by the arghya." The arghya is a traditional welcome-offering made to a respected or venerable visitor. For a listing of the various articles of food and drink in this offering, see 16* note 1, following notes to 7.1.10.

"and then began to inquire" praṣṭuṃ caivopacakrame: Literally, "and he began to inquire." Ś,Ñ1,V1,D1–5,8,9,12,T1,2,G2,3,M3, and Lahore, KK, and VSP read instead praṣṭum evopacakrame, "he began to inquire."

10. "most eloquent sage" vadatāṃ varaḥ: Literally, "the foremost of speakers."

11. "Welcome" svāgataṃ te: Literally, "welcome to you."

"great sage" mahāmune: Ś,B2,D7,8,10–12, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead mahāmate, "O one of great intelligence."

"Now please report the words of him of whom you have come as a messenger." prāpayasva ca vākyāni yato dūtas tvam āgataḥ: Literally, "You must impart the words from whence you have come as a messenger." D10,11,T1–3,G,M2,3,8, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead prāpayāsya, "you must impart [the words] of him," for prāpayasva, "please impart." Ck and Ct gloss the line as "please communicate, that is, please report, the words, that is to say, the words of the message, of him of whom you are the messenger (asya yasya tvaṃ dūtas tasya vākyāni saṃdeśavākyāni prāpayasva nivedaya)." Cr, who reads the variant, glosses: " 'Of him, that is to say, of your own master, you please communicate, that is to say, please tell.' These are the words that Rāma said to the messenger. (asya svasvāmino vākyāni prāpaya kathayeti vacas taṃ dūtaṃ rāma uvāca.)"

12. "Encouraged" coditaḥ: Literally, "impelled or urged."

"uttered" udīrayat: D6,7,10,11,M5, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read the similar abhāṣata, "he said."

"This must be related privately" dvandvam etat pravaktavyam: Literally, "this must be spoken as a couple." D6,7,10,11,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead dvandve hy etat pravaktavyam, "for this is to be spoken only between a couple." In justification of the need for absolute confidentiality, Cs cites the nītiśāstra verse ṣaṭkarṇo bhidyate mantraś [catuṣkarṇaḥ sthiro bhavet / dvikarṇasya tu mantrasya brahmāpy antaṃ na gacchati //], "Counsel is compromised (when shared) by three people [lit., 'six ears']; [it will be secure (when shared) by two (lit., 'four ears'); when it is restricted to only one (lit., 'two ears'), even Brahmā himself cannot penetrate it]." This popular saying is found, for example, at PañcT 1.108 and GaruḍaP 1.114.54.

"nor should my words be compromised by prying eyes" na ca cakṣurhataṃ vacaḥ: Literally, "and speech is not destroyed by sight." The expression seems somewhat obscure in its meaning, and the reading is not shared by any of the commentators or printed editions consulted. On the strength of Kāla's reference to people who either hear or see the transaction between him and Rāma in verse 13 below, we understand that he is referring to the possibility of their secret's being betrayed by someone who might witness their conversation. D10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead hitaṃ vai yady avekṣase, while KK and VSP read the more or less synonymous hitaṃ vai yady apekṣase, a reading not noted in the critical apparatus. This would lend the phrase the meaning "if you have regard for what is beneficial." Cm and Ct supply the phrase "of the gods" and indicate that the meaning is that the well-being of the gods arises when their secrets are kept. (devānām iti śeṣaḥ. devagopyagopane hi devānāṃ hitaṃ bhavatīti bhāvaḥ—so Ct; Cm similarly.) Cr supplies the phrase "of us" and understands: "If you have concern for our well-being, then this matter that you are inquiring about must be related in secret, that is to say, in the presence of only the two [of us] (yadi hitam asmākam iti śeṣo 'vekṣase tarhy etad bhavatpṛṣṭaṃ dvandve dvayor eva sthitau vaktavyaṃ)."

13. "Rāghava, you must put to death" sa vadhyas tava rāghava: Literally, "O Rāghava, he is to be slain by [lit., 'of'] you." D6,7,10,11,T,3,4, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead sa vadhyas bhavitā tava, "he will be put to death by [lit., 'of'] you."

"anyone who overhears or might witness this" yaḥ śṛṇoti nirīkṣed vā: Literally, "who hears or might see." The phrase is elliptical, and the commentators supply objects for both of the verbs. What might be overheard, they note, is the confidential conversation between Kāla and Rāma. Thus Cr explains, "One must supply the phrase 'our private conversation' (āvayor ekāntavacanam iti śeṣaḥ)." Ck and Ct understand, "the conversation or our conversation ([asmad- —so Ck] vacanam)." As the object of nirīkṣet, Ck, Cg, and Ct supply, "the two who are taking counsel" (mantrayitārav iti śeṣaḥ). Cr understands, "us two, the speaker and hearer" (vaktṛśrotārāv āvām iti śeṣaḥ).

14. "position yourself" tiṣṭha: Literally, "stand."

"great-armed prince" mahābāho: Literally, "O great-armed [one]."

15. "the conversation . . . uttered in secret" kathāṃ dvandvasamīritām: Literally, "the conversation uttered between a couple." D10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead vācaṃ dvandvasamīritam, "the speech uttered between a couple." KK and VSP read instead kathādvandvaṃ samīritam, "the paired conversation that was uttered."

16. "entrusted Lakṣmaṇa with the guardianship of the door" nikṣipya . . . lakṣmaṇaṃ dvārasaṃgrahe: Literally, "having appointed Lakṣmaṇa in the guardianship of the door." D10,11,M3,10, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead nikṣipya . . . lakṣmaṇaṃ dvāri saṃgraham, "having appointed Lakṣmaṇa as the guard at the door." We take the term saṃgraha in its senses of "guardianship" or "guardian" with Cg, who glosses, "keeper or guardian (rakṣitāram)." Ck and Ct take the term in its sense of grasping or understanding, glossing, "possessing a full understanding of the meaning of what was said (samyaguktārthagrahaṇavantam)." Cr glosses, "Lakṣmaṇa, who was the agent of protection of his own [Rāma's] words (saṃgrahaṃ svoktisaṃgrahakārakaṃ lakṣmaṇam)." Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 929), following Ck and Ct, renders, "Then placing Lakṣmaṇa, who could catch of [sic] the meaning [of Śrī Rāma's words] at the door."

"Rāghava . . . said these words to the sage: 'Please tell me what you have to say.' " tam uvāca muniṃ vākyaṃ kathayasveti rāghavaḥ: The reading of the critical edition is somewhat ambiguous. The issue is how to take the word vākyam, "speech," in pāda c. In keeping with the normal idiom of the epic and the preference, where possible, to mark syntactic breaks at the caesura, we understand pāda c to mean "he spoke words to the sage," while pāda d quotes Rāma's speech simply as "Please speak (kathayasva)." On the other hand, one can take vākyam as the object not of the perfect (liṭ) uvāca, "he spoke," but of the imperative (loṭ) kathayasva, "tell." This would lend the line the sense "Rāghava said to the sage, 'Please speak that speech.' " In this case, the word would refer to the message carried by the sage as at verse 11c, where Lakṣmaṇa asks the sage to report the words of his master. D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the vocative singular mune, "O sage," for the accusative singular munim, "the sage." This eliminates the ambiguity, as it places the word vākyam squarely within Rāma's speech, thus lending the line the sense "Rāghava said to the sage, 'Please speak those words, sage.' " Cr, the only commentator to mention this line, reads, with D7, the genitive singular muneḥ, lending the line the sense "Rāghava said to him, 'Please speak the words of the sage.' " In this case, the sage is the personage described as "the great seer" in verse 3 above. All translations consulted, with the exception of Gorresio, read the vocative. Gorresio's text (7.110.16) reads uvāca taṃ mahātmānaṃ kathayasveti rāghavaḥ, "Rāghava said to the great one, 'Please speak.' " This reading lacks the word vākyam, thus eliminating any ambiguity.

17. "Please tell me without hesitation" kathayasva viśaṅkas tvam: Literally, "You, fearless, must tell." V2,B1,D3,6,7,10,11,T,G,M1–8, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the virtually synonymous kathayasvāviśaṅkas tvam.

"the message you have in mind" yat te manīṣitaṃ vākyam: Literally, "that speech which is thought about by [lit., 'of'] you." We follow Cr, who glosses, "reflected upon or under discussion (vicāritam)." D1,M7, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read the demonstrative tat, "that," for the relative yat, "which."

"sent" samāhitaḥ: When referring to a person, the term normally has the sense of "focused or concentrated," but, in agreement with the commentators, we believe the context supports the sense of "sent or dispatched." Ck glosses, "sent forth (prahitaḥ)," while Ct similarly offers, "dispatched (preṣitaḥ)." Cr proposes, "have come here (ihāgataḥ)."

"For it is also in my heart." mamāpi hṛdi vartate: The precise sense of the phrase is a matter of some disagreement on the part of commentators and translators. Ck and Ct, as their first alternative, understand: "One must add the phrase: 'Do I [i.e., Rāma] absolutely have to hear a secret message of this sort [since it already is in my heart]' (kim evaṃvidhaṃ rahasyaṃ tad avaśyaṃ mayā śrotavyam iti śeṣaḥ)?" Cg argues that the meaning is "I [i.e., Rāma] also know it (aham api jānāmīty arthaḥ)." Ct offers an alternative to his first interpretation, which is similar to that of Cg. He says: "[My] going to Vaikuṇṭha that you are about to relate is already in my heart, that is the meaning (yadvā tvayā vakṣyamāṇaṃ vaikuṇṭhagamanaṃ mamāpi hṛdi vartata ity arthaḥ)." Cr simply offers: "The phrase 'Your request' is to be supplied (tava prārthanīyam iti śeṣaḥ)." Among the translators consulted, only Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 616) understands with us and with Cg and Ct (second alternative), translating, "I know in my heart of hearts what it is." Gorresio (1870, p. 296), Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 637), Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 626), and Benoît 1999, p. 1423) all take the phrase to mean that Rāma will keep or cherish in his heart the message of the sage. Dutt (1894, p. 1920) renders, "I have become anxious to hear it," while Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 929) similarly understands, "I am eager to know [what you know]."

Sarga 94

1. "great-armed . . . Rāma" rāma mahābāho: D7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead rājan mahāsattva (mahāsatva—so GPP), "immensely powerful king." Cs, who reads the variant, glosses mahāsattva, "immensely powerful," as "of much strength (bahulabala)."

"by . . . Grandfather Brahmā" pitāmahena: Literally, "by the grandfather."

2. The increasingly dormant commentators are, it seems, provoked into great prolixity by the seemingly idiosyncratic theology and mythology of the sarga. This is particularly the case with Ck and Ct, who discourse at some length in an attempt to explain it. Ck explains how Kāla, Time, can be considered a son of Rāma, i.e., of Viṣṇu. He anticipates the question that, if Kāla was sent as a messenger by the Lord [Brahmā], what is his actual nature? Kāla explains that he was Rāma's son in the time of pure existence (sadbhāva), in support of which Ck quotes Bhagavadgītā 17.23ab (oṃ tat sad iti nirdeśo brahmaṇas trividhaḥ smṛtaḥ), which states that the doctrine of the teaching about Brahman, encapsulated in the mantra "oṃ tat sat," is known to be threefold. Ck next quotes Chāndogyopaniṣad 6.2.1, in which it is famously stated: "In the beginning, dear child, there was only pure existence (sad eva somyedam agra āsīd)." Ck continues, stating that the Lord who is known as Hiraṇyagarbha is, indeed, the pure form of Brahmā, who is the primordial being and the material cause of the entire universe and who is known as sat, "pure being." That being, now delimited by the form of Rāma, is the one of which he, Kāla, was the son in a previous state, analogous to that of a zygote in an egg. For the purpose of setting in motion the five modes of action of the entire created world—which [originally] consisted of the Supreme Lord without a second—with its sentient and nonsentient beings, each with its own unique delimited form, [that being] took on the forms of four-faced Rudra, Prajāpati, Viṣṇu, etc. In that primordial time, when everything was on the level of absolute being and when that being was established in the nature of Śrīhiraṇyagarbha, Kāla became his son. Ck now raises the question as to what sort of son Kāla might be. Kāla's response is to say: "O hero [Rāma], I am Kāla [Time], who eternally sets in motion and destroys everything that is created by all of the five principal modes of action—including creation, maintenance, destruction, punishment, and grace—in the entire created universe, which is produced from Virāṭ and is to be entirely destroyed, along with everything that is excellent and inferior, and which is within the scope of the activities of eternal time. [I am] the sovereign Brahmā, consisting of the various divisions [of time]—seconds, [half] minutes, [half] hours, days, fortnights, months, seasons, half years, years, yugas, and kalpas. This [universe] was created by me through setting in motion the wheel of my blazing energy. My divisions have been perpetually arranged and proclaimed. Therefore, I am the son of you, who are the self-existent universal sovereign Brahmā. I am the son whose nature is that of Rudra, and whose form consists principally of blazing energy. This is the meaning." Ck then quotes Taittirīyāraṇyaka 1.10.1 in order to explain in what way Rāma is Kāla's son. He says it is well known that " 'The wife was the earth. The husband the sky. Those two had intercourse. Their son was Bṛhaspati, [as was] Rudra.' And because of the fact that the earth and sky are characterized as being more than a thousandfold, the immensely powerful Lord Hiraṇyagarbha is of that same nature, while Hiraṇyagarbha's wife is Gāyatrī. This is quite clear." (pitāmahenetyādi bhagavatpreṣitadūtas tvaṃ ca kiṃtattvo 'sīty atrāha. tavāhaṃ pūrvasadbhāve putra ity oṃ tat sad iti nirdeśo brahmaṇas trividhaḥ smṛta iti smṛteḥ. sad eva somyedam ityādeś ca sakalajagadādibhūto nikhilajagadupādānaṃ bhagavāñ śuddhabrahmā hiraṇyagarbhas sadākhyaḥ. adya rāmopagrahasya tavaiva pūrvasadbhāve piṇḍa ivāṇḍe 'py advitīyaparameśvarasya svasvopagrahānanyatattvacidacidakhilasaṃsārasya pañcakṛtyapravṛttaye parigrahītacaturmukharudraprajāpativiṣṇvādimūrteḥ prācīne pāramārthake śrīhiraṇyagarbhatattve pratiṣṭhitasyāhaṃ putra eva. tvaṃ me kīdṛśaḥ putra ity ata āha. mayetyādi. he vīra sarvasamāhāryaparāparasakalavairājyasaṃsārasya nityakālagocarasya sṛjidhṛtihṛtinigṛhīty anugṛhītilakṣaṇasarvapañcakṛtyasya nityasamāhārako nityapravārtako yaḥ kālaḥ prāṇavināḍīnāḍidinapakṣamāsārtvayanābdayugakalpāvāntaravibhāgavān saṃrāḍ brahmāsti yo 'sau mayā[1] mattejaścakraparivartanena saṃbhāvito nityam eva kalpitoktaparicchedo bhavati. ato 'haṃ svasvarājas te brahmaṇas tejaḥpradhānamūrtī rudrātmakaḥ putra ity arthaḥ. putratvaṃ tu me jāyā bhūmiḥ patir vyoma mithunaṃ tā aturyathuḥ putro bṛhaspatī rudra iti suprasiddham. atra bhūrvyomnos sahasrakṛtva[ḥ?]paratvaviśeṣaṇāt tathātattvo bhagavān hiraṇyagarbho mahāṣodhā hiraṇyagarbhapatnī gāyatrī ceti suspaṣṭam.)

[1] It appears that Ck (along with T2,4,G3,M9) reads mayā sambhāvitaḥ, "created by me," for the critical edition's māyāsambhāvitaḥ, "created by Māyā." Note that Ct, when paraphrasing Ck below, reads māyayā saṃbhāvitaḥ, "created by Māyā."

Ct explains: "He says, 'I [Kāla] am a messenger sent by him and am your kinsman,' with the verse beginning, 'In a previous existence, I was your.' In a previous existence, that is to say, at the time of the coming into being of Hiraṇyagarbha or in the state of being Hiraṇyagarbha. How am I your son? He now explains. Produced by māyā, that is to say, [produced] by an act of will. According to Tīrtha [Cm], ' "destroyer of all" means "the agent of the destruction of everything." ' Kataka [Ck], however, says: 'There is a variant reading, which is "I was yours in a previous time of pure existence." And that previous state of pure being was prior to the creation, as is shown by the śruti [ChāndoU 6.2.1]: "In the beginning, dear child, there was only pure existence (sad eva somyedam agra āsīd)." [I am] the son produced by Māyā, I who am the agent of the divisions of hours, days, fortnights, etc., who takes the form of the flow of moments, known as Kāla, that is to say, the agent of the five principal modes of action characterized by creation, maintenance, destruction, punishment, and grace, of the entire world, which during the time that Brahmā had the form of pure being was yet to be produced. The meaning is "I am a product of your volition." The rest is as before. Although Rāma is [in reality] an incarnation who is a portion of Hiraṇyagarbha, nonetheless, since his knowledge is blocked by that portion of his own true nature, as in the case of Vāmadeva, given this pretext [i.e., the incarnation], there is no logical flaw.' So says [Ck]. But what Kataka [Ck] says, i.e., that Hiraṇyagarbha is indicated by the word sadbhāva, is a purely empty [idea], as is evident to those who know the doctrine of non-dualism. (tatpreṣito dūto 'py ahaṃ tvatsaṃbandhy evety āha. tavāhaṃ pūrvake bhāva iti. pūrvāvasthāyāṃ hiraṇyagarbhotpattisamaye hiraṇyagarbhāvasthāyāṃ vā. katham ahaṃ putras tatrāha māyāsaṃbhāvito māyayā saṃkalpena saṃbhāvita utpāditaḥ. sarvasamāharaḥ sarvavastusaṃhārakarteti tīrthaḥ. katakas tu tavāhaṃ pūrvasadbhāva iti pāṭhaḥ. pūrvaṃ sṛṣṭeḥ prāksadbhāve sad eva somyedam agra āsīd iti śruteḥ. sattārūpabrahmabhāve kariṣyamāṇākhilasaṃsārasya sṛṣṭisthitisaṃhāranigrahānugrahalakṣaṇapañcakṛtyanirvāhakaḥ kālākhyaḥ kṣaṇadhārārūpo nāḍīdinapakṣādivibhāganirvāhakaḥ putro māyāsaṃbhāvitaḥ. tvadīyamāyāpariṇāma ity arthaḥ. śeṣaṃ prāgvat. yady api rāmo hiraṇyagarbhāṃśaviṣṇor evāvatāras tathāpi tasya svasvarūpāṃśenāvṛtajñānatvād vāmadevavad evaṃ vyapadeśe na doṣa ity āha. yat tu katakena sadbhāvaśabdena hiraṇyagarbha uktas tat tu tuccham iti spaṣṭam evādvaitavidyāvidām.)" It is evident from this passage that Ct's understanding of Ck's comments is at best a loose paraphrase, at least with regard to the text of Ck that we have. Also, it is noteworthy that it is rare for Ct to actually criticize a position of Ck after quoting it. The reference here to the sage Vāmadeva is apparently to a passage found at Bṛhadāraṇyakopaniṣad 1.4.10, where Vāmadeva, after hearing the doctrine that Brahman is everything, quoting ṚV 4.26.1, realizes, "I was Manu and I was the sun (tad etat paśyann ṛṣir vāmadevaḥ pratipede 'haṃ manur abhavaṃ sūryaś ceti)." The idea here is that Vāmadeva's realization of his divinity is analogous to that of Rāma, which had been blocked by the boon of Rāvaṇa.

Cr understands: "But who then are you? He responds with the verse beginning 'Your . . .' In the previous, that is to say, in the first state of being, i.e., at the time of origination, [I was] produced by your māyā, that is to say, I was produced, that is, brought into being, though [your] māyā, that is, through your grace. For that very reason I am your son, the destroyer of everything, that is to say, the agent of the destruction of everything in accordance with your command. The phrase 'I am Kāla' is to be supplied." (nanu tvaṃ ko 'sīty ata āha. taveti. pūrvake prathame bhāva utpattisamaye tava māyayā kṛpayā saṃbhāvita utpādito 'ta eva tava putraḥ sarvasamāharas tavājñānusāreṇa sakalasaṃhārakarttā kālo 'ham asmīti śeṣaḥ.)

Cm, as quoted in the apparatus, remarks: "In a previous existence, that is to say, in a previous state. The meaning is 'In that state [in which you had] a divine and auspicious body ornamented by a lotus in your navel that was the cause of the production of four-faced [Brahmā].' (pūrvake bhāve pūrvasyām avasthāyāṃ. caturmukhotpattihetubhūtanābhipaṅkajālāṃkṛtadivyamaṅgalavigrahāvasthāyām ity arthaḥ.)"

Cg explains: " 'And I am not an ascetic, but rather, I am Kāla,' as he states in the verse beginning, 'I am your . . .' 'In a previous state of existence, that is to say, in a previous birth, I was your son.' The term 'destroyer of all' amounts to saying 'Kālarudra.' Conqueror of enemy citadels, that is to say, the destroyer of the triple city. There is also a variant reading, 'I was your son in a previous existence, O conqueror of enemy citadels.' Merely because of the impossibility of Yama's coming into existence after his original existence, he is said to be produced by māyā, that is, he is brought into being by māyā. (ahaṃ ca na tāpasaḥ kiṃtu kāla ity āha. tavāham ityādi. pūrvasadbhāve pūrvajanmany ahaṃ tava putraḥ. sarvasamāharaḥ kālarudra iti yāvat. parapurañjayas tripurasaṃhārakaḥ. tavāhaṃ pūrvake bhāve putraḥ parapurañjaya iti ca pāṭhaḥ. kevalaṃ yamasya pūrvabhāvād utthitatvābhāvān māyāsaṃbhāvito māyayotpāditaḥ[?].)"

Cs, interpreting the passage according to Sāṃkhya philosophy, explains: "In saying 'messenger,' that is not so, rather he is your son. But I am [your] grandson. He states this in the verse beginning, 'Your . . .' In a previous existence, that is to say, in a past birth . . . [see note below on 'conqueror of enemy citadels'] . . . He now declares his own function as the destroyer of all, that is to say, the one who is the agent of the destruction of everything. [Next he declares] his name as 'Kāla.' Produced by your māyā, that is to say, he who was born from the lotus through your desire. I was born as his son in a previous state, that is to say, in that which consists of the essence of ahaṃkāra [self-awareness], which anticipates the [subsequent] effects [kārya]. The rest is as before. Through understanding this [i.e., the term pautra] as a special meaning [of putra], one must tolerate somewhat the remaining [usages of the term putra in the passage] because: 1) According to the [Maṇimañjarī 1.3 of Śrīnārāyaṇapaṇḍitācārya], which states, 'He [Viṣṇu] created ahaṃkāra, which is the body of Śiva, out of the element of mahat [the great (intellect)],' and so forth; 2) and because of the statement [at MBhTN 9.47]: 'Lord, the lotus-born one [Brahmā] is your son, and I [Rudra] am your grandson; although the words of a grandson may not be suitable, still the virtuous respect [them],' etc.; and 3) because of the natural meaning of the verse [at 7.94.4]: 'you . . . first created me.' (dūta iti eva na. kiṃtu tvatputraḥ saḥ. ahaṃ tu pautra ity āha. tavety pūrvake bhāva atītajātau . . . svavyāpāram apy āvedayati. sarvasamāharaḥ sarvasaṃhartā. nāmāha kāla iti. tava māyāsaṃbhāvita icchayā padmotpanno yas tasyāhaṃ pūrvake bhāve 'haṃkāratattve kāryonmukhe putro jāto 'ham. pūrvavad urvaritam. mahattattvād ahaṃkāraṃ sasarja śivavigraham ityādeḥ. putras taveśa kamalaprabhavas tathāhaṃ pautras tu pautrakavaco yad api hy ayogyam. saṃbhāvayanti guṇina ityādyukteś ca. māṃ tvaṃ pūrvam ajījana ity uktisvārasyād arthaviśeṣalābhena kiṃcic cheṣādikaṃ soḍhavyam.)"

"In a previous existence" pūrvake bhāve: KK and VSP read instead pūrvasadbhāve, "in a previous [time of] pure existence," a variant not noted in the critical apparatus. See note above for the commentators' understanding of this phrase.

"conqueror of enemy citadels" parapuraṃjaya: The syllables -jaya are marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition. Cg, who reads the form as a nominative singular, understands the compound to refer to the destroyer of the triple city, an epithet typically applied to Śiva (tripurasaṃhārakaḥ). Cs separates the compound parapuram from jaya, taking the former to mean "another body," by which he understands Kāla to be saying that he is the son of Viriñca [i.e., Brahmā], who is a son of Viṣṇu and who was produced by Māyā and born from Ramā. Thus, Cs argues, Kāla is telling Rāma that he [Kāla] is his [Rāma's] grandson. (māyāsaṃbhāvito ramāyām utpādito viriñcapadavācyas tava putraḥ. parapuraṃ tadaparo deho 'ham. tatputro 'ham. ataḥ pautras taveti bhāvaḥ.)

"who was produced by your power of creative illusion" māyāsambhāvitaḥ: Literally, "caused to be born through your māyā." On the term māyā in Vālmīki's Rāmāyaṇa, see S. Goldman 2010a.

3. "Grandfather . . . Brahmā" pitāmahaḥ: Literally, "the grandfather." Ct notes that the four-faced Brahmā is the grandfather because the Prajāpatis, who are the fathers of the world, are born from him (caturmukhāj jātānāṃ prajāpatīnāṃ lokapitṛtvāc caturmukhaḥ pitāmahaḥ).

"guardian of the worlds" lokapatiḥ: Literally, "Lord of the world[s]." Cs glosses, "He is the Lord, that is to say, the protector, of the worlds, such as the earth. (sa lokānāṃ bhūrādīnāṃ patiḥ pālitā)." Ck has a similar, but more elaborate, explanation.

"Great-armed Rāma" mahābāho: Literally, "great-armed [one]." D6,7,10,11,T4, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead kṛtaḥ saumya, lending the line the sense "O gentle one, an agreement was made by you."

"your agreement" samayas te: Ck, Cm, Ct, and Cr understand the reference to be to Viṣṇu's agreement to protect the worlds of the gods, men, etc., from the likes of Rāvaṇa, citing the following passage, which ends at verse 15 below, as well as his vow, found primarily in the southern recension (GPP, NSP 1.15.29cd–30ab = Bālakāṇḍa 467*, lines 13–14, following notes to 1.14.20). Ct understands that we should supply the words "that has been fulfilled." (bhavantu vigatajvarā ityanto brahmasaṃdeśaḥ. lokān devamānuṣādīn rāvaṇādito rakṣituṃ yaḥ samayaḥ kṛtaḥ. daśavarṣasahasrāṇi daśavarṣaśatāni ca / vatsyāmi mānuṣe loke pālayan pṛthivīm īmām // ityevaṃrūpakālaviṣayaḥ kṛtaḥ. sa paripūrṇa iti śeṣaḥ—so Ct; Ck, Cm, and Cr somewhat similarly).

"to protect the heavenly worlds" svarlokān parirakṣitum: D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, and Cg (who notes it as a variant) read instead lokān saṃparirakṣitum, "to protect the worlds." T1,2,G,M1–8, and KK and VSP read instead svāṃl lokān parirakṣitum, "in order to protect your own worlds."

4. The commentators, particularly Ck, Ct, and Cs, are at pains to rationalize this strictly Vaiṣṇava account of the destruction and creation of the worlds.

"And" ca: Ś,Ñ,V,B,D,T3,4,M6,7, and Lahore, Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead hi, "For."

"long ago" purā: Ct and Cs understand, "in an earlier time, prior to the creation of the world[s] (jagatsṛṣṭeḥ pūrvakāle—so Ct; sṛṣṭikālāt pūrvam—so Ck)." Ck understands, "before the present kalpa, that is, at the end of a day [of Brahmā] that was the previous kalpa (asmāt kalpāt pūrvakalpāharante)."

"through your power of creative illusion" māyayā: Literally, "by māyā." Ct glosses, "by your own power, which is capable of the destruction of everything (sarvasaṃhārasamarthasvaśaktyā)." Ck elaborates considerably on this, glossing, "by that immense power known as 'Mahābhramarikāmya (the will toward a great involution),' which is capable of the instantaneous and complete destruction of the three-stranded [universe], which is devoid of any cause of instantaneous destruction apart from your explicit desire and which has endless, inconceivable, marvelous, and variegated causes and results (vicitravilakṣaṇācintyānantahetuphalāntatrisrotasas tvadicchātiriktasakṛtsaṃhāraheturahitasyāpi sakṛd eva sarvasaṃhārādisamarthamahābhramarikāmyākhyamahāśaktyā)." Cg glosses simply, "by that miraculous power (vicitraśaktyā)." Cr glosses merely, "through compassion (kṛpayā)."

"you yourself" svayam eva: Arguing from his Vaiṣṇava standpoint, Ct claims that the phrase shows that the involution of the universe is not accomplished by Rudra or any of the other deities because of the fact that they, too, are included among the tens of millions [of beings] that are subject to such involution (svayam evety anenāsya saṃhārasya na rudrādidvārakatvam. teṣām api saṃhāryakoṭiniviṣṭatvād iti darśitam). Ck glosses, "by means of [Viṣṇu's] own well-known independence (prasiddhasvasvātantryeṇaiva)." Cs understands the phrase to illustrate the inherence of this power [to Viṣṇu] (svayam evety anena svābhāvikatvaṃ śakter dyotayati).

"had drawn in the worlds" saṃkṣipya . . . lokān: Literally, "having contracted the worlds." The term, which can also mean "having destroyed," no doubt refers here to the idea that as the Supreme Being, Viṣṇu absorbs the phenomenal universe into himself at the end of a cosmic cycle, only to bring it forth once again at the beginning of the next. Ck and Ct gloss, "having compressed or destroyed (upasaṃhṛtya)," while Cs glosses the more or less synonymous saṃhṛtya. Cr understands, "having rendered it through the form of compression (saṃkṣeparūpeṇa kṛtvā)." Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 637), followed by Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 626), takes the term in the sense of "having destroyed," translating, "Après les avoir détruits." Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, pp. 616–17) renders, "after abstracting all the worlds within yourself." Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 929) translates, "having merged all the worlds," while Benoît (1999, p. 1423) renders, "jadis les as résorbés en toi." Gorresio (1870, p. 297) takes a rather peculiar stance on the phrase, essentially reversing its meaning to refer to the creation rather than the destruction of the worlds. He renders, "prendendo a creare i mondi." He appends to his translation a note (p. 333, note 104) in which he attempts to rationalize his rendering. In essence, he sees the verse as in contradiction with the normative model, according to which it is Brahmā, not Viṣṇu, who creates the worlds. He argues: "Tale non è precisamente il significato del vocabolo sanksipya del testo. Ma il senso pare richiedere l'interpretazione a cui mi sono attenuto. S'attribuisce qui a Visnu di cui Rama è un avatara, la creazione che in altri testi è più giustamente attribuita a Brahma." Dutt (1894, p. 1921) ignores the phrase.

"you . . . first created me" māṃ tvaṃ pūrvam ajījanaḥ: Literally, "you caused me to be born." Both Ct and Cs justify this statement by citing Śvetāśvataropaniṣad 6.18 (= Gopālatāpanyupaniṣad 4.5), "who first created Brahmā (yo brahmāṇaṃ vidadhāti pūrvam)." Ct believes that the meaning of the phrase is that Brahmā's birth occurred from the brahmāṇḍa when it was being created through the creation of the golden embryo (yo brahmāṇaṃ vidadhāti pūrvam iti śruteḥ. hiraṇyagarbhasṛṣṭidvārā brahmāṇḍasṛṣṭau kriyamāṇāyāṃ tadaṇḍān mamodbhava ity arthaḥ). Cv understands the phrase simply to state the fact of Brahmā's birth from the egg. He further notes that Brahmā's creation is prior to that of Madhu and Kaiṭabha, so that [as indicated in the following verse] the creator can construct the earth (anenāṇḍe brahmaṇa utpattiḥ kathyate brahmaṇaḥ pūrvaṃ madhukaiṭabhayoḥ sṛṣṭir bhuvaḥ sṛṣṭyarthaḥ). Cr understands, "You caused [me] to be born through your navel-lotus (tvannābhikamaladvārājanayaḥ)." Cs, whom we follow, takes pūrvam to mean "firstly (prathamataḥ)." He then, as noted above, like Ct, quotes Śvetāśvataropaniṣad 6.18 and further notes that the whole idea here of Viṣṇu's having produced Brahmā as he, Viṣṇu, lay on the waters is in imitation of Cittyupaniṣad 11.1, which states that Brahmā discovered the daśahotṛ, which was moving through the waters. (pūrvaṃ prathamataḥ. mām ajījanaḥ . . . yo brahmāṇaṃ vidadhāti pūrvam ityādi śruteḥ. anenāntaḥsamudre manasā carantaṃ brahmānv avindad daśahotāram arṇava iti śrutyanukṛtatā jñeyaitasya). According to Taittirīyabrāhmaṇa 2.2.1 and other vedic texts, the daśahotṛ is a formula that refers to the ten requisites of the sacrifice and, according to that text, is identified with the sacrifice itself. See also Kane 1974, vol. 2, pt. 2, p. 993, note 1024, and p. 1168.

"as you lay on the waters in the vast ocean" mahārṇave śayāno 'psu: Ct understands that once it has been established that Viṣṇu is lying in the vast ocean, the word apsu, "on the waters," [which is apparently redundant,] is employed to show the nonexistence of the elements of earth, etc., at that time (mahārṇave śayāna ity anenaivodakaśāyitve labdhe punar apsv iti tadā pṛthivītattvādyabhāvapradarśanārtham). Cr reads the sequence as mahārṇave [a]śayānaḥ and understands aśayānaḥ as a bahuvrīhi in the sense of "the resting place of A [i.e., Viṣṇu]." He then interprets: "You, i.e., that [Rāma] because of whom A, i.e., Viṣṇu, was resting on the vast ocean, created me (mahārṇave aḥ viṣṇuḥ śayāno yena sa tvaṃ mām ajījanaḥ)." Cs seems particularly concerned about the apparent redundancy of the sequence mahārṇave . . . apsu. He says: "In the vast ocean, which consists of water, when it had been produced, there in the waters, that is [you] lying on the water . . . by saying 'lying in the ocean' it is established that [Viṣṇu] rested upon the waters. Additionally, the expression 'in the waters' is employed to dispense with any erroneous understanding of the locative [lit., 'the adhikaraṇa ("locus"),'] in the sense of close proximity, as when one might say, 'The cows are in the banyan tree' [that is to say, are near the banyan tree]. And we must understand that [the compound] 'the vast ocean' is used to dispel any doubt that there is any other water [than the ocean]. (arṇave śayāna iti vacanād evodakaśayitve siddhe punar apsv iti vacanaṃ vaṭe gāva itivat sāmīpikādhikaraṇasaptamībhramabhraṃśārthaṃ. mahārṇava iti cetaranīratvasaṃdehanirbarh aṇārtham iti mantavyam.)"

5–6. "Ananta" anantam: Literally, "the endless one." We understand with Ct, Cr, and Cs that this is the proper name of the great serpent (anantaṃ nāmataḥ—so Cs; Ck similarly), whose alternate name, as Cr notes, is Śeṣa (anantaṃ śeṣam).

"of immense coils" bhogavantam: Literally, "possessed of coils or hoods." The commentators are in general agreement that we should take the term bhoga in the sense of the coils or body of the serpent and understand the possessive suffix matup in its sense of "possessing something great or abundant." Thus Cs explains: "The possessive suffix matup signifies 'greatness' so that the term means 'having a huge body' (matubartho mahattvam. mahādeham—so Cs; Ck and Ct similarly)." Translators who share this reading understand bhoga in the sense of "coils" or "body," with the exception of Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 617) and Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 929), who both understand the term bhoga in its sense of "serpent's hood."

"you engendered . . . Madhu and Kaiṭabha" madhuṃ ca kaiṭabhaṃ ca: Literally, "Madhu and Kaiṭabha." The sentence is defective in that it lacks a verb expressing the creation of Madhu and Kaiṭabha. Ck, Cg, and Ct understand that we must bring down, as it were, the finite verb ajījanaḥ, "you created," from verse 4 (ajījana ity anuṣaṅgaḥ—so Cg; Ck and Ct similarly). Cs simply supplies a repetition of the gerund janayitvā, "having created," from 5c. Cr similarly supplies the gerund janayitvā and glosses it with reference to the familiar legend of the creation of the two demons from Viṣṇu's earwax (janayitvā viṣṇukarṇamalād utpādya). On this and the identity of these two demons, see notes to 7.4.14.

"those two . . . beings" dvau ca sattvau: With Ck and Ct, we understand the word sattvau in its meaning of "those two living beings (prāṇinau)." Cs understands this meaning as implicit, noting simply, "[It is] understood (gatam)." He also proposes an alternative reading in which he breaks the sequence into two words, saḥ tvau, in which he takes the latter term tva in its vedic sense of "one or another." This seems to be a reference to the fact that Madhu and Kaiṭabha are others, i.e., asuras. He supports this reading by quoting ṚV 10.71.11cd, in which the term tva is used twice, and cites the Siddhāntakaumudī (217, on Pā 7.1.52) for grammatical support. (sattvau. gatam. sa tvāv anyau. asurāv ity arthaḥ. iti vā. brahmā tvo vadati jātavidyāṃ yajñasya mātrāṃ vinimīta u tvaḥ ityādi śruteḥ. tvattvāv anyaparyāyāv iti kaumudyāḥ.)

"covered with the heaps of whose bones this mountain-girded earth became known as Medinī" yayor asthicayair vṛtā / iyaṃ parvatasaṃbādhā medinī cābhavan mahī //: Verse 6 implies an unusual account of the production of the earth, an account that is elaborated upon by the commentators. The basic idea here is that the earth was composed of a mixture of the fat or marrow (medaḥ) of Madhu, who, according to some of the commentators, was principally of a fatty nature like aquatic animals, and the skeletal elements of Kaiṭabha, who was predominantly bony, like the shell of a tortoise, after they were killed by Viṣṇu. In this way the bony, i.e., rocky, elements serve to stabilize and firm up the otherwise muddy consistency of the primordial earth. Thus, according to the commentators, the earth came to have both rocky, mountainous outcroppings and moist, fertile regions for the growth of trees, creepers, and other vegetation, which then provide habitat for animals. This account provides a rationale for the etymology of the term medinī, "the fatty one," hinted at in 6cd. (tatra madhur medaḥpradhānaḥ. kaiṭabho 'sthipradhānaḥ. tatsṛṣṭiprayojanam āha yayor ityādi. yayor vadhānantaram iyaṃ nirmitā bhūr asthicayair vṛtā satī parvatasaṃbādhā medoyuktā tayā vṛkṣādyutpattyucitasnigdhabhūpradeśayuktatayā medinīti nāmnābhūt. evaṃ ca tasyāḥ prajāsargayogyatā siddhā—so Ct; Cg, Ck, and Cs similarly.) Ck embellishes this account by working into it the well-known story of the boar incarnation (varāhāvatāra) of Viṣṇu, according to which Viṣṇu in the form of Varāha raised up the earth from its immersion in the primordial ocean (jalapradhānyam utsṛjya varāhaḥ san bhuvam uddhṛtya). On the varāhāvatāra, see notes to Prakṣipta II, sarga 3.7, and 7.88.*6. D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read tadā, "then," for mahī, "earth."

7. "in a lotus . . . that was growing from your navel" padme . . . nābhyām: Literally, "in a lotus, in the navel." This verse follows the standard Vaiṣṇava cosmogony according to which a celestial lotus grows from the navel of the sleeping Viṣṇu. Out of that lotus, Brahmā/Prajāpati arises. This legend accounts for the well-known epithets Padmanābha for Viṣṇu and Padmasaṃbhava, etc., for Brahmā.

"the entire task of the generation of creatures" prājāpatyam . . . karma sarvam: Literally, "the entire work belonging to Prajāpati." As Ct notes, the passage provides a sort of etymology for the name of the creator divinity Prajāpati, literally, "Lord of creatures." He glosses: "You assigned me the task belonging to the Lord (pati) of creatures (prajā), that is to say, which consists of creation, so that my name, Prajāpati, thus conforms to reality. (prājāpatyaṃ sṛṣṭirūpaṃ karma mayi tvayā niveśitam ity anvarthaṃ me prajāpatir iti nāma.)"

8. "Since" hi: The particle is marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition.

"worshipfully approached you, the Lord of the universe, saying" tvām upāse jagatpatim: Literally, "I approach or worship the lord of the world." The ending -im on jagatpatim is marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition. D7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead upāsya, "having approached," for upāse, "I approach." We follow Ct, who understands that the phrase "I begged or requested you" should be added

(prārthitavān iti śeṣaḥ). Cg understands, "I meditate upon you constantly (ahaṃ tvām upāse nirantaraṃ cintayāmi)."

"who are the source of my blazing energy" mama tejaskaraḥ: Literally, "the agent of tejas for [lit., 'of'] me." Ct glosses, "you who were the grantor of the blazing energy that consists of the knowledge, action, and power capable of creation (sṛṣṭisamarthajñānakri yāśaktimayatejaḥprado 'bhūḥ)." Cr understands the phrase to be in response to the implicit objection that Brahmā himself is perfectly capable of protecting his creatures (nanu rakṣākaraṇe tvam eva samartho 'sīty ata āha mama tejaskaro bhavān eva).

"provide for the protection of these creatures" rakṣāṃ vidhatsva bhūteṣu: Literally, "Please grant protection with regard to beings." As Cg notes, the beings in question are those that [Brahmā has] created (bhūteṣu matsṛṣṭeṣu).

9. "Moreover" api: Ñ2,V1,2,B2,D3,7,10,11,T3,4,G1,M2,4, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead asi, "you are," which then would construe with the adjective durdharṣaḥ, "unassailable."

"unassailable . . . therefore, because of your eternal nature" durdharṣas tasmād bhāvāt sanātanād: D10,11,G1,3,M3, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read the ablative singular durdharṣāt for the nominative singular, which lends the line the sense "because of that unassailable and eternal nature." Ck, citing the Taittirīyabrāhmaṇa (2.8.8.10bc), understands: "You are unassailable [according to the statement], 'Brahmā alone is the eldest of beings, who can contend with him?' because your nature is well known as unassailable, that is to say, eternal, which is to say, eternally beyond limitation, and because of its being the ultimate material cause of the entire universe, whose nature is that of Hiraṇyagarbha, which consists of the thought and action of Bhūma [the Supreme Being] (tvam api durdharṣo brahmaiva bhūtānāṃ jyeṣṭhaṃ tena ko 'rhati spardhitum iti suprasiddhadurdharṣatvasvabhāvāt sanātanāt sakalasaṃsāraparamakāraṇatvenātiparicchedanityāt tasmāt bhūmacitkriyāmayahairaṇyagarbhabhāvāt)." Ct similarly glosses sanātanāt as "not to be delimited by time because of [your] being the root cause of the entire universe (sanātanāt sakalasaṃsāramūlakaraṇatvena kālāparicchedyāt)." Cg offers two alternative explanations of the term. First he takes the term sanātana in its sense of "eternal" and applies it to Viṣṇu's inherent nature as the Supreme Vāsudeva. Alternatively, he proposes that the reference is to the body of Vāsudeva. (sanātanān nityād bhāvāt paravāsudevasvabhāvāt . . . yadvā sanātanāt tasmād vāsudevavigrahāt.) Cr understands the sequence sanātanāt as a compound meaning "because of the expansion [ātanāt] [by you] of Brahmā [sanasya] himself (sanātanāt sanasya brahmaṇo 'py ātanād vistārakatvād dhetoḥ)." Cs understands the term sanātanāt to refer to the eternal Primordial Puruṣa, who is accompanied by the primordial self-revealed sound of the vedas, etc. He further notes that on the occasion of the explication of the term sanātana in Madhva's Bhagavadgītātātparyanirṇaya on Bhagavadgītā 2.24, this usage of the word is amplified (sanātanāt purāṇapuruṣāt. vedādisvāvedakanādasahitāt. prapañcitaś cāyaṃ prakāro gītātātparye sanātanapadavyākhyāvasare.)

"took on the form of Viṣṇu in order to protect all beings" rakṣārthaṃ sarvabhūtānāṃ viṣṇutvam upajagmivān: Literally, "[You] went to Viṣṇu-ness for the sake of the protection of all beings." The concept here is, perhaps, the most obscure in the already murky theology of this passage. The interpretation depends on how one conceptualizes the being to whom Brahmā is addressing his words. It makes little sense that Viṣṇu became Viṣṇu, nor does it seem entirely likely that we are to understand that Rāma became Viṣṇu, although this is possible. Probably it is best to understand that Brahmā is addressing the incarnate Rāma in his true nature as the Parama Puruṣa, or Supreme Being, the author of all creation. Ck understands the speech to be addressed to Rāma, and he reads the second half of the verse to mean: "You approached, that is, became one possessing the form of, the principally earthly Viṣṇu appropriate to that particular time in order to protect earthly beings at those same appropriate times (viṣṇuṃ bhūmayabhūtajātasya tattatkālocitarakṣārthaṃ tattatkālocitatadbhūpradhānātmanā viṣṇumūrtimattvam upajagmivān bhavasi)." Ct understands the phrase from the perspective of Sāṃkhya philosophy. He explains: "You obtained the status of Viṣṇu through being principally of the sattva guṇa, because of your nature as Hiraṇyagarbha, which is known as the element mahat, which [contains] the three guṇas (triguṇamahattattvākhyahairaṇyagarbhabhāvāt sattvaprādhānyena viṣṇutvaṃ prāptavān)." Cg offers two explanations: "[The meaning is] 'Because of your eternal nature, that is to say, your nature as the Supreme Vāsudeva, you went to, that is, attained, the state of being Viṣṇu in order to protect all beings.' Alternatively, the meaning is 'You went to the state of being Viṣṇu in Aditi because of your eternal body as Vāsudeva.' In other words, you are the Supreme Being, who is foremost with respect to Brahmā and Rudra and who has taken birth through being the Primordial Viṣṇu. (sanātanān nityād bhāvāt paravāsudevasvabhāvāt sarvabhūtānāṃ rakṣārthaṃ viṣṇutvam upajagmivān prāpatvān . . . yadvā sanātanāt tasmād vāsudevavigrahād adityāṃ viṣṇutvam upajagmivān ity arthaḥ. paravāsudevas tvaṃ prathamaṃ brahmarudramadhya ādiviṣṇutayāvatīrṇo 'sīty arthaḥ.)" Cr understands the reference to Viṣṇu's birth as one of the gods or Ādityas born to Aditi and Kaśyapa in the primordial time. He explains: "I bringing about the protection of creatures, you alone attained the state of Viṣṇu, that is to say, the power of protection, that is to say, you were absorbed into Viṣṇu. (bhūtānāṃ rakṣāṃ vidhāsyaṃs tvam eva viṣṇutvaṃ pālanaśaktim upajagmivān viṣṇau prāpitavān asi.)" Cr, who reads this verse with the following, continues this line of interpretation there. See notes to verse 10 below. Cs takes the simplest way out of the theological conundrum, stating merely: "The state of being Viṣṇu is simply the state of having that name (viṣṇutvaṃ tannāmakatvam)." Cv understands the reference to be to Viṣṇu's dwarf incarnation (vāmanāvatāra) (see notes to verse 6 above). He glosses: "You became Upendra ('Lesser Indra') in order to bind Bali (viṣṇutvam upajagmivān. balibandhanārtham upendratvam upajagmivān)."

10. "You are the mighty son of Aditi" adityāṃ vīryavān putraḥ: Continuing from the preceding verses, the reference here is to Viṣṇu's well-known status as Upendra ("Lesser Indra"), which he obtained when he took birth as the son of Aditi and the seer Kaśyapa in what is known as the vāmanāvatāra. This popular story is repeated throughout the literature. See, for example, ŚatBr 1.2.5.1–9; VayuP 2.36.74–86; and MBh 3.270; 3.313; 12.343; etc. See O'Flaherty 1975, pp. 328–29. See also 6.40.43; 6.47.119; 6.53.25; 6.59.7; 6.105.24; and notes. See, too, 1.28.2 and notes. Ct glosses, "You were the mighty son, characterized by divine knowledge and action (divyajñānakriyālakṣaṇavīryavān putro 'bhūs tvam)." Ck understands vīryavān, "mighty," similarly. He additionally notes that we should now understand that the state of being Viṣṇu consists of possessing the form of Upendra (upendrarūpaviṣṇutvam).

"the increaser of your brothers' delight" bhrātṛṇāṃ harṣavardhanaḥ: D10,11,T1, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read vīryavardhanaḥ, "increaser of the might," for harṣavardhanaḥ, "increaser of the delight." On this variant, the commentators continue their explanation of the passage. They are in general agreement that the reference here is not to Rāma's brothers but to Viṣṇu's divine brothers, the other sons of Aditi, viz., the gods, Indra, etc. (aditiputrendrādīnām—so Ct; Ck, Cg, and Cr similarly).

"you render assistance to the worlds" lokasāhyāya kalpase: Literally, "you arrange for the assistance of the worlds." D6,7,10,11,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead teṣāṃ sāhyāya kalpase, lending the passage the sense "you render assistance to them." The word teṣām, "to them," refers, of course, to the brothers (teṣāṃ bhrātṛṇām indrādīnāṃ sāhyāya sāhāyyāya kalpase pravartayasi—so Cr; Ct similarly). Cg notes that the meaning here is that Viṣṇu became Upendra for the sake of the protection of the worlds (tato lokasaṃrakṣaṇārtham upendro 'bhūr ity arthaḥ).

"whenever the need arises" samutpanneṣu kṛtyeṣu: Literally, "when things that need to be done arise." Ct glosses, "at the time of this or that thing that needs to be done (tattatkṛtyakāle)." Cg offers, "when things that need to be done for protection arise (rakṣaṇakāryeṣūtpanneṣu)." Ck understands, "when things that need to be done for the world arise, that is to say, when they arise in the form of things that need to be done (lokasya kṛtyeṣu kartavyatvena samutpanneṣu)."

11. "When all creatures were being terrorized" vitrāsyamānāsu prajāsu: Literally, "when creatures are being frightened." Ñ2,D10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead ujjāsyamānāsu prajāsu, "when creatures are being destroyed."

"foremost of living beings" jagatāṃ vara: D10,11,G1,2,M, and GPP and NSP read instead jagato vara, "foremost of the world."

"set your mind on dwelling among men" mānuṣeṣu mano 'dadhāḥ: Literally, "you set [your] mind among men." The phrase is elliptical, and we follow Cr, who suggests adding the infinitive "to dwell" (vastum iti śeṣaḥ). He understands mānuṣeṣu as the "worlds of man," thus lending the phrase the sense "You made up your mind to dwell among men, that is to say, among humans or to dwell in the worlds of men" (tvaṃ mānuṣeṣu lokeṣu mano 'dadhā vastum iti śeṣaḥ). Ct understands the term mānuṣeṣu to refer to human births, glossing, "in human births (mānuṣabhāveṣu)," lending the phrase the sense "you set your mind on being born as a human." Ck appears to emend the text to read the otherwise unattested mānuṣīṣu, "among women," for the masculine mānuṣeṣu. He then glosses: "You set your mind on women, that is to say, on birth in [human] mothers (mānuṣiṣu mātṛbhāve mano 'dadhāḥ)." This is, no doubt, a reference to Viṣṇu's incarnating himself fractionally in the wombs of the three wives of Daśaratha.

12. "At that time" purā: Literally, "Earlier."

"you yourself set the limit of your sojourn" kṛtvā vāsasya niyatiṃ svayam evātmanaḥ: Literally, "[you] having made a restriction of your own dwelling." The verse has no finite verb, and we therefore rendered the gerund kṛtvā, "having done," as if were finite. Ñ2,V2,3,B2,3,D10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read the synonymous niyamam for niyatim, "restriction." V2,D6,7,10,l1,T1,2,4,G2,3,M1,4,5,7–10, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read the instrumental ātmanā for the genitive ātmanaḥ. The reading ātmanā, which must be taken in the sense of "by yourself," appears to be redundant in light of the preceding term svayam, "yourself." Cg alone attempts to avoid the redundancy, glossing ātmanā as "independently." He thus understands the sequence to mean "yourself by yourself, that is to say, independently (ātmanā svātantryeṇa svayam eva)."

"at ten thousand years and ten hundred" daśavarṣasahasrāṇi daśavarṣaśatāni ca: Literally, "for ten thousand years and ten hundred years." Most of the commentators here, as elsewhere, are content with this duration of Rāma's reign as first stated in the epic at 1.1.76. Cr, however, repeats his earlier position, that Rāma, in fact, ruled for thirty-three thousand years. (daśavarṣasahasrāṇi triṃśatsahasrasaṃkhyākavarṣāṇi daśavarṣāṇi trisahasrasaṃkhyākavarṣāṇi ca.) For Cr's rationale for his unique calculation, see notes to 6.116.82,90; 7.89.5; and 7.92.16. Compare 1.1.76 and notes.

13. "You became a son through your own intention" sa tvaṃ manomayaḥ putraḥ: Literally, "you are a son, consisting of mind." The meaning of the term manomayaḥ here is obscure. We follow Cv, Ck, Cg, and Ct, who understand the term manaḥ, "mind," here to refer to the will or volition on Viṣṇu's part to be born as the son of a human. Ct explains: "Among men you, consisting of mind, that is to say, consisting of your own volition, that is to say, that it is through your own volition alone that you were born as someone's son (sa tvaṃ mānuṣeṣu manomayaḥ svasaṃkalpamayaḥ svasaṃkalpād eva kasyacit putro jātaḥ)." Cg glosses, "having the nature of the son of Daśaratha produced through will or desire (ichhākṛtadaśarathaputrabhāvaḥ)." Cv understands that Viṣṇu formed this intention to be born as a son of a human when he was earlier in the form of the vāmanāvatāra

(sa tvam upendro bhūtvā vāmanas tva[ṃ] manomayaḥ putrasaṃkalpamayo mānuṣasya putro 'yam iti manasā saṃkalpya jāta ity arthaḥ). Cr glosses: "He, that is to say, you, having fixed the term of your residence, are Daśaratha's eternal son, who is beyond the scope of ordinary minds or thought (sa kṛtavāsaniyamo manomayaḥ prākṛtamanasām aviṣayaḥ putro daśarathanityasūnus tvam)." Ck quotes a number of upaniṣads and other texts to convey the basic idea that Viṣṇu/Rāma, through a series of evolutionary processes, is the son of Hiraṇyagarbha. Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 627) and Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 930) both render the term manomayaḥ as "mind-born," which suggests that they understand it in the sense in which some figures in epic and purāṇic texts are conceived directly through the mental or spiritual energy of their fathers and thus are sometimes referred to as mānasaputras. But this interpretation is at odds with the description of the conception of Rāma and his brothers at Bālakāṇḍa 15.9–28.

"and your life span here among men is now completed" pūrṇāyur mānuṣeṣv iha: Literally, "one of a full or completed life span here among man." Ct explains: "The meaning is 'There has been the completion of the life span that you intended' (tvatsaṃkalpitāyuṣaḥ pūrṇatvam ity arthaḥ)." Cg and Cr understand similarly.

"foremost among the best of men" naravaraśreṣṭha: M3 and KK and VSP read instead [a]yaṃ te naraśreṣṭha, lending the phrase the sense "this is your [time (kālaḥ)], best of men."

"Kāla has approached you" kālaḥ . . . samīpam upavartitum: Literally, "Kāla in order to approach the proximity." This phrase, too, is elliptical and obscure in its precise meaning. It is additionally ambiguous because of the fact that one can take the term kāla here as the name of the divine messenger of Brahmā, who is reciting Brahmā's words, or in its sense of time, as in the time for Rāma to end his incarnation. Ct understands Brahmā to be saying: "this Kāla, having come into your presence in order to approach, that is to say, in order to inform you; the words 'has been sent' must be supplied (ayaṃ kālas te samīpam upagatyopavartituṃ vijñāpayituṃ preṣita iti śeṣaḥ)." Ck understands similarly. Cr understands the phrase to be uttered by Kāla in reference to himself. He glosses: "'In order to approach' means 'in order to remind [you].' I, Kāla, a particular form of time, obedient to your command [have been sent] into your presence; the words 'I have been sent by Brahmā' are to be added. (anuvartituṃ [sic] saṃsmārayitum ity arthaḥ. samīpaṃ tvatsaṃnidhiṃ kālas tvadājñānusārī samayaviśeṣo brahmaṇā preṣito 'ham asmīty śeṣaḥ.)" Cg, who reads the variant (kālo 'yaṃ te naraśreṣṭha—see note above), understands that the words are part of Brahmā's message. He glosses: "Therefore, this is kāla, that is to say, the time [for you] to approach, that is to say, to reach my presence (ato matsamīpam upavartituṃ prāptum ayaṃ kālaḥ samayaḥ)." Cg's interpretation is also that of all the translators consulted who share this reading with the exception of Dutt (1894, p. 1921), who follows Ck and Ct. He renders, "and this is the proper time to inform thee of it." Lahore (7.110.13) and Gorresio (7.111.13) read: kālas te deva devānāṃ samīpe parivartitum, "This is your time, O god, to return to the presence of the gods." Gorresio (1870, p. 298) renders, "Or egli è tempo che tu, o Deva, ritorni a conversar coi Devi." It is possible that this reading has influenced Roussel's (1903, vol. 3, p. 638) understanding of the passage. He translates, "C'est l'heure, ô le premier des hommes d'élite, de revenir près (de nous)." This, in turn, has doubtless influenced at least Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 627), who offers, "it is the hour, O Foremost of Men, to return to us" and Benoît (1999, p. 1424), who renders, "Il est l'heure de revenir parmi nous, meilleur des hommes."

14. "to serve" upāsitum: Ck, Cg, and Ct all gloss, "to protect (rakṣitum)," which in the epic idiom may also be taken to mean "to govern or rule."

"please remain . . . Thus spoke" vasa . . . bhadraṃ te evam āha: Literally, "dwell . . . auspiciousness to you. Thus he said." The idiomatic phrase bhadraṃ te or bhadraṃ vaḥ is commonly used in the epic to add politeness to imperatives. See 6.6.4 and notes. See also Tubb 2006. Compare the usage of the phrase at verse 18 below and notes. KK and VSP read ta evam for te evam with the correct sandhi. This variant is not noted in the critical apparatus.

"Grandfather Brahmā" pitāmahaḥ: Literally, "the grandfather."

15. "On the other hand, if you desire to regain the world of the gods" athavā vijigīṣā te suralokāya: Literally, "Or there being a desire for victory on your part for the world of the gods." Ct glosses, "If there is a desire to protect the world of the gods (suralokaṃ pālayituṃ yadīcchā)." Cr explains the verse as follows: "Now then, if your self-imposed time limit is not to be abandoned, he [Brahmā] says: 'Or, in case there is a desire to gain the world of Sāketa, that is the meaning. If there is a desire on your part to see the world of the gods, then may the gods have a protector in [lit., "by"] Viṣṇu.' By this it is suggested that Brahmā's request is 'You should go to Sāketa by way of heaven.' (nanu svakṛtaniyamaṃ na hāsyam ity ata āha—athaveti. athavā sāketalokajigamīṣāyām ity arthaḥ suralokāya suralokaṃ draṣṭuṃ yadi te vijigīṣā tadā viṣṇunā saha devāḥ sanāthā bhavantv etena svargamārgeṇaiva sāketo gantavya iti brahmaṇaḥ prārthanā vyañjitā.)" Cf. Cr's comments on verse 18 below.

"then let the gods, having a protector in Viṣṇu, be free from anxiety" sanāthā viṣṇunā devā bhavantu vigatajvarāḥ: Literally, "With Viṣṇu, may the gods, with a protector, be free from anxiety." The idea, as noted by Cg, is that once Rāma regains his form as Viṣṇu, the gods, with him as their protector, must become free from all anxiety. The meaning, according to Cg, is that it is Viṣṇu's arrival alone that would be a cause for the happiness of all the gods. (viṣṇunā punar viṣṇutvaṃ prāptena tvayā devāḥ sanāthāḥ santo vigatajvarā bhavantu. bhavadāgamanam eva samastadevasukhakaraṃ syād iti bhāvaḥ.) Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 638), we believe, has mistakenly interpreted sanāthāḥ . . . devāḥ, "the gods have a protector," as meaning "les Devas avec leurs conducteurs." In this he has been followed by Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 627), who renders, "they with their leaders."

16. "the words that Grandfather Brahmā had spoken just as they were reported by Kāla . . ." pitāmahenoktaṃ vākyaṃ kālasamīritam: Literally, "the speech spoken by the grandfather, [which had been] uttered by Kāla." Ck understands the report to be made by Rudra in the form of the fire of time (kālāgni), who has taken the form of a messenger (dūtarūpakālāgnirudrasamīritam).

"smiling" prahasan: Ck, Cg, and Ct offer various explanations for Rāma's amusement. According to Ck, Rāma is smiling out of satisfaction at the thought that Grandfather Brahmā, the creator of everything, is acting so respectfully toward him (aho mayy evaṃ bahumānaṃ pitāmahasya sarvakartur iti saṃtoṣāt parihāsaḥ). Cg believes it is a smile or laughter at Brahmā's speech on the part of him [Rāma], who is motivated only by himself (svayam evodyuktasya pitāmahoktyā prahāsaḥ). Ct believes that Rāma smiles at the thought "I myself will not abandon the deadline I have set. This worry on the part of Grandfather is in vain. (aham eva svakṛtamaryādāṃ na tyakṣyāmi. vṛthāyaṃ saṃbhramaḥ pitāmahasyeti hāsaḥ.)"

"to him, the destroyer of all" sarvasaṃhāram: Literally, "to the destroyer of all." Cg understands the destroyer of all to be Rudra, while Ct and Cr identify this figure as Kāla.

17. "I have heard the extremely marvelous words of the God of gods." śrutaṃ me devadevasya vākyaṃ paramam adbhutam: Literally, "The supremely marvelous speech of the God of gods has been heard by me." Ś,B2,D7,8,10–12,T1,2,G,M1–4,7,8,10, and Lahore, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read the gerund śrutvā, "having heard," for the participle (bhūte kṛdanta) śrutam, "it is heard." This slightly complicates the syntax, and Cr attempts to rationalize it by taking me as a genitive enclitic with prītiḥ, "delight," in pāda c (sā me prītiḥ . . .). Ct believes that Rāma finds Brahmā's words to be so excellent because they illuminate his own intentions (paramaṃ madabhiprāyaprakāśakatvāt). Ct understands the compound devadevasya to mean "of him who is to be worshiped by all the gods (sarvadevopāsyasya)." Cr similarly glosses, "of him who is to be worshiped by the gods (devānāṃ pūjyasya)."

"Your arrival has produced . . . delight" prītiḥ . . . jātā tavāgamanasaṃbhavā: Literally, "delight produced by your arrival [has been] born." Cr notes that by stating his delight, Rāma is suggesting that he shares [Brahmā's] desire [that he return] (prītir jātety anena mamāpi tadīpsitam iti sūcitam).

Following verse 17, D6,7,10,11,T,G,M2–5,7–10, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert a passage of one line [1418*]: "For I was born in order to accomplish the purpose of the three worlds[1] (trayāṇām api lokānāṃ kāryārthaṃ mama saṃbhavaḥ)."

[1] "For I was born in order to accomplish the purpose of the three worlds." trayāṇām api lokānāṃ kāryārthaṃ mama saṃbhavaḥ: Literally, "My birth is for the purpose of what is to be done for [lit., 'of'] the three worlds." Ck and Ct again stress that Viṣṇu's birth as Rāma occurred through his own volition (mama svecchāmulaḥ saṃbhavaḥ—so Ct; Ck similarly). Ct, in a nod to the idea that Rāma was not, perhaps, fully aware of his divinity, notes that Rāma is implying that he is like an actor in taking on various roles, who acts according to those roles, and identifies with that role [lit., 'so understands himself to be just like that'] (yadvā tattadveṣadhāry api naṭas tattadveṣānurūpaṃ vyavaharann apy ātmānaṃ jānāty eva tadvat so 'ham). See notes to 6.35.9. Ck once again insists that Rāma, and by extension Viṣṇu, is actually a subordinate form of Brahmā. He interprets Rāma as saying: "My self-willed birth is from Brahmā, the eldest and Lord of all; that is to say, my incarnation has an inherent dependence upon Virāṭ (mama sarvajyeṣṭhasya sarveśvarasya brahmaṇaḥ svecchāmulaḥ saṃbhavaḥ svakavirāḍavalambano 'vatāra iti.)."

18. "Bless you." bhadraṃ te: Cf. verse 14 and notes above.

"I shall return from whence I have come." gamiṣyāmi yata evāham āgataḥ: Ct understands the reference to be to the world from which Viṣṇu descended in his avatāra (yato yasmāl lokād ihāgatas tam eva gamiṣyāmi). Cg similarly understands that Rāma will return to the place from whence he came (yata evāham āgatas tad eva sthānaṃ gamiṣyāmi). Cr argues that by using the formula "bhadraṃ te (bless you)," Rāma is suggesting that he will return from whence he has come (i.e., to Sāketa) by way of Brahmā's world (yato 'ham āgatas tatra gamiṣyāmi te 'pi bhadram astv ity anena tvallokamārgeṇaiva gamiṣyāmīti sūcitam). Cf. Cr's comments on verse 15 above. Ck understands: "Whence I have come, that is to say, from which previous state of existence, and by which path I have come, by that very same path I will return to that very same previous existence [reading pūrvasaṃbhavam for pūrvasaṃbhāvam] of mine (so 'haṃ yata evāgato yasmād eva svīyāt pūrvasaṃbhavād yenaiva mārgeṇāgatas tenaiva mārgeṇa tam eva māmakaṃ pūrvaṃ saṃbhāvaṃ [sic] gamiṣyāmi)." Cs offers two alternative explanations. The first is essentially that of Ct, while in the second he understands the reference to be to that primordial being as a portion of whom Rāma incarnated and to which he will return. Cs illustrates this idea by quoting the Śāntipāṭha that is sometimes prefaced to the Īśopaniṣad in which it is stated that when a fullness is subtracted from the fullness [of the Supreme Being], the fullness of the original is not diminished. (yato yasmād aham āgatas taṃ lokaṃ praty eva gamiṣyāmi. yato yadaṃśād āgato 'vatīrṇas taṃ gamiṣyāmīti vā. pūrṇam adaḥ pūrṇam idaṃ pūrṇāt pūrṇam udacyate. pūrṇasya pūrṇam ādāya pūrṇam evāvaśiṣyata ityādeḥ.) See, too, notes to 7.100.10.

"You have come here in accordance with my heart's desire." hṛdgato hy asi saṃprāptaḥ: Literally, "For you, who have gone to [my] heart, have come." Ct and Cr both explicitly understand the phrase to refer to Kāla. Thus Ct says, "O Kāla in the form of the destroyer, you have arrived as one who has gone to my heart (he saṃhārarūpakāla tvaṃ me hṛdgata eva prāpto 'si)." Cr understands the verse as a reply to Kāla and says, " 'Gone to or in the heart' means 'thought of [by Rāma] by or in the heart,' thus you have come. (kālaṃ praty āha—hṛd iti. hṛdi gato hṛdayena cintita evaṃ tvaṃ saṃprāptaḥ.)" Cg reads the phrase as impersonal. He says, "[What was] in my heart has arrived. The meaning is 'Grandfather Brahmā has sent what was in my heart.' (hṛdgato mama saṃprāptaḥ. mama hṛdi yad vartate tad eva pitāmahena preṣitam ity arthaḥ.)" Ck understands the reference here to be not to Kāla or to the abstract idea in Rāma's heart but rather to Rāma's underlying pure state of being in the form of Hiraṇyagarbha. That state is in Rāma's heart through his desire to return to it. That state, Ck continues, is desired by the blessed Lord Brahmā, that is to say, cherished in the heart, and thus is the cause of Rāma's acquisition of that [state] and that [state] Rāma has already fully attained, that is to say, he has fully attained it in accordance with [Rāma's] own desire. (hṛdgata ityādi. yo bhāvo mama śuddhabrahmātmakaśrīhiraṇyagarbhatārūpo jigamīṣitatayā hṛdgato yaś ca tatprāptihetur bhagavatpitāmahākāṅkṣito hṛdya[ḥ?] sa tu mayā suprāptaḥ svecchānurūpaṃ samyakprāptavān asmi.) Ct notes an otherwise unattested variant reading, which he appears to have derived from Ck. This reading has the third person singular asti, "he, she or it is," for our second person singular asi, "you are." Ct remarks that if we accept this reading, we must understand, as does Ck, the reference to be to that desired state, which is the pure essence of Brahmā, which Rāma is to attain because of the necessity of obtaining it. (hṛdgato 'sti samprāpta iti pāṭhe. yo bhāvo mama hṛdgataḥ śuddhabrahmātmakaḥ prāptavyatvena sa me prāpta evāsti.)

"I have no hesitation in this regard." na me 'sty atra vicāraṇā: Ś1,2,Ñ1,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the more or less synonymous na me tatra vicāraṇā. Cg, Ct, and Cr all agree that the reference here is to Rāma's departure [from the earth] (atra gamane viṣaye me vicāraṇā nāsti—so Cg; Ck and Ct similarly). Ct, however, with the variant noted above, observes that, given that reading, Rāma has no hesitation concerning the necessity of his returning to his primordial state as Brahmā (śuddhabrahmātmakaḥ prāptavyatvena sa me prāpta evāsti tatra na me vicāraṇā).

19. "who are my obedient subjects" vaśavartinām: Literally, "of those who act according to [my] will." Ś,B1,4,D1–4,6,8,10,12,T1,2,G1,M1–4,6,9,10, and Lahore, Gorresio, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the instrumental singular vaśavartinā, in which case it modifies the pronoun mayā, "by me," i.e., by Rāma. Cg explains, "by me, who am obedient to the wishes of the gods because of my dependence on my devotees (devānāṃ vaśavartinā bhaktaparatantreṇa mayā)." Ct notes this reading as a variant and understands the reference to be to Rāma's obedience to Brahmā with regard to the needs of the gods, to which he, Rāma, must attend. He notes that the idea here is that Rāma, that is to say, Viṣṇu, must act in accordance with his own granting of the boon, which he granted [to the gods] during the period of his asceticism, concerning the protection of creatures. (vaśavartineti tṛtīyāntapāṭhe devānāṃ sarvakṛtyeṣu pitāmahasya vaśavartinā sthātavyam ity arthaḥ. prajārakṣaṇoddeśyakatapaḥkālikamadvarapradānād iti bhāvaḥ.)

"at the end of everything" sarvasaṃhāre: Literally, "at the destruction of all." Cv glosses, "at the time of ending (avasānakāle)." Presumably the reference is to the end of Rāma's earthly sojourn. Ck observes that the locative ending here is due to irregularity and the requirements of the meter (sarvasaṃhāre vyatyayāc chandovaśāc ca saptamī). Presumably he wants us to understand sarvasaṃhāre in the sense of the vocative variant. D7,10,G2,M1,3,5, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the vocative singular sarvasaṃhāra, "O destroyer of all," which would then refer to Kāla.

"Grandfather Brahmā" pitāmahaḥ: Literally, "the grandfather."

Sarga 95

1. "As the two were conversing in this fashion" tathā tayoḥ kathayatoḥ: The reference is, of course, to the conversation between Kāla and Rāma. D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read the synonymous tathā tayoḥ saṃvadatoḥ. Cs identifies the two as Hari and Hara, normally epithets of Viṣṇu and Śiva, respectively. Here, however, he is probably using the term hara, "the destroyer," as a kenning for Kāla and hari for Rāma (saṃvadator hariharayoḥ).

"Durvāsas arrived" durvāsāḥ . . . upāgamat: Ck and Ct believe that the seer's arrival was prompted by the Lord [Viṣṇu or Brahmā] in the form of Kāla (kālātmakabhagavatpreraṇayā durvāsasa āgamanam—so Ct; Ck similarly).

2. "And" ca: Ñ2,D6,7,10,11,T1,2,G,M3,5,7,8, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the synonymous tu.

"Show me in to Rāma at once, lest my purpose be thwarted." rāmaṃ darśaya me śīghraṃ purā me 'rtho 'tivartate: Literally, "Cause me to see Rāma quickly before my purpose passes away."

3. "he respectfully saluted" abhivādya: Literally, "having respectfully saluted." See notes to 6.61.24.

"that great seer" mahātmānam: Literally, "the great [one]."

4. "And" vā: D6,7,10,11,T4, and GPP, NSP, and KK read instead hi, "indeed."

"What can I do for you?" kiṃ kāryam: Literally, "what is to be done?"

"Otherwise, please wait" vā pratīkṣatām: D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead the synonymous paripālyatām, while KK and VSP read the equally synonymous pratipālyatām.

5. "that tiger among seers" ṛṣiśārdūlaḥ: The word ṛṣi- is marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition.

"choking with rage" krodhena kaluṣīkṛtaḥ: Literally, "rendered hoarse by rage."

6–7. "Saumitri" saumitre . . . saumitre: Literally, "Saumitri, Saumitri." We have collapsed the two vocatives.

"Otherwise I shall curse" śapiṣye: Literally, "I shall curse." We have added the word "otherwise" for the sake of the logical sequence. The lack of any statement of a motive for a curse, no doubt, accounts for the insertion of 1422* (see below).

Following 6ab ("Saumitri, you must announce me to Rāma this instant [asmin kṣaṇe māṃ saumitre rāmāya prativedaya]"), M3, and GPP (in brackets between 6.105.6a and 6b), Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert a passage of one line [1422*]: "If you do not announce[1] me this instant, Saumitri (asmin kṣaṇe māṃ saumitre na nivedayase)."

[1] "you do . . . announce" nivedayase: GPP reads nivedayate for nivedayase, which must be read as a polite third person, "you, sir, announce."

8. "When Lakṣmaṇa had heard" śrutvā: Literally, "Having heard."

"those terrifying words" ghoramasaṃkāśaṃ vākyam: Literally, "the speech that had a terrible appearance."

"of the great seer" mahātmanaḥ: Literally, "of the great [one]."

"their import" niścayam: Literally, "[their] fixed intention or purpose."

9. "he announced the seer" nyavedayat: Literally, "he announced."

10. "quickly rushing out" niṣpatya tvaritam: Literally, "having rushed out quickly." Ñ1,V1,D7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead niḥsṛtya, "having gone out," for niṣpatya, "having rushed out," while KK, apparently through a typographical error, reads nisṛtya, for which there is no lexical support. Ñ1,B1,3,D1–7,9–11,M5,6, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read the nominative singular tvaritaḥ for the adverbial tvaritam, making the adjective "hastening" modify Rāma.

"met Atri's son" atreḥ putraṃ dadarśa ha: Literally, "he saw the son of Atri." Atri's son is Durvāsas.

11. "Respectfully saluting the great seer" abhivādya mahātmānam: Literally, "Having respectfully saluted the great [one]." See notes to verse 3 above.

"What may I do for you?" kiṃ kāryam: Literally, "What is to be done?"

12. "powerful" prabhuḥ: T1,2,M2,3, and KK and VSP read instead the accusative singular prabhum, which would then modify Rāma, yielding the sense "lord Rāma."

13. "Rāghava, I have completed a fast of one thousand years" varṣasahasrasya samāptir mama rāghava: Literally, "Of me there is a completion of a thousand years, O Rāghava." The text does not specifically indicate what the sage has been doing for one thousand years, but, as the context and the commentators make clear, he has been fasting for that period. Ck, Cg, and Ct gloss, "of me, who have taken a thousand-year vow of not eating (anaśananiyamaparigṛhītavarṣasahasrasyety arthaḥ)." Cr and Cs understand similarly. M3 and KK and VSP attempt to make the verse more explicit and read tapaso mama, "of my [thousand-year] austerity" for mama rāghava, "of me, O Rāghava,"

"some freshly prepared food from you" bhojanam . . . yathāsiddhaṃ tava: Literally, "food of yours such as is ready or prepared." Ck, Cg, and Ct all gloss the compound yathāsiddham as "as is suitable or at hand (yathopapannam)." Cs understands the compound to refer to food that neither has been previously prepared nor is yet to be prepared, but fresh food made that very instant. In support of this he quotes a saying of Madhvācārya (MBhTN 9.50) that one should offer neither that which has previously been prepared nor that which is yet to be prepared (yathāsiddhaṃ na prāñ netaḥparaṃ sādhyaṃ kiṃtu sādyaskam. siddhaṃ na deyam uta sādhyam iti śrīmadukteḥ.)

14. "Rāma" rāmaḥ: D6,7,10,11,M5, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead rājā, "the king."

"he was filled with great delight" harṣeṇa mahatānvitaḥ: D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead rāghavaḥ prītamānasaḥ, "Rāghava, of pleased mind." This variant equals 16b of the critical text. Ck, Cg, and Ct all understand that Rāma is pleased because he has averted the wrath of the sage (munikopaḥ pratihṛta iti prāptasaṃtoṣa ity arthaḥ—so Ck and Cg; Ct similarly). See notes to verse 16 below.

"he brought" upāharat: Cs understands that Rāma brings the food prepared that very instant with his own hands and supports this view by reverting to the quote from the passage at Mahābhāratatātparyanirṇaya 9.50 mentioned above. Thus he says: "He brought with his own hands food that was freshly prepared, that is, prepared that very instant, as was explained previously. This is in accordance with the words of Śrīmat [Madhvācārya—MBhTN 9.50]: 'From his own hand, Rāma gave ample food of four kinds, which was similar to the nectar of immortality and which had been prepared the moment that [the sage] had spoken. The sage, having received that, ate it and was satisfied.' (tat kṣaṇe yathāsiddhaṃ taduktarītyā siddham. upāharat svahastataḥ. asya vāksamayajātam uru svahastāt. annaṃ caturguṇam adād amṛtopamānaṃ rāmas tad āpya bubhuje 'tha muniḥ sutuṣṭa iti śrīmadukteḥ.)"

"some freshly prepared food" bhojanam . . . yathāsiddham: Literally, "food such as is ready or prepared." See notes to verse 13 above.

16. "When he had departed, Rāghava of immense blazing energy was first delighted at heart, but then, when he recalled" tasmin gate mahātejā rāghavaḥ prītamānasaḥ / saṃsmṛtya . . . tataḥ: Literally, "When he had gone, Rāghava of great blazing energy [was] one whose mind was pleased. Then, having recalled . . ." See notes to verse 14 for the commentators' understanding of the compound prītamānasaḥ, "delighted at heart or of pleased mind." GPP (in brackets), Gita Press, KK, and VSP read for 16ab (tasmin gate mahātejā rāghavaḥ prītamānasaḥ) a passage of one line [1427*]: "When that foremost of sages had gone to his ashram, the elder brother of Lakṣmaṇa . . . (tasmin gate munivare svāśramaṃ lakṣmaṇāgrajaḥ). "

"Kāla's words" kālavākyāni: As most of the commentators note, the words referred to are those of Kāla when he announced that anyone who interrupted his private conversation with Rāma should be put to death (see 7.93.13). Thus Ct explains, "The words of Kāla are those that referred to the death of anyone who heard or witnessed the private conversation between himself and Rāma [lit., 'of us two'] (kālavākyāni mantraśrotur āvayor draṣṭuś ca vadhaviṣayakāni)." Ck and Cm understand similarly. Cr similarly glosses, "those words to the effect that whoever sees shall cease to live (yaḥ paśyati sa na bhaviṣyatītyādi vacanāni)." Cs offers several interpretations. First he notes that these are the words indicating that any fool who should intrude upon his private conversation with Rāma should be dispatched to death. He then notes that Rāma became despondent at the thought that, on the one hand, an entry into the inner apartments on the part of even a close relative who had entered in a dire exigency should be allowed to stand without execution [according to his promise to Kāla] and, on the other, that such an execution is not sanctioned by law. Cs continues, observing that anyone who reflects on a terrible thing he had previously said becomes accordingly afflicted with grief. Cs next proposes that we might understand Kāla's words to be those regarding Rāma's return to his own proper world, i.e., Sāketa. In order to do this he exploits the sandhi to allow for the reading of either tato duḥkham, "then grief," or tato 'duḥkham, "then non-grief (i.e., 'happiness')." Thus Rāma, having recalled Kāla's words concerning his departure for his [i.e. Rāma's] own world, then experienced happiness. Alternatively, the meaning could be that, having remembered that terrible thing in the form of the execution of his brother, he became afflicted with grief. (kālavākyāni dvandve kaścid avipaścid āyātaś cet paścimāṃ daśāṃ yāpanīya ityādīni. atyantabandhunotkaṭasaṃkaṭaniveṣṭenāntaḥpraviṣṭaṃ vinā māraṇaṃ na stheyaṃ na ca māraṇaṃ vihitam iti duḥkham upāgamat. yaḥ kaścid yathā ghoradarśanaṃ kiṃcit prācyudañcitaṃ vicitya yathā duḥkhena saṃtapto bhavati tathā. kālavākyāni svalokagamanaviṣayāṇi. saṃsmṛtya tatas tadanantaram aduḥkhaṃ sukham upāgamat. tad ghoradarśanaṃ bhrātṛmāraṇarūpaṃ smṛtvā duḥkhena ca saṃtapto 'bhūd iti vārthaḥ.)

"he was stricken with grief" duḥkham upeyivān: Literally, "he approached grief." V2, B1,D6,7,10,11,T3,4,G2,M2,4,5,7–9, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read the synonymous upāgamat, "he approached," for the perfect participle upeyivān, "he went to."

17. "When he remembered that thing which was too dreadful to contemplate" duḥkhena ca susaṃtaptaḥ smṛtvā tad ghoradarśanam: Literally, "having remembered that which had a terrible appearance, he was highly afflicted with sorrow." Cs reads this line with the critical edition's 16cd (saṃsmṛtya kālavākyāni tato duḥkham upāgamat, "when he recalled Kāla's words, he was stricken with grief"). See notes to verse 16 for his interpretation of the passage.

"his face downcast and his mind distressed" avāṅmukho dīnamanāḥ: On the use of these two adjectives together, see notes to 7.43.11.

18. "reflecting in his mind on Kāla's words" buddhyā viniścitya kālavākyāni: Literally, "having deliberated on Kāla's words with [his] intellect." The commentators generally understand that Rāma is reflecting upon the implications of Kāla's words. Cg, for example, understands: "Rāma, having reflected in his mind on the words of Kāla, that is to say, having determined, 'the time of the complete destruction of me, together with the host of my brothers, sons, and servants, has come, that is to say, is proper (kālavākyāni buddhyā viniścitya sabhrātṛputrabhṛtyavargasya mama sarvopasaṃhārakālaḥ prāpta ucita eveti niścitya—so Cg; Ck and Ct similarly)." It is odd that Cg should include Rāma's sons among those whose time is at an end, since, as we saw in the preceding sargas (91—Lakṣmaṇa's sons and 92—Bharata's sons) and will see in the following sargas (97—Rāma's sons), the sons of Rāma and his brothers live on to rule their respective kingdoms. Ck and Ct omit the reference to the sons from their similar explanations.

"All this must pass away." naitad astīti: Literally, "This does not exist." Compare MBh 2.50.58, 3.12.38, 5.135.26, 5.191.2, 12.19.23, etc. The commentators understand the phrase to mean that in general all of Rāma's brothers, servants, and other members of his retinue will cease to exist (sāmānyato naitad astīty etan mama bhrātṛbhṛtyādiparikarajātaṃ sarvam api nāstīti—so Ck and Cg; Ct similarly). Cr glosses: "All this does not exist, that is, it will not remain here (etat sarvaṃ nāstīha sthāsyatīti)." Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 640) understands the phrase to mean "Tout est perdu!" In this he is followed by Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 628), who renders, "All is lost!" Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 619) similarly offers, "Raghava decided that everything was going to be lost." We believe these renderings are somewhat inappropriate, as they are suggestive of despair in the face of calamity, which is far from the tenor of the text here.

"that greatly illustrious prince" mahāyaśāḥ: Literally, "the one of great renown."

Sarga 96

1. "despondent, with his face downcast" avāṅmukham . . . dīnam: See notes to 7.46.10.

"like the moon in eclipse" somam ivāplutam: Literally, "Like Soma overcast or distressed." We agree with Ck, Cg, Ct, and Cr that the reference is to the moon when in eclipse or, as they put it, "seized by Rāhu (rāhugrastaḥ—so Ck, Cg, and Ct; Cr similarly)."

"remaining cheerful" hṛṣṭaḥ: Literally, "excited or happy." Ck, Cg, and Ct understand: "The meaning is that Lakṣmaṇa is not despondent because he already understood through the words of Sumantra that he would be abandoned by Rāma (sumantravākyataḥ pūrvam eva rāmeṇa svapārityāgasyāvagatatvād aviṣāda ity arthaḥ—so Cg; Ck and Ct similarly)." See 7.49.11 and notes.

2. "great-armed warrior" mahābāho: Literally, "great-armed [one]."

"the course of destiny" kālasya gatīr īdṛśī: Literally, "such [is] the path of kāla." The word kāla here can refer to either "time" or "destiny."

"that has been determined by our previous actions" pūrvanirmāṇabaddhā: Literally, "[is] bound by former works." Ck, Cg, and Ct understand the phrase to mean "by previous works, that is to say, by actions belonging to a prior existence; bound, that is to say, determined (pūrvanirmāṇena prāgbhavīyakarmaṇā baddhā kalpitā—so Cg and Ct; Ck similarly)." They then specify the nature of the course of destiny by quoting the second half of a well-known and widely distributed gnomic verse, "All unions end in separation, and all life ends in death." They cite this verse as belonging to the Upadiṣṭanyāyavatī (īdṛśī saṃyogā viprayogāntā maraṇāntaṃ ca jīvitam ity upadiṣṭanyāyavatīty arthaḥ). This verse is quite popular and is found throughout the literature, including elsewhere in the Uttarakāṇḍa (see 7.51.10 and notes).

3. "You must keep your promise" pratijñāṃ paripālaya: The promise that Lakṣmaṇa is referring to here is Rāma's promise to Kāla at 7.93.12–15 that he would put to death anyone who interrupted their private meeting, which Lakṣmaṇa does at 7.95.9 when he announces the arrival of the seer Durvāsas. See 7.98.3–6 and notes, where, according to the commentators, the promise referred to is Rāma's promise to Kāla to depart for the Brahmaloka.

"without misgiving" viśrabdhaḥ: Literally, "confident."

"gentle brother" saumya: Literally, "gentle [one]."

"who do not keep their promises" hīnapratijñāḥ: Literally, "those by whom promises are forsaken." Cs believes that Lakṣmaṇa utters these words out of the fear that Rāma may falsify his promise because of his excessive affection for his [brother] (tavātipremadhāmatvān moghā bhavatu pratijñety ato vijñāpayati hīnapratijñā iti).

"go to hell" prayānti narakam: Literally, "they go to hell." Cr is evidently concerned at even the suggestion that Rāma might go to hell. He observes that what is suggested here is that if the common people should perceive that a great man like Rāma should fail to keep his promise, he would be setting an example that they would follow. This, in turn, would lead to an inauspicious outcome for them [e.g., going to hell]. (etena tvatkartṛka- pratijñāyā hānau mahājano yena gataḥ sa panthā ityādirītyā prākṛtānām api pratijñāyā hānau teṣāṃ kalyāṇābhāvaḥ prasajjed iti dhvanitam.)

4. "if you hold me in your favor" yady anugrāhyatā mayi: Literally, "if with respect to me there is the state of being the object of [your] favor."

"uphold righteousness" dharmaṃ vardhaya: Literally, "you must cause dharma to increase." Cs notes that the dharma referred to here is that which arises from the keeping of promises. Cs further notes that the real meaning of this is that Lakṣmaṇa is urging Rāma to garner renown in the world as one who, in order to protect a promise he has made, killed even his own younger brother. (dharmaṃ pratijñāpālanāyātaṃ vardhaya. loke svānujam api kṛtapratijñāparipālanakṛte 'vadhīd rāma iti kīrtim upārjayeti bhāvaḥ.)

5–6. "the lord of men" narādhipaḥ: D6,7,10,11,T,G3,M3, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead sa rāghavaḥ, "he, Rāghava."

"his senses reeling" pracalitendriyaḥ: Literally, "whose senses were agitated or bewildered." We agree with all the translators who share this reading that the term refers to Rāma's disordered mental state at the thought of having to execute his brother. This sense of the term appears to be glossed by V2,B1,4, and the text of Gorresio (7.112.5), which read saṃkṣubhitendriyaḥ, "whose senses were violently agitated." Compare Lahore (7.112.5), which reads prajvalitendriyaḥ, "whose senses were burning or blazing." Ck, Cg, Cm, and Ct, however, interpret the compound quite differently. They take the participle pracalita in its sense of "set in motion" and thus understand the compound to mean that after his period of despondent silence, noted at 7.95.17–18 and verse 1 above, Rāma resumes the action of his senses, such as speech, etc. (tyaktāvāṅmukhamaunatayā pravṛttavāgādīndriyaḥ—so Ck, Cg, and Cm; Ct similarly).

"purohita" purodhasam: The term is a synonym for the more common purohita, which refers to the chief spiritual functionary of a royal court. As before, the term would refer, in Rāma's case, to Vasiṣṭha. D6,7,10,11,T,G2,3,M4, and GPP and NSP read instead the accusative plural purodhasaḥ, which is peculiar, as nowhere do we see a king having more that one such functionary. See notes to 7.33.7.

"the promise made to the ascetic" pratijñāṃ tāpasasya: Literally, "the promise of the ascetic." The reference here is, of course, not to the ascetic Durvāsas but rather to Kāla, who had come in the guise of an ascetic and to whom Rāma had promised the death of anyone who interrupted their private meeting. See 7.93.12–15.

"just as it had all taken place" yathāvṛttam: Literally, "just as it occurred." D6,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead tadā vṛttam, "what had taken place then."

7. "they kept still" samāsata: Literally, "they sat together or they were despondent." Ct and Cr, the only commentators to remark on this reading, understand it to mean that the counselors, etc., remained silent (tūṣṇīṃ sthitāḥ). The critical reading, of which the final two syllables are marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition, is poorly attested, occurring only in D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP. Ś,Ñ,V,B,D1–5,8,9,12,T3,4,M6, and Lahore and Gorresio read instead sanaigamāḥ, "together with the naigamas." The polysemic term naigama can refer to townsmen, merchants, or vedic scholars. For a discussion of this term, see notes to 7.55.5. See, too, 7.97.1 and notes, where naigamas are said to be present, along with the purohita and the counselors. Gorresio (1870, p. 300) renders, "coi principali cittadini." D6,T1,2,G3,M3,10 read instead sahānugāḥ, "together with their attendants or followers." D7,G2,M1,2,4,5,7–9 read instead samāgaman, "they assembled." G1 reads samāviśan, "they sat down." One is at a loss to explain the editors' choice.

8. "All this was foreseen" dṛṣṭam etat: Literally, "This was seen." Ct notes that we should supply the phrase "by me through the power of asceticism." He further notes in a reference to sarga 50 that Vasiṣṭha had also heard about this from the lips of Durvāsas, who was questioned by Daśaratha when the latter had come to see Vasiṣṭha in his ashram. (mayā tapobaleneti śeṣaḥ. māṃ draṣṭum āgatena tvatpitrā pṛṣṭasya madāśramasthadurvāsaso mukhāc ceti.) See 7.50 and notes. Cr, on the other hand, understands that in his statement Vasiṣṭha is claiming that he foresaw the death of Rāma, that is to say, his departure for Sāketa and his separation from Lakṣmaṇa during the previous births of Rāma. This, Cr argues, suggests that Rāma's līlā occurs repeatedly through all of time. (etad evaṃprakārakaṃ te kṣayaṃ kṣayaḥ sāketagamanaṃ lakṣmaṇena viyogaś ca mayā dṛṣṭaṃ prādurbhāvāntareṣv iti śeṣaḥ. etenaivaṃ tava līlā sārvakāliky eveti sūcitam.)

"terrifying" lomaharṣaṇam: Literally, "causing the hairs of the body to bristle." Ñ1, 3,D1,3–7,9–11,S (except G1) read instead the synonymous romaharṣaṇam. The reason for the choice of the northern reading over the southern is obscure.

9. "Destiny is all-powerful." balavān kālaḥ: Literally, "kālā, time, or destiny is strong." Cr understands kāla here to mean "the instructions or order that Rāma gave, which is powerful in the sense that it is unalterable (kālas tvatkṛtopadeśo balavān anyathā na bhavatīty arthaḥ)."

"You must not falsify your promises." mā pratijñāṃ vṛthā kṛthāḥ: Literally, "Do not falsely make promises." Ct notes that the keeping of a promise constitutes righteousness, especially in the case of a kshatriya (tyajed ityādinā pratijñāpālanaṃ dharmaḥ kṣatriyasya viśeṣata iti sūcitam).

"For when a promise proves false" vinaṣṭāyāṃ pratijñāyām: Literally, "When a promise is destroyed." D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead pratijñāyāṃ hi naṣṭāyām, "For when a promise is destroyed."

"righteousness itself is undermined" dharmo hi vilayaṃ vrajet: Literally, "dharma, indeed, would go to dissolution." Cr notes that the problem with making a false promise is that dharma, which sets the boundaries of worldly conduct, is thereby destroyed (vṛthākaraṇe doṣam āha dharmo lokamaryādā vilayaṃ vidhvaṃsaṃ vrajet). KK and VSP read instead dharmo 'pi ca layaṃ vrajet, which would lend the phrase the sense "and even dharma would go to dissolution."

10. "would be destroyed" vinaśyeta: V1,3,D7,10,11,T3,4,M3,4, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead vinaśyet tu, "and it [i.e., the triple world] would be destroyed," substituting the parasmaipada for the ātmanepada verbal form.

11. "for the sake of the protection of the triple world" trailokyasyābhipālanāt: Literally, "because of the protection of the triple world." Cv and Cg note the causal use of the ablative in the [dative] sense of "for the sake of." (hetau pañcamī. abhipālanārtham ity arthaḥ—so Cv and Cg; Ct and Cr similarly.) Among the translators consulted, only Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 619) follows this interpretation, rendering, "you should in order to safeguard the three worlds . . ."

"you must . . . provide for the welfare of the universe" jagatsvasthaṃ kuruṣva: Literally, "make the well-being of the world or make the world well." Cr reads the phrase differently. He understands, "You must make the world [i.e., all creatures] well, that is to say, fixed each in its own proper dharma (tvaṃ jagat svasthaṃ svasvadharme sthitaṃ kuruṣva)."

"this very day . . . through the execution of Lakṣmaṇa" lakṣmaṇasya vadhenādya: Cv, the only commentator to read with the critical edition, understands, "through execution in the form of abandonment (vadhena tyāgarūpeṇa)." D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead lakṣmaṇena vinā cādya, "and this very day without or deprived of Lakṣmaṇa."

13. "transgression of righteousness" dharmaviparyayaḥ: Literally, "inversion or perversion of dharma."

"both" ubhayam: D10,11,M3, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead hy ubhayam, "for both." KK and VSP read instead tūbhayam, "and both."

14. "Lakṣmaṇa . . . swiftly" lakṣmaṇas tvaritaḥ: Literally, "swift Lakṣmaṇa." The nominative ending is marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition. B4,T1,2,G1,3,M2,3,6,10, and KK, VSP, and Gita Press read instead the accusative singular tvaritam, which would then be read as an adverb, "swiftly."

"his eyes clouded with tears" bāṣpavyākulitekṣaṇaḥ: Ñ2,D2,9–11,T3,4,M7, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead bāṣpavyākulitendriyaḥ, "his senses overwhelmed with tears." Ct understands that Lakṣmaṇa weeps only because he cannot endure separation from Rāma and not out of any fear of the destruction of his own body (bāṣpavyākulitendriyo rāmaviyogāsahiṣṇutayā na tu svaśarīrahānibhayeneti bhāvaḥ).

"departed . . . But he did not return to his home." prāyāt svagṛhaṃ na viveśa: Literally, "he set forth, he did not enter his own house." Ct understands that we are to supply "to the bank of the Sarayū [River]" as Lakṣmaṇa's destination. (prāyāt. sarayūtīram iti śeṣaḥ.) Cr, in keeping with his consistent reading of the kāṇḍa, argues that we need to take the word svagṛha, "his own house," according to the maxim of the crow's eyeball, in two senses. The first of these refers to the heavenly city of Sāketa and the second to the earthly city of Ayodhyā. He explains: "Lakṣmaṇa departed for his own home, that is to say, the unmanifest city of Sāketa, but did not enter his own home, that is to say, his home in the manifest city of Ayodhyā. In accordance with the maxim of the crow's eyeball, the term svagṛha is to be employed with both [verbs] through the repetition of the word [svagṛham]. (lakṣmaṇaḥ svagṛham aprakaṭasāketaṃ prāyāt svagṛhaṃ prakaṭībhūtāyodhyāveśma na viveśa kākākṣigolakanyāyena śabdāvṛttyā svagṛhaśabda ubhayānvayī.)"

15. "he ritually sipped its water" upasprśya: Literally, "having sipped, touched, or bathed." Cr glosses the term in its commonly used meaning of "ritual purification through sipping or rinsing the mouth with water (ācamya—so Cr)." This is the interpretation taken by Gorresio (1870, p. 301), who renders, "purificatosi con acqua la bocca," and Dutt (1894, p. 1924) who translates, "rinsed his mouth." Other translators understand the term in its sense of ritual bathing. Thus Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 641) offers, "y fit ses ablutions." In this he is followed by Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 629), who renders, "performed his ablutions." Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 620), translates, "Purifying himself by bathing in it" [i.e., the Sarayū], while Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 933) offers, "he performed ablutions." Benoît (1999, p. 1426) alone understands the verb in its sense of "to touch," rendering, "toucha l'eau." See 7.26.42 and notes.

"he closed off his senses" nigṛhya sarvasrotāṃsi: Literally, "having closed all [his] channels." The term srotas, literally, "channel," here can mean either "the sense organs" or "the bodily orifices." We follow Ck and Cg, who gloss, "all the senses (sarvendriyāṇi)." Ct and Cr similarly gloss, "all the apertures of the sense organs (sarvendriyadvārāṇi)." The translators are divided. Gorresio (1870, pp. 301–2) renders, "rattenendo tutti gli organi de' suoi sensi." Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 629) translates, "closing the doors of the senses," and Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 620) offers, "stopped the activity of his senses," while Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 933) understands, "restraining all senses." Dutt (1894, p. 1924), however, takes the term śrotas in its broader sense of bodily orifices, rendering, "having obstructed all passages," as does Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 641), who offers, "ferma tous les orifices (de son corps)." In this he is followed by Benoît (1999, p. 1426), who translates, "ferma tous les orifices de son corps."

"he . . . held his breath" niḥśvāsaṃ na mumoca: Literally, "he did not release [his] exhalation." See the discussion in the notes to 7.99.3. For other "yogic deaths," see, for instance, KumāSaṃ 1.21. D6,10,11,T1,2,G,M1–5,7,9, and KK and VSP read niśvāsam, "inhalation," for niḥśvāsam, "exhalation."

16. "showered" avakiran: Note the absence of the augment. V2,B2,D10,11,G1,2,M1–5, 7–9, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the virtually synonymous but grammatically correct abhyakiran.

"absorbed in yoga" yuktam: Literally, "concentrated." Ck, Cg, and Ct all gloss, "engaged in yoga (yogayuktam)." Ck expands, in keeping with his Brahmaite theology, "absorbed in meditation on [lit., 'of'] Brahmā because of being a portion of [him] (yogayuktaṃ brahmaṇo 'ṃśabhūtatvadhyānayuktam)." Cr understands, "concentrating his mind on his own unmanifest Ayodhyā [i.e., Sāketa] (svāprakaṭāyodhyāyāṃ kṛtamanaskam)."

"not breathing" anucchvasantam: D6,10,11,G1,2,2,3,6, and KK and VSP read instead aniśvasantam, "not inhaling," while GPP, VSP, and Gita Press read instead aniḥśvasantam, "not exhaling."

17. "in such a way that no man witnessed it" adṛśyaṃ sarvamanujaiḥ: Literally, "not to be seen by all men." As Ct notes, the term adṛśyam, "not to be seen," here can be taken either as an adjective modifying Lakṣmaṇa, who, Ct suggests, became invisible through the power of yoga, or as an adverb qualifying the action of Indra in taking Lakṣmaṇa and entering the highest heaven. (adṛśyaṃ yogabalād antardhānam upagatam. yadvādṛśyaṃ yathā tathā saśarīraṃ lakṣmaṇaṃ pragṛhya śakras tridivaṃ saṃviveśa.) Ck, Cg, and Cs all take the term in the second sense, as do we.

"Śakra . . . entered heaven" śakro divaṃ saṃpraviveśa: D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead śakras tridivaṃ saṃviveśa, "Śakra entered the highest heaven."

"still in his earthly body" saśarīram: Literally, "with a body." The term alludes to the issue of who may or may not enter the realm of heaven in his or her earthly body. Normally, this is a power accorded to only the most noble and spiritually advanced individuals, for example, Arjuna (MBh 3.43ff.) and Yudhiṣṭhira (MBh 18.1ff.) in the Mahābhārata, Dilīpa in the Raghuvaṃśa (1.75), etc. Probably the most extended discourse on this issue is that found in the legend of Triśaṅku, as narrated at Bālakāṇḍa 56–59, esp. sarga 59. There, the Ikṣvāku king, who aspires to such a bodily ascension, is denied by his guru and cursed to become a caṇḍāla. Viśvāmitra's efforts to accomplish the degraded king's ascension through a sacrifice are resisted by the gods. Compare 7.67.1–4 and notes, where the śūdra Śambūka, who is performing austerities in order to attain heaven in his earthly body, is beheaded by Rāma.

Ct understands that in Lakṣmaṇa's case the form of his heavenly body is exactly the same as that of his human body. In other words, he continues, what is suggested here is that there has been neither a loss of the former body nor the taking on of another one. This, in turn, suggests that Lakṣmaṇa's birth occurred in exactly the same way. (anena manuṣyaśarīrasaṃsthānam eva devaśarīrasaṃsthānaṃ prāptam. na tu pūrvaśarīraparityāgaḥ śarīrāntaraparigrahaś ceti sūcitam. etena janmāpi tathaiveti ca sūcitam.) See note to 6.107.7, where the commentators discuss the difference between Daśaratha's heavenly and earthly bodies. Cs understands that it is through the grace of Rāma as well as the intensity of [Lakṣmaṇa's] meditation on him [Rāma] that his, i.e., Lakṣmaṇa's, body came to be adorned with an array of one thousand hoods. (saśarīraṃ rāmānugraheṇaitaddhyānapāṭavena tad eva śarīraṃ sahasraphaṇāvalimaṇḍitam abhūt.) The idea is that Lakṣmaṇa returned to his divine form as the primordial serpent lord, Śeṣa. Cs further states that Śakra, after having taken Lakṣmaṇa, along with his body, entered the highest heaven, which lay along his way. In substantiation of this, Cs quotes his version of Padmapurāṇa (= [VSP] 6[Uttarakhaṇḍa].244.48), which states: "Having abandoned his human condition, he took on his previous form." Cs further quotes Śrīmat's [i.e., Madhva's] Mahābhāratatātparyanirṇaya 9.59, which states: "He became Śeṣa, the great-hooded serpent." (tatsahitaṃ lakṣmaṇaṃ pratigṛhya tridivaṃ praviveśa mārgatayā. saṃtyajya mānuṣaṃ bhāvaṃ pūrvabhāvaṃ svakaṃ yayāv ity eva pādmokteḥ. śrīmantaś cāsīc cheṣamahāphaṇītyādy evāhuḥ.) The corresponding passage found in the Ānandāśrama Sanskrit Series version of the Padmapurāṇa ([ĀnSS] 6[Uttarakhaṇḍa].271.84cd) reads: utsṛjya mānuṣaṃ rūpaṃ svāṃ tanuṃ praviveśa ha ("Having abandoned his earthly form, he entered his own body"). The Veṅkateśvara Steam Press edition of the Padmapurāṇa reads a slight variant (= PadmaP 6[Uttarakhaṇḍa].244.48): visṛjya mānuṣaṃ rūpaṃ praviveśa svakāṃ tanum ("Having abandoned his earthly form, he entered his own body"). Compare the similar description of the return of Rāma and his entourage to their heavenly forms at 7.100.7–24 and notes.

18. "together with the seers . . . worshiped" [a]pūjayan [sic] ṛṣibhiḥ saha: Ñ2,V2,B1,M3, and KK and VSP read instead [a]pūjayan samaharṣayaḥ, "they, along with the great seers, worshiped," while D6,7,10,11,T2,G3, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead pūjayanti sma rāghavam, "they worshiped Rāghava."

"thrilled and delighted" hṛṣṭāḥ pramuditāḥ: Literally, "thrilled, delighted." Cs distinguishes the two terms, glossing the first as "covered with abundant horripilation," and the second as "extremely delighted" (hṛṣṭāḥ saromapulakakulakāḥ. pramuditāḥ saṃtuṣṭāḥ). Ñ1,V1,D1–5,9,T,G3,M3, and KK and VSP read instead dṛṣṭvā, "having seen," for hṛṣṭāḥ, "thrilled."

"who had returned to his state as the fourth part of Viṣṇu" viṣṇoś caturbhāgam āgatam: Literally, "had come to the fourth part of Viṣṇu." The question of the portions of Viṣṇu stirs up some theological discussion on the part of the commentators. Interestingly none of them brings up the passages in the Bālakāṇḍa in which the portions of Viṣṇu as represented by the sons of Daśaratha are ascribed to the differing portions of pāyasa, infused with Viṣṇu's essence, that are consumed by their mothers. For a discussion of this, see 1.15.25–27 and notes and 1.17.6–9 and notes. Ck explains as follows: "[The word] caturbhāga means the fourth part. Virāṭ Viṣṇu, who rests upon Śeṣa, in his inherent form, is possessed of four portions through his consisting also of Śeṣa, Suparṇa, and Viṣvaksena. And in his incarnations, as has been previously explained [by Ck], [Viṣṇu] acquired Lakṣmaṇa, who was his portion Śeṣa, belonging to the incarnated Lord Brahmā, through his preeminence. Because of this, as a result of his [Lakṣmaṇa's] eternal connection with the form of the Lord who rests on Śeṣa, that union persists even in the incarnation. It is this meaning that is intended in the Yuddhakāṇḍa, where Suparṇa says, 'I am your companion and you will come to know this for yourself.' He [Suparṇa] is Bharata. (caturtho bhāgaś caturbhāgas taṃ śeṣasuparṇaviṣvaksenātmanā śeṣasāyī virāḍ viṣṇuḥ svamūrtyā saha caturvibhāgavān avatāreṣu prāguktarītyā tatprādhānyenāvatīrṇasya bhagavato brahmaṇaḥ śeṣāṃśabhūtaṃ lakṣmaṇaṃ prāpyety arthaḥ. anena śeṣaśāyimūrter nityasaṃbandhād avatāre 'pi tadā tatsāhityam. imam evārtham abhipretya yuddhakāṇḍe suparṇenābhihitaṃ tavāhaṃ sakhā bhavāmi svayam eva vetsyasīty asāv eva bharataḥ.)" Compare Garuḍa's actual words at 6.40.46, ahaṃ sakhā te kākutstha priyaḥ prāṇo bahiścaraḥ / garutmān iha samprāpto yuvayoḥ sāhyakāraṇāt // ("I am Garutmān, Kākutstha, your dear comrade, your second life breath outside your body. I have come here to the aid of you both"). See 6.40.46 and notes. See, too, notes to 7.11.100.

Ct quotes a version of Ck as above, which includes identifications of the specific portions of Viṣṇu that incarnate as his brothers. He then notes that Ck's analysis contradicts the version of the Padmapurāṇa. Ct says: "[The word] caturbhāga means the fourth part. In this regard Kataka (Ck) says: 'Virāṭ Viṣṇu, who rests upon Śeṣa, in his inherent form, is possessed of four portions through his consisting also of Śeṣa, Suparṇa, and Viṣvaksena. In regard to this, the portion of Śeṣa is Lakṣmaṇa, the portion of Garuḍa is Bharata, and the portion of Viṣvaksena is Śatrughna.' But this contradicts Padmapurāṇa [(ĀnSS) 6(Uttarakhaṇḍa).269.94–95]. For there, it was earlier shown that Bharata and Śatrughna are endowed with the portions of [Viṣṇu's] conch and discus [respectively]. And Garuḍa's coming to Rāma's side in his own inherent form is stated in the Yuddhakāṇḍa [6.40.36–59], and this, too, is in contradiction [with what Kataka (Ck) says]. (caturbhāgaṃ caturthaṃ bhāgam. atra katakaḥ śeṣasuparṇaviṣvaksenaiḥ śeṣasāyī viṣṇuḥ svamūrtyā caturbhāgavān. tatra śeṣāṃśo lakṣmaṇo garuḍāṃśo bharato viṣvaksenāṃśaḥ śatrughna iti. idaṃ pādmaviruddham. tatra hi bharataśatrughnau śaṅkhacakrāṃśāv ity uktam iti prāgdarśitam. garuḍasya svarūpeṇaiva rāmasavidha āgamanam uktaṃ yuddhakāṇḍe tena viruddhaṃ ca.)"

Cg's explanation is similar to Ck's. Cg makes the same identifications of the portions of Viṣṇu as does Ck, noting only that this is an esoteric doctrine. It is, however, because of this, he continues, that in various purāṇas Lakṣmaṇa is well known as an incarnation of Śeṣa. Thus, he concludes, it is to be understood that the Lord of all divides himself into four divisions consisting of Ananta, Garuḍa, Viṣvaksena, and Viṣṇu. (caturtho bhāgaś caturbhāgaḥ. śeṣasuparṇaviṣvaksenaviṣṇurūpeṇa caturvibhāgo viṣṇus tatra śeṣarūpaś caturthāṃśo lakṣmaṇaḥ. suparṇabhūto bharataḥ. viṣvaksenarūpaḥ śatrughna iti rahasyārthaḥ. ata eva purāṇāntareṣu śeṣāvatāro lakṣmaṇa iti prasiddhiḥ. anantagaruḍaviṣvaksena viṣṇurūpeṇātmānaṃ caturdhā vyūhya vartate sarveśvara iti jñeyam.)

Cr explains: "The meaning is 'The four portions of Viṣṇu, the Lord of the Milk Ocean, constitute the totality of his portions.' (viṣṇoḥ kṣīrābdhīśasya catvāro bhāgāḥ sarvāṃśā ity arthaḥ.)"

Cs, quoting a version of Ck, understands that the fourth part consists of Saṃkarṣaṇa, who has entered into Lakṣmaṇa. His analysis is reminiscent of the Pāñcarātra's system, according to which Viṣṇu (Vāsudeva) enters the world through his four vyūhas, or emanations. He says: "The fourth part has the form of Saṃkarṣaṇa, who has entered into Lakṣmaṇa. Pradyumna and Aniruddha, who have the forms of the discus and conch, are his beloved Bharata and Śatrughna. As it says in the Padmapurāṇa, 'Therefore I will be born to you after dividing myself into four parts. I shall be born together with my couch [i.e., Śeṣa], my wife [i.e., Lakṣmī], and my attributes [i.e., the conch and discus]. On the subsequent day, Bharata, who is in essence [the conch] Pāñcajanya, was born to Kaikeyī. Somewhat later, Lakṣmaṇa, who was in essence [the serpent] Ananta, was born to Sumitrā. And, my dear, so was Śatrughna, who was in essence [the discus] Sudarśana. The [last] two were born at the same time. And so both Bharata and Śatrughna were [respectively] the conch and discus,' etc. It is to be understood that Kataka, explaining [these portions] with [the passage beginning] 'Śeṣa, Suparṇa, and Viṣvaksena,' and having set [them] forth is not in contradiction with this. (caturbhāgaṃ caturthaṃ bhāgaṃ lakṣmaṇāviṣṭasaṃkarṣaṇarūpam. cakraśaṅkharūpau pradyumnāniruddhāv iṣṭau bharataśatrughnau. yathoktaṃ pādme tasmāt tava janiṣye 'haṃ māṃ vibhajya caturvidham. janiṣye 'haṃ saparyaṅkaḥ sapatnīkaḥ sahāyudhaḥ. anyedyuḥ pāñcajanyātmā kaikeyyāṃ bharato 'bhavat. tadanyedyuḥ sumitrāyām anantātmā ca lakṣmaṇaḥ. sudarśanātmā śatrughno dvau jātau yugapat priye. ubhau bharataśatrughnau śaṅkhacakrau babhūvatur ityādi. śeṣasuparṇaviṣvaksenair iti vyākurvan katakaḥ saṃpādyaitadavirodha iti bodhyam.)" Compare PadmaP (ĀnSS) 6(Uttarakhaṇḍa).269.53, 80–82, 93–95. According to Raghavan (1973, pp. 47 and 64), only the Nāradīya Mahāpurāṇa and the Viṣṇudharmottarapurāṇa make the correlation between the caturvyūhas and the four brothers (Nārāyaṇa = Rāma; Pradyumna = Bharata; Śatrughna = Aniruddha; and Lakṣmaṇa = Saṃkarṣaṇa). See notes to 7.61.28.

Sarga 97

1. "his purohita" purodhasam: Literally, "the purodhas." The term is synonymous with purohitaḥ. D7,10,11,M1, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead the accusative plural, purodhasaḥ. See note to 7.96.5.

"the people of the city" naigamān: We understand this polysemic term in its generic sense of "people of the city or country." Cr, the only commentator to remark on the term, takes it in its sense of merchants (vaṇijaḥ). For a discussion of this term, see notes to 7.55.5.

2. "here in Ayodhyā" ayodhyāyām: Literally, "in Ayodhyā." The -yām of the locative ayodhyāyām is marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition. Ś,D5–12, T1,2,G1,3,M1,3,6,10, and Lahore, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the genitive singular ayodhyāyāḥ, which then construes with patim in the sense of "as lord of Ayodhyā."

"I will depart for the forest" yāsyāmy ahaṃ vanam: Ck, Cg, and Ct all indicate that we should supply the phrase "in accordance with the traditional practice of departing from this life (mahāprasthānavidhineti śeṣaḥ)." Cr glosses, "I will go to the pleasure grove in the unmanifest Sāketa (ahaṃ vanam aprakaṭasākete pramodāṭavīṃ yāsyāmi)."

3. "the requisite materials" saṃbhārān: As Ck, Cg, and Ct note, the reference is to the materials for Bharata's consecration (bharatābhiṣekārthān—so Ct; Ck and Cg similarly).

"so that there may be no loss of time" mā bhūt kālātyayo yathā: T1,2,4,G3,M3, and KK and VSP read instead mā bhūt kālasya paryayaḥ, "let there be no lapse of time."

4. "became as if lifeless" gatasattvā ivābhavan: Literally, "they became like those whose life or consciousness has departed."

5. "stunned" visaṃjñaḥ: Literally, "unconscious." Since Bharata responds immediately to Rāma's words, we assume that, like the others present, he is merely stunned and not literally unconscious.

"Rāma's words" rāmasya bhāṣitam: Literally, "Rāma's speech." B3,D5–7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead rāghavabhāṣitam, "Rāghava's speech."

"he rejected" vigarhayāmāsa: Literally, "he reviled or condemned."

"and said this to Rāghava" rāghavaṃ cedam abravīt: Ś,Ñ,V1,3,B2,4,D,T2,3, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead vacanaṃ cedam abravīt, "and he spoke this speech."

6. "I swear . . . by truth itself" satyena hi śape: Literally, "For I swear by truth." Ś,Ñ, V1,3,B2–4,D1–5,8–12,M6, and Lahore, Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead satyenāhaṃ śape, "I swear by truth."

* "and by the heavenly world as well, that . . . I do not desire kingship" svargalokena caiva hi / na kāmaye yathā rājyam: The verse is ambiguous, and its ambiguity is enhanced by the question as to whether, as in the critical edition, the reading is svargaloke na or svargalokena. The reading as it is printed in the critical edition would lend the passage the sense "I swear by truth, O King, and not, indeed, in the world of heaven, that I do not desire the kingship without you, delight of the Raghus." We, like Lahore (7.112.6) and Gorresio (7.113.6), prefer the latter reading [svargalokena] as it seems to better support the parallelism of pādas a and b and dispenses with the former's need to resolve the second negative particle na by reading the verb kāmaye, "I desire," twice and providing, as do some of commentators, a second object in the form of sukhabhogam, "the enjoyment of pleasures." Moreover, given the nature of Sanskrit manuscripts, it is not possible to tell definitively where the words should be broken. The idea here is, we believe, that Bharata is swearing by, that is to say, offering to forego both his prized reputation for truthfulness and the heavenly world, which he would attain through his virtue. This interpretation is followed by Gorresio (1870, p. 302), who renders, "Io giuro sulla mia fede e per lo cielo," and Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 620), who offers, "I swear in the name of truth and all my prospects of heaven."

Cr is the only commentator who appears to follow this reading. He explains: "Without you, I do not properly desire the kingdom and I swear this by truth and by heaven, that is to say, that particular type of pleasure. The meaning here is that, in this matter, I take an oath by truth, etc. (tvāṃ vinā rājyam ahaṃ yathāvan na kāmaye satyena svargeṇa sukhaviśeṣeṇa ca śape. atrārthe satyādiśapathaṃ karomīty arthaḥ.)"

Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 630) clearly reads the locative svarge, rendering, "I swear in truth, O King, without thee I do not wish to reign, even in Svarga." The idea here is attractive, but is, however, unsustainable in light of the fact that, as noted above, it leaves an extra na unaccounted for. Dutt (1894, p. 1925) seems to have had a similar understanding of the verse, which he renders as the somewhat opaque "O King, I swear by truth, that far from kingdom [sic] I do not wish to live in heaven even without thee."

KK and VSP both break the sequence, as does the critical edition, i.e., svargaloke na. In this they appear to be following the lead of Cg, who glosses the passage as follows: "Without you, I do not desire the enjoyment of pleasures in the heavenly word that is to be obtained. The words 'enjoyment of pleasures' need to be supplied. Also, without you, I do not desire the kingdom, that is to say, the kingdom of Ayodhyā, which would be obtained according to succession, according to your command. (tvāṃ vinā prāpye svargaloke na ca kāmaye. sukhabhogam iti śeṣaḥ. tathā tvāṃ vinā yathā rājyaṃ tvadājñayā yathānukramaprāptaṃ ayodhyārājyaṃ na ca kāmaye.)" Ck interprets similarly, although he reads prāpyena svargalokena, "[I swear] by the heavenly world, which is to be obtained."

D10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read svargabhogena, "by the enjoyment of heaven," for svargalokena, "by the heavenly world." Ct interprets: "Without you, that is to say, in such a way, I do not desire that kingdom, that is to say, the kingdom of Ayodhyā, which would be obtained by your command, according to succession. And without you, I do not desire the enjoyment of pleasure by means of the enjoyment of heaven, which is to be obtained. The words 'enjoyment of pleasure' must be supplied. (tvāṃ vinā yathā rājyaṃ ca tvadājñayā yathānukramaprāptaṃ ayodhyārājyaṃ na kāmaye. tvāṃ vinā prāpyena svargabhogena ca na kāmaye. sukhabhogam iti śeṣaḥ.)"

7. "you must consecrate" abhiṣiñca: Ñ2,D10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead the elliptical gerund abhiṣicya, "having consecrated." Cr, alone among the commentators, takes note of the defective syntax resulting from this reading, instructing us to supply the imperative "go." He thus understands, "After consecrating Lava and Kuśa, you may depart (kuśam . . . lavaṃ cābhiṣicya gaccheti śeṣaḥ)."

"these two bards" imau kuśīlavau: The ī of kuśīlava is marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition. Ś,D5,8,T1,3,G1,3,M3, and KK and VSP read instead kuśalavau, "Kuśa and Lava." Cs, who reads with the critical edition, glosses, "kuśīlavau, that is to say, those two singers. Or these are their respective names, Kuśa and Lava (kuśīlavau gāyakau. kuśalavapratināmanī vā)." On the term kuśīlavau, see 7.58.4 and 1.4.3 and notes. See, too, Dayal (2009, 2011) and also Thapar (2013, p. 228), who discusses the problems of status and class that are associated with the term and with bards in general. See also 7.85.14; 7.86.2; 7.88.4; 7.97.7,16–19; and notes. See, too, 1.4.4,15,22,26 and notes.

"valorous Kuśa in the kingdom of Kosala and Lava in the northern kingdom" kosaleṣu kuśaṃ vīram uttareṣu tathā lavam: 7cd = 17cd. As Cr explains, "We are to take the term kosaleṣu to refer to the region of Southern Kosala, while by the term uttareṣu we are to understand the kingdom of Northern Kosala. (kośaleṣu [v.l.] dakṣiṇakośaladeśeṣu kuśam uttarakośaleṣu lavam.)" Ck, Cg, and Ct gloss only the latter term as "Northern Kosala (uttareṣu kosaleṣu—so Ck and Cg; Ct similarly)."

8. "And" tu: V2,3,B1,3,D6,10,11,G1,2,M2,7,8, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead the synonymous ca.

"without delay, let them report . . . for heaven" svargāyākhyāntu mā ciram: D10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead śīghram ākhyātu mā ciram, lending the phrase the sense "in order to quickly report [our departure] without delay." Cm, Ct, and Cr understand ākhyātu as an irregular infinitive in which the final nasal has been lost (ākhyātu mā ciram ity atra tumo 'nusvāralopa ārṣaḥ—so Ct; Cm and Cr similarly). Cs breaks up the sequence differently. He sees a correctly formed infinitive ākhyātum plus the particle ā, which he takes here to be an intensifier, followed by aciram, "not long." He glosses this as "very quickly." He thus understands, "Let them go extremely quickly in order to report our departure." Cs further addresses Ct's argument about the irregular infinitive, noting that such a breakup of the words does not occur in normal speech and that we are to understand that Ct is in error. (idam asmākaṃ gamanam ākhyātuṃ gacchantu. ā aciram atiśīghram. ākhyātu mā ciram ity atra tumo 'nusvāralopa ārṣa iti vyākurvan nāgojibhaṭṭo mā ciram iti lokapravādāpratibhātapadavicchedo babhrāmeti mantavyam.)

9. "downcast" adhomukhān: Literally, "having lowered faces."

10. "prostrate on the ground" dharaṇīm . . . gatāḥ: Literally, "gone to the earth."

11. "Acting on the advice of Vasiṣṭha" vasiṣṭhasya . . . vacanena: Literally, "by or because of the words of Vasiṣṭha."

"having bidden . . . to rise" utthāpya: Literally, "having caused to rise." Cr takes the verb to mean "having awakened or aroused (utthāpya saṃbodhya)," no doubt because the people were described in verse 4 above as if lifeless.

"sarvān" M1,3, and KK and VSP read instead the feminine accusative plural sarvāḥ, no doubt taking it as in agreement with prakṛtīḥ, "subjects."

12. "Wherever you may go . . . we shall follow after you" gacchantam anugacchāmo yataḥ . . . gamiṣyasi: Literally, "We shall follow [you] as you are going to wherever you will go." D7,10,11,T3,4,G1,M10, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read the virtually synonymous yatra, "where," for yataḥ.

13. The order of verses 13–15 as found in GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP is different from that found in the critical edition. Verse 13 of the critical edition corresponds to GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP 7.107.15 with variants.

"This is our highest delight. This we regard as our highest duty. Our constant and most deeply cherished desire is set on following you." eṣā naḥ paramā prītir eṣa dharmaḥ paro mataḥ / hṛdgatā naḥ sadā tuṣṭis tavānugamane dṛḍhā //: Literally, "This is our highest pleasure. This is considered the highest dharma. This is ever the satisfaction gone to our hearts [and] firm in following you." D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read this verse following verse 15 of the critical edition. D6,7 (second occurrence),10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read eṣa naḥ paramo varaḥ for eṣa dharmaḥ paro mataḥ, lending the pāda the sense "This is our greatest wish or boon." D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read the more or less synonymous prītiḥ, "pleasure," for tuṣṭiḥ, "delight." Ñ2,V3,D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read nṛpa, "O protector of men," for dṛḍhā, "firm."

14. This verse corresponds to GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP 7.107.13 with variants.

"let us . . . accompany you" samaṃ gacchāma: Literally, "Let us go together." G1,M3,5, and KK and VSP read instead samāgacchāma, "let us come together."

"the path of the virtuous" satpatham: The compound can also be understood, as several of the translators have done, to mean "the good path." Ct glosses, "The meaning is 'the road to heaven being traveled by you' (tvayā gamyamānaṃ svargamārgam ity arthaḥ)." Ck and Cg explain: "The satpatha is the road to the Brahmaloka. The words 'that is being traveled by you' must be supplied. (satpathaṃ brahmalokamārgam. tvayā gamyamānam iti śeṣaḥ.)"

15. This verse corresponds to GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP 7.107.14 with variants.

"Lord" īśvara: Ck, not unexpectedly, explains: " 'Because of [your] being Śrīhiraṇyagarbha, the sole Lord of all the worlds, who, through his own will, exists through a portion of himself, you are capable of leading all of your own devotees.' That is the meaning.

(īśvareti sarvalokādvitīyeśvaraśrīhiraṇyagarbhatvāt svecchayā svāṃśavartī sarvalokeṣu sarvasvabhaktalokanayanasamartho 'sīty arthaḥ)." Ct understands similarly to Ck, but in a Vaiṣṇava rather than Brahmaite vein. He says: "The meaning is 'Since you are capable of leading all of your own devotees because of your being an incarnation of the Lord' (īśvareti bhagavadavatāratvāt sarvasvabhaktalokanayanasamartho yatas tvam ity arthaḥ)."

16. "Recognizing their resolve" sa teṣāṃ niścayaṃ jñātvā: This equals 16a of the critical edition. D7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP omit this pāda.

"and reflecting upon . . . destiny and" kṛtāntaṃ ca nirīkṣya ca: (= 16b). Literally, "and having recognized or considered fate, and." The first ca, "and," is marked as uncertain by the editors of the critical edition. D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead svakṛtāntaṃ cānvavekṣya, "and having kept in mind the end of his own destiny or mission," and place it following 16cd ["and the firm devotion of the townsmen (paurāṇāṃ dṛḍhabhaktiṃ ca)"]. On this reading Ck, Cg, and Ct gloss, "the conclusion of all that he had to do (kartavyatāsiddhāntam)." Cr understands similarly.

17–19. "Once Rāghava had reached this decision in this fashion, that very day" evaṃ viniścayaṃ kṛtvā tasminn ahani rāghavaḥ: (= 17ab) Literally, "having made a resolution in this fashion, on that day, Rāghava . . ." D2,5, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP omit pāda a ["Once he [Rāghava] had reached this decision (evaṃ viniścayaṃ kṛtvā)"]. GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read pāda b ["on that day, Rāghava . . . (tasminn ahani rāghavaḥ)"] following their variant of 16b, "and having kept in mind the end of his own mission (svakṛtāntaṃ cānvavekṣya)."

Thus, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read for the critical edition's verses 16–17 only one line that equates to their variants of the critical edition's 16cd, 16b, and 17b and omit 16a and 17a (paurāṇāṃ dṛḍhabhaktiṃ ca bāḍham ity eva so 'bravīt [= 16cd] / svakṛtāntaṃ cānvavekṣya tasminn ahani rāghavaḥ [= 16b; 17b] // = GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP 7.108.16), lending the passage the sense "And having kept in mind the end of his own mission as well as the firm devotion of the townsmen, Rāghava said, 'Very well,' and that very day . . ."

"he consecrated" abhiṣiñcan: Literally, "[he] sprinkling or anointing." B2,D6,7,10, 11,T3,4,M7, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead the gerund abhiṣicya, "having consecrated."

"valorous Kuśa in the kingdom of Kosala and Lava in the northern kingdom" kosaleṣu kuśaṃ vīram uttareṣu tathā lavam: 17cd = 7cd. On the term kuṣīlavau, see note to verse 7 above. Cs points out a possible contradiction between the account of the division of the kingdom found in the Padmapurāṇa, where, as in this passage, Rāma's sons each rule in a separate kingdom, and an observation on the part of Śrīmat (Madhva's MBhTN 9.62) to the effect that Kuśa seems to have made Lava his yuvarāja. Cs says: "Having consecrated, he established. According to the Padmapurāṇa [(VSP) 6(Uttarakhaṇḍa).244.53; (ĀnSS) 6(Uttarakhaṇḍa).271.55], 'He [Rāma] established resolute Kuśa in Kuśāvatī and Lava in Śrāvantī.' We are to understand that Kuśāvatī is in the kingdom [in the southern region] of Kosala, while Śrāvantī is in a kingdom in the northern region [of Kosala]. And one should not bring up the question of how this comports with the statement of Śrīmat [Madhva]: 'And together with them the lord [established] Lava as the heir apparent.' This is because the lord [Lava] [first] having placed his kingdom under his own control, and having then united both kingdoms there, was unable to bear separation from his elder brother. And so, obedient to his [elder brother's] commands, happily or easily took on the duties of the yuvarāja. So what is the problem here? (abhiṣicya sthāpayāmāsa. kuśāvatyāṃ kuśaṃ dhīraṃ śrāvantyāṃ [a]sthāpayal lavam iti pādmokteḥ kosaleṣv eva kuśāvaty uttareṣv eva śrāvantī ceti jñeyam. na ca 'taiḥ sākam eva ca lavaṃ yuvarājam īśa' iti śrīmaduktiḥ katham iti vācyam. tadrājyaṃ svādhīnaṃ kṛtvaikaṃ tatra prasthāp- yāgrajavirahāsahiṣṇutayā tanniyogavartino yauvarājyakaraṇaṃ sūpapādam iti kātra kathantā?)."

"abundant wealth" dhanam: Literally, "wealth."

"thirty thousand elephants" trīṇi nāgāyutāni: Literally, "three ten-thousands of elephants." D6,7,10,11,T3,4,G2,M2, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead nāgānām ayutāni, "tens of thousands of elephants."

"and were surrounded by happy and prosperous people" hṛṣṭapuṣṭajanāvṛtau: D5–7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead hṛṣṭapuṣṭajanāśrayau, "[those two] were the refuges of happy and prosperous people." This phrase would appear to be in sharp contradiction with verses 9–15 and with the account of Rāma's mahāprasthāna in sargas 99 and 100, where it appears that the entire population of Ayodhyā and even the rural population of Kosala (7.99.17) follow their beloved Rāma to the heavenly realm. Compare, for example, 7.98.3–6, where Ayodhyā is said to have been emptied of its population (vijanā). So the question is who are the happy and prosperous people who Kuśa and Lava are to govern in the two Kosalas? Perhaps what was originally intended was that aside from Rāma's brothers and former allies—all of whom, like Rāma himself, were avatāras of gods who would of course follow their lord to the heavenly world—the general population of the city and countryside was simply meant to respectfully follow the king on his last journey as far as the nearest body of water, the Sarayū River, and then return to their homes. However, in the profundity of their devotion to Rāma, it appears that the author or authors of the closing sargas of the poem may have chosen to represent all the people as unable to endure separation from their Lord without consideration of the contradiction that their universal departure from the world would appear to create. We are thankful to our colleague Dr. Naina Dayal for bringing this curious issue to our attention.

Following 17b ["Once Rāghava had reached this decision in this fashion, that very day (evaṃ viniścayaṃ kṛtvā tasminn ahani rāghavaḥ)"], D6,T1,2,G,M2,3,6, and KK and VSP in brackets [= 7.108.16ef] insert a passage of one line [1446*]: "devoted to righteousness, he [Rāghava] established his two extremely righteous sons (sutau prasthāpayāmāsa dharmiṣṭhau dharmavatsalau)."

Following 18ab ["he consecrated both of those great bards, Kuśa and Lava (abhisiñcan mahātmānāv ubhāv eva kuśīlavau)"], D10,11 (line 1 only),T1,2,G,M2,3,5,6, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert a passage of three lines [1448*]: "Having consecrated his two valorous sons and established them in the city[1][1], gazing on them again and again, Rāghava was reminded of Sītā.[2][2] Having embraced them, the great-armed one kissed them on the head repeatedly.[3][3] (abhiṣicya sutau vīrau supratiṣṭhāpya vai pure / punaḥ samīkṣya sītāyā rāghavaḥ smaraṇaṃ gataḥ / pariṣvajya mahābāhur mūrdhny upāghrāya cāsakṛt /)"

[1] "Having consecrated his two valorous sons and established them in the city" abhiṣicya sutau vīrau supratiṣṭhāpya vai pure: D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead, abhiṣiktau sutāv aṅke pratiṣṭhāpya pure tataḥ, "Then, having placed his consecrated sons on his lap in the city . . ." Ck, Cg, and Ct understand the reference to be to Ayodhyā (pure 'yodhyāyām).

[2] "gazing on them again and again, Rāghava was reminded of Sītā" punaḥ samīkṣya sītāyā rāghavaḥ smaraṇaṃ gataḥ: Literally, "having looked again Rāghava went to the memory of Sītā." GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK (1905), and VSP omit this line. It appears in KK (1913) as 7.108.18cd in brackets.

[3] "Having embraced them, the great-armed one kissed them on the head repeatedly." pariṣvajya mahābāhur mūrdhny upāghrāya cāsakṛt: This line appears in GPP in brackets, unnumbered, between verse 7.108.17 and verse 7.108.18; in Gita Press as 7.108.18cd; in KK as 7.108.18ef; and in VSP as 7.108.18cd. Among the translators consulted, only Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 621) and Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 934) translate this line.

Following verse 19, B2,D6,7,10–12,T3,4,M6, and Lahore, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert a passage of one line [1452*]: "And so he sent off those two[1] bards, the brothers [Kuśa and Lava],[2] to their respective cities (sve pure preṣayāmāsa bhrātarau tau kuśīlavau)."

[1] "those two" tau: KK and VSP read instead tu, "and."
[2] "bards" kuśīlavau: See notes to verse 7 above.

20. "those two valiant princes and" tu tau vīrau: Literally, "and those two valiant [ones]." Ñ1,V1,3,B2,D1–7,9–11,T1–3,M3,4,10, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read tato vīrau, "then those two valiant ones," for tu tau vīrau, "and those two valiant ones," while Ñ2,V2,B1,3,4, and Gorresio, KK, and VSP read sutau vīrau, "the two heroic sons."

"dispatched them to their respective cities in this fashion" prasthāpya svapure tathā: Literally, "having sent [them] to their two cities in this way." D6,7,10,11,T3,M10, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read tadā, "then," for tathā, "in this way." KK and VSP read pratiṣṭhāpya pure, "having established [them] in the city," for prasthāpya svapure, "having dispatched [them] to their two cities."

Sarga 98

1. "without making camp on the way" cakrur vāsaṃ na cādhvani: Literally, "they did not make an overnight stay on the road." D6,7,11,T1,2,G,M3, and KK and VSP read by transposition the synonymous ca nādhvani for na cādhvani, "and not on the road."

2. "Then . . . immediately" tataḥ . . . atha: Literally, "then . . . then." Cs, the only commentator to remark on the seeming redundancy, notes that the first term refers to the period after the messengers leave Ayodhyā and the second to the period after they meet Śatrughna. (tato 'yodhyāto nirgamanānantaram. atha śatrughnadarśanānantaram.) D5, M3, and KK and VSP read te tu, "and they," for tataḥ, "then."

"after three days and nights" tribhir ahorātraiḥ: Literally, "by three days and nights." See 7.57.1–2; 7.58.13; and notes, where it takes Śatrughna some ten days to make the journey.

"everything" sarvam eva: D10–12 and GPP and NSP read instead the nominative plural sarva eva, "they all," which then refers to the messengers.

"just as it had taken place" yathāvṛttam: D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead yathātattvam, "truthfully or according to truth." Cr glosses, "conforming to the truth, that is to say, not exceeding [it] (yathārthyam anatikramya)."

3–6. "Rāghava's promise" pratijñāṃ rāghavasya: As Ck, Cg, and Ct note, the reference is to Rāma's promise to the personified Kāla to depart for the Brahmaloka (rāghavasya pratijñām iti kālapuruṣaṃ prati brahmalokagamanapratijñām ity arthaḥ—so Ck and Cg; Ct similarly). See 7.93.13–14 and 7.96.3 and notes, where the promise referred to is Rāma's promise to kill anyone who interrupts his conversation with Kāla. The reference could also be to Rāma's agreement at 7.97.16–19 to allow the townsfolk of Ayodhyā to follow him. This would be more in keeping with the generally chronological list of events provided by the messengers.

"his being followed by the townspeople" paurānugamanam: Ck, Cg, and Ct gloss, "the permission [given by Rāma] that the townspeople [might] follow him (paurānugamanānumatim)."

"the founding by . . . Rāma of Kuśa's . . . city named Kuśāvatī" kuśasya nagarī . . . / kuśāvatīti nāmnā sā kṛtā rāmeṇa: Literally, "Kuśa's city, Kuśāvatī by name, created by Rāma."

"the founding of Śrāvatī, Lava's . . . and renowned city" śrāvitā ca purī . . . śrāvatīti lavasya ca: Literally, "and Lava's renowned city Śrāvatī." Note the anuprāsa. We have understood the term kṛtā, "created or founded," in 4d to apply to both of the cities. D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead śrāvastīti purī . . . śrāvitā ca lavasya ha "and Lava's renowned city, 'Śrāvastī.' " KK and VSP read a second ca, "and," for ha. Aside from the variant names Śrāvatī and Śrāvastī, Lava's city is given still other names in some of the texts quoted by the commentators. According to Cs in his comments on 7.97.16–19, the name of the city in the Padmapurāṇa is Śrāvantī, while the Veṅkateśvara Steam Press edition of the Padmapurāṇa gives the name as Śaravatī (6.244.53) and the Ānandāśrāma Sanskrit Series edition (6.271.55) reads Dvāravatī and notes two variant readings, Śaravatī and Śaṅkhavatī. Despande's translation (1988–1992, p. 3251) of the Padmapurāṇa reads "Śarasvatī" (6.244.53). Śrāvastī (Pāli—Sāvatthi) was, in the time of the Buddha, the capital of the kingdom of Kosala. It remains a site sacred to Buddhists because, according to their tradition, the Buddha performed miracles there and delivered many of his sermons at the Jetavana there. See Malalasekera 1974, s.v. "Sāvatthi."

"the exodus of the people from Ayodhyā, and Bharata's following Rāghava" ayodhyāṃ vijanāṃ caiva bharataṃ rāghavānugam: (= 5cd) Literally, "Ayodhyā, which was devoid of people, and Bharata as a follower of Rāghava." The syntax of the critical edition's reading is awkward and grammatically inconsistent. Some of the items mentioned are in the nominative, and some, such as ayodhyām and bharatam, are in the accusative. D6,7,10,11,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead ayodhyāṃ vijanāṃ kṛtvā rāghavo bharatas tathā, "Rāghava and Bharata, having rendered Ayodhyā devoid of people [the two great chariot-warriors made their preparation to depart for heaven]." This reading leaves an elliptical fragment that is resolved in insert 1455* below, which follows 5cd of the critical edition. Cs, on this reading, notes that Rāma empties the city of people through his agreement with regard to their following him (vijanāṃ sarvajanānām anugamanamanaskatvād vijanāṃ kṛtveti saṃbhavati). Strictly speaking, the depopulation and Bharata's following of Rāma have not yet occurred.

"Then saying, '. . . your majesty' " rājann iti bruvan: Literally, "They said, '. . . O king.' " Ś2,D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead rājeti cābruvan, "And they said, 'O king . . .' " Both the critical edition and the variant have irregular grammatical forms: the augmentless imperfect bruvan (for abruvan) in the critical reading and the vocative rāja (rājeti) of the variant.

"they fell silent" viremus te: Literally, "they ceased [speaking]."

Following verse 5 ("the founding of Lava's charming and renowned city, Śrāvatī, the exodus of the people from Ayodhyā, and Bharata's following Rāghava" (śrāvitā ca purī ramyā śrāvatīti lavasya ca / ayodhyāṃ vijanāṃ caiva bharataṃ rāghavānugam), D6,7, 10,11,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert a passage of one line [1455*]: "[Rāghava and Bharata, having rendered Ayodhyā devoid of people], the two great chariot-warriors made their preparation to depart for heaven[1] (svargasya gamanodyogaṃ kṛtavantau mahārathau)."

[1] "for heaven" svargasya: Literally, "of heaven." Cr glosses, "for [lit., 'of'] Sāketa (sāketasya)."

7–9. "When . . . had heard about the terrible . . . destruction of his family" śrutvā taṃ ghorasaṃkāśaṃ kulakṣayam: "When he had heard about that terrible-appearing destruction of his family." Ś,Ñ,V,B2,3,D,T3,4, and Lahore, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead tac chrutvā, "having heard that (neuter)," for śrutvā tam, "having heard that (masculine)." Cr notes that this merely appears to be terrible (ghoravatpratīyamānam)." Cr further notes that by the term "destruction of the family" we should understand the self-effectuated departure of the clan (kulakartṛkagamanam).

"purohita" purohitam: Ś,B2,D6–8,10–12,T3,4,M10, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the synonymous purodhasam.

"Kāñcana" kāñcanam: See 1022*, note 3, following notes to 7.58.14, where the commentators identify Kāñcana as a name of the sage Cyavana. It should be noted that it was Cyavana who brought Śatrughna to Madhurā (see sarga 53ff.). If this identification is correct, it would further strengthen the linkages between the ruling House of the Ikṣvākus and the Bhārgava clan. See R. Goldman 1976 and S. Goldman 2015a.

"related" ākhyāya: Literally, "having narrated or related." D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the finite verb abravīt, "he told." We have broken up the syntax for the sake of readability.

"just as it had taken place" yathāvṛttam: Ck and Ct understand that Śatrughna explains everything to his subjects to forestall any concern on their part that Rāma has acted without good reason in banishing Lakṣmaṇa (lakṣmaṇatyāgasya nirhetukatvaśaṅkāvyāvṛttyartham iti bhāvaḥ—so Ct; Ck similarly). The messengers are not reported as having mentioned the death of Lakṣmaṇa (see verses 3–6 above).

"as well as his own imminent ascension" ātmanaś ca viparyāsaṃ bhaviṣyam: Literally, "and the future death of himself." Ck, Cg, and Ct gloss, "separation from the body (dehaviyogam)" for viparyāsam, "transition or death." Cr glosses, "continued existence in an unmanifest form (aprākaṭyena sthitim)" for viparyāsam.

"Subāhu . . . Śatrughātin" subāhuḥ . . . śatrughātī: Cr understands that the former is the elder of the two (subāhur jyeṣṭhaḥ . . . śatrughātī kaniṣṭhas tu).

"received Madhurā . . . got Vaidiśa" madhurāṃ lebhe . . . ca vaidiśam: Literally, "received Madhurā and Vaidiśa." Vaidiśa was an important ancient city known from the Buddhist literature and mentioned at Mahābhārata 12.149.1, Meghadūta 24, etc. Aśoka Maurya was the governor of this provincial capital before his accession to the throne. See Law 1932, pp. 59, 95–96.

10. "he established them both as kings endowed with wealth and grain" dhanadhānyasamāyuktau sthāpayāmāsa pārthivau: D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead dhanaṃ ca yuktaṃ kṛtvā vai sthāpayāmāsa pārthivaḥ, "And the king, having assigned wealth appropriately, established [them]." On this reading we follow Ck and Cg, who understand yuktam as an adverb in the sense of "appropriately." Ck and Cg gloss the phrase "He, having made a distribution properly, that is to say, according to the śāstras . . . (yathocitaṃ yathāśāstraṃ vibhāgaṃ kṛtvety arthaḥ)." Ct appears to think that Śatrughna divided the wealth more or less equally between his two sons, giving slightly more to the elder (dhanaṃ ca yuktaṃ kṛtvā kiṃcidadhikaṃ jyeṣṭhāya kaniṣṭhāya ca samavibhāgaṃ dattvā).

11. "Then, having sent off Śatrughātin to be king in Vaidiśa, Rāghava went swiftly to Ayodhyā" tato visṛjya rājānaṃ vaidiśe śatrughātinam / jagāma tvarito 'yodhyām: D6,7, 10,11,M3, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead subāhuṃ madhurāyāṃ ca vaidiśe śatrughātinam / yayau sthāpya tadāyodhyām, "Then, after establishing Subāhu in Madhurā and Śatrughātin in Vaidiśa, [Rāghava] went to Ayodhyā."

12. "the great king" mahātmānam: Literally, "the great [one]." The reference is to Rāma.

"in the company of the immortal sages" munibhiḥ sārdham akṣayaiḥ: Literally, "together with imperishable munis." Ct believes we should add the word "seated (āsīnam iti śeṣaḥ)." None of the commentators offers any explanation of the term akṣaya, "imperishable," here.

"clad in a thin linen garment" kṣaumasūkṣmāmbaradharam: Literally, "wearing a linen [and] thin garment." The word kṣauma, when it refers to cloth, can refer to either linen or silk. The distinction must be made on the basis of context. When a person is shown in splendid or royal finery, the reference is generally to silk, whereas when the reference is to a person preparing for or engaged in spiritual or penitential activities, as with Kausalyā in the Ayodhyākāṇḍa, the reference is normally to plain white linen. Compare, for silk, 1.73.4; 1.76.10; 4.65.11; 5.8.25; 5.47.4 and for linen 2.4.30; 2.6.7; 2.9.33; 2.17.7; 2.84.2; and 7.99.4. It seems to us that the present context supports the latter meaning, and we have translated accordingly. Among the translators consulted, Dutt (1894, p. 1927), Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 622), and Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 935) all understand "silk" or "silken." Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 643), followed by Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 632), understands the fabric to be wool. Gorresio (1870, p. 304) and Benoît (1999, p. 1429) understand as we do. Ś2,D6,7,10,11,T3,M3, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead by transposition sūkṣmakśaumāmbaradharam, "wearing a fine linen garment." Compare 7.99.4 and notes.

13. "that knower of righteousness" dharmajñaḥ: The term refers to Śatrughna. D5–7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the accusative singular dharmajñam, which would then refer to Rāma.

"reflecting upon righteousness" dharmam evānucintayan: Literally, "[he] considering only dharma." Cr glosses, "considering his own practice of service (svasevāvṛttim anucintayan san)."

14. "I have properly consecrated . . . the Rāghavas, and endowed them with wealth" kṛtvābhiṣekam . . . yuktaṃ rāghavayor dhanaiḥ: Literally, "having made the consecration of the two Rāghavas properly with riches." In keeping with our understanding of the interpretation of the word in the notes to verse 10 above, we understand yuktam as "properly" in this context. G,M2, and KK and VSP read instead yuktaṃ rāghavanandana, "[having made the consecration] properly, O delight of the Rāghavas," for yuktaṃ rāghavayor dhanaiḥ, "of the two Rāghavas properly with riches," while D6,7,10,11,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read dvayo rāghavanandana, "those two [sons], O delight of the Rāghavas."

"to follow you" tavānugamane: The choice of the term anugamanam from the verbal root anu + √gam is significant, as it is the term most frequently used to describe a wife's following her deceased husband to the next world. See note to verse 19 below and compare 7.99.6–7, where the similar verb anu + √vraj is employed in a similar context. See Sutherland 1994.

15. "And please do not say anything to the contrary with regard to this" na cānyad atra vaktavyam: Literally, "and in this something other is not to be spoken." D6,7,10, 11,T1,G3,M5,7,9,10, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read adya, "today," while T4 and KK and VSP read api, "at all," for atra, "in this." This latter variant would lend the pāda the sense "nothing at all different is to be spoken."

"for your command is not to be disobeyed" dustaraṃ tava śāsanam: Literally, "your command is difficult or impossible to be overcome or transgressed." D6,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead ato vīra na śāsanam, "since, O hero . . . a command . . . not," which, in the reading of GPP, NSP, and Gita Press construes, according to Cr, with their variant of the second half of the verse (see below). Ct interprets the phrase in two different ways. His first interpretation assumes the variant reading of vilokyamānam (see below). Here he understands the phrase ato vīra na śāsanam to construe separately and interprets śāsanam, which we and others understand in its meaning of "command," in its sense of "punishment (daṇḍa)." In this reading, the line would mean

"And this day, you must not speak differently, O hero, nor should there be any punishment [of me]." For Ct's second interpretation, see below. In KK and VSP, who also read vilokyamānam (see below), the phrase ato vīra na śāsanam would construe with pāda a, above, lending the line the sense "And you should not speak differently now, O hero, and therefore, there should be no such command."

"Please do not abandon me, hero, for I am especially devoted." tyaktuṃ nārhasi māṃ vīra bhaktimantaṃ viśeṣataḥ: Literally, "You ought not abandon me, who am especially devoted, O hero." D6,7,10,11,G1 (second time),2,M1,2,4,5 (second time),6–10, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead vihanyamānam icchāmi madvidhena viśeṣataḥ, which then construes with their variant of pāda b above, lending the passage the sense "O hero, I do not wish your order to be violated, especially by one such as I." As Cr notes, the idea here is that Śatrughna is saying that if Rāma should issue an order contrary to his request, he would disobey it and infallibly follow Rāma nonetheless. (ato matprārthitād anyac chāsanam ājñā na vaktavyaṃ tatra hetum āha. madvidhena vihanyamānam akriyamānaṃ śāsanaṃ tavājñāṃ viśeṣato 'haṃ necchāmi. etena tavānugamanam avaśyam eva kariṣyāmīti sūcitam.) In this variant, Ct, like Cr, understands pāda b (ato vīra na śāsanam) to construe with this line. He says: "If you accept the reading vihanyamānam icchāmi madvidhena viśeṣataḥ, the syntax is 'O hero, I do not wish your command to be disobeyed by one such as I' (vihanyamānam icchāmi madvidhena viśeṣata iti pāṭhe he vīra tava śāsanaṃ madvidhena vihanyamānaṃ necchāmīti sambandhaḥ)." KK and VSP read instead vilokyamānam icchāmi tvadvidhena viśeṣataḥ, "I desire it to be regarded or looked upon especially by one such as you," which Ct also notes as a variant (see above). Ck, Cg, and Ct remark on this variant, suggesting that we supply the term ātmānam, "myself," as the object of the participle vilokyamānam, "being looked upon." According to these commentators, the sense of the line is "I wish myself to be regarded, that is to say, looked upon with favor, by one such as you, that is, one who is capable of the highest favor. (vilokyamānam icchāmi tvadvidhena viśeṣata iti pāṭhe tvadvidhena paramānugrahasamarthena vilokyamānam anugṛhyamāṇam evecchāmi. ātmānam iti śeṣa ity arthaḥ—so Ct; Ck and Cg similarly.)"

16. "Recognizing how adamant Śatrughna's resolve was . . . spoke these word to him" tasya tāṃ buddhim aklībāṃ vijñāya . . . / . . . śatrughnaṃ vacanam abravīt: Literally, "Having known that intention of his was not weak or impotent . . . he spoke speech to Śatrughna." Ś,D6–8,10–12, and Lahore, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read vākyam uvāca ha, "indeed he spoke speech," for vacanam abravīt, "he spoke speech."

17. "No sooner had he finished pronouncing these words" tasya vākyasya vākyānte: Literally, "at the end of the speaking of that speech or his speech." The clumsy and redundant phrase has prompted several of the commentators to attempt to rationalize it. Ct, whom we hesitantly follow, glosses, "The meaning is 'At the end of speaking or enunciating' (uccāraṇānta ity arthaḥ)." Cs, who appears to be reading one of the variants—rāmasya or vīrasya—noted in the apparatus of KK (p. 260, n. 4), takes strong objection to Ct's interpretation. He argues that vākyānte should be taken in the sense of "at the conclusion of the speech." He then turns to the reading found in the critical edition. For this variant he understands the uncompounded term vākyasya to be the genitive of a masculine form of the word, the meaning of which is "the speaker." In this case, he continues, the speaker is Rāma. So the meaning of the phrase is "at the conclusion of his, that is to say, the speaker's, that is to say, Rāma's speech." Cs then turns his attention to Ct's gloss of the compound vākyānte, "at the end of the speech," understanding, as noted above, that Ct takes vākya in the sense of the speech act (uccāraṇa) rather than as a discrete unit of speech. Cs takes objection to this, quoting a phrase from the Amarakośa (1.6.2) to the effect that the term vākyam refers to a collocation of verbal and nominal forms, i.e., a sentence, and not the action of speaking. To further support this he quotes Pāṇini 7.3.52 (cajoḥ kūghiṇ ṇyataḥ) and 7.3.67 (vaco 'śabdasaṃjñāyām), which show that the velar consonant "k" is substituted for the palatal consonant "c" of the root √vac to form the word vākyam when, and only when, it refers to a discrete unit of linguistic meaning, such as a speech, sentence, etc. Cs continues, arguing that since the meaning of the term (vākya) [is intended to express] an act of speech and not a unit of linguistic meaning [i.e., a word or sentence], the form (vākya) becomes impossible to understand [in the sense that Ct proposes]. And Cs notes that an intelligent person would not claim that the term [means uccāraṇa] through secondary meaning. Furthermore this is not appropriate when there is the possibility of an easy alternative. (vākyānte vacanāvasāne. vākyasya vākyānta iti pāṭhe. vākyam asyāstīti vākyo vaktā rāmas tasya vākyasyānta ity arthaḥ. yat tu nāgojibhaṭṭena vākyānta uccāraṇānta ity uktam. 'tiñsubantacayo vākyam' ity amarasudhāyām. vacer ṇyat cajor iti kūtvaṃ śabdasaṃjñāyām anyatra tu vācyam ity ukter uccāraṇārthakatve kriyārthakatvād aśabdasaṃjñārthakatvād durnirūpaṃ rūpam ity uktam. lakṣaṇayeti na vicakṣaṇenoktam. na yuktaṃ ca gatyanantarasya sumilasya saṃbhave.) Compare the critical edition's variants in B1,G1,2, rāmasya, "of Rāma," and D6,7,T3,4,M3, vīrasya, "of the hero," which would eliminate the problem. Cr, somewhat in the manner of Cs, understands the term vākya to refer to Rāma, who is distinguished by his excellent speech (vākyasya praśastavākyaviśiṣṭasya rāmasya).

Following verse 17, D6,7,10,11,S (except M6) insert a passage of two lines [1457*]: "Placing Sugrīva at their head, they[1] had all assembled, intent upon seeing[2] Rāma, who stood there looking toward heaven[3] (sugrīvaṃ te puraskṛtya sarva eva samāgatāḥ / te rāmaṃ draṣṭumanasaḥ svargāyābhimukhaṃ sthitam //)."

[1] "they" te . . . te: Literally, "they . . . they." D10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read tam, "him," referring to Rāma, for the second occurrence of "te."

[2] "intent upon seeing" draṣṭumanasaḥ: Literally, "[they] having a mind to see." Cr understands that we should supply the words "they were desirous of knowing [Rāma]." The meaning, he believes, is that they were eager to know Rāma's intentions for each of their respective kingdoms. (rāmaṃ draṣṭumanaso jñātukāmā babhuvur iti śeṣaḥ. svasvaviṣayakatadabhiprāyaṃ jijñāsavo babhuvur ity arthaḥ.)

[3] "stood there looking toward heaven[3]" svargāyābhimukhaṃ sthitam: Literally, "he stood with his face toward heaven."

18. "Rāma's departure" rāmakṣayam: Literally, "the destruction or disappearance of Rāma." Cr glosses, "Rāma's disappearance, that is to say, his departure for Sāketa (rāmasya kṣayaṃ sāketagamanam)."

"all those sons of the gods, sons of seers, and sons of gandharvas" devaputrā ṛṣisutā gandharvāṇāṃ sutās tathā: The reader will recall that at Bālakāṇḍa sarga 16, the gods and other celestial beings, including seers, etc., fathered the monkeys on various females, including apsarases, gandharva women, apes, monkeys, etc. Several of the rākṣasas, including Vibhīṣaṇa, their leader, are the sons of great seers. See, for example, 7.9.1–27, where the story of the births of Rāvaṇa, Kumbhakarṇa, Śūrpaṇakhā, and Vibhīṣaṇa is told.

19. "When they had all assembled there, they respectfully saluted Rāma and said" te rāmam abhivādyāhuḥ sarva eva samāgatāḥ: (= 19ab) Literally, "Having respectfully saluted Rāma, all who were assembled said." V1,B2,3,T1,2,G1,M3,6, and GPP (in brackets, unnumbered, between lines 19cd and 20ab), KK, and VSP read instead the synonymous abhivādyocuḥ, "having respectfully saluted, they said" for abhivādyāhuḥ. D1,3–5, T,G3,M3, and GPP (in brackets, unnumbered, between 7.109.19–20), KK, and VSP read vānararākṣasāḥ for eva samāgatāḥ, lending the line the sense "Having respectfully saluted Rāma, all the monkeys and rākṣasas said." B3,D6,7,10,11,M1,5,7,9, and NSP and Gita Press omit 19ab.

"Illustrious . . . we have come" samprāptāḥ sma mahāyaśāḥ: We interpret sma as smaḥ, the first person plural present indicative (uttamapuruṣa, bahuvacana laṭ) of the verb √as, "to be." Whitney (1889, p. 240, paragraph 636d) understands this to be a confusion of the secondary for the primary ending. Such a confusion, he notes, is not rare, especially in this form. Compare Cr's gloss on the word sma in the notes to verse 20 below. D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead samprāptāḥ sma samāgatāḥ: Literally, "[we] have arrived [and] assembled." M3 and KK and VSP read instead samprāptāḥ kṛtaniścayāḥ, "[we] who have formed a resolution have arrived."

"in order to follow you" tavānugamane: Literally, "with regard to the following of you." See verse 14 and note above, and 7.99.6–7 and notes.

20. "bull among men" puruṣarṣabha: D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead puruṣottama, "O foremost of men or O Puruṣottama."

"you would have struck us down" tvayā sma vinipātitāḥ: Literally, "We are struck down by you." Cr reads the normative smaḥ, "we are," for the irregular form sma (vayaṃ vinipātitāḥ sma iti). See notes to verse 19 above.

"as if you were wielding the rod of Yama" yamadaṇḍa ivodyamya: Literally, "as if having raised the staff of Yama." Compare 1.55.19; 6.64.2–3; and 7.73.11. See also the virtually synonymous kāladaṇḍa at 1.54.28; 6.59.85; 7.14.12; 7.22.5,27,31,35,38; and 7.27.39.

Following verse 20, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert a number of additional lines. The critical apparatus is somewhat confusing as to the sequence. We have attempted to simplify it.

Following verse 20, KK and VSP read a variant of 21ab. See notes to verse 21 below.

Following verse 20, D6,7,10,11,S (except M6) insert a passage of four lines [1459*]: "At this juncture, immensely powerful Sugrīva, having prostrated himself in the proper fashion before heroic Rāma, began to report to him: 'Having consecrated heroic Aṅgada, I have come, bull among men.[1] Know, your majesty, that I am firmly resolved upon following you.' "

[1] "bull among men" nararṣabha: D6,7,10,11,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead nareśvara, "O lord of men."

Following 1459*, D6,7, and GPP (in brackets, unnumbered, between 7.109.22–23), KK, and VSP continue with a passage of two lines [1460*]: "When Rāma, foremost of those who cause delight, had heard those words of his, he then spoke to the lord of the monkeys, recalling their friendship (tasya tadvacanaṃ śrutvā rāmo ramayatāṃ varaḥ / vānarendram athovāca maitraṃ tasyānucintayan //)."

Following 1460*, D6,7, and GPP (in brackets, unnumbered, between 7.109.22–23), KK and VSP continue with a passage of two lines [1461*]: "When he heard those words of his[1] [he said:] 'Without you, I would not[2] go either to the world of the gods or to the great abode of Varuṇa'[3] (tasya tadvacanaṃ śrutvā na ca te 'haṃ vinākṛtaḥ / gaccheyaṃ devalokaṃ vā vāruṇaṃ vā padaṃ mahat //)."

[1] "When he heard those words of his" tasya tadvacanaṃ śrutvā: M3 and GPP (in brackets, unnumbered, between 7.109.22–23), KK, and VSP read instead sakhe śṛṇuṣva sugrīva, "Listen, my friend Sugriva!"

[2] "Without you, I . . . not" na ca te 'haṃ vinākṛtaḥ: Literally, "and rendered bereft of you, I . . . not." M3 and GPP (in brackets, unnumbered, between 7.109.22–23), KK, and VSP read instead the virtually synonymous na tvayāhaṃ vinākṛtaḥ.

[3] "the great abode of Varuṇa" vāruṇaṃ vā padaṃ mahat: The reference is, of course, to the ocean. T3,4,M3, and GPP (in brackets, unnumbered, between 7.109.22–23), KK, and VSP read paramam for vāruṇam, lending the line the sense "or to the great and supreme abode." Presumably the reference is to Viṣṇu's highest heaven.

21. "When he had thus heard those words of the apes, monkeys, and rākṣasas" evaṃ teṣāṃ vacaḥ śrutvā ṛkṣavānararakṣasām: Note the hiatus. D10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead, while KK and VSP read before 1459* (see notes to verse 20 above) tair evam uktaḥ kākutstho bāḍham ity ābravīt smayan, "Addressed by them in this fashion, Kākustha, smiling, said, 'Very well.' "

"sweetly . . . in gentle tones" madhuraṃ ślakṣṇayā girā: Literally, "sweetly with gentle speech." D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead rākṣasendraṃ mahāyaśāḥ, lending the line the sense "Then the greatly illustrious one [Rāma] spoke to Vibhīṣaṇa, the lord of the rākṣasas."

22. "you shall live on" svaṃ dhariṣyasi: Literally, "you will sustain your own." Ck, Cg, Ct, and Cr all agree that the term svam, "your own," refers here to Vibhīṣaṇa's [earthly] body. Ck and Cg propose adding the term "body" (deham iti śeṣaḥ). Ct glosses the term svam as "your own body (svaṃ svīyadeham)," while Cr similarly glosses, "your own body (svakīyaṃ deham)." As Ck, Cg, and Ct note concerning this, Rāma instructs Vibhīṣaṇa to remain here, in the world, because of the boon of immortality that he had earlier been granted by Brahmā (tatra vibhīṣaṇasya brahmaṇāmaratvapradānād ihāvasthānam eva śāsti—so Ct; Ck and Cg similarly). The reference here is to 7.10.30, where Brahmā grants the boon of immortality, or at least very long life, to Vibhīṣaṇa. The latter is, of course, counted among the seven cirajīvins, "long-lived ones," of epic and purāṇic lore. See 7.10.30 and notes. D6,7,T1,2,G,M1,2,5,7–10, and KK and VSP read the nominative singular pronoun tvam, "you," for svam, "one's own," lending the phrase the sense "you will live on."

Following verse 22, D6,7,10,11,M3, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert a passage of two lines [1464*]: "The kingship will be yours as long as the moon, the sun, and the earth endure and as long as my tale remains current[1] in the world (yāvac candraś ca sūryaś ca yāvat tiṣṭhati medinī / yāvac ca matkathā loke tāvad rājyaṃ tavāstv iha //)."

[1] "as long as my tale remains current" yāvac ca matkathā loke: Literally, "and so long as my story in the world." It is necessary to bring down, as it were, the verb tiṣṭhati, "it stands or exists," from line 1 and take it in the sense of "it remains current." This is in keeping with the tradition that the Rāmāyaṇa will continue to be recited as long as the world endures. Compare 1.2.35.

Following 1464*, D6,7,10,11,T3,4,M3, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert a passage of one line [1465*]: "I bind you to an oath by our friendship;[1] you must obey my command (śāpitas tvaṃ sakhitvena kāryaṃ te mama śāsanam /)."

[1] "I bind you to an oath by our friendship" śāpitas tvaṃ sakhitvena: Literally, "you are sworn by friendship." D7,10,11,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead śāsitaś ca for śāpitas tvam, lending the line the sense "And [you are] commanded by friendship." M3 and KK and VSP read śāsitas tvam for śāpitas tvam, lending the line the sense "You are commanded by friendship."

23. "Please do not argue with me." nottaraṃ vaktum arhasi: Literally, "You ought not utter a response."

Following verse 23, D6,7,10,11,T3,4,M3 omits line 5), and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert a passage of five lines [1466*]: " 'And I wish to say something else, immensely powerful[1] lord of the rākṣasas. You must worship the Lord of the world, the deity of the House of Ikṣvāku,[1–2] who is to be constantly worshiped, even by the gods,[2] including Vāsava.'[3] Then, keeping in mind Rāghava's command, Vibhīṣaṇa, the king of the foremost rākṣasas, accepted Rāma's instructions, saying, 'So be it.'[3][4–5]"

[1] "immensely powerful" mahābala: KK and VSP read instead mahāmate, "exceedingly wise [one]."

[2] "even by the gods" devair api: M3 and KK and VSP read instead sarvadevaiḥ, "by all the gods."

[3] Ct notes that some scholars regard these five lines as interpolated. (kiṃ ceti. idaṃ sārdhaślokadvayaṃ prakṣiptam ity anye.) One may note here that neither Ck nor Cg comments on these passages.

24. "Resign yourself to remaining alive, for you must not violate your vow." jīvite kṛtabuddhis tvaṃ mā pratijñāṃ vilopaya: Literally, "Having made up [your] mind with regard to living, you must not destroy the vow or promise." Ñ2,V1,2,B1,3,D2,7,9–11,T3,4,M6 (first time), and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read mā vṛthā kṛthāḥ, "do not make false," for mā vilopaya, "do not destroy." Ck, Cg, and Ct all understand that the vow referred to is the one made by Hanumān. These commentators further note that Rāma instructs Hanumān to remain on earth for three reasons: 1) because he was granted immortality by Brahmā (see 7.36.19 and notes), 2) because of his desire to hear Rāma's story as long as it is current in the world, and 3) because he was requested to do so by Rāma. They continue, noting that Hanumān is to fix his mind, that is, his resolve, on the condition of living and that therefore he must not make false, that is to say, must not violate, the vow he himself made. (atha hanumato 'pi brahmadattāmaratvād yāvad rāmakathāpracāraṃ bhūloke tacchravaṇasya prārthitatvāt tathā rāmeṇānujñātatvāc ca taṃ sthāpayati jīvita iti. jīvadavasthāne kṛtabuddhiḥ kṛtaniścayaḥ. ataḥ svakṛtāṃ pratijñāṃ mā vṛthā kṛthāḥ. mā vilopayety arthaḥ—so Ct; Ck and Cg similarly.) See 7.36.18–21 and notes. On Hanumān's living as long as the Rāma story is told, see 7.39.16, where Hanumān vows to do so, and 7.39.18–19, where Rāma declares that Hanumān's vow will prove true. But see 4.65.25–28, where Jāmbavān tells Hanumān of Brahmā's boon, such that "you could not be killed by any weapon in battle," as well as Indra's boon, such that "your death should occur only when you wish it."

25. "you must uphold your vow by remaining alive" tāvat tvaṃ dhārayaṇ prāṇān pratijñām anupālaya: Literally, "for so long, must you, sustaining your life breaths, keep the promise." D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead tāvad ramasva suprīto madvākyam anupālayan, lending the line the sense "for so long must you, well pleased, delight, keeping my words."

Following verse 25, D6,7,10,11,T3, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert a passage of four lines [1471*]: "When Hanumān had been addressed in this fashion by great Rāghava, he experienced[1] the greatest delight and he proclaimed these words:[1–2] 'As long as your sanctifying tale remains current in the world, so long will I remain on earth, keeping your command.[3–4]' "

[1] "he experienced" avāpa: Literally, "he obtained." D7 and KK and VSP read instead the gerund avāpya, "having obtained."

Following 1471*, D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert a passage of three lines [1472*]: "And he [Rāma] said in the same way[1] to great[2] Jāmbavān, the aged son of Brahmā, as well as to Mainda and Dvivida, who, together with Jāmbavān, make up the five,[3] 'You must live until the time when the Kali Yuga commences.[4]' "

[1] "And he [Rāma] said in the same way" tathā: Literally, "in this fashion or thus." The critical reading contains no verb indicating speech. We have added one for the sake of clarity and readability. D6,7,10,11,T2,G1,M10, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead tadā, "then."

[2] "great" mahātmānam: D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead tathoktvā tu, "and having spoken thus [to Jāmbavān]," which supplies the verbal element missing from the critical reading.

[3] "Mainda and Dvivida, who, together with Jāmbavān, make up the five" maindaṃ ca dvividaṃ caiva pañca jāmbavatā saha: Literally, "to the five, Mainda and Dvivida together with Jāmbavān." The commentators note that we must include Vibhīṣaṇa and Hanumān in this elliptical group of Rāma's five companions who are to remain on earth after his departure. Ct explains, "The five are those—Vibhīṣaṇa, Hanumān, Mainda, and Dvivida, together with Jāmbavān—who are immortal (pañceti jāmbavatā saha ye pañca vibhīṣaṇahanumanmaindadvividā amarās te—so Ct; Cv, Ck, Cg, Cm, Cr, and Cs all similarly)." See notes to 7.100.18.

[4] "You must live until that time when the Kali Yuga commences" yāvat kalau ca saṃprāpte tāvat kālaṃ ca jīvatha: Literally, "Until such time as the Kali has arrived, you [all] must live for so long a time." D6,7,10,11,G2,M2, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the more or less synonymous yāvat kaliś ca saṃprāptaḥ for yāvat kalau ca saṃprāpte, "until . . . when the Kali Yuga commences." D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead tāvaj jīvata sarvadā, which would literally translate as the somewhat redundant "you all must always live so long." The commentators offer various explanations of how long the different members of this quintet must live after the departure of Rāma. Cv simply notes that the five are to live until the advent of the Kali Yuga, that is to say, until the universal destruction that is supposed to attend the transition of the cosmic ages (yāvat kalis tu saṃprāptaḥ pralayaḥ saṃprāpto bhavet tāvaj jivatha). Ck is similar but adds, "When the Kali, or universal dissolution, comes, you must abandon your bodies. This last phrase is to be supplied. (kalau pralaye saṃprāpte ca sati dehaṃ tyajatheti śeṣaḥ.)" Cg is similar to Ck. Cm expands upon this. He takes the idea of dissolution to refer to the end of these heroes' fame. He then proposes that there are different life spans for two groups among the five. Thus, he argues, Jāmbavān, Vibhīṣaṇa, and Hanumān will live on until the great universal dissolution (i.e., at the end of the kalpa), while Mainda and Dvivida will abandon their earthly bodies at some intermediate period. (yūyaṃ yāvat kīrtināśaḥ. pralayarūpaḥ prāpnoti sarvasya tāvat kālaṃ jīvata. kalau pralaye ca saṃprāpte sati dehaṃ tyajateti śeṣaḥ. jāmbavadvibhīṣaṇahanumatāṃ mahāpralaye maindadvividayos tu madhya iti viveka iti bhāvaḥ.) Ct proposes a different division of the group. In his view, we are to understand that only Hanumān and Vibhīṣaṇa [who are among the seven cirajīvins] will survive until the universal dissolution, while the others will meet their ends in the Kali Yuga, that is to say, during the Kṛṣṇāvatāra. (tatra hanūmadvibhīṣaṇayoḥ pralaya itareṣāṃ tu kalau kṛṣṇāvatāre nāśa iti bodhyam.) Cs similarly understands that Dvivida, Mainda, and Jāmbavān will die during the period of the Kṛṣṇāvatāra, while Hanumān and Vibhīṣaṇa will live on until the universal dissolution. In support of this, Cs quotes an unidentified text to the effect that [Vibhīṣaṇa] was granted a life span as lord of the rākṣasas that would extend to the end of the kalpa. (kārṣṇe 'vatāre maindadvividajāmbavatāṃ nāśaḥ. hanumadvibhīṣaṇayos tu pralayakāla iti prāmāṇiko vivekaḥ. kalpāntam asya niśicarapatitvapūrvam āyuḥ pradāyetyādeḥ.) Cr understands the term kali in its sense of "discord" or "strife" and believes that the five will live until the time that discord enters the world, that is to say, up until the time of dissolution (yūyaṃ yāvat kaliṃ loke vivādaḥ saṃprāptas tāvat pralayakālaparyantam ity arthaḥ sarvadā jīvata). The commentators who argue that Jāmbavān, Dvivida, and Mainda will live until the time of Kṛṣṇa's avatāra doubtless have in mind the passages from the Bhāgavatapurāṇa where these figures appear in connection with Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma, respectively. Thus Jāmbavān turns up in the Bhāgavatapurāṇa during the story of the Syamantaka gem at 10.56.14–32. At Bhāgavatapurāṇa 10.67, Balarāma fights and kills Dvivida, who is depicted as a mischievous and destructive monkey but a brave and powerful adviser of Sugrīva, while Mainda is merely named as his brother (10.67.2). Ck, Cg, and Ct explain the different reasons for the long life spans of Jāmbavān, Mainda, and Dvivida, the three who are not counted among the cirajīvins. Their argument is that Jāmbavān's longevity derives both from his being a son of Brahmā and from his having been granted a boon of immortality by that divinity. Similarly, Mainda and Dvivida, through the grace of their fathers, the Āśvins, and their having consumed the nectar of immortality, are extremely long lived. (jāmbavato 'pi brahmaputratvād brahmaṇaiva dattavaratvāc ca sthāpanam. maindadvividayor api pitror aśvinor anugrahād amṛtaprāśitvāc ca sthāpanam—so Cg; Ck and Ct similarly.) At Mahābhāratatātparyanirṇaya 9.106–112, we are told that Mainda and Dvivida are excluded from following Rāma because of their having some remainder of the asura nature [in them]. This is so because they had drunk, without permission, the nectar of immortality, which was entrusted to them for protection. Thus they are immortal. It is also stated there that they were granted immunity from old age and death by Brahmā, who was pleased by their austerities. See notes to 7.100.18.

26. "When he had spoken in this fashion" tathaivam uktvā: Literally, "having spoken thus in this fashion." The phrase is redundant. D10,11,G2,M2,8, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press avoid the redundancy by reading tad evam uktvā, "having said that in this fashion." Ct understands the phrase to refer to what Rāma had said to Vibhīṣaṇa, etc., in 1472* above (vibhīṣaṇādīn praty evam uktvā). He then understands the second half of the verse to be Rāma's words to the others granting his permission for them to depart, and, like Ck and Cg, he modifies the word "all" by excluding the previously mentioned five cirajīvins. (itarān prati gamanānujñām āhety arthaḥ. sarvāṃs tān pūrvoktapañcavyatiriktān.) T1,2,G1,3,M3,6,10, and KK and VSP read instead tān evam uktvā, "having spoken thus to them." Ck and Cg understand the reference to be to all of them with the exception of the five immortal ones (i.e., Hanumān, Vibhīṣaṇa, Jāmbavān, Mainda, and Dvivida) mentioned in verses 21–25 and 1472*. (sarvāṃs tān iti. pañcāmaravyatiriktān ity arthaḥ—so Ck and Cg; Ct understands similarly.)

"Rāghava then said to all the other apes and monkeys, 'You may depart with me.'" sarvāṃs tān ṛkṣavānarān / mayā sārdhaṃ prayāteti tadā tān rāghavo 'bravīt //: Literally, "Rāghava then said to them, all those apes and monkeys, 'You must depart together with me.'" The repetition of the word tān, "them, those," in the critical edition is redundant, and we have collapsed the two occurrences. D6,7,10,11,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read uvāca bāḍhaṃ gacchadhvam, "He said, 'very well, you may depart,'" for mayā sārdhaṃ prayāteti, "You may depart together with me." D6,7,11,T,G2,3,M1–5, 7–10, and KK and VSP read mayā sārdhaṃ yathepsitam, "together with me, just as was desired," for tadā tān rāghavo 'bravīt, "Rāghava then said to them." D10 and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read yathoditam, "as was spoken," for yathepsitam, "as was desired." Cr glosses, "as was requested by you gentlemen (yathoditaṃ bhavadbhir yathāprārthitam)."

Sarga 99

Ck, concerned as ever with foregrounding his iṣṭadevatā, Brahmā, introduces this sarga as follows: "Now the Brahmaloka is unsuitable for mortal bodies. Moreover, both the brahmamedha and the ritual of the great departure [from the world] are enjoined in the śāstras in the case of the abandonment of [all] attachment to the body on the part of the most learned and pious. However, since a king is not authorized to perform the vedic household rituals, he may undertake only the rite of the great departure (mahāprasthāna) in order to abandon his mortal body. And when he has gone forth, everyone follows him. (atha brahmalokasya martyatanvanarhatvād brahmiṣṭhānātmyatyāge brahmamedhavidher mahāprasthānavidheś ca śāstravihitatvād rājñaś ca brahmamedhavidhāv anadhikārān mahāprasthānavidhim eva martyatanutyāgāya parigṛhya bhavati niryāte sarvasya tadanugamanam.)" The idea here is that although Rāma is a brahmiṣṭha, that is to say, an extraordinarily learned and pious individual of the kind for whom special death and funerary rites are prescribed, he is not, as a king, eligible for the brahmamedha rite that is reserved for learned brahman teachers, and therefore he must resort to the mahāprasthāna, the great departure, that is to say, spiritual abandonment of the body. On the brahmamedha, see Pandey1969, p. 271; Śrautakośa, vol. 1, pt. 1, pp. 798–99, 816; Śrautakośa, vol. 1, pt. 2, pp. 1115–16, 1128. For the mahāprasthāna, compare the Mahāprasthānikaparvan of the Mahābhārata [book 17], where the Pāṇḍavas similarly depart from the earthly realm. See, too, notes to verse 3 below.

1. "when the night had given way to dawn" prabhātāyām . . . śarvaryām: Literally, "when the night had become bright."

"purohita" purodhasam: See notes to 7.55.5 and 7.96.5–6.

2. "the agnihotra vessel, its fire blazing with ghee" agnihotram . . . sarpirjvalitapāvakam: The term agnihotra can refer to the rite, the oblation to Agni, or the sacred fire itself, as well as the vessel in which the fire is contained. Here, since the agnihotra is said to be associated with a fire, the reference must be to the vessel. See 7.9.10; 7.24.6; 7.36.29; and notes. Cg remarks that the fire is present because, as was stated earlier, Rāma's wife, Sītā, resides within it (sītāyāḥ patnyāḥ sthitatvād agner api sthitir iti pūrvam evoktam). The issue here is, no doubt, cognizance of the ritual requirement that the sacrificer's wife be present during agnihotra rites. See 7.82.17–19 and notes. Cg is probably also referring to the medieval tradition according to which Sītā had remained hidden in the fire during the period in which she was supposedly abducted and held captive by Rāvaṇa. On the chāyāsītā tradition, see Goldman and Goldman 2009, p. 104, and notes to 6.102.5; 6.104.27; and 6.106.4. Ñ2,V2,D6,7,10,11,M6, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read dīpyamānaṃ saha dvijaiḥ for sarpirjvalitapāvakam, "with its fire blazing with ghee," lending the line the sense "Let the blazing agnihotra fire go before, together with the twice-born [brahmans]."

"the umbrella consecrated for the vājapeya, beautifying" vājapeyātapatram . . . śobhayānam: Literally, "the vājapeya umbrella illuminating or beautifying." The white umbrella here marks the transition from Rāma's role as king to his divine form. The white umbrella is one of the chief insignia of royalty. It is also used during śrauta rituals as a sunshade and to screen the yajamāna's wife from the eyes of the otherwise all male officiants. Compare comments above, where Cg alludes to Sītā's invisible presence at the sacrifice. D6,7,10,11,T1,2,M2,3,6,10, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the simplex participle śobhamānam, which lends the phrase the sense "the shining vājapeya umbrella." Ck, Cg, and Ct explain that the umbrella is present because it has the power of righteous performance [of the vājapeya] and because it has been set aside as an insignia of royalty. (tasya dharmānuṣṭhānabalaprāptatvād rājacihnasya saṃnyastatvāc ca—so Cg; Ck and Ct similarly.) On this, see Benoît's comments (1999, p. 1731, note 1). See, too, Smith 1991. On the umbrella in the vājapeya rite, see 2.40.20 and notes. The vājapeya, literally, "the drink of strength," is one of the seven forms of the soma sacrifice. It is performed by kings prior to the performance of the rājasūya. At 7.89.5, Rāma is said to have performed ten vājapeya sacrifices (and one aśvamedha). See notes to 7.89.5 for a discussion of this number. On the vājapeya, see also Kane 1974, vol. 2, pt. 2, pp. 1206–14.

"the great highway" mahāpatham: Literally, "the great road." The term is ambiguous here, since it can refer to both the principal or royal road of a city and to the great journey or passage to the next world. Perhaps both are intended here. D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the more or less synonymous locative singular mahāpathe, "on the great road." Cr predictably glosses, "on the road to Sāketa (sāketamārge)."

3. "according to the ritual injunctions" vidhivat: Cr, idiosyncratically, takes the common adverb vidhivat to be a compound of which the last member vat is an upapada of the verbal root √vad, "to speak." He thus understands the compound to mean "the speaker of injunctions" and takes it in apposition to Vasiṣṭha, thus understanding, "Vasiṣṭha, the articulator of ritual ordinances (vidhivad vidhīnāṃ vaktā vasiṣṭhaḥ)."

"the . . . rite of departure for the next world" mahāprasthānikaṃ vidhim: The term mahāprasthānika is not common. The ritual texts mention voluntary departure from the world by various means as permissible for certain types of people or at certain specific holy sites, while the practice is condemned or excluded in the Kali Yuga according to the Nāradīyapurāṇa (1.24.16). See Kane 1974, vol. 2, pt. 2, pp. 924–28. The term occurs several times in the Mahābhārata (1.2.68; 1.2.230; 1.55.42; 12.36.14; 12.143.9; 12.145.3), as well as serving as the name of its seventeenth parvan (Mahāprasthānikaparvan). It is found only one other time in the critical edition of the Rāmāyaṇa (4.62.4) and once more in the southern recension (1030*, line 9 following 2.41.30—ihaiva nidhanaṃ yāmo mahāprasthānam eva vā). See, too, HariVaṃ 114.7 The best-known and most elaborate example of a mahāprasthāna is, of course, the departure from the world on the part of the Pāṇḍavas and their wife, Draupadī, in the Mahāprasthānikaparvan of the Mahābhārata, although the term does not appear in the parvan itself. As far as we can determine, nowhere else in the literature, other than in the present passage, is the practice of mahāprasthāna performed in such a highly ritualized fashion. Ñ2,V1,B2,3,D3, and KK and VSP read mahāprāsthānikam for mahāprasthānikam, while GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead māhāprasthānikam. The apparatus cites V2, GPP, and Ct as reading māhāprāsthānika, a reading not found in our editions of GPP or NSP. All three of these variants must be understood as synonymous with the critical reading.

"sacred" dharmyam: Literally, "dharmic or righteous." V2,B1,D4,6,7,10–12,T1,2,G2, 3,M1–4,6,7, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead dharmam, "dharma or act of righteousness." This would lend the line the sense "Vasiṣṭha performed that righteous act, the rite of departure." Ct explains, "He performed that act of righteousness, which is required to be done (yo dharmaḥ kartavyas taṃ dharmaṃ cakāra)." Cr glosses dharma as "ordained in the veda (dharmaṃ vedavihitam)."

4–19. Note that Padmapurāṇa (ĀnSS) 6(Uttarakhaṇḍa).271.70–76 closely parallels, and in some cases is identical with, verses 4–18. See notes to 7.100.1.

4. "clad in a garment of linen" kṣaumāmbaradharaḥ: D6,7,10,11 (both times),T3,4, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead sūkṣmāmbaradharaḥ, "clad in a fine or sheer garment." The word kṣauma can refer to either silk or linen. See 7.98.12 and notes.

"and invoking the Supreme Brahman" brahma cāvartayan param: Literally, "and reciting the highest or Supreme Brahman." The precise meaning of the expression is rather difficult to ascertain because of the polysemy of the term brahma. In this context, it can refer, as we have understood, 1) to the parabrahma, or absolute spirit of the universe, 2) to a hymn or sacred text invoking or referring to that absolute spirit, 3) to the vedas, or 4) to the sacred syllable oṃ, which stands for Brahman. The commentators and translators understandably differ in their interpretations. Ck (and Ct, who quotes Ck) understands the reference to be to the great Brahmahṛdaya, which is the essence of the great mantra that principally focuses upon the established truth of brahman and which had earlier been taught [to Rāma] by Agastya. He glosses the participle āvartayan, "reciting," as "properly composing himself with both verbal and mental activities." (prāgagastyopadiṣṭabrahmasiddhāntapradhānamahāmantrasarvasvaṃ śrīmadbrahmahṛdayam āvartayan samyañ manovāgvṛttibhyām anusaṃdadhānaḥ—so Ck and quoted by Ct.) The reference is, no doubt, to the extensive hymn, commonly known as the Ādityahṛdaya, which Agastya teaches to Rāma and which is found as part of the southern recension of the Yuddhakāṇḍa. See App. I, No. 65, following notes to 6.93.27. Cg glosses merely, "a mantra to the god (devamantram ity arthaḥ)." Cr understands that Rāma is reciting aloud some portion of an upaniṣad (parabrahmopaniṣadbhāgam ity artha āvartayann uccārayan san). Ct notes that other scholars understand the term brahma to refer to the upaniṣads that propound [the doctrine of] brahman (brahmapratipādakopaniṣada āvartayann ity artha ity anye). Cs takes the term brahma in its sense of "the syllable oṃ (brahma praṇavam)." B2,D10,11 (both times),T1,2,4,M7,8, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the nearly synonymous brahmam āvartayan param. Ck, Cg, and Ct all regard the word brahmam as an irregular form, substituting an "-a" stem for the expected "-an" (akārāntatvam ārṣam). Cs, focusing, as usual, on Ct, ridicules this explanation of what he considers merely an erroneous reading found in a few manuscripts. He quotes Ct and then remarks that the correct way to think about this is that five or six manuscripts that do not share this error show us that Ct's judgment, based on two or three manuscripts, is inadequate. (prāmādikaṃ pāṭham ekatame pustake sthitaṃ brahmam āvartayan param iti dhṛtvākarāntatvam ārṣam iti vyākurvato nāgojibhaṭṭasya dvitrapustakālābha iti jñāpayanti pañcaṣāṇy atathāpāṭhāni pustakānīti mantavyam.) The translators also offer various interpretations. Dutt (1894, p. 1928) renders, "and reciting Vedic hymns." Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 645) offers, "récita le Brahma suprême." Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 633) tries to cover two meanings of the term brahma, rendering, "invoking Brahma and reciting the Vedic Mantras." Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 624) translates, "repeating the mantras that invoke the Supreme Brahma." Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 937) offers, "and reciting the (chants connected with the) Supreme Brahma." Benoît (1999, p. 1430) renders, "sans cesser de réciter la plus éminent des syllabes." Benoît (1999, p. 1731, note 2) adds a note to this reading, "La syllabe oṃ est censée résumer à elle seule les Veda."

"Rāma took up . . . he prepared to set forth" gṛhītvā . . . prayayau: Literally, "having taken, he set forth." In light of verse 5 below, where Rāma is said to actually set out from home, we read the liṭ (perfect) here as inceptive.

"and, fastening it" prasajya: Literally, "having fastened or tied." As noted by Ck and Ct, Rāma, having taken the kuśa grass, binds it in the spaces between his fingers and sets forth (kuśān gṛhītvāṅgulivivaraprasaktān kṛtvā prayayau—so Ck and Ct). Ck and Ct note that we should add the phrase "according to the procedures for the rite of the great setting forth, which will be described further on (vakṣyamāṇalakṣaṇamahāprasthānavidhineti śeṣaḥ—so Ct; Ck reads similarly, but our transcript is damaged)." Cg, who reads with the critical edition, similarly understands: "'Having fastened and having taken' means that he made it [the grass] attached to the space between his fingers. (prasajya gṛhītveti. aṅgulīvivaraprasaktaṃ kṛtvety arthaḥ.)" The reference is to the well-known practice of tying a ring of kuśa grass around the ring finger of the right hand when performing sacred rites. D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead sarayūm, "the Sarayū." This lends the line the sense "Having taken up kuśa grass with both hands, he then set out for the Sarayū." Cr glosses, "the Sarayū, that is, to its bank (sarayūṃ tattīram)."

5. "Uttering no unnecessary words whatsoever at any point" avyāharan kvacit kiṃcit: Literally, "[he] not saying anything anywhere." The phrase is somewhat ambiguous. Among the commentators consulted, only Cr and Cs gloss it. Cs explains, "Not conversing with those one should not converse with (asaṃbhāṣyān asaṃbhāṣayan)." Cr, cognizant of the fact that in the previous verse Rāma was described as intoning the vedas, explains, "Not speaking, that is to say, not uttering any words other than the recitation of the vedas at any place (kvacit kasmiṃścid deśe kiṃcid vedoccāraṇātiriktaśabdajātam avyāharann anucārayan)." We agree with these commentators against the opinion of the translators consulted, who believe that Rāma is completely silent rather than restricting his speech.

"making no unnecessary movements" niśceṣṭaḥ: Literally, "devoid of movement or gesture." Ck, Cg, and Ct understand the term to mean "devoid of any activity of the senses with reference to the sense-functions of sight, sound, touch, etc., directed toward any object whatsoever (kiṃcitpadārthadarśanaśravaṇasparśanādiviṣayakendriyaceṣṭārahitaḥ)." Note that these commentators, unlike Cr (see above), read kiṃcit with niśceṣṭaḥ. In a similar vein, Cs glosses, "devoid of any activity produced by desire for sense objects (viṣayābhilāṣajanitavyāpārarahitaḥ)." Cr understands, "devoid of any activity other than simply going (gamanātiriktavyāpārarahitaḥ)." Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 645), followed by Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 633), understands the term with the adverb kvacit to mean that Rāma halts from place to place. He translates, "S'arrêtant d'espace en espace," and Shastri renders, "halting from time to time." This seems to be an improbable reading of the phrase.

"spurning all comforts on the road" niḥsukhaḥ pathi: Literally, "without pleasures or comforts on the path." Ck, Cg, and Ct gloss, "spurning such comforts as sandals, etc., [he was] prepared to endure the pain of stones and thorns (niḥsukhaḥ pathi pādukādisukham upekṣya śarkarākaṇṭhakabādhaṃ soḍhum udyuktaḥ—so Cg; Ck and Ct similarly)." Cr glosses, "constantly devoid of the need for any ordinary pleasures (niḥsukho nityaṃ prākṛtasukhāpekṣārahitaḥ)." Cs understands, "devoid of sandals, etc., which are the means to that [comfort] (niḥsukhaḥ tatsādhanapādukādirahitaḥ)." Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 645) badly misreads the phrase, evidently taking the nominative adjective in apposition to the locative pathi; he thus renders, "dans le rude sentier." In this he has, unfortunately, been followed by Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 633), who translates, "along the rough path."

"from his house" tasmād gṛhāt: Literally, "from that house." In keeping with his overall interpretation, Cr glosses, "from that manifest house (tasmāt prakaṭībhūtād gṛhāt)." His reference, of course, is to Rāma's prakaṭa, or manifest earthly abode Ayodhyā, as contrasted with his aprakaṭita, or invisible heavenly abode Sāketa. See notes to 7.86.5.

"blazing like the fierce-rayed sun" dīpyamāno yathāṃśumān: Literally, "blazing like the one possessed of rays." The matup suffix lends the kenning aṃśumān, "the one possessed of rays," the sense of abundance or intensity (Mahābhāṣya on Pā 5.2.94). Cr glosses, "the sun (sūrya)." B1,T1,2,G3,M3, and KK and VSP read instead the synonymous dīpyamāna ivāṃśumān.

6–7. "On Rāma's left side was Padmā, that is, Śrī, in deep concentration." rāmasya pārśve savye tu padmā śrīḥ susamāhitā: D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead rāmasya dakṣiṇe pārśve padmā śrīḥ samupāśritā, lending the line the sense "Close beside Rāma, on his right side, was Padmā, that is, Śrī." The commentators take the word padmā, which we understand in its sense as an epithet of Śrī, as an adjective. Ct understands, "holding a lotus in her hand (padmahastā)," while Ck glosses, "having the lotus as her mark or insignia (padmāṅkā)." Ct further identifies Śrī by her other name, Lakṣmī (śrīr lakṣmīḥ). Cm seems to combine these two readings, glossing, "having the padma for her mark or insignia. The meaning is 'holding a lotus in her hand.' (padmacihnā padmahastety arthaḥ.)" Cs understands padmā to be synonymous with the name Ramā and takes the name Śrī in the sense of "in the form of prosperity or success." (śrīḥ saṃpadrūpiṇī. padmā ramā.) Cr takes a different tack and understands padmā to be the name of Bharata's wife and Śrī to be the wife of Lakṣmaṇa, lord of the milk ocean (padmā bharatasya strī. śrīḥ kṣīrābdhīśalakṣmaṇasya strī ca). In the Bālakāṇḍa (1.72.18–19) the names of the wives of Bharata and Lakṣmaṇa are given as Māṇḍavī and Ūrmilā, respectively. Presumably Cr understands that the names given here are meant to be the heavenly names of the wives. Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead rāmasya dakṣiṇe pārśve sapadmā śrīr upāśritā, lending the line the sense "Close beside Rāma, on his right side, was Śrī, with a lotus." Cg understands, "with a lotus, that is, holding a lotus in her hand (sapadmā padmahastā)."

"On his right was large-eyed Hrī" dakṣiṇe hrīr viśālākṣī: Ck notes that the word hrīḥ here refers to the earth goddess (hrīśabdā bhūḥ). Cm understands similarly (hrīr bhūḥ). D6,7,10,11,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead savye 'pi ca mahī devī, "And on the left was the goddess Earth." Ct notes that in the veda the earth goddess Mahī and Hrī are one and the same. He then quotes Taittirīyāraṇyaka 3.13.2, "Hrī and Lakṣmī are your [i.e., Viṣṇu's] wives" (hrīś ca te lakṣmīś ca patnyāv iti śruteḥ. śrutau hrīr mahī). Ck and Cm also quote this passage in support of their interpretation that the word hrīḥ here refers to the earth goddess. Cr, in keeping with his interpretation of the previous two names, understands mahī devī to be the wife of Śatrughna, who is bhūmanārāyaṇa, or the earthly Nārāyaṇa (mahī devī bhūmanārāyaṇaśatrughnastrī). KK and VSP read instead savye tu hrīr mahādevī, "And on the left was the great goddess Hrī."

"Vyavasāya" vyavasāyas: Literally, "resolve or determination." The word vyavasāya here refers to the personification of Rāma's powerful will or resolution. Ck and Ct gloss, "Vyavasāya is the power of resolution, that is to say, the power of destruction (vyavasāyo vyavasāyaśaktiḥ saṃhāraśaktiḥ)." Cr understands simply, "Rāma's power or energy, which was close in front of him (vyavasāyo rāmasya śaktis tv agrataḥ samupāśritaḥ)."

"his well-strung bow" dhanur āyatavigrahaḥ: Literally, "a bow having a stretched or strung body or a bow having a large body." The word āyata can mean both "long or large" or, specifically in the case of a bow, "stretched or strung." D5,6,10,G1, and Gorresio, KK, and VSP read instead dhanur āyatam uttamam, "a bow that is excellent and strung or large." D7,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead dhanur āyattam uttamam, "a bow that is excellent and ready." All translators consulted, except Shastri and Raghunathan, render as if they read āyata and understand it as "long or large or well-strung." Both Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 634) and Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 624) appear to ignore the term entirely.

"All of these, taking on human form, respectfully followed Kākutstha." anuvrajanti kākutsthaṃ sarve puruṣavigrahāḥ: Literally, "All, possessing the bodies of men, respectfully followed Kākutstha." The choice of the verbal root anu + √vraj is significant. It specifically refers to following a revered person on his departure, normally up until the first body of water. It also, like anu + √gam, refers to following a deceased person either to the cremation ground or on to the next world. See 2.35.24–38 and 5.1.43,48 and notes. See Sutherland 1994. D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead tathāyudhāś ca [tathāyudhāṇi—so KK and VSP] te sarve yayuḥ puruṣavigrahāḥ, "And also all his weapons, in human form, went [along]." According to Ck, Ct, and Cs, the mention of the weapons demonstrates the service to [Rāma] of raudraśakti, "the fierce or martial energy (raudra-[ugra- —so Cs]śaktisevā darśitā—so Ck and Ct; Cs similarly). Ck elaborates in keeping with his unique theology in which Rāma is really Brahmā. Compare 7.98.14 and notes.

8–9. "The vedas" vedāḥ: Ck believes that the reference to the vedas shows the service of the sāṃrājapaitāmahaśakti, "the energy of the universal ruler Pitāmaha" [i.e., Brahmā] (atha sāṃrājapaitāmahaśaktisevāpradarśanam). Ct introduces verse 8 by noting that the verse demonstrates the service [to Rāma] of the energy of Hiraṇyagarbha (atha hiraṇyagarbhaśaktisevāṃ darśayati).

"the Sāvitrīmantra" sāvitrī: Literally, "that which pertains to Savitṛ." This is an alternative name for ṚV 3.62.10, more commonly known as the Gāyatrīmantra. The name sāvitrī derives from the fact that the verse and the hymn in which it is found are dedicated to the god Savitṛ. See also Kane 1974, vol. 2, pt. 1, pp. 300–304. D2,9–11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the more common name gāyatrī, i.e., the Gāyatrīmantra. Ck notes that what is taught here is the constant service of the innate and eternal energy of universal lordship [to Rāma] (atha svārājasahajanijaśaktyanusevanopadeśaḥ). Ck continues, stating that the reference is to the goddess Gāyatrī, having three [metrical] feet (tripadā), who is the great, sportive lady of the sixfold nyāsa (mahāṣoḍhā), and is the principal queen of Lord Hiraṇyagarbha, that is, of Rāma, who is connate with Brahmā (bhagavato hiraṇyagarbhasya rāmasya brahmasahajasya pradhānamahīṣī devī tripadā mahāṣoḍhā mahāvilāsavatīty arthaḥ). See Introduction, "Gāyatrīmantra," pp. 187–98, and notes to 7.1.1 for the tradition that the Rāmāyaṇa itself is an expansion of the Gāyatrīmantra.

"protector of all" sarvarakṣiṇī: Ck and Ct understand that the mantra is the protectress of the entire world and is authorized for the sacrificial performance of all vedic sacrifices that are grounded in it [i.e., the gāyatrī] (sarvavedatanmūlayajñayajñādhikṛtāśeṣajagadrakṣikā—so Ct; Ck similarly).

"the syllable oṃ, the sacred utterance vaṣaṭ" oṃkāro 'tha vaṣaṭkāraḥ: Ck and Ct take the reference to the syllable oṃ to refer to the practice of universal gnosis (anena sarvajñānayogo darśitaḥ). Ct further notes that the syllable oṃ must be understood as the root of the Gāyatrīmantra (tasyā api mūlam oṃkāro 'py anugataḥ). Ck appears to understand similarly. Ck, Ct, and Cs observe that the utterance vaṣaṭ, which accompanies the pouring of the oblation into the āhavanīya fire, is a reference to the practice of sacrifice or karmayoga (vaṣaṭkāraḥ karmayogaḥ—so Ct; Ck and Cs similarly). Thus these commentators reference the well-known distinction whereby the vedas are divided into two large sections: those texts dealing with ritual, that is, the saṃhitās and brāhmaṇas, referred to as the karmakāṇḍa, and the more metaphysical texts dealing with realization of the absolute, that is the upaniṣads or jñānakāṇḍa. These commentators use the term yoga here in the sense in which it is used in the Bhagavadgītā, that is to say, as a mode of praxis. On the sacred syllables oṃ and vaṣaṭ, see 6.105.17 and notes.

"deeply devoted to Rāma Kākutstha, followed him, who had reached the gateway to heaven" . . . rāmam anuvratāḥ [8] // . . . / anvagacchanta kākutsthaṃ svargadvāram upāgatam [9] //: Literally, "devoted to Rāma . . . they followed Kākutstha, who had approached the gateway to heaven." D7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read anvagacchan mahātmānaṃ svargadvāram apāvṛtam for anvagacchan mahātmānaṃ svargadvāram upāgatam, "they followed Kākutstha, who had approached the gateway to heaven," lending the line the sense: "They followed that great one to the gate of heaven, which was open." Ct explains: "The door of heaven, which was open, that is to say, the door to the highest heaven, that is, the Brahmaloka, which door was open, that is to say, not closed. What we are to understand is their attainment of the Brahmaloka itself on the part of all creatures who had accompanied Rāma, who is the means of going to the world of Upendra [Viṣṇu]. Therefore, as has been mentioned numerous times before, 'Having ruled the kingdom, Rāma will go to the Brahmaloka [= 1.1.76].' This is because of the Brahmaloka's being the world of Rāma's permanent abode. (svargadvāram apāvṛtaṃ parasvargasya brahmalokasya dvāram apāvṛtam anāvṛtam. rāmeṇa sahopendralokagamanadvārā rāmeṇa sahāgatānāṃ sarvajantūnāṃ brahmalokasyaiva prāpter iti bodhyam. ata eva bahuśaḥ prāguktaṃ rāmo rājyam upāsitvā brahmalokaṃ gamiṣyatīti rāmasthitilokasyaiva brahmalokatvāc ca.)" Ck similarly cites the various references throughout the poem according to which Rāma will ultimately ascend to the Brahmaloka. He notes that at the beginning of the poem it is stated: "Having ruled the kingdom for eleven thousand years, Rāma will go to the Brahmaloka [= 1.1.76]." He further notes that "in the middle of the work, at the time when Sumantra informs Lakṣmaṇa of the secret instructions of Durvāsas concerning the future events, it is also stated that Rāma will attain the Brahmaloka after eleven thousand years [7.50.13]." Ck continues: "This is to be seen elsewhere [i.e., in other texts]. Therefore, here, too, at the poem's end, even children without any doubt can determine that Rāma, that is to say, Brahmā, attains the Brahmaloka and thus certainly understand the intended meaning of the term 'heaven.' (sarvatrātra svargaśabdena paranākaparasvargādiprasiddho brahmaloka eveti draṣṭavyam. api copakrame daśavarṣasahasrāṇi daśavarṣaśatāni ca / rāmo rājyam upāsitvā brahmalokaṃ gamiṣyatīti [= 1.1.76] tathā madhye sumantreṇa lakṣmaṇāya durvāsopadiṣṭabhaviṣyadrahasyabodhanasamaye 'pi brahmalokaṃ gamiṣyatīti [= 7.50.13]. tathānyatrāpi draṣṭavyāny ata upasaṃhāre 'pi nirvicikitsaṃ bālakā api brahmaṇo rāmasya brahmalokaprāptiṃ niścitya svargaśabdam uktārthaṃ dṛḍhaṃ pratiyantu.)" Compare 6.116.82; 6.116.90; and notes. Cr understands the phrase "the gate of heaven, which was open" to mean "the means of access to Sāketa, which was free from the veil of māyā, 'illusion.'" (apāvṛtaṃ māyāvāraṇarahitaṃ svargadvāraṃ sāketaprāptisādhakam.) Cs takes the term svargadvāram to refer to those heavenly worlds extending from Sāṃtānika [Sāntānika] to Vaikuṇṭha and believes that the various individuals in Rāma's entourage will go to the various worlds as is appropriate in each case. (svargadvāraṃ sāṃtānikādivaikuṇṭhaparyantam. tattadyogyatām anusṛtya gatiḥ.) See 7.100.16,17 and notes. See also 6.107.4–6 and notes. On the verb anu + √gam, see 7.98.14 and notes; compare notes to verses 6–7 above.

10. "the women of the inner apartments" antaḥpuracarāḥ striyaḥ: Only Cs seems to be concerned at the inappropriate gender of the term antaḥpuracarāḥ, since, as he notes, -cara belongs to the pacādi class of verbal roots and thus should properly form its feminine in -ī, yielding antaḥpuracaryaḥ. He resolves this concern by proposing two alternatives. The first, and the one evidently adopted silently by the other commentators, is that there has been an irregular substitution of a feminine ending -ā. Alternatively, he takes the term as a masculine plural referring to the men of the inner apartments, that is to say, the trusted elders. (striyo 'ntaḥpuracarā antaḥpuracaryaḥ. pacādir iyam. tenākārāntatā. antaḥpuracarāḥ puruṣā viśvastā vṛddhā vā.)

"followed" anuyānti sma: Ñ,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead anugacchanti hi, "indeed they follow[ed]." See notes to 7.98.14.

11. "accompanied by Śatrughna" śatrughnasahitaḥ: Oddly, Dutt (1894, p. 1929) understands that it is Lakṣmaṇa rather than Śatrughna who accompanies Bharata. Lakṣmaṇa has, of course, already departed from this world (see 7.96.15–18).

"accompanied by the women of his inner apartments, followed" sāntaḥpuraḥ . . . yayau: Literally, "together with the inner apartments, he went." Ct understands the term sāntaḥpuraḥ to refer to the women of the inner apartments (antaḥpuraḥstrīsahitaḥ)." Although at 7.98.11 Śatrughna was said to have returned to Ayodhyā in a single chariot, with no mention of anyone accompanying him, we should probably understand that, as in the case of Rāma and Bharata, the inhabitants of his antaḥpura would have accompanied him. Cr, on the other hand, understands the adjective to indicate that the entire contents of the inner apartments come along with the prince. He glosses, "together with all the contents of the inner apartments (antaḥpuraḥsāmagrīsahitaḥ)." See 7.100.7 and notes, where the commentators take up the issue of how many of Rāma's brothers are to accompany him, and by whom they are accompanied, as he returns to his inherent form.

12. "'Then . . . the great brahmans, in deep concentration and accompanied by the agnihotra fire" tato viprā mahātmānaḥ sāgnihotrāḥ samāhitāḥ: D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead te ca sarve mahātmānaḥ sāgnihotrāḥ samāgatāḥ, lending the line the sense "And all those great ones, accompanied by the agnihotra fire, assembled."

"having vowed their dedication to Rāma Rāghava and thus being utterly devoted to him" rāmavratam upāgamya rāghavaṃ samanuvratāḥ: Literally, "having entered into a vow to Rāma, they entirely devoted to Rāghava." D6,7, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead rāmaṃ gatim upāgamya sāgnihotram anuvratāḥ, lending the line the sense "having approached Rāma, who was accompanied by the agnihotra fire, as their refuge, those deeply devoted ones." D11 and KK and VSP read rāmaṃ gatim upāgamya sāgnihotram anuvrataḥ, which construes with 11ab, lending the line the sense "[Bharata], deeply devoted, having approached Rāma, who was accompanied by the agnihotra fire, as his refuge." Ct takes the term gatim here to mean "who grants refuge to the entire world (sarvalokagatidam)." Cr similarly glosses, "the refuge of all (sarvāśrayam)." Cs understands, "the foremost goal (mukhyaprāpyam)."

"followed" anvagacchan: D6,7,10,11,G1, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the synonymous anujagmuḥ, "they followed." See notes to 7.98.14.

13. "together with their sons, kinsmen . . . joyously followed" saputrāḥ sahabāndhavāḥ / . . . anvagacchan prahṛṣṭavat //: Ñ2,V2,B1,D6,7,10,11,G1, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read saputrapaśubāndhavāḥ, "along with their sons, cattle, and kinsmen," for saputrāḥ sahabāndhavāḥ, "together with their sons, kinsmen . . ." We follow Cr, who understands the term prahṛṣṭavat in its usual adverbial sense of "joyously" (prahṛṣṭavad dharṣaviśiṣṭaṃ yathā bhavati tathā). Ck, Ct, and Cs attempt to explain this seemingly innocuous adverbial usage. Ck appears to read the form adjectivally as "possessing excitement or joy." He explains: "The following of him [Rāma] up until the sight of the Lord's release of his body was joyful, that is to say, there was the joy that arose from the acquisition of that condition of being present at the time of the release of the body. Their sons, however, did not obtain that [i.e., the opportunity to joyfully follow Rāma]. (asyānugamanaṃ bhagavaddehavisarjanadarśanaparyantaṃ prahṛṣṭavat prahṛṣṭaḥ san dehavisarjanasamaye samīpe 'vasthānalābhajaḥ praharṣaḥ putrais tu tan na labdham.)" This reading is based on our handwritten transcript of Ck (pp. 298–99), which was used in the preparation of the critical edition. This passage is reproduced in the critical edition (p. 523); however, the negative particle na is absent, in which case the sons referred to by Ck would have to be those mentioned in the verse. But this would be somewhat redundant. It would appear that the printed passage has been transcribed from, or in consultation with, the very similar commentary of Ct as is it printed in GPP (7.109.13) and copied by NSP (7.109.13), which both read putrais tu tallabdham, "but this [joyous following] was obtained by the sons." Cs offers two alternative explanations of the form prahṛṣṭavat. In the first, he takes the adverbial suffix vati, "like," as in no way changing the meaning of the adjective prahṛṣṭa, "joyous," and thus glosses the nominative plural prahṛṣṭāḥ, "joyous," to describe the various individuals mentioned as following Rāma in this verse. Cs then takes sharp issue with Ct, whom he quotes with the negative particle. Cs says, "Nāgojibhaṭṭa [Ct] comments: 'There was happiness produced by the acquisition of proximity to the abandonment of [Rāma's] body [by those followers]. Since, however, their sons did not obtain that, [those followers were only] as if happy.' However, it is improper to state that there is any diminution whatsoever of joy on account of concern for their sons on the part of those who were proceeding with perfectly clear hearts and the great joy associated with the severance of all attachments. Therefore it [what Nāgojibhaṭṭa says] is improper." Alternatively, Cs remarks, "One might use the expression 'as if happy' because of the fact that even today there is no such thing as the appearance of perfect happiness." (prahṛṣṭavat prahṛṣṭāḥ. svārthe vatiḥ. yat tu nāgojibhaṭṭena dehavisarjane samīpāvasthānalābhajaḥ praharṣaḥ. putrais tu tan na labdham iti prahṛṣṭavad iti vyākhyātam. sarvasaṃgavibhaṅgapūrvakaṃ mahātoṣeṇa gacchatāṃ svacchahṛdayānāṃ potacintayā kiṃcitsaṃkucitatā mudi na vaktum uciteti tan nocitam. idānīm evāśeṣatoṣāvirbhāvābhāvād vā prahṛṣṭavad ity uktiḥ.) Cg understands prahṛṣṭavat as does Ct and Ck. Compare 7.100.21 and notes, where the commentators take up this form once again.

"all" sarve: Cs understands the reference to be to all those other than those mentioned in the preceding line (sarve tadanye).

14. "the ministers" prakṛtayaḥ: We take the term here in its technical sense of "the officers or ministers of state" as opposed to its more general usage in the sense of "the people or subjects of a king" since it is juxtaposed in this verse with the term -jana, "the people." Compare the usage in 7.97.4,12.

"deeply moved by Rāma's virtues, followed him as he proceeded" anujagmuḥ pragacchantaṃ rāghavaṃ guṇarañjitāḥ: Literally, "They, affected by virtues, followed Rāghava as he was proceeding." Cr glosses guṇarañjitāḥ, "moved by virtues," as "deeply passionate with regard to Rāma (rāme 'nuraktāḥ)," while Cs glosses, "deeply moved by his virtues (tadguṇarañjitāḥ)." Ś1,3,Ñ2,V2,B2,D2–12,T3,4,G1,M4, and Lahore, Gorresio (anugacchanti gacchantam by transposition), GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read gacchantam anugacchanti, "They follow [him], who was going," for anujagmuḥ pragacchantam, "they followed [him], who was proceeding." KK and VSP read instead the similar gacchantam anvagacchaṃs tam, "They followed him, who was going."

Following verse 14, Ñ2,V3,B (B2 line 2 only),D1–7,9–11,T,G,M1–5,7–10, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert, while V2 inserts line 1 after verse 12 (first time) and then repeats here, and inserts line 2 after verse 13, and M6 substitutes line 1 for 14ab, a passage of two lines [1482*]: "Then all those followers of Rāghava, along with the men and women, and along with birds, cattle, and kinsmen,[1] were delighted and freed from sin (tataḥ sastrīpumāṃsas te sapakṣipaśubāndhavāḥ / rāghavasyānugāḥ sarve hṛṣṭā vigatakalmaṣāḥ //)."

[1] "along with birds, cattle, and kinsmen" sapakṣipaśubāndhavāḥ: D2,9,T1,2,G3,M3,6, and KK and VSP read instead sapakṣipaśuvāhanāḥ, "together with birds, cattle, and mounts."

15. "That splendid host of monkeys—all of them devoted to Rāma, all of them bathed, joyful, happy, and in fine fettle—was chattering in a frenzy of delight." snātaṃ pramuditaṃ sarvaṃ hṛṣṭapuṣṭam anuttamam / dṛptaṃ kilikilāśabdaiḥ sarvaṃ rāmam anuvratam //: Literally, "Bathed, joyful, delighted, and well fed, the entire [group], unsurpassed, excited with the sounds of kilikilā, was all devoted to Rāma." The verse is obviously elliptical and poorly constructed. The identity of the subject is not specified but must be understood to be the monkeys from the mention of their characteristic vocalization of kilikilā (v.l. kilakilā), which earlier in the epic is shown to be a sign of excitement or happiness among the monkeys. See, for example, 5.55.22 and notes and 5.62.34; 75*, note 10, following notes to 6.4.52; and notes to 6.13.10. D10,11,T4, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead snātāḥ pramuditāḥ sarve hṛṣṭapuṣṭāś ca vānarāḥ, for pādas ab, snātaṃ pramuditaṃ sarvaṃ hṛṣṭapuṣṭam anuttamam, "bathed, joyful, delighted and well fed, the entire unsurpassed [group]." This variant explicitly mentions the monkeys, lending the line the sense "All the monkeys were bathed, joyful, delighted, and well fed." V3,D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read dṛḍham, "strongly or intensely," for dṛptam, "excited." Ck and Ct gloss, "possessing a firm resolve to follow (dṛḍhānugamananiścayam)." Ś,V3,B1,2,4,D,T2,M3,7, and Lahore, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read the slight variant kilakilāśabdaiḥ, "with the sound of kilakilā," for kilikilāśabdaiḥ, "with the sound kilikilā." Ck, Cg, Ct, and Cr all attempt to correct the defective syntax of pādas cd, noting that one must add the words "characterized by" and "the monkey army" to yield the sense "The entire monkey host was characterized by the sounds of kilakilā"

(kilakilāśabdair upalakṣitaṃ sarvaṃ vānarabalam iti śeṣaḥ—so Ct; Ck, Cg, and Cr similarly).

16. "was" [a]bhūt: D6,7,10,11,T3,G1,2,M10, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the particle vā, "or."

"despondent" dīnaḥ: Ct understands, "of wretched or miserable appearance (dīnākṛtiḥ)." Cs understands similarly, "despondent in appearance (dīna ākārataḥ)."

"ashamed" vrīḍitaḥ: Ck and Cg believe that we should add the words "because of prior deeds, such as offenses against the Lord, etc. (bhagavadaparādhādinā pūrvakṛteneti śeṣaḥ)." Ct argues that the meaning is that the people follow Rāma not out of embarrassment at the thought "How can I remain once Rāma is gone?" but rather out of great happiness (gate rāme katham ahaṃ tiṣṭhāmīti lajjāvaśān na rāmānugamanaṃ kiṃtu saṃtoṣeṇaivety arthaḥ). Cs, somewhat similarly, explains: "They were devoid of the shame that would arise from thinking: 'In reality, I would rather stay behind, but how can I stay, once Rāma has departed?' Therefore, their departure was fully intentional. By this [we understand that each and every] one fully intended [to depart]. (vastutas tu mama vastum icchā. nirgate rāme katham avasthānam iti lajjāvarjitaḥ. manaḥpūrvakam eva gamanam anenābhipraiti.)"

"Instead, all were . . . joyous" pramuditaṃ sarvam: Literally, "all [was] joyous."

D10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read samuditam, "assembled or united," for pramuditam, "joyous." Ct and Cs both gloss, "assembled (militam)," while Cr understands, "joined together (sahitam)."

"It was a great wonder." babhūva paramādbhutam: Ct understands, "The meaning is 'It was a cause of extreme wonder in that the people were filled with joy of that sort for their departure for the next world (paralokagamanāyaivaṃvidhaharṣayuktam ity atyāścaryakaram abhūd ity arthaḥ)."

17. "The people . . . they became just as devoted as the others" janaḥ / . . . saha sarvair anuvrataḥ: Literally, "[the people were] devoted together with all." D6,7,10,11,T3,G1, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead svargāyānugato janaḥ (KK, VSP—mudā), lending the line the sense "The people followed [him] toward heaven (KK, VSP—'[The people] followed [him] toward heaven with delight.')" Cs has a very ingenious reading of the verse in an attempt to avoid the redundancy of the variant reading, with its two instances of the term janaḥ, "people." He separates the people who are resolved to follow Rāma into two groups: those who actually witness his departure and accompany him and those who are not present at Rāma's departure at the time that they make this resolution. The others, who are not present at the time of the formation of the resolution, he describes, taking advantage of the sandhi, as ajanaḥ, "those who lack a [re]birth." He explains: "Those people of the countryside who had come, they alone, having seeing Rāma himself, followed. The particle eva here suggests that they did not even take a [last] look at the faces of their sons who had remained at home. Rather, they followed [Rāma] to heaven itself. But does this mean, then, that those who had assembled, but were not present on the road at the time of forming the resolution, were not to partake in liberation? The text answers this question with the expression 'those who had no rebirth (ajanaḥ).' The meaning is that those people did not obtain rebirth through [Rāma's] divine power. Thus there is no question of the repetition of the word 'people [janaḥ].' (yo jānapado janaḥ prāptaḥ so 'pi niryāntaṃ rāmaṃ dṛṣṭvaivānugataḥ. svagṛhagatasutādimukhāvilokanādikaṃ sūcayaty evakāreṇa. svargāyevānugataḥ. saṃkalpakāle 'sattvān madhyemārgam āgatānāṃ na muktibhāktvaṃ kim ity ata āha—ajana iti. so 'pi janaḥ punarjanma tanmahimato nāpnod iti bhāvaḥ. ato na janapunarvacanaśaṅkā.)" KK and VSP read mudā, "with joy," for janaḥ, "people," which would lend the line the sense "followed [him] to heaven with joy."

"had come . . . once they had come" saṃprāptaḥ so 'pi: Literally, "even the [people] arrived." We read the participle saṃprāptaḥ, "came or arrived," twice for the sake of clarity. D6,7,10,11,T3,G1,M2, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead yaḥ prāptaḥ so 'pi, "who had arrived, the [people]."

"merely to witness the king's departure" draṣṭukāmo 'tha niryāṇaṃ rājñaḥ: Literally, "now [the people] desiring to see the departure of the king." V2,D7,10,11,T3,G1, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read niryāntaṃ rāmam for niryāṇaṃ rājñaḥ, "departure of the king," lending the phrase the sense "the people desirous to see Rāma, who was departing."

18. "as well as the people who dwelt in the city" janāś ca puravāsinaḥ: It is possible also to take the terms separately, understanding, "the people [i.e., the people of the countryside mentioned in verse 17], as well as the inhabitants of the city." Of the translators consulted, only Benoît (1999, p. 1431) reads in this way, rendering, "les villageois et les citadins."

"followed behind" agacchan . . . pṛṣṭhataḥ: Literally, "They went behind." Ś,V3,B2, D2,3,6,7,9–12,T2–4,M3,7, and Lahore, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read āgacchan, "they came," for agacchan, "they went."

Following verse 18, Ś1 (line 1 only in margin),Ñ2,V,B,D1–7,9–11,S (M6 after 18ab) insert a passage of six lines [1485*]: "Even the invisible beings in the city[1] followed Rāghava, who had set out for heaven.[2][1–2] And[3] those beings,[4] whether they could move or not,[5] who saw Kākutstha also followed along in the departure for heaven.[3–4] No living thing,[6] however minute,[7] was to be seen in Ayodhyā, for even[8] the animals were all devoted to Rāma.[5–6]"

[1] "Even the invisible beings in the city" yāni bhūtāni nagare antardhānagatāny api: D6,7,10,11,T3,4,G1, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the more or less synonymous yāni bhūtāni nagare 'py antardhānagatāni ca. Ck understands the reference to be to invisible beings such as Bhadrakālī, etc. (bhadrakālīpramukhādīnīti yāvat.) Bhadrakālī is one of the female village divinities or śaktis. Compare notes to 6.26.25, where Cs classes Bhadrakālī among village divinities. See S. Goldman 2012. These figures are sometimes beneficent and sometimes maleficent. Ct amplifies Ck's reference, adding, "malign beings, spirits of the departed, piśācas, etc., and Bhadrakāli, etc. (bhūtapretapiśācādīni bhadrakālyādīni ca)."

[2] "for heaven" svargāya: Ck and Cg gloss, "for the departure to Brahmaloka (brahmalokagamanāya)."

[3] "And . . . who saw" yāny apaśyaṃś ca: Literally, "And they saw." Ñ2,V,B,D1–7,9–11,T,G1,3,M6, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP, read instead yāni paśyanti, "those who see."

[4] "those beings . . . also followed along in the departure for heaven" sattvāni svargagamane anujagmur hi tāny api: D10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead sarvāṇi rāmagamane anujagmur hi tāny api, lending the line the sense "All of them, indeed, followed along in Rāma's departure." KK 1905 and VSP read instead the similar sarvāṇi rāmagamane hy anujagmur hi tāny api, inserting a second hi, "indeed," after rāmagamane to avoid hiatus. KK 1913, in an apparent attempt to avoid the redundancy of the two occurrences of the word hi, reads instead hitāny api, lending the line the sense "All of them, indeed, those benign [hitāni] ones, followed along in Rāma's departure."

[5] "whether they could move or not" sthāvarāṇi carāṇi ca: Literally, "fixed and moving [things]." Ct, alone among the commentators, attempts to explain how immobile objects are able to follow Rāma. He says, "The following on the part of immobile objects is made possible through the arising [in them] at that moment of the capacity of consciousness and action through the compassionate gaze of Lord Rāma (sthāvarāṇām anugamanaṃ bhagavato rāmasya sadayāvalokanena tadānīṃ jñānakriyāśaktyudbhavād upapadyate)." Note, too, 7.100.23, where the critical text also notes, in the same words, sthāvarāṇi carāṇi ca, that both fixed and moving beings follow Rāma. See also notes to 7.40.13 and 7.88.18–19.

[6] "living thing" ucchvasat: Literally, "breathing [thing]." Ck and Cg gloss, "with breath [i.e., possessing breath], that is the meaning (saprāṇam ity arthaḥ—so Cg; Ck prānam[sic] ity arthaḥ)." Ct glosses, "The meaning is 'possessing nothing more than breath' (prāṇamātram ity arthaḥ)." Cr offers, "taking breath (śvāsaṃ gṛhṇat)."

[7] "however minute" susūkṣmam api: Ck, Cg, and Ct add the phrase "that was not following (ananuyātam)." The idea is that no creature, however small, was to be seen that was not following.

[8] "for even" cāpi: Literally, "moreover." D6,7,10,11,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead caiva, "and indeed."

Sarga 100

Both Ck and Ct offer brief synopses of the action of this sarga. Ck notes that for the purpose of Rāma's transition to his own proper Brahmaloka, which consists entirely of pure consciousness, through the agency of grandfather Brahmā, who consists of pure action, and with the accompaniment of the transition away from the possession of the form of Virāṭ Viṣṇu, which consists of food [i.e., his earthly form], there is an elevation [prāpanam, lit., "attainment"], with the acquiescence of that Grandfather of all the worlds, of Rāma's own devotees to a Brahmaloka that is somewhat lower than the highest Brahmaloka that Rāma himself is to attain. (atha rāmasya bhūmacinmayasvakabrahmalokopasaṃkramāya bhūmakriyāmayapitāmahaniyogato 'nnamayavirāḍviṣṇūpagrahasaṃkramapūrvaṃ sarvalokapitāmahānumatyā svaprāpyāt paramād brahmalokād adhastanabrahmalokasya svabhaktānāṃ prāpaṇam.) Ct simplifies this explanation, removing Ck's Brahmaite theological allusions. He explains, "Now Rāma, having attained his own true form, brings about, in accordance with the acquiescence of the Grandfather, the elevation of all creatures in the heavenly world, known as Saṃtānaka [v.l. Sāntānaka], which is equal to the Brahmaloka but somewhat below the actual Brahmaloka (atha rāmeṇa svasvarūpaṃ prāpya paścāt sarvajantūnāṃ pitāmahānumatyā brahmalokād arvācīne brahmalokasame saṃtānakaloke prāpaṇam)."

Note that PadmaP (ĀnSS) 6(Uttarakhaṇḍa).271.79–84 closely parallels, and in some cases is identical with, verses 5–9.

1. "When he had gone a league and a half" adhyardhayojanam gatvā: We understand, with Ck, Cg, Ct, and Cr, the term to mean "a yojana and a half (ardhādhikaṃ yojanam)." All translators consulted, with the exception of Dutt and Gorresio, read the term similarly. Gorresio (1870, p. 308) translates, "un mezzo Yoǵana," while Dutt (1894, p. 1930), renders somewhat similarly, "Having thus gone for more than a half Yoyana." These translators may be correct in light of the fact that the modern city of Ayodhyā, at least, lies directly on the bank of the Sarayū (modern Sarju) River. Additionally, a yojana is defined by various authorities as three to nine miles. By any definition, the distance of a yojana and a half would seem like a long distance from the city. On the measurement of a yojana, see notes to 1.5.7.

"that lay just before him as he looked to the west" paścānmukhāśritām: Literally, "resorting to one facing west." We follow Cv, Ck, Cg, Ct, and Cr, who all understand, "being near with reference to himself, who was facing west (paścānmukhena svenāśritām—so Ck, Cg, and Ct; Cv and Cr similarly.)" Gorresio (1870, p. 308), however, understands that it is the river that is flowing to the west, rendering, "che corre verso occidente." Dutt (1894, p. 1930) similarly understands, translating, "espied Saraju of holy waters flowing towards the west," as does Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 635), who offers, "flowing westwards." The problem here is that the Sarayū River actually flows southeastward. Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 646) and Benoît (1999, p. 1431) understand the compound simply to indicate that the river is in front of Rāma. They render, "en face de lui," but this seems banal. Others interpret as we do.

Following verse 1, Ś,Ñ2,V1,2,B,D2,7,8,10–12,M6, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert a passage of two lines [1487*]: "Following the river all along its bank,[1] he traveled for three days and nights until he spied the Himalayas[2] (tāṃ nādīm anukūlāc ca sarvatrānusaran nṛpaḥ / ahorātrais tribhir gatvā himavantaṃ dadarśa ha //)."

[1] "all along its bank" anukūlāc ca: Ñ2,D7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead ākulāvartām, "with its turbulent eddies." Cr glosses, "turbulent by means of its eddies (āvārtair ākulām)."

[2] "he traveled for three days and nights until he spied the Himalayas" ahorātrais tribhir gatvā himavantaṃ dadarśa ha: Ñ2,D7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead āgataḥ saprajo rāmas taṃ deśaṃ raghunandanaḥ, "Rāma, the delight of the Raghus, together with his subjects, came to a certain [lit., 'that'] place." The line is obviously quite vague with regard to the particular place that Rāma has reached. Ct merely glosses, "a place that leads on to heaven (taṃ deśaṃ svargaprāpakaṃ deśam)." Cr observes that it is the place that leads on to the unmanifest city of Sāketa and names the spot as Gopratāra, "Cattle Crossing" (compare "Oxford"). This is the name of a tīrtha, or holy bathing spot, on the Sarayū River near Ayodhyā, as mentioned at verse 20 below. See, too, MBh 3.82.63,65; RaghuVa 15.101; and GāruḍaP 2.6.62. See verse 20 and note below. Among the translators consulted, only Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 635) incorporates this name into his translation, rendering, "and he went on further to the Gopratarāka Ghata." Shastri inserts a footnote at this point, which reads, "Cattle ford."

2–3. "by . . . great seers" ṛṣibhiḥ . . . mahātmabhiḥ: D10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead bhūṣitaiḥ . . . mahātmabhiḥ, "by . . . ornamented . . . great ones." We agree with Cr, who understands mahātmabhiḥ to refer to the great seers (mahātmabhir maharṣibhiḥ). This reading would lend the line the sense "surrounded by all the ornamented gods and the great ones," or "surrounded by all the gods and ornamented great ones," or even, but less likely, "surrounded by the gods, who were ornamented by the great ones." Given the norms of the traditional literature, we find it unlikely that the austere seers would be ornamented in any material way. Nonetheless, Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 647), followed by Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 635) and Benoît (1999, p. 1432), does understand that it is the seers who are covered with jewels (ornaments—so Benoît). Roussel translates, "(Rishis), couverts de parures." D7 and Cr read instead the masculine singular bhūṣitaḥ, in which case the adjective refers to Brahmā himself, who, in Cr's reading, is ornamented by the great seers (mahātmabhir maharṣibhir bhūṣitaḥ).

"by hundreds of millions of celestial flying chariots" vimānaśatakoṭibhiḥ divyābhiḥ Literally, "with divine hundreds of koṭis of vimānas." A koṭi is ten million, so the number here would actually be in the billions. Vimānas are the typical vehicles from which gods and other celestial beings survey events on earth.

Following verse 3, Ś1,Ñ2,V2,3,B,D1–7,9–11,S, and Lahore and Gorresio insert a passage of one line [1488*]: "Then the sky was illuminated[1] so that it became an unparalleled mass of light (dīpyate sma tadākāśaṃ jyotir bhūtam anuttamam)."

[1] "Then the sky was illuminated" dīpyate sma tadākāśam: Ś1,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead divyatejovṛtaṃ vyoma, lending the line the sense "The sky, suffused with a celestial blazing energy, became an unparalleled mass of light."

One is uncertain as to why 1488* was omitted from the critical text by the editors of the critical edition. Although absent in a few manuscripts (Ś2,Ñ1,V1,D8), the line is represented in all subrecensions.

Following 1488*, Ñ2,V2,3,B,D1–7,9–11,S, and Lahore and Gorresio continue, while V1 inserts line 2 only following verse 3, a passage of two lines [1489*], the first line of which must construe with 1488*: "[the sky was illuminated] by virtue of those heavenly beings of holy deeds, who were self-luminous[1] through their inherent blazing energy.[1] Auspicious breezes blew, fragrant and delightful.[2] (svayaṃprabhaiḥ svatejobhiḥ svargibhiḥ puṇyakarmabhiḥ / puṇyā vātā vavuś caiva gandhavantaḥ sukhapradāḥ //)"

[1] "self-luminous" svayaṃprabhaiḥ: Ck and Ct gloss, "shining by themselves alone, without the need of any other illumination (svayam eva prakāśāntaranairapekṣyeṇa prakāśamānaiḥ)." Cg glosses, "shining by themselves alone, without oil (snehaṃ vinā svayam eva prakāśamānaiḥ)."

4. "scattered by the wind" vāyumuktā: Literally, "released by the wind." D6,7,10, 11,T3,4,G1,M3,5, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead devair muktā, "released by the gods."

"in great abundance" mahaughavat: Literally, "like a great flood." We follow Cr, who reads the compound adverbially to mean "It fell in such a way as to be characterized by a great mass (mahāsamūhaviśiṣṭaṃ yathā bhavati tathā papāta)." Ck, Cg, and Ct all read the compound as if it were an adjective modifying vṛṣṭi, "shower." Thus Ck understands, "being one that had great abundance (mahāsamṛddhā satī)." Ct similarly glosses, "possessing great abundance (mahāsamṛddhimatīty arthaḥ)," while Cg glosses, "having greatly abundant opulence (mahāsamṛddhārthā)."

5. "Then, as the sky was filled with the sound of hundreds of trumpets and crowded with gandharvas and apsarases" tasmiṃs tūryaśatākīrṇe gandharvāpsarasaṃkule: Literally, "In that which was filled or scattered with hundreds of tūryas and crowded with gandharvas and apsarases." The line does not make clear to what the locative pronoun tasmin refers. Ck, Ct, and Cr take it to refer to the moment or time (tasmin kāla ity arthaḥ—so Ck and Ct; tasmin samaye—so Cr). But it seems awkward to us to describe a moment as "filled with gandharvas and apsarases." We agree generally with Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 625), who translates, "Hundreds of fifes rent the air, and the sky teemed with Gandharvas and Apasarases." Other translators either understand the reference to be to the place (Dutt, 1894, p. 1930, and Gita Press 1998, vol. 2, p. 939) or to the sound of musical instruments and the singing of the gandharvas and apsarases (Roussel 1903, vol. 3, p. 647; Shastri 1959, vol. 3, p. 635; and Benoît 1999, p. 1432). Ñ2,D6,7,10, 11,T3,4,G1,M3,5, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read the virtually synonymous tūryaśataiḥ kīrṇe. On the word tūrya, "trumpet," see notes to 6.24.25. Note there that the cross reference should be to 6.116.34 (not 6.116.24).

6. "Then Grandfather Brahmā spoke these words from the sky: 'Come Viṣṇu, bless you. Fortunately you have come, Rāghava.' " tataḥ pitāmaho vāṇīm antarikṣād abhāṣata / āgaccha viṣṇo bhadraṃ te diṣṭyā prāpto 'si rāghava //: D10–12, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read tv antarikṣāt, "but from the sky," for antarikṣāt, "from the sky." Several of the commentators flesh out the verse with explanations of the theology involved here. Ck explains, "O Viṣṇu! O you who took on a [bodily] transformation of Viṣṇu to favor the world! O Brahmā! O Rāghava! Fortunately you have come this day, that is to say, you have come at the time for the release from the embodiment consisting of the calamities and sufferings of humans, which [bodily] transformation you took through your celestial yoga. Blessings be to you, that is, let there be auspiciousness. Please come this very day to the Brahmaloka. (he viṣṇo lokānugrahāya viṣṇūpagrahopagṛhīta brahman rāghava diṣṭyādya prāpto 'si. divyayogena martyānarthaduḥkhamayopagrahavisarjanakālaṃ prāpto 'si. te bhadram astu kalyāṇam astv adyāgaccha brahmalokam.)" Ct, similarly, glosses, "O Viṣṇu! O Brahmā! O Rāghava! Fortunately you have come, you who took on the body of Viṣṇu to favor the world. That is to say, you have come at the time for the release of that human body, which was taken on through the power of illusion (māyā) and suitable for an acting out that consists of suffering. Blessing be to you, that is, let there be auspiciousness. Please come this very day. The meaning is '[Please come] to the world from whence you came to the world of men.' (he viṣṇo lokānugrahāya gṛhītaviṣṇuśarīra brahman rāghava diṣṭyā prāpto 'si. māyāgṛhītaduḥkhamayanaṭanayogyamanuṣyaśarīravisarjanakālaṃ prāpto 'si. te bhadram astu kalyāṇam astu. adyāgaccha. yato lokān manuṣyalokaṃ gatas taṃ lokam ity arthaḥ.)"

Cr, anticipating the next verse, understands, "O Viṣṇu! O Pervader of pervaders. Please come. Fortunately, that is to say, through the power of our good fortune, you have come, together with your brothers; therefore, please enter your own body, that is to say, your own home, which is as dear to you as your body. (he viṣṇo! vyāpakavyāpaka! āgaccha diṣṭyāsmadbhāgyavaśena bhrātṛbhiḥ saha saṃprāpto 'sy ataḥ svakām ātmīyāṃ tanuṃ tanuvat priyaṃ dhāmety arthaḥ. praviśasva praviśa.)"

Cs substantiates the passage with a quotation from the Padmapurāṇa. He says, "Fortunately you have come to the earth, that is, you are within the range of our sight. 'Having proceeded for a yojana and a half, facing west, he stood, and then, together with his followers, entered the Sarayū River with its holy waters. Brahmā then addressed Rāghava, who had entered the Sarayū's waters: "Please come, Viṣṇu. Bless you. Take recourse to your highest abode." 'So says the Padmapurāṇa. Or, it could mean 'May auspiciousness be for us from you.' (diṣṭyā bhuvaṃ prāpto 'si no dṛgviṣayaḥ. 'adhyardhayojanaṃ gatvā nadīṃ paścānmukhaḥ sthitaḥ. sarayūṃ puṇyasalilāṃ praviveśa sahānugaḥ. abravīd rāghavaṃ brahmā praviṣṭaṃ sarayūjalam. āgaccha viṣṇo bhadraṃ te paraṃ dhāma samāśrayeti pādmokteḥ. te sakāśād bhadraṃ no 'stv iti vā.)' Compare PadmaP (ĀnSS) 6(Uttarakhaṇḍa).271.78cd–82ab.

7. The verse as it appears in the critical edition is not a very challenging one, although it has certain elements that require and have elicited discussion. As noted below, however, the form in which it appears in a number of manuscripts and the texts of the southern commentators becomes somewhat more fraught with theological complications.

"Please . . . return . . . to" praviśasva: Literally, "you must enter." The commentators in general replace the somewhat unusual ātmanepada form of the verb with the expected parasmaipada, praviśa. Cr explicitly glosses praviśasva with praviśa. Cs further glosses, "return to or inhabit (viśa)."

"O Lord of immense blazing energy" mahātejaḥ: Literally, "O one of immense blazing energy."

"with your godlike brothers" bhrātṛbhiḥ saha devābhaiḥ: Ck, Ct, and Cs attempt to rationalize the use of the plural form bhrātṛbhiḥ in light of the fact that, in the absence of Lakṣmaṇa, who left his earthly body at 7.96.15–18, Rāma has been accompanied by his two surviving brothers, Bharata and Śatrughna, as mentioned at 7.99.11. See 7.99.11 and notes. Ck argues that Rāma's three brothers all act separately in that Lakṣmaṇa has preceded Rāma, Śatrughna alone accompanies him at this point, and Bharata will follow after him. Nonetheless, Ck argues, the reentry of the brothers into their divine forms is referred to generally here, so there is no contradiction. (yady apy adya śatrughna eka eva saha gacchati. tathāpi . . . sa tu purogatasya saha gacchataḥ paścād āgamiṣyataś ca bhrātuḥ sāmānyāt kriyata iti na virodhaḥ.) Ct argues that, according to [Maheśvara-] tīrtha [Cm], by the use of the plural here, Lakṣmaṇa's departure at this point in time and place is also suggested. Ct then quotes Ck on this matter. Ct then notes that all of this has been explained in the previous sarga (7.99.11). Ct continues that Bharata's departure will only take place after he witnesses Rāma's abandonment of his body. He thus refers his readers to the text of 7.99.11 for the information about Bharata's subsequent departure. Ct also notes that some authorities simply see the form [bhrātṛbhiḥ] as a plural of respect. He concludes with an anticipatory comment on his next line (yām icchasi—see below) by noting that Brahmā, referring to the multiplicity of his own forms, urges Rāma [and his brothers] to enter one or another of them. (atra bhrātṛbhir iti bahuvacanena lakṣmaṇasyāpi tadānīṃ tatrāgamanaṃ sūcayatīti tīrthaḥ. katakas tu yady apy śatrughna eka eva saha gacchati. tathāpi purogatasya saha gacchataḥ paścād āgamiṣyataś ca bhrātus tatra praveśaḥ sāmānyenādyatanapraveśa ity ucyata iti na virodha iti vyācakhyau. bharatānugamanaṃ bhagavaddehavisarjanadarśanaparyantam iti ca pūrvasarge sāntaḥpuraś ca bharataḥ śatrughnasahito yayāv iti padye vyākhyāti sma ca. tatra bharatasya paścād gamane mūlam anveṣṭavyam. pūjāyāṃ bahuvacanam ity anye. nanu madīyatanūnām anekatvāt kvacit praviśety ucyate tatrāha yām iti.) In a similar vein, Cs argues that there is no contradiction here because the sense is that, on the basis of verse 7.99.11, there was a meeting of all the brothers, starting with Bharata, at the time of their entrance into the Sarayū River. So by using the plural form "brothers (bhrātṛbhiḥ)" we are to understand that the previously departed Lakṣmaṇa is to be included as well. (bhrātṛbhiḥ prāggatalakṣmaṇena saha sāntaḥpuraś ca bharataḥ śatrughnasahito yayāv iti padyasyāpi sarayūpraveśakāle bharatādimelanam [ity] artha iti na tad visaṃvādaḥ.)

"your own essential Vaiṣṇava form" svakāṃ tanum / vaiṣṇavīm: Literally, "your own Vaiṣṇava body." This phrase, as would be expected, is the one that excites the theological interest of the commentators. Their readings are informed further by the inclusion in their texts of a half verse (yām icchasi mahābāho, etc.) that, according to the apparatus, is a repeat of 9cd. However, given its relevance to the present discussion, we have included it here. The commentators disagree as to the precise meaning of the term tanu. Cv understands, "the abode of Viṣṇu, in his nature as Upendra and who is self-caused." Alternatively, Cv understands, "The abode of Padmanābha, who rests on the primordial ocean and who arises from a cause." (vaiṣṇavīṃ svakāraṇabhūtasyopendrātmakasya viṣṇoḥ sthānaṃ tasyāpi kāraṇabhūtasyārṇavaśāyinaḥ padmanābhasya vā.) Ck has the most elaborate discussion of what he sees as the successive transformations of Rāma and his brothers through various stages and forms to the highest, which is that of Brahman. He supports his notion of transformations with vedic quotes. He says, "You must enter your own form, that is to say, that form that belongs to Brahman and consists of pure knowledge . . . Thus your entrance today into your own inherent form, which consists of the knowledge of Brahman, was permitted at a different time by the Lord, Grandfather [Brahmā] . . . Therefore, the Lord Grandfather [Brahmā] issued his invitation to the effect that you should return to the Brahmaloka. This much is perfectly clear. But because knowledge of the Brahmaloka was not enjoined, there was first an injunction with regard to the upward transformation of the king in the form of the utterance: 'You, O one of blazing energy, must return to your own Vaiṣṇava form.' This is the correct reading [i.e., svayam]. That is the well-known lower Vaiṣṇava form belonging to Virāṭ, that is, the state of being that consists principally of consciousness and action [and] that you entered at the time of the downward transformation through the means of taking on a bodily form of a mortal man for the sake of your mission. In this way, O one of immense blazing energy, you then took on the mission of the incarnation of the one consisting principally of consciousness and light. And, once again, in order to accomplish your upward transformation in the same way as your downward transformation, you must enter that Vaiṣṇava form consisting of Virāṭ, which is made of food and consists largely of vital breaths. And for the purpose of [your further upward] transformation you yourself, possessing your own inherent body, which consists of my body of pure consciousness, must enter [that Vaiṣṇava form] first. As for the others [i.e., your brothers], they will all transform upward, each possessing his proper form according to their different transformations. Later, the Lord will reveal that, according the utterance (7.100.19a): 'From whom they issued forth' etc. In this way, there will be a process of upward transformations to the state of final liberation as set forth in the vedas [as it is stated at TaiU 3.10.5]: 'Having ascended upward to that body consisting of food, and then to the one consisting of the vital breaths, and then to the one consisting of mind.' (svakāṃ brāhmīṃ vidyāmayīṃ tanuṃ praviśa . . . tathāpy adya svabrāhmavidyātanupraveśa eva bhagavatā pitāmahena kālāntarīyo 'numanyate . . . ata eva brahmalokaṃ pratyāgacchety āhvānaṃ pitāmahasya bhagavata iti suspaṣṭam. aviniyuktabrāhmalaukikavidyāto nrpasaṃkramaprayojana upasaṃkramāntaraniyogaḥ. vaiṣṇavīṃ tāṃ mahātejas tāṃ tanuṃ praviśa svayaṃ pāñktaḥ pāṭhaḥ. yāṃ tāṃ prasiddhāṃ vaiṣṇavīm avarāṃ vairājīṃ tanuṃ bhūmacitkriyāmayasattvaṃ[tve?] kāryāya martyamānuṣatanūpagrahaṇadvāratvena yathāvasaṃkramasamaye prāviśaḥ. evam eva he mahātejo bhūmacijjyotirmayakṛtāvatārakāryas tvaṃ punaś ca yathāvasaṃkramam upasaṃkramasiddhaye tām eva vairājīṃ vaiṣṇavīm annamayīṃ tanuṃ bhūmaprāṇamayīṃ mattanubhūmacinmayasahajatvattanur upasaṃkramasiddhaye svayaṃ praviśa prathamam. pare 'pi yathāsaṃkramaṃ svasvocitatanur upasaṃkramiṣyanti. tad api cāgre bhagavān darśayiṣyati—'yebhyo viniḥsṛtā ityādinā [= 7.100.19a].' tathā hi śrau[to]pavargapadopasaṃkramakramaḥ. 'etam annamayam ātmānam upasaṃkramya. etaṃ prāṇamayam ātmānam upasaṃkramya. etaṃ manomayam ātmānam upasaṃkramyeti [TaiU 3.10.5].')" Cg takes a completely different approach, according to which, as noted earlier, he understands the phrase to apply collectively to the four separate divine forms, which the four brothers—Rāma, Lakṣmaṇa, Bharata, and Śatrughna—will assume, respectively. Rāma will assume his form as Viṣṇu, Lakṣmaṇa as Śeṣa, Bharata as Garuḍa, and Śatrughna as Viṣvaksena. (svakāṃ tanum iti. tvaṃ viṣṇutanuṃ lakṣmaṇaḥ śeṣatanuṃ bharato garuḍatanuṃ śatrughno viṣvaksenatanum ity arthaḥ.) See notes to 7.96.18. Cs, citing an unnamed smṛti, comments, "O Sva, that is, O independent one! This is as noted in the smṛti to the effect that 'He is known as sukha, "blissful," because of his independence.' The term svakām means 'consisting of bliss.' (sva svatantra. svātantryāt sukha iti prokta iti smṛteḥ. svakāṃ sukharūpiṇīm.)" D6,M6, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read the synonymous svikām for svakām, "one's own." Ct understands the phrase to refer to the world that is as exceedingly dear to Viṣṇu as is his own form (svikāṃ tanuṃ svatanuvad atyantapriyaṃ lokam). Cr explains, "The body, that is to say, the well-known abode that is connected with Viṣṇu . . . that is to say, the phrase refers to Sāketa (tāṃ prasiddhāṃ vaiṣṇavīṃ viṣṇusambandhinīṃ tanuṃ dhāmety arthaḥ . . . svakāṃ tanuṃ sāketam ity arthaḥ)." See notes to verses 9 and 10 below.

"which is the eternal Brahman" tad ākāśaṃ sanātanam: D6,7,10,11,M3,6, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read yadvākāśam, "or the . . . ākāśam," while T2,M1,7, and KK and VSP read instead the more or less synonymous tadvākāśam. We understand the word ākāśa in its well-documented sense of Brahman, or the highest principle of the universe. In this we follow Ct, who notes, "It is well known in various places in the vedic literature that the word ākāśa is used in the sense of Brahman (ākāśaśabdo hi brahmaṇi tatra tatra śrutiṣu prasiddhaḥ)." See, for example, AV 9.10.18a; GopBr 1.1.38; TaiBr 3.10.9.4a; TaiĀ 2.11.1a; ŚvetāU 4.8a. Cv similarly understands the term to refer to the state of the highest spiritual liberation or purity, kaivalyam, that is, the state that is to be achieved through the inherent form of the pure spirit (ākāśaṃ kaivalyaṃ kevalātmasvarūpeṇāvasthānam iti yāvat). Cg, citing ṚV 1.164.39, takes the term to refer to the eternal, highest heaven.

Alternately, he suggests that it may mean the heavenly realm of Vaikuṇṭha, which is the abode of Viṣṇu's avatāras. (ṛco 'kṣare parame vyoman iti śrutyuktaparamākāśaṃ viṣṇvavatārakulasthānaṃ vaikuṇṭhaṃ vā.) On the identification of the highest heaven with Brahman, see Sāyaṇa's commentary on ṚV 1.164.39 (ṛcó 'kṣáre paramé vyóman), in which he quotes a number of upaniṣadic passages in which the term akṣara is equivalent to Brahman. See, for example, BṛĀraU 3.8; MuṇḍaU 1.1.5, 1.2.13. See also van Buitenen 1959. Cr offers an idiosyncratic explanation of the phrase. He reads the adjective sanātanam, normally, "eternal," as a bahuvrīhi compound in the sense of "The pervasion of Sana, i.e., Brahmā, that is to say, that heavenly realm in which the injunction [of Brahmā] with regard to various duties prevails; [that heavenly realm] is as expansive as the sky and is, in fact, [Rāma's] inherent abode, Sāketa. (sanātanaṃ sanasya brahmaṇa ātanas tattatkārye niyogo yatra tad ākāśam ākāśavad vistīrṇaṃ yat svakāṃ tanuṃ sāketam ity arthaḥ.)" As elsewhere, Cr is stretching the language to, or even beyond, its limits. All translators consulted take the term ākāśa in its sense of "sky," "void," or "ether," but it is difficult to see how the notion of Viṣṇu dissolving into space or the material element ākāśa can make any real theological sense.

Following 7ab, Ñ2,V2,B1,3,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert a variant of 9cd for the first time, repeating it in its proper place. The verse, as it appears here, reads: yām icchasi mahābāho tāṃ tanuṃ praviśa svikām, "Whichever body of your own you wish, great-armed one, enter that." This line is then construed with their variant of 7ab, vaiṣṇavīṃ tāṃ mahātejo yad [tad—KK, VSP] vākāśaṃ sanātanam, which then offers the choice of either Rāma's own inherent Vaiṣṇava form or the eternal form of ākāśa, that is, Brahman. We understand the distinction to be between the saguṇa form of the four-armed, etc., Lord Viṣṇu, or the nirguṇa state of the paramātman.

8. "For you are the refuge of the worlds" tvaṃ hi lokagatiḥ: Ct takes the term lokagatiḥ to mean both the one who causes people to ascend to heaven, etc., and the one who is the goal of people (lokānāṃ svargādikaṃ gamayitā lokair gamyaś ca tvam evety arthaḥ). Cr glosses, "The refuge of the worlds, that is to say, you alone are the savior of all people (lokānāṃ nikhilajanānāṃ gatir nirvāhakas tvam eva)."

"large-eyed Lord" deva . . . / . . . viśālākṣa: Literally, "O large-eyed god." D6,7,10,11,T4 (second time),M1–3, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read the feminine accusative viśālākṣīm for the critical edition's masculine vocative, thus making the adjective modify Māyā rather than Rāma. Ct understands this variant to indicate that Māyā comprehends all objects (viśālākṣīm ity anena tasyāḥ sarvaviṣayatā sūcitā—so Ct). Cm is similar but understands that what is being expressed is both that she comprehends all objects and, in addition, she has the nature of having utterly clear perception (viśālākṣīm ity anena tasyāḥ sarvaviṣayatā sākṣātkārarūpatā cokṣyate). Cs also understands similarly, glossing, "comprehending innumerable objects through her universality with regard to herself and others (viśālākṣīṃ svaparasādhāraṇyena bahuviṣayām)." Among the translators consulted, only Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 626) follows this interpretation, translating, "the all-seeing Divine Māyā."

"no one . . . truly knows you" na tvāṃ kecit prajānate: Literally, "none at all know you." Cm observes, "Even those who are endowed with extraordinary knowledge [cannot understand Viṣṇu] even through the power of their austerities, etc. (kecit tapobalādibhir atiśayitajñānasaṃpannā api)." Ct similarly notes, "Even those who are endowed with extraordinary austerities do not know you (tvāṃ kecid atiśayitatapaḥsaṃpannā api na prajānate)." Cv believes the reference is to those who are deluded by Māyā (māyayā mohitā na jānantīty arthaḥ).

"other than Māyā" ṛte māyām: Cm and Ct understand māyā here to refer to the power of knowledge (jñānaśaktim—so Cm; jñānaśaktirūpām—so Ct). Ct thus believes that the point of this verse is to state that only those to whom such power of knowledge has been revealed through hearing, cogitating, meditating, etc., actually comprehend Viṣṇu (śravaṇamanananidihyāsanādinedṛśī jñānaśaktir yeṣāṃ prādurbhavati ta eva tvāṃ jānantīti tātparyam). Cg takes the term māyā to refer to Lakṣmī (māyāṃ lakṣmīm), as does Cs, while Cr understands, "she who consists of compassion (māyāṃ kṛpāmayīm)," whom he identifies below as Sītā. Cv understands the term in its normal sense of "illusion," glossing, "ignoring māyā, that is to say, deluded by māyā (illusion) (ṛte māyāṃ māyām atikramya māyayā mohitā)." For a discussion of the connection between Sītā and māyā in the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa, see S. Goldman 2010a.

"your immemorial consort" tava pūrvaparigrahām: Literally, "your primordial wife." Cg glosses, "she who is being embraced beginninglessly; the meaning is 'eternally inseparable' (anāditayā parigṛhyamāṇāṃ nityānapāyinīm ity arthaḥ)." Ct understands the term to suggest her innateness [with respect to Viṣṇu] (tena sahajatvaṃ sūcitam). Cm understands similarly (ity anena sahajatvam ucyate). Cr glosses, "[your] eternal wife Sītā (nityastriyaṃ sītām)." Cs explains, "She is the one of whom there was long ago an acceptance with the words 'She is mine' (madīyeti svīkaraṇaṃ yasyāḥ sā tām)."

9. "You" tvam: Ñ2,V2,3,B1,2,4,D6,7,10,11,G2,M9, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the accusative singular tvām. This reading creates a significant syntactical difficulty. Cr attempts to account for the accusative. He proposes supplementing the syntax in order to complete the sentence and account for the accusative: "The vedas call you the one who is characterized by the qualities of being inconceivable, etc." (tvā tvām acintyatvādiviśiṣṭam āhur vedā iti śeṣaḥ). Cs simply construes the accusative with the phrase from verse 8: "None except Māyā knows [you] (ke 'pi māyām ṛte na jānata ity anvayaḥ)." Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 647), Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 635), Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 939), and Benoît (1999, p. 1432), read the accusative as if it were a nominative or, in the case of Roussel, a vocative. Dutt (1894, p. 1930) and Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 626), like Cs, take the accusative essentially as a repetition of the one in 8b above, where it serves as the object of the verbal phrase na . . . prajānate, "They do not know you."

"the Great Being—inconceivable, indestructible, the sum of all things" acintyaṃ mahad bhūtam akṣayaṃ sarvasaṃgraham: Literally, "surpassing thought, the great being, having no decay, [and] an aggregate of all." D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read cājaraṃ tathā, "and unaging as well," for sarvasaṃgraham, "the sum of all things." Cg, the only commentator to remark on the critical reading sarvasaṃgraham, glosses, "gracious to all (sarvānugrāhakaḥ)." Cm and Ct gloss, "acintyam means devoid of any limitation by space; for that reason, a great being, that is to say, one who has attained [much]. The words 'by means of all things without distinction' should be added. By this is to be understood 'devoid of any limitation with regard to objects.' [The word] akṣayam means 'devoid of any limitation in respect to time'; ajaram means 'unchanging.' (acintyaṃ deśataḥ paricchedaśūnyam. ata eva mahad bhūtam prāptam, aviśeṣāt sarvavastubhir iti śeṣaḥ. tena vastuparicchedaśūnyam. akṣayaṃ kālaparicchedaśūnyam. ajaram avikāriṇam.)" Cm is similar, except that he elaborates in the explanation of the term mahad bhūtam. He remarks that the word bhūta here is derived from the root √bhū in the sense of "acquisition" and is used because of [Viṣṇu's] acquisition of all things. (bhū prāptāv iti dhātor utpannena bhūtaśabdena sakalavastuprāptatvāt.) Cs understands acintyam to mean "impossible to be conceived of as having any limits." He takes mahad bhūtam to mean "the one who provides entry into [heavenly] worlds." He glosses akṣayam as "unending," and takes ajaram to mean "devoid of the six [unpleasant] waves [of bodily existence]." (acintyam iyān iti sasīmatvena cintayitum aśakyam. mahad bhūtaṃ lokapraveśakam. akṣayam anantam. ajaraṃ ṣaḍūrmirahitam.) The six "waves" (ṣaḍūrmi) are the six afflictions of bodily existence mentioned at Bhāgavatapurāṇa 10.70.17. They are usually listed as sorrow, delusion, old age, death, hunger, and thirst. See Śāradātilaka 1.46b–47a (but compare Nyāyamañjarī 2.431.9, where the list differs somewhat). See also Apte s.v. ūrmi.

"O Lord of immense blazing energy, please return of your own accord to whichever form you wish." yām icchasi mahātejas tāṃ tanuṃ praviśa svayam: Literally, "O one of immense blazing energy, you must yourself enter which body you desire." See notes to verse 7 above, where a variant of this line is discussed.

10. "When . . . had confirmed his resolution" viniścitya: Literally, "having resolved." Ct glosses, "having made the resolution that was previously mentioned (prāguktaṃ niścayaṃ kṛtvā)." See 7.97.3, where Rāma first makes his resolution to leave the human world. Ck understands that, as has been previously indicated, Rāma is deliberating as to what he must do in respect to his transformation as Vairājaviṣṇu, whose body consists of food, in order to accomplish the upward transformation to his own proper Brahmaloka, which consists principally of bliss (uktarītyā bhūmānandasvakabrahmalokopasaṃkramāyānnamayānnamaya[sic] vairājaviṣṇūpasaṃkramasya kartavyatvaṃ viniścitya). See notes to verse 7 above.

"the immensely wise Rāma" mahāmatiḥ: Literally, "the immensely wise [one]." Ck and Ct gloss, "omniscient (sarvajñaḥ)." Cs similarly glosses, "the omniscient lord (sarvajño bhagavān)."

"those words of Grandfather Brahmā" pitāmahavacaḥ: Literally, "the words of the Grandfather."

"he . . . entered . . . the blazing energy proper to Viṣṇu" viveśa vaiṣṇavaṃ tejaḥ: Literally, "he entered the Vaiṣṇava blazing energy." As before with the phrase vaiṣṇavīṃ tanum (see verse 7 above), the commentators engage in various, sometimes protracted, technical discussions as to the theology of the transformation of Rāma. Ck, citing a common vedic passage (TaiS 6.2.9.2.8; see also 1.7.4.4.7; ŚatBr 1.1.2.13; GopBr 2.4.6.15, etc.), showing that "the sacrifice indeed is Viṣṇu (yajño vai viṣṇuḥ)," understands the term "blazing energy" here to be that which takes the form of the sacrificial fire (vaiṣṇavaṃ tejo yajño vai viṣṇur ityāder yajñajvālarūpaṃ tejaḥ). Ck continues that what this really means is that Rāma, in bodily form, like a yogin engaged in the brahmamedha (see the opening comments to sarga 99 notes), entered the fire of the brahmamedha (saśarīraḥ san brahmamedhāgniṃ brahmamedhayogīva viveśa). Ct explains, "He entered the blazing energy of Viṣṇu, that is to say, the form of [the embodied four-armed Viṣṇu] Upendra, which consists of blazing energy like that of the sacrificial flame. By this," Ct continues, "is suggested that his body, which in fact consisted of blazing energy, through divine illusion (māyā) was taken to be an actual human body by those possessed of [actual] human bodies, etc. (vaiṣṇavaṃ tejo yajñajvālavat tejomayam aupendraṃ viveśa. anena tejomaya eva deho māyayā manuṣyadehādibhir manuṣyadehatvena gṛhīta iti dhvanitam.)" Cr understands the phrase vaiṣṇavaṃ tejaḥ to refer to Vaikuṇṭha, which consists of the blazing energy that is connected with Viṣṇu (vaiṣṇavaṃ viṣṇusaṃbandhi tejas tanmayavaikuṇṭham ity arthaḥ).

Translators are similarly divided as to the exact meaning of the phrase. Gorresio (1870, p. 309) offers, "entrò . . . nell' essenza di Visnu." Dutt (1894, p. 1930) renders, "entered there . . . in his Vishnu form." Roussel (1903, vol. 3, p. 647) translates, "entra dans la splendeur vishnouïte." Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 635) renders, "entered Vishnu's abode," while Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 626) translates, "entered Vishnu's body." Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 939) offers, "entered into Viṣṇu's form," and Benoît (1999, p. 1432) paraphrases the sentence as "Les paroles de l' Aïeul décidèrent l' avisé Rāma à réintégrer la dignité de Viṣṇu avec son corps."

"bodily" saśarīraḥ: Cs argues that the phrase "with the body" is mentioned because of Rāma's possessing a nature (i.e., body) that consists of knowledge and bliss. Cs continues that the phrase "together with his younger brothers" suggests that they do not abandon their bodies at this point. Cs bases this argument on two facts. The first is that there is no mention of an abandonment at this point in the Padmapurāṇa and similar texts. The second is that it will be stated later on that the body will be abandoned in another region. Cs concludes by noting that according to the opening verse of the Īśopaniṣad, which refers to the immutable oneness and fullness of the Supreme Spirit, all of the brothers are, in fact, a single being. (saśarīras tasyāpi jñānānandādyātmakatvāt sahānujaḥ. anena teṣām api na śarīravisarjanam iti dhvanyate. śarīraparityāgasyātraiva pādmādāv apy anukteś ca. itaraviṣaye śarīratyāgasya vakṣyamāṇatvāc ca. pūrṇam evāvaśiṣyata ityāder ekībhāvaḥ.) Compare Cs's comments on verse 7.94.18.

"together with his younger brothers" sahānujaḥ: As before, Ck understands that Rāma is, at this point, only accompanied by Śatrughna. He therefore glosses, "together with Śatrughna (śatrughnasahitaḥ)." Ct continues his discussion from above (see note on "blazing energy") by saying that the phrase "together with his younger brothers" is used because of the acceptance through discrimination [of that blazing energy] as if it were water, since the water [of the Sarayū] is the means of ingress to that blazing energy. This suggests that the bodies of Rāma's younger brothers, too, consist of blazing energy. Ct concludes by saying that their close association—of which we are informed by the phrase "together with the body"—shows that they, too, entered [the blazing energy of Viṣṇu] bodily. (tejaḥpraveśe jale jalavadvivekenāgrahāt sahānuja ity anenānujaśarīrāṇām api tathaiva tejomayatvaṃ sūcitam. saśarīraśabdabodhitasvasāhacaryeṇa teṣām api saśarīrapraveśabodhanāt.) For a discussion of Ck's and other commentators' views on which of Rāma's brothers actually accompany him as he departs the human world, see note 7 above. See, too, the note above (saśarīraḥ) for a discussion of whether or not Rāma's brothers abandon their bodies as does Rāma.

11–12. "Then, once he had returned . . . that god" tato viṣṇugataṃ devam: Literally, "the god who had gone to Viṣṇu." No doubt the idea here is that Viṣṇu, having cast off his earthly, human body of Rāma, now appears in his four-armed divine form. Ck, the only commentator to make note of the critical reading, explains, "For that very reason, that is, just as he had abandoned his mortal body, the divinities, who themselves had bodies consisting of food, worshiped the Lord Hiraṇyagarbha, who is associated with Brahmā, who had gone to the body of Viṣṇu, that is to say, who had attained an upward transformation through a body consisting of food, and whose nature was primarily consciousness and light (tata eva hetoḥ parityaktamartyopagrahapūrvaṃ viṣṇugataṃ viṣṇūpagrahagatam annamayopasaṃkramaṃ prāptaṃ devaṃ bhūmacijjyotiḥsvabhāvaṃ bhagavantaṃ brāhmaṇaṃ hiraṇyagarbhaṃ devatā annamayātmatvena pūjayanti sma)." See notes to verse 7 above.

D6,7,10,11,T3,4,G1,M3,5, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read viṣṇumayam, "consisting of Viṣṇu," for viṣṇugatam, "gone to Viṣṇu." This lends the phrase the literal sense of "the god, consisting of Viṣṇu." On this reading, Ct glosses, "After his entrance, the divinities worshiped that god, consisting of Viṣṇu, who had attained non-difference with respect to Upendra. (tatas tatpraveśāt. viṣṇumayam upendrābhedam āpannaṃ devaṃ devatāḥ pūjayanti sma.)" Cr understands the phrase to mean "Rāma, the god eternally endowed with play, reached the close proximity of Viṣṇu, who was a fragment of Bharata, who also consisted of Viṣṇu (viṣṇumayabharatāṃśabhūtaviṣṇusamīpaṃ prāptaṃ devaṃ nityakrīḍāvantaṃ rāmam)." Cr seems to argue for an unusual theology according to which Rāma is the Supreme Being and inhabitant of Sāketa, while Viṣṇu consists of the portions of Bharata and the other two brothers;. for Cr, Rāma resides in Sāketa and Viṣṇu in Vaikuṇṭha. See verses 14 and 16 below. See, too, Cr's comments at 1519*, note 1, following notes to verse 26 below.

"the sādhyas" sādhyāḥ: See notes to 7.27.3–4.

"the daityas, dānavas, and rākṣasas" daityadānavarākṣasāḥ: Cr takes the inclusion of these demonic beings among those worshiping Viṣṇu to suggest that the god in his form as Rāma had the ability to infatuate everyone (daityādikartṛkapūjanoktyā rāmarūpasya sarvamohakatvaṃ dhvanitam).

13. "delighted" hṛṣṭam: D10,11,G3, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead puṣṭam, "prosperous."

"All of them had their dearest wish fulfilled." sarvaṃ pūrṇamanoratham: Literally, "the totality whose wish was fulfilled." The wish here is, no doubt, the return of Viṣṇu to heaven. D10,11,G3, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead susaṃpūrṇamanoratham, which then construes with the sarvam in pāda a to mean "all had their wish completely filled."

"They all cried out: 'Wonderful! Wonderful!'" sādhu sādhv iti tat sarvam: Literally, "that totality [said] 'sādhu! sādhu!'" D10,11,G3, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read tair devaiḥ, "by those gods," for tat sarvam, "that totality." Ct and Cr, the only commentators to remark on this variant, understand the gods to be the subjects of an unexpressed passive form of a verb meaning to speak. Thus, Ct glosses, "by those gods 'sādhu! sādhu!' was uttered (tair devaiḥ sādhu sādhv iti bhāṣitam—so Ct; Cr similarly)." This variant raises the issue as to how much of the verse is the direct speech of the gods and others. Ct appears to believe that most of the verse is the direct speech of the divinities. He says, "Those gods said: 'Since you have come here, all this, that is, the collectivity of those people who dwell in the highest heaven, are prosperous and joyous. Their wish has been fulfilled, and they have become free from any taint.' [And they also said] 'sādhu! sādhu!' (tvayy āgate sarvam idaṃ tridivasthajanajātaṃ puṣṭaṃ pramuditaṃ saṃpūrṇamanorathaṃ gatakalmaṣaṃ ca jātam iti tair devaiḥ sādhu sādhv iti bhāṣitam)." Cv, however, explicitly understands that the gods say only, "sādhu! sādhu!" the rest being words of the "king of poets," i.e., Vālmīki (sarvam ityādi sādhu sādhv ity eva mataṃ devādīnāṃ pūjāvākyaṃ tatsarvam ityādi śeṣaṃ kavirājavākyam—Adyar-Cv, p. 865). Cr similarly puts the description of the heavens and their felicity as part of the narrative voice, adding the verbal phrase "it was said" to indicate that only the expression "sādhu! sādhu!" is the direct speech of the gods. (gatakalmaṣaṃ sarvaṃ tridivam ūrdhvalokam ity arthaḥ susaṃpūrṇamanoratham ata eva pramuditam ata eva puṣṭam āsīd iti śeṣaḥ. ata eva devaiḥ sādhu sādhv ity ūca iti śeṣaḥ.) The translators are divided.

14. "Viṣṇu" viṣṇuḥ: Because of the complex issue of the various transformations of Viṣṇu posited by the commentators, several of them feel called upon to parse the name here. Ct explains, "[The name] 'Viṣṇu' refers to Rāma of immense blazing energy, whose body has transformed into the body of Viṣṇu (viṣṇur viṣṇuśarīrasaṃkrāntaśarīro mahātejā rāmaḥ)." Cg similarly glosses, "Viṣṇu, that is, Rāma, who has attained the state of Viṣṇu (viṣṇur viṣṇutvaṃ prāpto rāmaḥ)." In keeping with his own peculiar reading of this entire passage, Cr explains, "Viṣṇu, that is to say, Bharata (viṣṇur bharataḥ)." See Cr's comments on verse 12 above and verse 16 below. Ck, characteristically, glosses, "[The name] 'Viṣṇu,' [refers to] the Lord Hiraṇyagarbha, who has transformed into the body of Viṣṇu and who is of immense blazing energy and consists chiefly of consciousness and light (atha viṣṇur viṣṇūpagrahopasaṃkrānto bhagavān mahātejā bhūmacijjyotirmayo hiraṇyagarbhaḥ)." Cs glosses, "Viṣṇu, who had concealed within himself the body of the leader of the Raghus (viṣṇuḥ svāntarnigūhitaraghunāyakakāyaḥ)."

"to Grandfather Brahmā" pitāmaham: Literally, "to the Grandfather."

"O Lord of firm vows" suvrata: Literally, "O one of good vows."

"heavenly worlds" lokān: Literally, "worlds." Ś,V,B2,4,D1,3,5–12,T2,G2,M7,8, and Lahore, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the accusative singular lokam, "world." Ct glosses, "By means of the acquisition of your world, together with you in your reabsorption, please grant them a world that will lead them to liberation (tvallokaprāptidvārā pratisaṃcare tvayā saha mokṣaprāpakaṃ lokam eṣāṃ dātum arhasi)." Cg understands the meaning to be "Please grant them by means of their subtle bodies [a world] (ātivāhikatayā dātum arhasīty arthaḥ)." Not surprisingly, Ck continues his extensive analysis of Rāma's successive stages of elevation with a rather extensive description of the nature and inhabitants of the Brahmaloka drawn heavily from upaniṣadic passages, especially ChāndoU 8.5.3 and Āruṇikopaniṣad 1, in an effort to demonstrate that the highest and most esoteric Brahmaloka is, in fact, found in the innermost sanctum of the celestial city of Ayodhyā. He understands the name of the celestial palace Aparājitā, mentioned at Chāndogyopaniṣad 8.5.3 and Kauṣītakibrāhmaṇopaniṣad 1.3, to be a synonym of Ayodhyā.

15. Several of the commentators note that this verse provides the rationale for Rāma's urging Brahmā to admit people who would not normally be eligible for the lofty realm of the Brahmaloka. Ck and Ct introduce the verse by saying that it is uttered in response to the question "For what purpose is there such an effort for the liberation of these people (kim artham evam etanmuktaye yatnas tatrāha—ime hīti—so Ct; Ck similarly)." Cs similarly sees the question to be "For what reason is there such an extreme desire to grant favor on your part? (kim artham atyartham etadanujighṛkṣā tavety ata āha—ime hīti)." Cg, most forthrightly, remarks that the verse responds to the question "How can these people who are utterly devoid of knowledge of Brahman reach the Brahmaloka? (kathaṃ brahmavidyārahitānām eṣāṃ brahmalokaprāptir ity atrāha—ime hīti)."

"these . . . devotees . . . worthy of my devotion" bhaktā bhājayitavyāś ca: Literally, "devotees and ones worthy of devotion." One is obliged to read the causal as a simplex. D3,5–7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the virtually synonymous bhaktā hi bhājitavyāś ca. Cr glosses this variant as "They are to be served appropriately, even by me (mayāpi yathocitaṃ sevyāḥ)." T2 and Ck read bhāṣitavyāḥ, "are to be addressed or spoken [about]," for bhājitavyāḥ. Ck explains this reading as "For the sake of their purpose, I must necessarily speak about them to you [Brahmā] (ata ime bhāṣitavyā etatprayojanārthaṃ bhavantaṃ prati mayāvaśyavaktavyā ity arthaḥ)." Ct notes Ck's reading as a variant and glosses it in virtually identical words.

"resolute" manasvinaḥ: Ck explains, "All of these followed me when I had incarnated on earth in order to accomplish my mission, that is to say, they incarnated with me from my Brahmaloka, and having done so, they were very resolute, that is to say, they had praiseworthy hearts in that they did not turn away from battle, were supremely firm, and supremely energetic (kāryāya bhūmāvatarantaṃ māṃ sarva ime snehād anuyātā asmadbrahmalokān mayā sahāvatīrṇā avatīrya ca manasvino raṇāparāṅmukhaparamadhīraparamotsāhātipraśastamanasaḥ)." D3,6,7,10,11,G1,M1,5, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead yaśasvinaḥ, "illustrious." D11 and Cr read instead tapasvinaḥ, "ascetics." Cr glosses this odd reading as "possessed of praiseworthy action or deliberation (praśastavicāravantaḥ)."

"who have abandoned their bodies for my sake" tyaktātmānaś ca matkṛte: The commentators offer various interpretations of the phrase. Ck explains, "For my sake, that is to say, for the purpose of assisting me, they abandoned themselves, that is to say, they abandoned their very life breaths in battle (matkṛte matsāhāyyaprayojanāya tyaktātmānaḥ prāṇān api yuddhe tyaktavantaḥ)." Ct glosses, "They have abandoned their bodies for my sake because of their inability to endure separation from me (matkṛte madviyogāsahiṣṇutayā tyaktātmānas tyaktaśarīrāḥ)." Cr understands, "For my sake they abandoned their worldly activities (matkṛte tyaktātmānas tyaktalaukikaprayatnāḥ)."

16. "Lord . . . patriarch of the world" lokaguruḥ prabhuḥ: Literally, "the guru of the world or worlds, the lord." Ck explains, "Enjoined by Śrī Rāma, who is the king, Brahmā, who is Hiraṇyagarbha, the guru of the worlds, that is to say, he who is the emitter of the seed of all the worlds through being the male mentioned in the quote from the śruti, 'Now whatever semen there is in a man that takes the form of the sun,' and according to the śāstra, 'that mantra consisting of wind (mantrā marunmayā),' he is the teacher of all knowledge beginning with the vedas because of his being in his true form the entirety of Brahman as sound. Moreover, he is the powerful one (prabhuḥ), that is, the four-faced Lord Brahmā, who is capable of causing beings with respect to knowledge of Brahman to attain all heavenly worlds up to and including the world of Brahman—irrespective of forbidden, optional, obligatory, occasional, and expiatory [rites]—and he is also capable of causing those beings who have practiced the required and non-prohibited rites to attain the heavenly worlds conforming to those rites. (evaṃ brahmarājaśrīrāmahiraṇyagarbhaniyukto lokagurur atha yad etat puruṣe reto bhavaty ādityasya tad rūpam iti śrutes tattatpuruṣadvārā sarvajagadbījaniṣekakartā mantrā marunmayeti śāstreṇa samastaśabdabrahmasvarūpatvād vedādisarvavidyopadeṣṭā ca prabhur nirniṣiddhakāmyanityanaimittikaprāyaścittānuṣṭhātṛbrahmavidyāṃ brahmalokāntasakalalokaprāpane 'kāmyāniṣiddhakarmiṇāṃ tattatkarmānurūpaṃ svarnilayaprāpaṇe ca.)" The quote "yad etat puruṣe reto bhavaty ādityasya tad rūpam" cited by Ck is found as part of a quote cited at Tantrāloka 29.15.

Ct succinctly echoes Ck's definitions. He says, " 'The guru of the worlds' means both 'the creator of the entire universe' and 'the teacher of all knowledge, starting with the vedas.' 'The powerful one (prabhu)' means 'the one who is capable of causing [beings] to obtain the fruits of their ritual actions that are occasional, ordained, and prohibited.' (lokaguruḥ sarvajagatkartā vedādisarvavidyopadeṣṭā ca. prabhur nityanaimittikavihitaniṣiddhakarmaṇāṃ phalaprāpaṇe samarthaḥ.)"

"those words of Viṣṇu" viṣṇuvacanam: In keeping with his interpretation of this passage, Cr glosses, "the words of Viṣṇu, that is to say, of Bharata (viṣṇor bharatasya vacanam)." See Cr's comments on verses 12 and 14 above.

"he said": We follow Cr in providing the missing verb. He understands that the phrase "Brahmā said" must be added (brahmābravīd iti śeṣaḥ).

"All these who have accompanied you" ime samāgatāḥ: Literally, "these who are assembled." We agree with Ct and Cr, who gloss, "those who have come together with you (ime tvayā saha samāgatāḥ—so Ct; Cr similarly)." Ck simply glosses, "those who have come together, that is to say, those devotees (ya ime samāgatā bhaktās te)."

"the worlds known as the Sāntānikas" lokān sāntānikān nāma: V3,D7,11,M1,7, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read saṃtānakān for sāntānikān. The variants Santānaka, Sāntānaka, Sāntānika, and Santāna (see verse 17 below) are all derived from the verbal root sam + √tan, "to stretch or extend," and are related to the idea of "extension or expansion" (santāna), either in a spatial sense or in the sense of lineage or progeny. It is also the name of one of the five trees in Indra's heaven. See KumāSaṃ 6.46, and 7.3; and ŚiśuVa 6.67. See also MBh 1.98.17, 3.220.23, etc.; and Harivaṃśa 107.3. See, too, 7.99.8–9 and notes. Both Gorresio (1870, p. 334, n. 108) and Benoît (1999, p. 1732) note the term. Although Rāma is departing for the Brahmaloka, it appears that various classes of his followers are destined for less lofty realms, and several of the commentators address this matter. Ck observes, "These [devotees] will go to, that is to say, let them attain, in due succession, the well-known worlds named Sāntānikas, which are worlds of Brahmā that are to be obtained according to one's merits. The words 'thus did he [Brahmā] ordain' should be supplied. [The word] santāna means 'people'; those [worlds] that belong to them are therefore called sāntānika, 'belonging to the people.' The core location [of these worlds] is the citadel of Brahmā in the majestic and supreme Ayodhyā. Surrounding it are the well-known quintuple enclosures characterized as pradhāna, 'principal,' aṅga, 'secondary,' dvāra, 'gateway,' parivāra, 'palisade,' and samāja, 'the assembly hall.' These constitute the five worlds of Brahmā [corresponding to the stages of liberation or absorption into the absolute] sāyujya, 'complete absorption,' sārṣṭi, 'full identity,' sārūpya, 'assimilation,' sāmīpya, 'proximity,' and sālokya, 'residence in the same heaven.' There that Brahmaloka known as samāja, 'the assembly hall,' that is, the one called sāmājika, that is to say, 'belonging to the people,' that is the world known as Sāntānika. (ta ime yathāpūrvaṃ sāntānikān nāma prasiddhāṃl lokān svārhān brahmalokān yāsyanti prāpnuvantv iti nyayuṅkteti śeṣaḥ. santānāḥ prajāḥ. tāsām ime sāntānikāḥ, śrīmatparamāyodhyābrahmapuraṃ mūlasthānaṃ paritaḥ pradhānāṅgadvāraparivārasamājalakṣaṇapañcāvaraṇavat prasiddhaṃ. ta ime pañcabrahmalokāḥ sāyujyasārṣṭisārūpyasāmīpyasālokyākhyāḥ. tatra yo 'yaṃ samājākhyo brahmalokaḥ sa eva sāmājikaḥ sāntāniko lokaḥ.)" In referring to the fivefold Brahmaloka, Ck appears to intend the central and highest loka to be that known as pradhāna, where one attains sāyujya, or complete absorbtion in the lord, surrounded by the four increasingly distant worlds, in each of which one attains, in turn, less proximity to the divinity. Compare notes to verse 17 below, where he refers to four divisions of the Brahmaloka, which we take to be a reference to the four outer divisions. Ct understands, "They will go to the worlds called Santānaka, that is to say, in due order to those that will produce liberation through the acquisition of Brahmā's world (saṃtānakān nāma lokān krameṇa brahmalokaprāptidvārā muktijanakān yāsyanti)." Cg offers, "Having obtained the worlds known as the Sāntānikas, they will go to your [i.e., Viṣṇu's] world; these last words must be supplied. (sāntānikān sāntānikākhyāṃ lokān saṃprāptāḥ santaḥ yāsyanti. tvallokam iti śeṣaḥ.)" On the four stages of liberation (mukti) and sāyujya, see BhāgP 3.29.13.

17. "Even an animal that abandons its life breaths while thinking upon Rāma" yac ca tiryaggataṃ kiṃcit rāmam evānucintayat / prāṇāṃs tyakṣyati: Literally, "and any animal whatsoever that will abandon life breaths while recalling Rāma alone." GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read tvām evam anucintayat for rāmam evānucintayat, lending the line the sense "Even an animal that abandons its life breaths while thinking upon you in this way." Strangely, the editors of the critical edition do not note this variant. Ct presents an alternative reading of this passage. He interprets as follows: "Even an animal [tirayggatam] that regards or thinks of any object whatsoever as you, that is, as Viṣṇu, and abandons its life breaths through devotion to you, that is, Viṣṇu, imagining any object whatsoever to be Viṣṇu, shall live in the worlds known as the Santānakas. What more need be said? Those who are abandoning their life breaths in accompanying you will dwell in the Santānaka worlds. (tiryaggatam api yat kiṃcid yatra kvāpi padārthe tvām eva viṣṇum iti cintayat kiṃcid padārthaṃ viṣṇutvena bhāvayat tvayi viṣṇau bhaktyā yuktaṃ prāṇāṃs tyakṣyati tat santānakanāmakalokeṣu vatsyati. kiṃ punar vaktavyam. ya ete tvadanurāgeṇa tvadanugamanapūrvaṃ prāṇāṃs tyajanti te santānakeṣu vatsyantīti.)" Among the translators consulted, only Dutt (1894, p. 1931) follows this interpretation, translating, "This region is intended even for him, who though born in the most degraded state, thinks of all objects as Vishnu. There is no question about their attaining to his region who, out of devotion, have followed thee and renounced their persons."

"shall surely also dwell in Santāna" vai santāne tu nivatsyati: D10,11,G3, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead tat santāneṣu nivatsyati, "that [being] shall live in the Santānas," while KK and VSP read instead vai tat santāne ni[vi—KK]vatsyati, "that [being] shall surely live [dwell apart?—KK] in Santāna."

"which is endowed with every virtue" sarvair eva guṇair yukte: D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead sarvair brahmaguṇair yukte, "endowed with every virtue of Brahmā." Ct explains, "endowed with all the virtues of Brahmā, that is to say, with the virtues of Brahmā, such as the truthfulness of one's vows (sarvair brahmaguṇaiḥ satyasaṃkalpatvādibrahmaguṇaiḥ)." Ck understands the virtues of Brahmā to be the eight auspicious and well-known virtues of the ātman, as listed at Chāndogyopaniṣad

8.7.1, which he paraphrases and understands to qualify the Brahmaloka. In Ck's list there are only six: freedom from evil, freedom from old age, freedom from death, freedom from hunger and thirst, and the truthfulness of vows. (ko 'sau sāntānikaloka ity ataḥ sarvair ityādi sa evāpahatapāpmā brahmaloko vijaro vimṛtyur vijighatso 'pipāsaḥ satyasaṃkalpa ity akhilaś ceti prasiddho 'pahatapāpmatvādyaṣṭakalyāṇaguṇair yukte.) Chāndogyopaniṣad 8.7.1 lists the eight qualities of the ātman as freedom from evil, freedom from old age, freedom from death, freedom from grief, freedom from hunger, freedom from thirst, having truthful desires, and having truthful vows (ya ātmāpahatapāpmā vijaro vimṛtyur viśoko vijighatso 'pipāsaḥ satyakāmaḥ satyakalpaḥ so 'nveṣṭavyaḥ sa vijijñāsitavyaḥ). Compare the bodily afflictions (ṣaḍūrmis) discussed in the notes to verse 9 above. Cr lists the virtues as truth, knowledge, bliss, etc. (satyajñānānandādibhir yukte). Cg, quoting Chāndogyopaniṣad 3.13.7 (misquoted in GPP and KK but correctly quoted in VSP) concerning the light that shines in the highest of heavens, understands the Sāntānika world to be eternally endowed with all virtues ([pṛṣṭh]eṣu sarvataḥ pṛṣṭheṣu [pratiṣṭheṣv (sic)—GPP and KK] anuttameṣūttameṣv iti śruteḥ sarvaguṇair nityayukte sāntānike). Compare Chāndogyopaniṣad 3.13.7, "atha yad ataḥ paro divo jyotir dīpyate viśvataḥ pṛṣṭheṣu sarvataḥ pṛṣṭheṣv anuttameṣūttameṣu lokeṣv idaṃ vāva tad yad idam asminn antaḥ puruṣe jyotiḥ."

"and is just next to the Brahmaloka" brahmalokād anantare: Literally, "in the immediate proximity of the Brahmaloka." Ck understands that the phrase refers to a place that is not far from the fourfold Brahmaloka consisting of the locations pradhāna, sāyujya, etc. (see Ck's comments on verse 16 above). This is, in fact, the Sāntānika Brahmaloka, as was already shown. (brahmalokāt pradhānasāyujyapadādicaturbrahmalokād apy anantare 'nantarasthāna eva, sa tu sāntāniko brahmalokas tathā darśitaś ca.) Cg glosses, "Located in a place above, but not far removed from, the Brahmaloka (brahmalokād anantare 'vyavahitoparideśasthe)." Ct understands, "Located near that. By this is suggested liberation together with Brahman through the attainment of the Brahmaloka in due order on the part of those who are situated there. (brahmalokād anantare tatsamīpasthe. anena tatra sthitānām api krameṇa brahmalokaprāptyā brahmaṇā saha muktiḥ sūcitā.)" Cr understands, "In those particular worlds, the Santānas, that are to be found in Sāketa, which exists in close proximity to the Brahmaloka, that is to say, the Goloka (brahmalokād golokād ity artho 'nantarasamīpavartisākete vidyamāneṣu santāneṣu lokaviśeṣeṣu)."

18. "The monkeys shall return to their own places of birth and so shall the apes." vānarāś ca svakāṃ yonim ṛkṣāś caiva tathā yayuḥ: Literally, "The monkeys to their own source and the apes in the same way went." Given the context of this and the following verse, it seems clear that we are still dealing with the direct quotation of Brahmā's words, which will not end until 20ab. Similarly, none of the assembled actually enter the river until 20cd. Therefore, we must take the perfect form yayuḥ, "they went," of 18b, as well the perfect prapedire, "they reached or attained," of 19d, as injunctive or future. In this interpretation we follow Cv, Cm, and Ct (see notes to verse 19 below). GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read the synonymous svikām for svakām, "one's own."

This verse and what follows resolve the commentators' anxiety about how it is that mere monkeys are permitted to enter the Brahmaloka, which is attainable only by those who know Brahman. The idea is that the monkeys, who are described as the sons of the various gods, seers, etc., at Bālakāṇḍa sarga 16 and throughout the epic, will return to the worlds of their respective fathers, while the others will enter the Sāntānika worlds according to their various merits. Ck explains, "Thus having described the attainment of the samāja, or 'assembly hall,' region of Brahmaloka, exclusively for those incarnations of divinities who do not have [another] authorized region, the attainment of their respective divine regions, in order of due precedence on the part of Sugrīva and the others who are portions of [various] gods, who have regions authorized [for them] through the command of the four-faced Lord [Brahmā], is now prescribed in order to move forward with the authorization in due order of precedence [through the verse]: 'The monkeys, etc.' The monkeys, Sugrīva, etc., and similarly, the apes, excluding Jāmbavān, each attained their respective divine natures. (evam adhikāripadarahitakevaladevatāvatārāṇāṃ samājabrahmalokaprāptim uktvātha bhagavaccaturmukhājñayā padādhikṛtadevāṃśānāṃ sugrīvādīnāṃ yathāpūrvaṃ svasvadevapadaprāptir yathāpūrvam adhikārapravṛttaya upadiśyate—vānarāś cetyādi. vānarāḥ sugrīvādayas tatharkṣā jāmbavadvyatiriktāś ca svakāṃ svīyāṃ svīyāṃ yonim eva svasvadevaprakṛtim eva yayuḥ.)" Although Ck correctly notes the exclusion of Jāmbavān from the mass of apes that are ascending to heaven, he fails to note the similar exclusion of Hanumān, Mainda, and Dvivida from the ranks of the monkeys. See notes to 7.98.24 and 25, especially 1471* and 1472* and notes, following notes to 7.98.25. Cg and Ct are similar to, although less elaborate than, Ck. Cg, however, explicitly understands that because of their being authorized portions of the gods, the monkeys reenter their respective divine bodies (vānarāṇāṃ tv ādhikārikadevāṃśatvāt tattaddevaśarīrapraveśa evety āha). Cs understands the line to be the poet's response to an implied criticism that asks how monkeys and humans could equally attain the Sāntānika worlds (sameṣām eṣāṃ vānarāṇāṃ narāṇāṃ ca sāntānikāvāptiḥ kim ity uktāpavādaṃ vakti—vānarāś ceti).

19. "Those of splendid birth . . . to those from whom they issued forth, starting with the gods" yebhyo viniḥsṛtā ye ye surādibhyaḥ susaṃbhavāḥ: Literally, "whichever ones of excellent birth had issued forth from whichever of the gods, etc." D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead yebhyo viniḥsṛtāḥ sarve surebhyaḥ surasaṃbhavāḥ, which lends the line the sense "all those of divine birth . . . who issued forth from whichever ones." On this variant, Ck and Ct gloss, "The poet now clarifies the previously stated meaning with the verse beginning 'From whichever.' The phrase 'from the gods' is a metonymy, so the sense is 'Those who issued forth from the gods, seers, etc., they, 'those born of the gods [and seers],' returned to their own fathers. (uktam evārthaṃ spaṣṭayati—yebhya iti. surebhya ity upalakṣaṇam. yebhyo devarṣādibhyo ye viniḥsṛtās te surasaṃbhavāḥ svapitṝn pratipedire—so Ct; Ck similarly.)"

"shall return . . . and including the seers, the great serpents and the yakṣas" ṛṣibhyo nāgayakṣebhyas tāṃs tān eva prapedire: D10,11,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP substitute a passage of one line [1510*]: "and as all the gods looked on, they returned to their own fathers (paśyatām sarvadevānāṃ svān pitṝn pratipedire)." Cv, Cm, and Ct all note here that we must understand the perfect forms yayuḥ, "they went," of 18b, and [prati]pedire, "they attained," of this verse, as future forms in an injunctive sense. (atra yayuḥ pratipedira iti nirdeśo bhaviṣyadarthe—so Ct; yayuḥ pratipedira iti bhaviṣyati bhūte nirdeśaḥ—so Cv.) See note to verse 18 above.

Ck and Ct support the passage by quoting an unidentified śāstra, "[The gods], having incarnated, and having made themselves the same [i.e., all monkeys], they take back once again their own respective [divine] portions (avatīrya samīkṛtya svāṃśān svīkurvate punar iti śāstrāt)."

Following 19ab, Ś,V1,3,B2,D,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert, while Ñ2 inserts after 23 and G1,M3 insert after 19, a passage of one line [1506*]: "And Sugrīva, the son of Āditya, [shall enter][1] the orb of the sun (ādityatanayaś caiva sugrīvaḥ sūryamaṇḍalam)."

[1] "And . . . the son of Āditya [shall enter]" ādityatanayaś caiva: D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead teṣu praviviśe caiva, "And among them [Sugrīva] shall enter." Again the perfect verbal form praviviśe must be read here, as in verse 18 above, as a future form in an injunctive sense. See above. On this variant, Ct clarifies the syntax by glossing the locative teṣu, "in them," as "among them (teṣu madhye)." Cr glosses, "Regarding them, that is to say, among the monkeys, etc., Sugrīva, that is to say, the portion that is Sugrīva, shall enter [lit., 'entered'] the orb of the sun. Thus, we should add the following words: 'Even those portions of the monkeys, etc., other than Sugrīva, shall return [lit., 'returned'] to their own fathers, that is to say, their own place of birth.' (teṣu vānarādiṣu madhye sugrīva sugrīvāṃśaḥ sūryamaṇḍalaṃ viviśe 'ta eva svān pitṝn svayoniṃ pratipedire sugrīvabhinnā api vānarādyāṃśā iti śeṣaḥ.)"

20. Our manuscript of Ck ends here.

"When . . . had spoken in this fashion" tathoktavati: V1,D6,7,10,11,G1,M4,5, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead the similar tathā bruvati, "while he . . . is or was speaking." Ct understands the reference to Brahmā's speech to include all the words spoken by him, i.e., verses 7–9 and 16–19. (deveśe pitāmahe tathoktavati. āgaccha praviśa svikāṃ tanum ity uktavatīty arthaḥ.)

"Gopratāra tīrtha" gopratāram: Literally, "the cow crossing." See notes to 1487*, especially note 2, following notes to verse 1 above.

"their eyes overwhelmed with joyful tears" harṣapūrṇāśruviklavāḥ: Literally, "overwhelmed by tears that were full of joy." The compound is poorly constructed and somewhat elliptical. Cg and Cr all attempt to explain. Cg glosses, "their eyes turbid because of being filled with tears of joy (ānandāśrupūrṇatayā viklavadṛṣṭayaḥ)." Ct is similar, understanding, "their eyes or sight turbid because of being filled with tears born of joy (ānandajāśrupūrṇatayā viklavavīkṣaṇāḥ)." Cr understands that the term "tearful" includes even those who are not actually accompanying Rāma (harṣapūrṇāśruviklavāḥ sahāgatabhinnā api janāḥ).

21. "Each and every living soul who entered the water became filled with joy." avagāhya jalaṃ yo yaḥ prāṇī hy āsīt prahṛṣṭavat: Literally, "Whatever living thing, having plunged into the water, indeed happily became." Once again the syntax is tortuous and defective. It is somewhat awkward to construe the adverb prahṛṣṭavat, "happily." Ct, whom we follow, chooses to ignore the adverbial nature of the form and glosses it as an adjective, "happy" (hṛṣṭavad dhṛṣṭa āsīd). Cr, as we will note below, has a different reading that avoids the problem and permits him to construe the adverb elsewhere in the verse. D10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead avagāhyāpsu yo yo vai prāṇāṃs tyaktvā prahṛṣṭavat, which lends the line the sense "Whoever, having entered into the waters and having happily abandoned their life breaths." As noted above, this reading permits the adverb prahṛṣṭavat to be construed with the gerund tyaktvā, "having abandoned." Cr sees the verse as referring to those people who actually accompanied Rāma and makes some effort at the remediation of the syntax of this variant. He explains, "Whoever, having entered the waters, that is, the waters of the Sarayū, remained there. These last words [i.e., 'remained there'] must be supplied. That person, happily, that is to say, in such a way as to be characterized by happiness, having abandoned life breaths and having released the human body, mounted a flying chariot. (sahānāgatānāṃ vṛttam āha—avagāhyeti. apsu sarayūjaleṣu yo yo 'vagāhyātiṣṭhad iti śeṣaḥ sa prahṛṣṭavat praharṣaviśiṣṭaṃ yathā bhavati tathā prāṇāṃs tyaktvā mānuṣaṃ dehaṃ cotsṛjya vimānam adhyarohata.)" Compare 7.99.13 and notes, where the commentators similarly discuss the word prahṛṣṭavat. All translators read the variant except for Raghunathan, who reads with the critical edition, and Gorresio, who has another variant that lacks the adverb. Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 626) construes the adverb with the somewhat distant gerund utsṛjya, rendering, "Every living creature that bathed in it gladly was freed from his mortal coil."

"Then each one, casting off his or her human body" mānuṣaṃ deham utsṛjya: Literally, "having released a human body." The term mānuṣam, "human," is slightly jarring here, since the subject of the verse is prāṇī, "living creature," which, presumably, includes all of the human and nonhuman beings that follow Rāma. It is, however, probable that the author intended the verse to refer specifically to humans, as the text takes up the matter of the animals in the following verse.

22. "Even those born in the wombs of animals, once they reached the waters of the Sarayū" tiryagyonigatāś cāpi saṃprāptāḥ sarayūjalam: D1,4,7,10,11,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead tiryagyonigatānāṃ ca śatāni sarayūjalam. This line then construes with the insert passage 1514*, below. For translation, see below.

D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert a passage of one line [1514*], saṃprāpya tridivaṃ jagmuḥ prabhāsuravapūṃṣi tu [KK and VSP—ca]. Combined with the variant of 22ab mentioned above, this yields the sense "And hundreds of animals, having reached the water of the Sarayū, went to the highest heaven, their bodies resplendent." Cr reads the gerund saṃprāpya twice to govern both sarayūjalam and vapūṃṣi. He explains, "Hundreds, that is to say, many, animals, having reached [saṃprāpya] the water of the Sarayū and having obtained [saṃprāpya] bodies that were radiant, that is to say, that were endowed with extraordinary luminosity, went to the highest heaven. (tiryagyonigatānāṃ śatāny anekāni sarayūjalaṃ prabhāsurāṇy atiprakāśayuktāni vapūṃṣi ca saṃprāpya tridivaṃ jagmuḥ.)"

"became celestial and shone with a celestial beauty like gods" divyā divyena vapuṣā devā dīptā ivābhavan: Note the alliteration. Cr explains, "Characterized by celestial beauty, they were celestial, that is to say, because they now consisted of pure bliss and were utterly different from their natural condition, they were as radiant as the gods (divyena vapuṣopalakṣitā divyāḥ pramodamayatvena prākṛtavilakṣaṇā devā iva dīptā abhavan)."

23. "All beings, whether fixed or moving, upon reaching the waters of the Sarayū and moistening themselves with it" gatvā tu sarayūtoyaṃ sthāvarāṇi carāṇi ca / prāpya tattoyavikledam: Literally, "And having gone to the water of the Sarayū, things that were immobile and things that moved, having obtained the wetness of the water of that." See 1485*, note 4, following 7.99.18, where Ct attempts to explain how immobile objects are able to follow Rāma.

"attained the world of the gods" devalokam upāgaman: Literally, "they approached the world of the devas." Cr understands the devaloka to be Sāketa (devalokaṃ ca sāketam upāgaman). Ct understands that these creatures took on the forms of such beings as the heavenly wish-fulfilling tree and the divine wish-granting cow (kalpavṛkṣakāmagavyādisvarūpaṃ prāpnuvantīty arthaḥ). Evidently Ct's idea is that creatures that were mobile became mobile creatures in heaven, while those immobile became immobile in heaven.

24. "Whatever had been the divine origin of each of the monkeys, apes, and rākṣasas, they each entered that, after having deposited their bodies in the water." devānāṃ yasya yā yonir vānarā ṛkṣarākṣasāḥ / tām eva viviśuḥ sarve dehān nikṣipya cāmbhasi //: The syntax of the verse is awkward, as it mixes plural and singular and leaves ambiguous the question as to whether to apply the singular genitive pronoun yasya with the plural gods or monkeys, etc. No printed edition reads as does the critical edition. A literal translation would be "Whichever point of origin there was among the gods of whichever one, that [point of origin] all the monkeys, apes, and rākṣasas entered, having deposited bodies in the water." D10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead tasmin ye 'pi [tasminn api—KK, VSP] samāpannā ṛkṣavānararākṣasāḥ / te 'pi svargaṃ praviviśur dehān nikṣipya cāmbhasi //, which lends the verse the sense "Those apes, monkeys, and rākṣasas who reached there entered heaven, after depositing their bodies in the water." Ct explains the verse as follows: "In that, that is to say, in the water of the Sarayū, all those who reached it, that is to say, abandoned their bodies there, having left their bodies in the water, entered heaven, which took the form of the Santānaka world[s] (tasmin sarayūjale samāpannās tyaktadehās te 'pi sarva etān dehān ambhasi nikṣipya svargaṃ santānakalokarūpaṃ viviśuḥ)." Cr explains, "Informing us that no one who reached there at that time remained there, the verse says—'At that place.' Those who reached, that is to say, arrived in the water of the Sarayū, they, too, the apes and so forth, having deposited their bodies in the water, entered heaven, that is to say, Sāketa. (tasmin kāle tatra prāptāḥ kecanāpi na tatra sthitā iti bodhayann āha—tasminn iti. sarayūjale ye samāpannāḥ prāptās te 'py ṛkṣādayo dehān ambhasi nikṣipya svargaṃ sāketaṃ praviviśuḥ.)" Cs reminds us that the bodies referred to here are the former bodies [of the monkeys, etc.] (dehān prācīnān).

25. "Once the patriarch of the world had dispatched all of them to their respective heavens, that immensely wise being, in great delight, returned to heaven together with the thirty gods, who were similarly delighted." tathā svargagataṃ sarvaṃ kṛtvā lokagurur divam / jagāma tridaśaiḥ sārdhaṃ hṛṣṭair hṛṣṭo mahāmatiḥ //: Literally, "Having made all such that they were gone to heaven in this fashion, the great-minded guru of the worlds, delighted, went to heaven together with the delighted thirty." The term lokaguruḥ, "the guru or patriarch of the world," clearly refers to Brahmā here, since he was identified by this epithet in verse 16 above, and this verse summarizes his actions in response to Viṣṇu's request in assigning Rāma's companions and followers to their respective heavenly abodes. It is easy to understand, however, that this verse, as the culminating line in the actual story of the Rāmāyaṇa, would be seen as unsatisfactory, especially by Vaiṣṇavas, who would naturally expect the final words to refer to the ascension of Rāma/Viṣṇu to his heavenly abode. Indeed, several of the commentators explicitly or implicitly understand the term lokaguruḥ to refer to Rāma/Viṣṇu, while several northern manuscripts, as well as the printed edition of Gorresio, explicitly make Rāma the subject of their parallel verses. GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP, however, read variants on the verse, although these, in and of themselves, do not settle the issue. See below for the commentators' remarks on the verse.

For verse 25, D6,7,10,11,T3,4,G1,M5, and the GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP substitute a passage of two lines [1518*]: "Then the patriarch of the worlds, having established in heaven all of those who had assembled,[1] went to the great and highest heaven with the gods, who were delighted and joyous[1][2] (tataḥ samāgatān sarvān sthāpya lokagurur divi / hṛṣṭaiḥ pramuditair devair jagāma tridivaṃ mahat //)."

[1] "Then the patriarch of the worlds, having established in heaven all of those who had assembled, went to the great and highest heaven with the gods, who were delighted and joyous." tataḥ samāgatān sarvān sthāpya lokagurur divi / hṛṣṭaiḥ pramuditair devair jagāma tridivaṃ mahat //: KK and VSP read jagāma tridaśaiḥ sārdhaṃ sadā hṛṣṭair divaṃ mahat for line 2, hṛṣṭaiḥ pramuditair devair jagāma tridivaṃ mahat, lending the line the sense "He went to the great heaven together with the thirty [gods] who were eternally delighted." Ct's gloss seems to indicate that the term lokaguruḥ refers here to Viṣṇu. He explains, "Then, having established those who had assembled, that is to say, those who had come near to him in the sky with their heavenly bodies in their respective heavens, he himself, together with the gods, who were delighted at the return of the Lord [Viṣṇu], went to his own heavenly world, the great triple heaven. (tataḥ samāgatān divyair dehair antarikṣe svasamīpaṃ prāptān divi tattaducitasvarge sthāpayitvā svayaṃ bhagavadāgamanād dhṛṣṭair devaiḥ saha mahat tridivaṃ svalokaṃ jagāma.)" Cr and Cg are clearly in the Vaiṣṇava camp on this issue. The former explains, "The guru of the worlds, that is to say, Rāma, the controller of all, having established all those who had assembled, that is to say, having assigned the portions of the monkeys, etc., to their respective divine worlds, together with his brothers, etc., and with the blissful and delighted ones, that is to say, with those who are eternally happy and thus are the gods who consist of pure bliss, went to the great, that is to say, to be worshiped by all, highest heaven, that is to say, Sāketa, which is characterized by eternal bliss. (lokaguruḥ sarvaniyantā rāmaḥ samāgatān sarvān vānarādyaṃśān saṃsthāpya tattaddevalokeṣu niyojya pramuditair hṛṣṭair nityaṃ saṃtuṣṭair ata eva devaiḥ pramodamayair bhrātrādibhiḥ saha mahat sarveṣāṃ pūjanīyaṃ tridivaṃ sārvakālikapramodaviśiṣṭaṃ sāketaṃ jagāma.)" Cg understands the "the thirty," normally an epithet of the gods, to refer to the eternal seers (nityasūri) because they are described as eternally delighted. He glosses, " 'Heaven,' that is to say, 'the highest region, Vaikuṇṭha.' Together 'with the thirty,' that is to say, 'with the eternal seers,' because of the qualification 'eternally delighted.' (divaṃ paramākāśaṃ vaikuṇṭham. tridaśair nityasūribhiḥ sadā hṛṣṭair iti viśeṣaṇāt.)" Cs adduces a parallel passage from the Padmapurāṇa, which he believes is not inconsistent with the present one. He says, "The form sthāpya, 'having established,' [should properly be] prasthāpya, 'having dispatched according to propriety.' 'The highest heaven' means 'his own world.' [According to the Padmapurāṇa] 'Then, having heard that, Rāma, holding the conch, the discus, and the mace, and displaying the gesture of safety with his right hand, clad in yellow garments, garlanded, and mounted on the son of Vinatā, with a parasol held by the king of serpents, and his yak-tail fly whisks held by maidens, listening to the words of [praise] of the people and of his chamberlain Viṣvaksena, that majestic [Lord] hovered in the sky. He was swathed in immense splendor; he brought them along, without exception. Tārkṣya, having taken on another body, carried them all.' This episode, recorded in the Padmapurāṇa, should be considered as not inconsistent with the way it is stated here. (divi sthāpya prasthāpya yathāmaryādaṃ. tridivaṃ svalokam. atha rāmas tu tacchrutvā śaṅkhacakragadādharaḥ / dadhāno 'bhayamudrāṃ ca dakṣiṇena kareṇa saḥ / pītāmbaradharaḥ sragvy ārūḍhavinatāsutaḥ / nāgarājadhṛtacchatraḥ kanyakādhṛtacāmaraḥ / śṛṇvāṇo lokaśabdaṃ tu viṣvaksenasya vetriṇaḥ / antarikṣe sthitaḥ śrīmān śriyā bhūmyā samāśritaḥ / anugān ānayāmāsa sarvān niravaśeṣataḥ / uvāha tārkṣyas tān sarvān vigrahāntaram āsthita iti pādmoktāpi kathā uktarītyāvirodhenānusaṃdheyā.)" The quote found in Cs is not found in our copy of the Padmapurāṇa. See 6.105.13 and notes, where Viṣṇu is identified with Viṣvaksena, and 7.20.4 on the name Tārkṣya. The name Viṣvaksena is found only once in the Rāmāyaṇa, although it does occur in various contexts in the Mahābhārata. Compare RaghuVa 15.103 (nirvartyaivaṃ daśamukhaśiraśchedakāryaṃ surāṇāṃ viṣvaksenaḥ svatanum aviśat sarvalokapratiṣṭhām / laṅkānāthaṃ pavanatanayaṃ cobhayaṃ sthāpayitvā kīrtistambhadvayam iva girau dakṣiṇe cottare ca) and PadmaP (ĀnSS) 6(Uttarakhaṇḍa).271.84–89ab, where Bharata and Śatrughna are associated with the conch and the discus, respectively, and as aṃśas [of Viṣṇu], and where Rāma/Viṣṇu is described as having four arms. Rāma/Viṣṇu is also said to have entered a vimāna to ascend to heaven, rather than to have mounted Tārkṣya for his ascent. The two names—Tārkṣya and Viṣvaksena—do not generally appear together in purāṇic accounts of Rāma's ascension to heaven.

Following verse 25, D10,11,M5, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, VSP, and KK insert an additional colophon, ending their sarga 110.

26. Verse 26 of the one hundredth sarga of the critical edition appears in the printed editions of the southern commentators as verse 1 of sarga 111, which constitutes a phalaśruti. (See below for the remainder of these verses.) In introducing this passage, Ct observes, "The phalaśruti, along with its explanatory restatement of the events of the previous sarga, sets forth the necessity of hearing the Rāmāyaṇa, because the poem is a means to the accomplishment of final beatitude (atha pūrvasargavṛttāntānuvādapūrvaṃ kāvyasyāpavargāntasādhakatvena śrotavyārthatvapratipādanam)."

"Here ends the foremost of tales" etāvad eva ākhyānam . . . / . . . mukhyam: Literally, "just so far is the foremost tale." Note the hiatus. V1,D1–7,9,11,T1–3,G,M3,5–10, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read etāvad etat for etāvad eva, lending the phrase the sense "just so far is this [tale]." Ct, who seems to read with the critical text, understands, "Thus far, that is to say, just so many verses, chapters, and books by count, neither less nor more, that is what it means (etāvac chlokasargakāṇḍasaṃkhyākam eva. na nyūnaṃ nādhikam ity arthaḥ)." Cg says the same thing but adds the phrase "together with its proper limits (samaryādam)." Ct understands that the poem is the most acclaimed of all tales because of the fact that Brahmā himself, having inspired it, caused Vālmīki to compose it (brahmaṇā svayaṃ pravartya vālmīkinā kāritatvāt sarvākhyānebhyaḥ praśastam). Cg glosses, "most acclaimed of all tales (sarvākhyānebhyaḥ praśastam)," while Cr similarly understands, "best of all tales (sarvākhyānebhyaḥ śreṣṭham)."

"known as the Rāmāyaṇa" rāmāyaṇam iti khyātam: Ct, citing a verse, provides an etymology for the name: "Since Rāma, who consists of supreme bliss, continues on (ayate) through hearing [his story], etc., therefore the holy name of this [poem] is said to be 'Rāmāyaṇa [Rāma's continuance (āyana)]' (parānandamayo rāmo hy ayate śravaṇādibhiḥ / ato 'sya cābhidhā puṇyā rāmāyaṇam itīritā.)"

"together with its epilogue" sottaram: Literally, "with the uttara." The word uttara has several meanings that might be appropriate here. It can mean "together with what follows" or "together with its conclusion" or, as Cg, Ct, and Cr agree, "together with the Uttarakāṇḍa (uttarakāṇḍasahitam)." The phrase here is used by some scholars to argue for the lateness of this kāṇḍa. See, for example, Shah 1975, pp. 50–53. See also 1330* and note 1, following notes to 7.85.20. See, too, 1524* below, esp. note 15. See, too, 1.4.2 and notes.

"worshiped by Brahmā" brahmapūjitam: Ct offers two explanations of the term: "It is worshiped by four-faced Brahmā because it takes as its subject the history of the incarnation of the Lord [Viṣṇu]. Moreover, it is worshiped by brahmans, that is to say, brahman seers. (brahmaṇā caturmukhena bhagavadavatāracaritaviṣayatvāt pūjitam. kiṃca brahmabhir brahmarṣibhiḥ pūjitam.)" Cr glosses, "worshiped by brahma, that is to say, [worshiped] by brahmans, Hiraṇyagarbha, Viṣṇu, and so forth (brahmabhir brāhmaṇahiraṇyagarbhaviṣṇuprabhṛtbhīḥ pūjitam)." Cs offers two reasons for Brahmā's reverence: 1) because he himself caused it to be created and 2) because it [the poem] contains the history of the god whom he himself worships (brahmapūjitaṃ svakāritatvāt svapūjyadevacaritabharitatvāc ca).

Following verse 26, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert a passage of twenty lines [1519*, lines 1–4; 1522*, lines 1–10; 1523*, lines 1–2; 1524*, lines 1–3; 1539*, line 1].

"Then Viṣṇu,[1] who pervades this entire triple world,[2] together with what is fixed and moving, was reestablished in the triple world,[1] just as before.[3][GPP 7.111.2; KK 7.111.2; 1519*, lines 1–2] And ever since then, in heaven, the gods, together with the gandharvas, as well as the perfected beings and supreme seers, listen constantly in supreme delight to this poem,[4] the Rāmāyaṇa.[7.111.3, GPP, KK; 1519*, lines 3–4] This tale confers long life and prosperity,[5] and it removes all sin. A man who is wise should have the Rāmāyaṇa, which is equal to the vedas,[6] recited at ceremonies for the departed.[7][7.111.4, GPP, KK; 1522*, lines 1–2] Whoever recites so much as a quarter verse[8] would be freed from all his sins, and should he lack a son, he would get one, and should he be poor, he would acquire wealth.[7.111.5, GPP, KK; 1522*, lines 3–4] Even a man who commits sins day after day becomes completely free from all sins if he recites even a single verse.[7.111.6, GPP, KK; 1522*, lines 5–6] Someone who recites it is to be given garments, cows, and gold; for, when a reciter is satisfied, all the divinities too are gratified.[7.111.7, GPP, KK; 1522*, lines 7–8] A man who recites this Rāmāyaṇa, the tale that leads to long life, together with his sons and grandsons rejoices in this world and, having passed away, rejoices in the next.[9][7.111.8, GPP, KK; 1522*, lines 9–10] If one recites the Rāmāyaṇa with deep concentration at dawn,[10] midday, afternoon, and evening, he will never come to grief.

[GPP 7.111.9; KK 7.111.9 (in brackets and numbered); 1523*, lines 1–2] And as for the delightful city of Ayodhyā, after remaining deserted for many, many years,[11] it will find a new king in Ṛṣabha[12] and so will be populated once more.[13][7.111.10, GPP, KK; 1524*, lines 1–2] The son of Pracetas composed[14] this tale that confers long life, together with its epilogue and its account of what was yet to come,[15] and Brahmā himself approved of it.[16][7.111.11, GPP, KK; 1524*, line 3, and 1539*]"

[1] "Viṣṇu . . . was reestablished in the triple world" pratiṣṭhito viṣṇuḥ svargaloke: Cg and Ct understand Rāma's ascension to heaven to take place after the ascension of his devotees to their respective heavenly abodes. Ct refers to the location as the world of Upendra, while Cg refers to it as the highest heaven, Vaikuṇṭha, although probably these refer to the same location. (tato bhaktajanasya svargaprāpaṇānantaraṃ svayam api viṣṇur upendratvaṃ prāptaḥ. svargaloka upendraloke . . . pratiṣṭhitaḥ—so Ct; tataḥ svabhaktajanasya svarlokaprāpaṇānantaraṃ viṣṇuḥ svargaloke paramasvarge vaikuṇṭhe—so Cg.) Cr, on the other hand, attempts to distinguish Rāma's final destination from that of Viṣṇu, explaining, "Then, after the departure for Sāketa of which Rāma was the agent . . . Viṣṇu, who consisted of the portions of Bharata, etc., in the heavenly world, that is to say, in the heaven in which he is sung about, that is to say, praised, that world consists of Vaikuṇṭha, etc. (tato rāmakartṛkasāketagamanānantaram . . . sa viṣṇur bharatādyaṃśabhūtaḥ svargaloke svarge 'pi gīyate praśasyate sa eva loko vaikuṇṭhaprabhṛtiḥ . . . pratiṣṭhito 'bhavad iti śeṣaḥ.)" Compare Cr's comments at notes to 7.100.11–12,14 and at 16 above. Cg argues that the name Viṣṇu, i.e., the [all]-pervader, is particularly used here to dispel any erroneous idea that the word svarga [might indicate] a world that is greater [than that of Viṣṇu, i.e., the [all]-pervader] (svargaśabdasya lokaparatvabhramavyāvṛttyarthaṃ viṣṇum viśinaṣṭi).

[2] "who pervades this entire triple world" yena vyāptam idaṃ sarvaṃ trailokyam: Ct notes that the phrase indicates that Viṣṇu pervades the universe in his capacity as its material cause and that his being established in any particular heaven is as illusory as his having taken on a human body. (sarvaṃ trailokyaṃ jagadupādānatvena vyāptaṃ svargapratiṣṭhitatvaṃ tu manuṣyadehadhāraṇavan māyikam iti bhāvaḥ.) Ct understands this phrase to be a negative response as to whether Viṣṇu [who has been established in heaven] is subject to delimitation (evaṃ tarhi saparicchedaḥ kiṃ sa nety āha—yeneti.) Cs similarly states, "The half line indicates that there is no delimitation of Hari (na paricchedo harer ity atrāha)."

[3] "just as before" yathā purā: T2,G2,3,M1,10, and KK and VSP read instead the synonymous yathāpuram.

[4] "in supreme delight to this poem" saṃhṛṣṭāḥ kāvyam: KK and VSP read instead saṃtuṣṭā divyam, "well pleased to this celestial [Rāmāyaṇa]."

[5] "confers long life and prosperity" āyuṣaṃ saubhāgyam: Literally, "pertaining to long life [and] prosperity." As several of the commentators point out, the first term means that listening to or reciting the poem increases the life span of the virtuous, while the second term means increasing prosperity or felicity. (śrutaṃ paṭhitaṃ ca sadāyurjanakam ity arthaḥ. saubhāgyam saubhāgyavardhanam—so Ct; Cg and Cr similarly.)

[6] "equal to the vedas" vedasamam: Ct seems slightly uneasy at the equation. He remarks, "Even though the poem takes Brahman for its subject, as do the vedas, still, since [unlike the vedas] it was composed by a human being, it is slightly inferior to the vedas. This is the meaning. (vedavadbrahmaviṣayatve 'pi pauruṣeyatvena vedataḥ kiṃcin nyūnam ity arthaḥ.)" Cr understands the poem to be similar to the vedas because it teaches about the innermost spirit of the sun (sūryāntaryāmipratipādakatvena vedasadṛśam). No doubt the reference is to the Ādityahṛdaya. On this passage, see App. I, No. 65, following notes to 6.93.27.

[7] "should have . . . recited at ceremonies for the departed" śrāddheṣu śrāvayet: Literally, "he should cause it be heard during śrāddha rituals." The word śrāddha refers to the ritual offerings of food and water to one's departed ancestors. Cg remarks that we should supply the words "for the purpose of the unfailing gratification of the ancestors (akṣayyapitṛtṛptyartham iti śeṣaḥ)." Cr similarly notes that the reference suggests that hearing the glorious Rāmāyaṇa has the power of gratifying the ancestors (etena śrīmad-rāmāyaṇaśruteḥ pitṝṇāṃ tṛptikārakatvaṃ sūcitam).

Following line 1522*, line 2 (= KK 4ef in brackets), KK inserts a passage of one line [1522(A)*]: "And this unsurpassed Rāmāyaṇa is the very essence of the Gāyatrī[mantra] (gāyatryāś ca svarūpaṃ tad rāmāyaṇam anuttamam)." See Introduction, "Gāyatrī-mantra," pp. 187–98, and notes to 7.1.1 for the tradition that the Rāmāyaṇa itself is an expansion of the Gāyatrīmantra.

[8] "so much as a quarter verse" pādam api: T1,M3,9, and KK and VSP read instead padam api, "even so much as a word."

[9] "rejoices in this world and, having passed away, rejoices in the next" loke 'smin pretya ceha mahīyate: The line is elliptical and ambiguous, and its syntax is scattered. A literal rendering would be "In this world, having passed away, and here, one rejoices or is praised." The verse is an awkward paraphrase of the similar verse at 1.1.78. Ct and Cr struggle to clarify the syntax. Ct says, "The meaning is 'He is praised in this world.' 'Having passed away,' that is to say, 'even after death.' 'And here'—from the word 'and' we understand 'in the next world' as well. And he rejoices in this world. Thus there is reverence in this world because his renown never ends. (loke 'smin mahīyata ity arthaḥ. pretya maraṇottaram api. iha ca cāt paraloka iha loke ca mahīyate. iha loke pūjā ca kīrtyavicchedāt.)" Cr explains, "Having passed away, that is to say, having gone to the next world, he is praised, that is to say, worshiped by all. Moreover, in this world he is praised, and having passed away, he is also praised. That is the meaning. (pretya lokāntaraṃ gatvā mahīyate sarvaiḥ. pūjyate kiṃceha loke mahīyate pretya ca mahīyata ity arthaḥ.)" Cg merely notes that we must use the verb mahīyate twice: once with the phrase asmin loke and once with iha. (loke 'smin mahīyata ity anukarṣaḥ.)

[10] "at dawn" govisarge: Literally, "at the releasing of the cattle." This is a relatively uncommon kenning for dawn in the literature. See Gonda 1975b, p. 49.

[11] "for many, many years" varṣagaṇān bahūn: Literally, "for many multitudes of years."

[12] "it will find a new king in Ṛṣabha" ṛṣabhaṃ prāpya rājānam: Literally, "having acquired Ṛṣabha as king." The deserted and derelict condition of Ayodhyā is poignantly described in the sixteenth sarga of the RaghuVa (16.4–41), but there it is Rāma's son Kuśa who restores the city to its former glory. On the question of the interregnum in Ayodhyā, Ct challenges Ck and comments, "On this point Kataka says, 'It must be kept in view that the region of Ayodhyā was protected by Bharata, who, having been consecrated in the kingdom of Ayodhyā, remained in Nandigrāma.' But this idea is questionable in light of the fact that it is contradicted by Bharata's previous comment (7.97.6) when he said, 'I swear to you by truth itself, your majesty, delight of the Raghus, and by the heavenly world as well, that, without you, I do not desire kingship.' Similarly, some other authorities regard this as being contradicted by the text of the Padmapurāṇa, which states, 'Bharata and Śatrughna, as well as their two lovely wives, having fixed their purpose on following Rāghava, accompanied him. Rāghava took on his four-armed form, and then Bharata and Śatrughna became, respectively, the conch and discus in two of his lotuslike hands.' (atra katakaḥ—evaṃ cāyodhyāviṣaye 'bhiṣiktena bharatenāyodhyādeśo nandigrāme sthitvaiva rakṣita iti draṣṭavyam iti. tatra mānaṃ cintyam. satyena ca śape rājan svargalābhena caiva hi / na kāmaye yathārājyaṃ tvāṃ vinā raghunandana // iti pūrva-bharatoktyā viruddhaṃ ca. tathā—bharataś cāpi śatrughnas tayor dārā ubhe śubhe / rāghavasyānugamane niścitārthāḥ samāyayuḥ // rāghavas tu caturbāhur abhūt tasya karābjayoḥ / ubhau bharataśatrughnau śaṅkhacakrau babhūvatuḥ // iti pādmaviruddhaṃ cety anye.)" See the similar passage found at PadmaP (ĀnSS) 6(Uttarakhaṇḍa).271.86. Compare 7.97.7,16–19, where Rāma consecrates Kuśa in Kosala and Lava in the northern kingdom.

[13] "and so will be populated once more" nivāsam upayāsyati: Literally, "it will go to inhabitation."

[14] "The son of Pracetas composed" vyadhāt pracetasaḥ putraḥ: V2,B3,4,D5–7,10,11, T1,2,G2,M2,4,7–10, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read the hypermetric kṛtavān, "he made or created," for vyadhāt, "he composed." As Ct points out, the reference is, of course, to Vālmīki (pracetasaḥ putro vālmīkiḥ). On Vālmīki's connection with the Bhṛgu lineage, see Sukthankar 1944; Shah 1975, pp. 50–53; R. Goldman 1976; and S. Goldman 2015a.

[15] "together with its epilogue and its account of what was yet to come" sabhaviṣyaṃ sahottaram: Literally, "with the future [and] with the following." Cg understands, "with its epilogue" to refer to the events following [Rāma's] consecration, while the future events are those that take place following Sītā's entrance into the earth (sahottaram iti. abhiṣekānantaravṛttāntaḥ. sītābhūpraveśānantarabhāvivṛttāntas tu sabhaviṣyam ity ucyate). Note that in his comments to 1.4.2 (= GPP 1.4.3), which uses both of these phrases, Cg similarly defines the future events as those that took place following Rāma's performance of the aśvamedha, since the poem itself was composed before that performance. His explanation of the phrase "with its epilogue" is the same. (sahottaraṃ rāmābhiṣekād uttareṇa vṛttāntena . . . sabhaviṣyam aśvamedhottarabhāvivṛttāntasahitam aśvamedhapūrvakāle 'sya kāvyasya pravṛttatvāt.) Similarly, compare Cg's comments at 1.3.29 (= VSP 1.3.38), where the text refers to Vālmīki's rendition of events that had not yet befallen Rāma in the latter portion of the poem (anāgataṃ yat kiṃcid rāmasya . . . tat cakārottare kāvye vālmīkiḥ). On this passage Cg notes, "The blessed seer named Vālmīki rendered, that is to say, set forth, in his latter poetry, that is to say, in the Uttarakāṇḍa, whatever adventures, including the revivification of the brahman's son and the aśvamedha, that had not yet happened, that is to say, were still in the future, for Rāma on earth. And by the phrase 'yat kiṃcit ["whatsoever"]' is illuminated the great number of events in the time prior to the abandonment of Sītā and the very few that followed it, so they say. (vālmīkināmā bhagavān ṛṣī rāmasya vasudhātale 'nāgataṃ bhāvi yat kiṃcic caritam asti brāhmaṇaputrajīvanāśvamedhādhikaṃ taduttare kāvya uttarakāṇḍe cakāra pratipāditavān. yat kiṃcid ity anena sītāvisarjanāt pūrvakālasya bhūyastvam anantarakālasyālpatvaṃ ca dyotyata ity āhuḥ.)"

Ct explains the terms as follows: "With the future, that is to say, with an account of the actions of the Lord in Ayodhyā following his wanderings [in exile]. Together with its epilogue, that is to say, as is stated in the verse beginning 'just so far is the foremost tale [= 7.100.26]' that is to say, together with its earlier and last books (sabhaviṣyaṃ bhagavadyānānantaraṃ bhagavadayodhyāvṛttāntakathanasahitam. sahottaraṃ etāvad etad ākhyānam ity ataḥ prāktanottarakāṇḍasahitam)." Compare Ct's remarks on the same phrases at 1.4.2 (= GPP 1.4.3), where he notes that some authorities believe the phrase "future events" refers to the events that took place following the banishment of Sītā, while others believe it refers to the events following her entrance into the earth (bhaviṣyaṃ ca sītāvisarjanam ārabhyety eke tasyā bhūpraveśād uttarakālikam iti pare). Ct's comments on 1.3.29 are similar to those of Cg. He differs from him only in his explanation of the phrase uttare kāvye. He takes uttara in its sense of "excellent," explaining, "In that excellent poem, that is to say, distinguished from all others (uttare sarvato viśiṣṭe kāvye)."

Cr here comments only on the term sabhaviṣyam, "future [events]," and, as he does earlier at 1.4.2, reads it as a compound made up of the words sabha (= sabhā), which he glosses as "those possessing assemblies," and viṣya, "to be pervaded (from the root √viṣ, 'to pervade')," which he glosses as "[is] pervaded," and understands the compound to mean "to be disseminated among all men who possess assembly halls (sabhaviṣyaṃ sabheṣu sabhāvatsu viṣyaṃ vyāptam)." In his comments on 1.4.2, however, Cr addresses both terms. Following upon his analysis of the word sabhaviṣyam, he says, "Having composed that Rāmāyaṇa consisting of six kāṇḍas, together with its epilogue, that is to say, together with the Uttarakāṇḍa, he [Vālmīki] thought, 'What competent person, that is to say, capable of memorizing it, would perform, that is to say, could recite, that Rāmāyaṇa to people in assemblies in such a way that there would be dissemination of the Rāmāyaṇa?' (sahottaram uttarakāṇḍasahitaṃ tatkāṇḍaṣaṭkaṃ rāmāyaṇaṃ kṛtvā sabhaviṣyaṃ sabheṣu sabhāvatpuruṣeṣu viṣyaṃ rāmāyaṇavyāpakatvaṃ yathā syāt tathā ko nu prabhur etad dhāraṇasamartha etadrāmāyaṇaṃ prayuñjīyāt sabhāsadān śrāvayed ity arthaḥ.)" Cr, apropos of 1.3.29, notes the following: "Not yet come, that is to say, whatever adventures of Rāma had not yet come, that is to say, were not manifest. The meaning is 'those belonging to the future time.' And then in the latter poetry, that is to say, in the Uttarakāṇḍa, the blessed seer, who was possessed of supreme, divine powers and who knew the past, present, and future, made, that is to say, described [those events]. The past and present adventures of Rāma are described in the [first] six kāṇḍas. The future adventures of Rāma are described in the Uttarakāṇḍa. That is the meaning. (anāgatam iti. vasudhātale rāmasya yat kiṃcic caritam anāgatam aprakaṭitaṃ bhaviṣyatkālikam ity arthaḥ. tad evottare kāvya uttare kāṇḍe bhagavān paramamāhātmyavān ṛṣis trikālajñaś cakāra varṇayāmāsa. bhūtavartamānakālikarāmacaritāni ṣaṭsu kāṇḍeṣu varṇitāni bhaviṣyatkālikarāmacaritāny uttarakāṇḍe varṇitānīty arthaḥ.)"

See notes to verse 26 above; see also 1.3.29; 1.4.2; and notes. Interestingly, in the Padmapurāṇa's account of Vālmīki's composition of the poem, it is stated that there is a total of only six kāṇḍas [khaṇḍas]. The Padma reaches this number not by eliminating the Uttara but by collapsing the narratives of the Bāla and Ayodhyā, referring to it only as the Bālakāṇḍa, thus eliminating the Ayodhyākāṇḍa. See PadmaP (ĀnSS) 5(Pātāla-khaṇḍa).66.162–184.

Ck, who reads the variant uttame, "excellent," in his comments to 1.3.29 (= Mysore edition 1.3.39), notes, "The future matter concerns the revivification of the Brahman's son, the aśvamedha sacrifice, etc." He glosses uttama by saying that the Rāmāyaṇa is the most excellent of poems because it is characterized by the full complement of poetic qualities. He also supplies the phrase "including the prior and latter sections." (anāgataṃ brāhmaṇaputrojjīvanāśvamedhayāgādi. uttame kāvya iti. samagrakāvyalakṣaṇalakṣitatvāt kāvyottame pūrvottaravibhāgavatīti śeṣaḥ.) Our manuscript of Ck ends at verse 19 above.

[16] "Brahmā himself approved of it" tad brahmāpy anvamanyata: Ct explains, "Brahmā, who is Hiraṇyagarbha, also approved it, that is to say, he accepted it, because of its utter truthfulness, because of its serving as a supplement to the vedas, and because of its being the means to the accomplishment of all goals. And thus it is the accomplishment of all desires. (tad brahmā hiraṇyagarbho 'py anvamanyata satyaśabdatayā vedopabṛṃhaṇatayā sarvārthasādhakatayā cāṅgīkṛtavān iti sarveṣṭasiddhiḥ.)" See 1.4.5, where Vālmīki accepts Lava and Kuśa as his pupils for the sake of providing them with vedic supplementation or exegesis (vedopabṛṃhaṇāya). Cr simply glosses the verb anvamanyata, "he approved," in its other sense, "he praised (apūjayat)." Cg understands the particle api to indicate preeminence (prādhānye), i.e., that Brahmā was the first and foremost to accept the Rāmāyaṇa. Like Ct, he takes the verb anvamanyata in its sense of "he accepted or made it his own (aṅgīkṛtavān)." The meaning of this, Cg continues, is that Brahmā continually recites the poem. It will be recalled that at 1.2.30–37 Brahmā commissioned Vālmīki to compose this epic poem on the life of Rāma. Here, we learn that he was pleased with the product. Cg concludes his commentary on this verse, and indeed, on the entire epic, by noting that the syllable -ya- in the verb anvamanyata constitutes [the final] syllable of the Gāyatrīmantra. This, he notes, suggests that the Rāmāyaṇa is, in fact, a gloss or exposition of the Gāyatrīmantra. (tad rāmāyaṇam brahmāpy anvamanyata. apiḥ prādhānye. anvamanyatāṅgīkṛtavān. sadā paṭhati smety arthaḥ. atra yakāro gāyatryakṣaram. tena gāyatrīvivaraṇaṃ rāmāyaṇam iti sūcitam.) For a discussion of the Gāyatrīmantra in the Rāmāyaṇa, see Introduction, "Gāyatrīmantra," pp. 187–98, and notes to 7.1.1.

Following 1539*, GPP (in brackets, unnumbered, following 7.111.11), Gita Press, KK, and VSP insert a passage of twenty-eight additional lines [1541*, lines 1–13; 1522(A), line 1; 1522, lines 3–4 (repeated); 1530*, lines 7–10; 1543*, lines 29–30, 39–40, 34, 35; 1543(B), lines 1–2; 1543, line 41; 1544*, line 1]. No commentator consulted comments on this passage. Among the translators consulted, only Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 628) and Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, pp. 941–42) render these lines.

"Through hearing even a single chapter, a man obtains the fruits[1] of a thousand aśvamedhas and ten thousand vājapeyas.[7.111.12, Gita Press, KK, VSP; 1541*, lines 1–2] Hearing the Rāmāyaṇa in this world is the equivalent of visiting holy pilgrimage sites, such as Prayāga; rivers, such as the Ganges; forests, such as the Naimiśa; and sites, such as Kurukṣetra.[2][7.111.13, Gita Press, KK, VSP; 1541*, lines 3–5] One who donates a bhāra of gold[3] at Kurukṣetra during an eclipse of the sun and one who hears the Rāmāyaṇa in this world are equal.[7.111.14, Gita Press, KK, VSP; 1541*, lines 6–7] Anyone who, filled with profound faith, listens to the tale of Rāghava will go to Viṣṇu's [heavenly] world, freed from all sin.[7.111.15, Gita Press, KK, VSP; 1541*, lines 8–9] Whoever listens constantly and with devotion to this first of poems produced by a seer and composed long ago by Vālmīki, would be absorbed into the body of Viṣṇu.[7.111.16, Gita Press, KK, VSP; 1541*, lines 10–11] One's sons and wives will thrive, and so will one's wealth and descendants. Recognizing this to be true, people should listen to it with their minds well controlled.[7.111.17, Gita Press, KK, VSP; 1541*, lines 12–13] This unsurpassed Rāmāyaṇa is the essence of the Gāyatrī[mantra].[4] Whoever recites so much as a quarter verse[5] would be freed from all his sins, and should he lack a son, he would get one, and should he be poor, he would acquire wealth.[7.111.18, Gita Press, KK, VSP; 1522(A), line 1, and 1522, lines 3–4 (repeated)] And[6] whoever should constantly recite and listen to the history of Rāghava with devotion will, having become free from moral stain, attain long life.[7.111.19, Gita Press, KK, VSP; 1530*, lines 7–8] Whoever wishes to obtain supreme beatitude should meditate constantly on Rāghava, and he should have this tale recited for brahmans[7] every day.[7.111.20, Gita Press, KK, VSP; 1530*, lines 9–10] Whoever should recite this entire history of the lord of the Raghus will, without a doubt, go to the great [heavenly] world of Viṣṇu.[8][7.111.21, Gita Press, KK, VSP; 1543*, lines 29–30] And, without a doubt, his father, grandfather, great-grandfather, and his great-grandfather's father will go to Viṣṇu.[9][7.111.22, Gita Press, KK, VSP; 1543*, lines 39–40] And[10] the history of Rāghava constantly confers the four ends of man. Therefore, without a doubt,[11] one should make efforts to listen to it constantly.[7.111.23, Gita Press, KK, VSP; 1543*, lines 34–35] Whoever listens to the Rāmāyaṇa with devotion, or even to a quarter verse or a single word, goes to the world[12] of Brahmā, where he is eternally worshiped by Brahmā.[7.111.24, Gita Press, KK, VSP; 1543(B), lines 1–2] Thus has this ancient tale been told, and may it be auspicious for you. Confidently declare, 'May Viṣṇu's power be exalted!'[13][7.111.25, Gita Press, KK, VSP; 1543, line 41, and 1544*, line 1]"

[1] "obtains the fruits" labhate: Literally, "he obtains." The verse is elliptical and lacks an object for the verb. We have supplied the contextually obvious term phalam, "fruits."

[2] "Hearing the Rāmāyaṇa in this world is the equivalent of visiting holy pilgrimage sites, such as Prayāga; rivers, such as the Ganges; forests, such as the Naimiśa; and sites, such as Kurukṣetra." prayāgādīni tīrthāni gaṅgādyāḥ saritas tathā / naimiśādīny araṇyāni kurukṣetrādikāny api // gatāni tena loke 'smin yena rāmāyaṇaṃ śrutam /: Literally, "By whom the Rāmāyaṇa is heard, in this world, by him are visited tīrthas, such as Prayāga; rivers, such as the Ganges; forests, such as the Naimiśa; and sites, such as Kurukṣetra." One could also take the phrase "in this world (loke 'smin)" with either clause.

[3] "a bhāra of gold" hemabhāram: A bhāra is a traditional measure of weight, which we reckon to be approximately 275 pounds. For a more detailed discussion of this, see notes to 6.55.47. See Barnett 1914, pp. 207, 209, 210, and Kane 1974, vol. 2, pt. 2, p. 880, note 2352.

[4] "This unsurpassed Rāmāyaṇa is the essence of the Gāyatrī[mantra]." gāyatryāś ca svarūpaṃ tad rāmāyaṇam uttamam: See notes 7 and 16 to 1539*, following notes to verse 26 above.

[5] "a quarter verse" pādam api: See 1524*, note 8, following notes to verse 26 above.

[6] "And" ca: M3 and GPP (7.111 unnumbered, in brackets), Gita Press (17.111.19), KK (7.111.19), and VSP (7.111.19) read instead the emphatic particle ha.

[7] "for brahmans" brāhmaṇebhyaḥ: The idea is that the recitation is for the enjoyment and benefit of brahmans. For some reason, Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 628) reads the term as if it were the instrumental, rendering, "by Brahmanas."

[8] "will, without a doubt, go to the great [heavenly] world of Viṣṇu" sa vaiṣṇavaṃ mahālokaṃ gato vai nātrasaṃśayaḥ: G1,M3, and Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead so 'sukṣaye viṣṇulokaṃ gacchaty eva na saṃśayaḥ, "He will go at the end of his life without a doubt to the heavenly world of Viṣṇu."

[9] "And, without a doubt, his father, grandfather, great-grandfather, and his great-grandfather's father will go to Viṣṇu." pitā pitāmahaś caiva prapitāmaha eva ca / prapitāmahapitā caiva viṣṇuṃ yānti na saṃśayaḥ //: M3 and Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead pitā pitāmahas tasya tathaiva prapitāmahaḥ / tatpitā tatpitā caiva viṣṇuṃ yānti na saṃśayaḥ //, "And his father, and grandfather, and his great-grandfather, and the latter's father, and his father as well will, without doubt, go to Viṣṇu."

[10] "And" tu: M3 and Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the synonymous ca, "and."

[11] "without a doubt" nātra saṃśayaḥ: Literally, "there is no doubt with regard to this." M3 and Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead paraṃ sadā, lending the line the sense "Therefore, one should always make every effort to listen to this supreme [tale]."

[12] "world" sthānam: Literally, "place."

[13] "Thus has this ancient tale been told, and may it be auspicious for you. Confidently declare, 'May Viṣṇu's power be exalted!'" evam etat purāvṛttam ākhyātaṃ bhadram astu vaḥ / pravyāharata viśrabdhaṃ balaṃ viṣṇoḥ pravardhatām //: M3 and Gita Press, KK, and VSP read ākhyānam, "tale," for ākhyātam, "told," lending the line the sense "Thus is this tale that took place so long ago." The two lines lend themselves to two plausible interpretations. According to one, the first line consists of two separate syntactic units: 1) "Thus is this tale that took place so long ago. Thus has this ancient tale been told (evam etat purāvṛttam ākhyānam/ākhyātam)" and 2) "May auspiciousness be for you (bhadram astu vaḥ)." This is the interpretation of Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 628), who renders, "Such is the story of things that happened long ago. May all good betide you." Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 942), like Raghunathan, takes the phrase bhadram astu vaḥ as a separate unit, rendering, "May all be well with you." This translation, however, takes ākhyānam, "tale," to be the object of the imperative pravyāharata in the second line, thus yielding the translation, "Thus recite this historical narrative with full faith." In our opinion, this forces the syntax as well as sense of the root pra + vi + ā + √hṛ, "to say." This interpretation leaves the second half of the second line as a separate unit, as an apparent authorial interjection, rendered in Gita Press somewhat awkwardly as "enhance-power [sic] of Lord Viṣṇu (Śrī Rāma)."

We, however, prefer to understand bhadram as an adjective modifying ākhyāna, "tale [of Rāma]." Thus, in keeping with the tenor of the phalaśruti, we believe that the poet is expressing a wish that the poem be auspicious for the audience. Like Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 628), we understand the verb pravyāharata to be an injunction to the reader or hearer to utter these final words. He renders, "Proclaim without a care 'May the power of Vishnu grow for ever-more.' "

The Prakṣipta Sargas

Prakṣipta I, Sarga 1 = Appendix I, No. 1, lines 1–123

1. "Then, delighting in battle, the rākṣasas marched back to Aśmanagara, and there Daśagrīva spied a resplendent mansion.[1–2]

2–3. "Filled with gateways of lapis, adorned with fretworks of pearls, thick with golden pillars, with raised platforms on every side, with stairways of diamond and crystal, filled with fretworks of bells, and equipped with many fine seats, it was charming and the equal of great Indra's palace.[3–6]

4. "When the valorous Daśagrīva spied that magnificent mansion, he said: 'Dear friend, whose mansion is this that resembles Mount Meru or Mount Mandara?[7–8]

5. " 'Go quickly, Prahasta, and find out about this magnificent palace.' Addressed in this fashion, Prahasta entered that splendid mansion.[9–10]

6. "And observing that its gateway was deserted, he pressed on into an interior courtyard. Having passed through seven inner courtyards, he then spied a flame.[11–12]

7. "Then there appeared a man who was laughing in delight. When Prahasta heard that loud laughter, the hair of his body bristled.[13–14]

8. "And there in the midst of the flame stood that enchanting person, wearing a garland of gold. He was as hard to look at as the sun, and he resembled Lord Yama in person.[15–16]

9. "Having seen this, he retreated in haste, and when he had done so, that night-roaming rākṣasa related to Rāvaṇa everything that had happened.[17–18]

10. "Then, Rāma, Daśagrīva, who resembled a heap of collyrium split open, having descended from the Puṣpaka, desired to enter that dwelling.[19–20]

11. "But standing before him, blocking the doorway, there suddenly appeared a handsome, yet terrifying, man with a tongue of flame and wearing a crown.[21–22]

12–13. "His eyes were red and his teeth were lovely. His lips were like the bimba fruit, and he was beautiful to behold. His nose was absolutely terrifying. His neck was like a conch shell, and he had mighty jaws. His beard was thick and his bones deep set. He was fanged and hair-raising. Wielding an iron cudgel, he stood blocking the gateway.[23–26]

14. "Now, at the sight of him, the hairs on Rāvaṇa's body bristled. His heart pounded, and he began to tremble.[27–28]

15. "When Rāvaṇa perceived these inauspicious omens, Rāma, he began to ponder. And even as he was pondering, the man spoke:[29–30]

16. " 'What are you wondering about, rākṣasa? Tell me quickly and with confidence. I shall offer you the hospitality of combat, heroic night-roaming rākṣasa.'[31–32]

17. "And having thus addressed the rākṣasa, he once more spoke these words: 'What do you think? Would you rather fight with Bali or with me?'[33–34]

18. "Then Rāvaṇa once more experienced a bristling of the hairs of his body. But then, plucking up his courage, Rāvaṇa spoke these words:[35–36]

19. " 'Foremost among the eloquent, tell me: "Who lives here in this house?" I will fight with him, sir, or do as you think best.'[37–38]

20. "The man then spoke once more in this fashion: 'The lord of the dānavas lives here.[39]

21. " 'He is a supremely generous and truly valorous hero, a hero endowed with many virtues, and who is like Yama, the ender of all things, with his noose in hand.[40–41]

22. " 'He is as filled with blazing energy as the rising sun, and he never retreats in battles. He is impetuous and unconquerable; a powerful victor and a veritable ocean of virtues.[42–43]

23. " 'He is kindly spoken, accustomed to sharing with others, and always performs kindnesses for his guru. He acts appropriately to the moment. He is immensely powerful, speaks only the truth, and is beautiful to look upon.[44–45]

24. " 'He is a skillful hero, endowed with every virtue, and ever devoted to vedic study. He roars, he blows, he blazes, and he burns.[46–47]

25. " 'He knows no fear of the gods, the hosts of malignant spirits, the great serpents, or the mighty birds. This is the person with whom you wish to fight.[48–49]

26. “ ‘So, exceedingly mighty lord of the rākṣasas, if it pleases you to engage with Bali, then enter and give battle without delay.’[50–51]

27. “Addressed in this fashion, Daśagrīva entered that place where Bali was. But when he, who resembled fire, saw the lord of Laṅkā, he burst out laughing.[52–53]

28. “As he stood there, that foremost of the dānavas was as impossible to look upon as the sun.[54]

29. “And then, the moment Bali, who had taken on a cosmic form, saw him, he set the rākṣasa, whom he had seized, upon his hip and said:[55–56]

30. “ ‘Can I fulfill a desire of yours, great-armed Daśagrīva? And what is the purpose of your coming here? Tell me, lord of the rākṣasas.’[57–58]

31. “Addressed in this fashion by Bali, Rāvaṇa said, ‘I have heard, O illustrious one, that long ago you were bound by Viṣṇu. I am able to free you from that bondage, without a doubt.’[59–61]

32. “Then, addressed in this fashion, Bali let loose a burst of laughter and said to him: ‘Listen, Rāvaṇa, I will tell you that which you are asking about.[62–63]

33. “ ‘The lords of the dānavas and others, arrogant in their strength, both in the recent past and in antiquity, were subdued by that mighty one, the dark person always standing at the doorway.[64–66]

34. “ ‘It was he himself who bound me, for it is impossible to avoid one’s destiny. And, Rāvaṇa, who indeed in this world can deceive that person?[67–68]

35. “ ‘For he who stands at the doorway is the one who carries off all beings. And he is the primal actor and the one who causes all others to act. He is the creator and the lord of the worlds.[69–70]

36. “ ‘You do not know him, nor do I. For he is the lord of what is past, present, and future. He is Kali and Kāla, who carries off all beings.[71–72]

37. “ ‘He is the destroyer as well as the creator of all the three worlds. He destroys all beings, fixed and moving.[73–74]

38. “ ‘And then, that great lord creates it all over again so that it has neither beginning nor end. For he is sacrifice, charity, and oblation, night-roaming rākṣasa.[75–76]

39. “ ‘For he is, without a doubt, the all-in-all, the lord of the worlds, the creator, and the protector. There is no other great being such as he to be found in all the three worlds.[77–78]

40. “ ‘And as for you and me, foremost of kings, and all the others who have gone before us, that great being is the leader of us all, as if we were cattle on a rope.[79–80]

41–42. “ ‘Vṛtra, Danu, Śuka, Śambhu, Niśumbha, Śumbha, Kālanemi, Prahlāda, Kūṭa, Vairocana, Mṛdu, the twin arjuna trees, Kaṃsa, and Kaiṭabha, together with Madhu—they all burned, glowed, blew, and rained.[81–84]

43. “ ‘All of those great dānavas ruled the kingdoms of the thirty gods. For in battle they had all defeated the hosts of the gods in their thousands.[85–86]

44. “ ‘But although they were equal in blazing energy to the rising sun, they were negligent and addicted to pleasures. All of those mighty dānavas, who could take on any form at will, were brought to destruction.[87–88]

45. “ ‘It is heard that they were unassailable in battle and unconquered. And yet, even those great beings, driven by the power of destiny, were brought to destruction.[89–90]

46. “ ‘Thousands of Indras, tens of thousands of gods, and the foremost seers in their hundreds and thousands have all been brought under his power by him who stands at the doorway.’[91–93]

47. “When he had heard those words of his, Rāvaṇa spoke these words: ‘I have seen the lord of the departed spirits, Kṛtānta himself, together with Mṛtyu.[94–95]

48. “ ‘He had a noose in his hand and shot forth great flames. His hair was standing on end, and he was terrifying. He had great fangs, his tongue was lightning, and the hair on his body consisted of serpents and scorpions.[96–97]

49. “ ‘His eyes were red and his onset was terrifying. Indeed, he was a terror to all beings. He was as impossible to gaze upon as the sun, and he never turned back in battles. He was the chastiser of the wicked, and yet, I defeated him in battle.[98–100]

50. “ ‘I felt neither the slightest fear nor any anxiety with regard to him, lord of the dānavas. But I do not recognize this person. Please, sir, tell me about him.’[101–102]

51. "When Bali Vairocana had heard these words of Rāvaṇa, he said: 'He is the Lord Hari Nārāyaṇa, creator of the triple world.[103–104]

52. " 'He is Ananta and Kapila, Jiṣṇu, and Narasiṃha of immense splendor. He is Ṛtadhāman and Sudhāman. With a noose in his hand, he is terrifying.[105–106]

53. " 'He is the equal of the twelve Ādityas, and he is the immemorial Puruṣottama. He is the lord of the gods and the foremost of gods. He resembles a black storm cloud.[107–108]

54. " 'Garlanded with flame, he is the yogin of the mighty roar, and he is loving toward his devotees. He is the Lord who sustains the worlds and who creates them.[109–110]

55. " 'And he, having become immensely powerful Kāla, destroys them as well. He is the sacrificer and the object of sacrifice. For he is Hari, who bears the discus as his weapon.[111–112]

56. " 'He consists of all the gods. Indeed, he consists of all beings, all the worlds, and all knowledge. He has a universal form and a cosmic form, and he is the great-armed Baladeva.[113–115]

57. " 'He is the slayer of heroes and has a hero's eye. And he is the unchanging guru of the triple world. Thus do all the hosts of sages who seek liberation conceive of him in his world.[116–117]

58. " 'Whoever knows him as the Puruṣa is freed from all sins. It is through constantly remembering and sacrificing to him that one would gain everything from him.'[118–119]

59. "And when he heard those words, Rāvaṇa went out.[120]

60. "The night-roaming rākṣasa did not see that person there, and so, releasing a roar in his delight, he set forth from Varuṇa's realm, returning by the path on which he had entered."[121–123]

[Colophon]

Prakṣipta I, Sarga 2 = App. I, No. 1, 15*, lines 1–29

1–2. "Now, having spent the night on the charming and splendid summit of Mount Meru, the lord of Laṅkā, after some thought, mounted the divine Puṣpaka. It resembled the horses of the sun, and it could travel by various paths of flight. It had been left in a region of the sky devoted to pleasure. He then proceeded to the world of Sūrya.[15*, lines 1–4]

3. "There he spied the splendid god Ravi, who consists of all blazing energy and who was adorned with superb, golden armlets, jewels, and garments.[15*, lines 5–6]

4. "His broad face was illuminated by his two splendid earrings. He was draped with red garlands and was ornamented with bracelets and gold necklaces.[15*, lines 7–8]

5. "His limbs were smeared with red sandalpaste, and he shone with a thousand rays. He was the primordial god Āditya, whose steed was Ucchaiḥśravas.[15*, lines 9–10]

6–7. "He was beginningless, endless, and indestructible. He was the witness of the worlds and the lord of the universe. When Rāvaṇa, foremost of the rākṣasas, saw that foremost god, he was afflicted by the power of the blazing splendor of Ravi, and he said to Prahasta: 'Go, my minister, and at my direction deliver to him this command:[15*, lines 11–14]

8. "' "Rāvaṇa has come for the purpose of battle. You must offer him combat or declare, 'I am vanquished.' Choose one option." '[15*, lines 15–16]

9. "Acting on his instructions, the rākṣasa approached Sūrya. There he saw the two gatekeepers, Piñgala and Daṇḍin.[15*, lines 17–18]

10. "When he had told the two of them everything concerning Rāvaṇa's resolve, Prahasta stood there silently, illuminated by the rays of blazing energy.[15*, lines 19–20]

11–12. "Daṇḍin then went to Ravi's side and, prostrating himself, reported to him. When Sūrya heard from Daṇḍin what had occurred regarding Rāvaṇa, that wise one, the destroyer of night, after some thought, spoke these words: 'Go, Daṇḍin, and either conquer him or say to him, "I am vanquished."[15*, lines 21–24]

13–14. " 'Do whatever you wish with the night-roaming rākṣasa for a while.' Having gone there on his instructions, he reported to the great rākṣasa the entire speech that had been spoken by Sūrya. When the lord of the rākṣasas had heard those words of Daṇḍin, the overlord of the rākṣasas departed after proclaiming his triumph."[15*, lines 25–29]

Prakṣipta I, Sarga 3 = App. I, No. 1, lines 124–245

1. "Now, having spent the night on the charming and splendid summit of Mount Meru, the heroic lord of the rākṣasas, after some thought, proceeded to the world of Soma, the moon god.[124–125]

2. “And then someone passed by, mounted on a chariot. He was adorned with heavenly garlands and unguents and was attended by the foremost of the hosts of apsarases.[126–127]

3. “Rāvaṇa saw this person, exhausted from lovemaking, lying across the bodies of the apsarases and being awakened with kisses. And, having seen him, he was filled with curiosity.[128–129]

4. “Then he saw a seer there, and, having seen him, he said this to him: ‘Welcome to you, divine seer. You have come here at an appropriate time.[130–131]

5. “ ‘Who is that mounted on this chariot and attended by a host of apsarases? He moves about shamelessly, so it seems, as if he finds nothing to fear.’[132–133]

6. “Addressed in this fashion by Rāvaṇa, Parvata spoke these words: ‘Listen, dear child. I shall tell it just as it is, O you of great intellect.[134–135]

7. “ ‘He has conquered the worlds and pleased Brahmā, so now he is proceeding to the immensely blissful and highest station for liberation.[136–137]

8. “ ‘Doubtless having conquered them through austerities, just as you have, lord of the rākṣasas, that meritorious person, having drunk Soma, is proceeding on his way.[138–139]

9. “ ‘But you, too, tiger among the rākṣasas, are a hero true to your vows, and the mighty do not interfere with such seekers of spiritual knowledge.’[140–141]

10. “Just then Rāvaṇa spied in a splendid chariot a huge and immensely powerful person, blazing with beauty and serenaded with the sounds of singing and musical instruments.[142–143]

11. “ ‘Who is this going by, divine seer, so splendid and immensely radiant, together with kinnaras, who are singing and dancing so charmingly?’[144–145]

12. “When he heard this, that foremost of sages Parvata then said: ‘He was a hero and a warrior in combat who never turned back in battles.[146–147]

13. “ ‘While fighting, he was grievously wounded by weapons, and thus this accomplished hero and victor in battle gave his life for the sake of his master.[148–149]

14. “ ‘Although this hero was slain in battle, he first slew many in combat. He will be the guest of Indra, and wherever he might go, that foremost of men will be attended with dancing, singing, and amorous gestures.’[150–152]

15. “Now Rāvaṇa asked yet again, ‘Who is this who is going by, resembling the sun?’ Upon hearing Rāvaṇa’s words, Parvata said these words:[153–154]

16–17. “ ‘The one you see here, your majesty, on a flying palace made of solid gold and thronged with hosts of apsarases, he whose face is like the full moon, was a donor of gold, great king. Now, wearing variegated ornaments and garments and endowed with enormous splendor, he is going on his way in a swift chariot.’[155–158]

18. “When Rāvaṇa heard these words of Parvata, he said these words: ‘These kings that are passing by, foremost of seers, tell me about them.[159–160]

19. “ ‘Which among them, if asked, will offer me the hospitality of battle this very day? Please tell me that, knower of righteousness. For in accordance with righteousness, you are a father to me.’[161–162]

20. “Addressed in this fashion, Parvata then replied to Rāvaṇa: ‘These kings are seeking heaven, great king, not battle. But, great king, I will tell you who will offer you battle.[163–165]

21. “ ‘There is a king of immense blazing energy who is the great lord of the seven continents. He is renowned by the name “Māndhātṛ.” He will offer you battle.’[166–167]

22. “When he heard those words of Parvata, Rāvaṇa said these words: ‘Where is this king to be found? Tell me that truthfully. I shall go there this very day to the place where that bull among men is.’[168–170]

23. “When he had heard Rāvaṇa’s words, the sage spoke these words: ‘King Māndhātṛ, the foremost of kings, is the son of Yuvanāśva. Having conquered the seven continents up to the limit of the seas, he will come here this very day.’[171–173]

24. “Just then great-armed Rāvaṇa, arrogant in his strength throughout the triple world, spied the foremost of kings, Māndhātṛ, the heroic overlord of Ayodhyā.[174–175]

25. “That overlord of the seven continents was traveling in his radiant, luminous, magnificent, variegated, golden chariot. He was blazing with beauty and wore heavenly garments and unguents.[176–178]

26. "Daśagrīva called to him, 'Give me battle!' Addressed in this fashion, he laughed and said to Daśagrīva, 'If you have no care for your life, rākṣasa, then fight.'[179–181]

27. "Upon hearing Māndhātṛ's words, Rāvaṇa spoke these words: 'Rāvaṇa was not perturbed when faced with Varuṇa, Kubera, or even Yama. How much less should he be afraid of you, a mere man?'[182–184]

28. "Having spoken in this fashion, the lord of the rākṣasas, burning him up, as it were, in his wrath, ordered out his rākṣasas, who were intoxicated with battle.[185–186]

29. "Then, enraged, the counselors of evil-minded Rāvaṇa, furious and skillful in battle, poured forth masses of arrows.[187–188]

30. "And the mighty king pelted Prahasta, Śuka, and Sāraṇa, together with Mahodara and Dhūmrākṣa. All of them were led by Akampana with heron-fletched arrows sharpened on a whetstone.[189–191]

31–32. "Next Prahasta pelted the king with hails of arrows, but that foremost of kings cut them all down before they reached him. Then those arrows were burned up by the king with bludgeons, crescent-headed arrows, short javelins, and iron cudgels, as moths might be by a flame. [192–195]

33–34. "Then that best of kings, in a rage, wounded Prahasta with five iron cudgels of tremendous striking force, just as, long ago, Skanda, born of fire, pierced Mount Krauñca. Then, repeatedly whirling his war hammer, which resembled Yama, he struck the rākṣasa's chariot with tremendous force.[196–199]

35. "That war hammer of tremendous striking force, like a thunderbolt, fell so that Rāvaṇa, being crushed by it, was toppled like the flagstaff of Śakra.[200–201]

36. "But in his delight, the king seemed to increase in strength through his excitement, just like the water of the salt sea when touched by the rays of the full moon.[202–203]

37. "Then the entire rākṣasa host, with cries of distress, surrounded the unconscious lord of the rākṣasas on every side and stood their ground. [204–205]

38. "But, regaining consciousness after a long time, the lord of Laṅkā, Rāvaṇa, who makes the worlds resound, violently belabored Māndhātṛ's body.[206–207]

39. "The immensely powerful Rāvaṇa then smashed Māndhātṛ's chariot, charming with its horses and yoke. Deprived of his chariot, he took from it a javelin that, with its bells, laughed shrilly.[208–209]

40. "Māndhātṛ hurled it with might at Rāvaṇa. It was like a ray of the sun or a flame of fire.[210–211]

41. "But as that blazing and brightly shining javelin, loosed from Māndhātṛ's hand, hurtled along, the night-roaming rākṣasa Paulastya burned it up with his lance, as fire might a moth.[212–214]

42. "Ten-faced Rāvaṇa drew out the iron arrow given to him by Yama. He sent it flying with force, and it struck Māndhātṛ violently.[215–216]

43. "Seeing the king dazed, the immensely powerful night-roaming rākṣasas were delighted. They shouted out leonine roars and bellowed.[217–218]

44–46. "Regaining consciousness after a short time, the overlord of Ayodhyā then, seeing his enemy being honored by his joyful enemies, was filled with rage. That unassailable warrior, who resembled the sun and the moon in radiance, afflicted the army with a tremendous hail of arrows. With the roar of his bow and the hissing of his arrows, the army was shaken like an agitated ocean.[219–224]

47. "There arose a fearsome battle crowded with men and rākṣasas. Then, as if possessed, the two heroes, the foremost of men and the foremost of rākṣasas, wielding bows and swords, each took up a warrior's stance.[225–227]

48. "Possessed by a towering rage, they released a hail of arrows, Māndhātṛ against Rāvaṇa, and Rāvaṇa against the king.[228–229]

49. "Because of their mutual agitation, they were severely wounded by blows. Then, nocking a divine missile to his bow, Rāvaṇa released the divine missile of Rudra.[230–231]

50. "But Māndhātṛ warded off that missile with the one belonging to Agni. Daśagrīva then warded off a missile with the missile of the gandharvas, and Māndhātṛ, the king of kings, warded that one off with the missile belonging to Varuṇa.[232–233]

51. "Then Māndhātṛ took up and hefted the divine missile of Brahmā, which strikes terror into all creatures, while Rāvaṇa took up the great, divine missile of Paśupati.[234–235]

52. "When they saw that dreadful-looking missile that increased the terror of the triple world, all beings, fixed and moving, were terrified.[236–237]

53. "Through the granting of a boon from Rudra, that great weapon had been acquired by austerities. Then the entire triple world, together with its fixed and moving contents, trembled.[238–239]

54–55. "All the gods trembled, and the great serpents huddled together in their dens. Then those two tigers among sages, Pulastya and Gālava, perceiving what was happening through the practice of meditation, stopped the king, while the foremost of rākṣasas was rebuked with various utterances.[240–243]

56. "Then those two sages, having created the highest affection between the man and the rākṣasa, departed in great delight, just as they had come."[244–245]

[Colophon]

Prakṣipta I, Sarga 4 = Appendix I, No. 1, lines 246–346

1. "Once the two brahmans had departed, Rāvaṇa, lord of the rākṣasas, ascended ten thousand leagues to the first path of the wind, where the haṃsas, endowed with every virtue, always reside.[246–248]

2. "He proceeded still higher than that to the next excellent path of the wind, which, too, is reckoned as yet another ten thousand leagues beyond that.[249–250]

3. "There, close at hand, are permanently located the three types of clouds: the āgneya, the pakṣin, and the brāhma. Indeed, the three types are located there.[251–252]

4. "After that he proceeded to the excellent third path of the wind, where the wise perfected beings and celestial bards always reside.[253–254]

5. "And then, scorcher of your foes, he swiftly rose another ten thousand leagues to the fourth path of the wind, where the malignant spirits, together with the vināyakas, permanently located, dwell.[255–257]

6. "Next he swiftly ascended another ten thousand leagues to the fifth realm of the wind, where that foremost of rivers, the Ganges, as well as the elephants, Kumuda, and so forth, are.[258–260]

7. "Those elephants stay there, releasing showers of spray. They play in the waters of the Ganges and shower the holy water in all directions.[261–262]

8. "That water is broken into drops by the wind as it falls from the trunks of the elephants. And then, Rāghava, it falls on the holy places in the form of snow showers.[263–264]

9. "Then, O greatly radiant one, the rākṣasa ascended yet another ten thousand leagues to the sixth path of the wind, where Garuḍa always remains, honored by his friends and relations.[265–267]

10. "Next he rose ten thousand leagues above that to the seventh path of the wind, where the seers dwell.[268–269]

11–12. "Then he proceeded still higher than that for another ten thousand leagues to the eighth path of the wind, where, located along the path of the sun, is established the Ganges, famed as 'the Ākāśagaṅgā [the Heavenly Ganges].' Supported by the wind, it rushes along with tremendous force and a tremendous roar.[270–273]

13. "And now I will tell you what is still higher than that—at a height of eighty thousand leagues is the place where the moon abides. That is where the moon, accompanied by the planets and the constellations, is found.[274–276]

14. "Its ten million rays illuminate the worlds as well as the orb of the moon, bringer of delight to all creatures.[277–278]

15. "Then the moon, glaring at Rāvaṇa Daśagrīva, as if to burn him up, quickly burned him with his cold fire.[279–280]

16. "Rāvaṇa's ministers, afflicted with fear of that cold fire, could not bear it. So Prahasta, beginning with the words, 'Be victorious!' addressed this speech to Rāvaṇa:[281–282]

17. "'Your majesty, the cold is killing us. Let us withdraw from here. Because of the burning splendor of the moon's rays, fear has seized the rākṣasas.[283–284]

18. "'For, foremost of kings, the cold-rayed moon by his very nature burns.' But when Rāvaṇa had heard that from Prahasta, he was beside himself with rage. Twanging his bow, he raised it and injured the moon with iron arrows.[285–287]

19. "But then Brahmā, in great haste, came to the realm of the moon, saying: 'Great-armed Daśagrīva, you who are truly the son of Viśravas, go swiftly from this place, dear boy, do not strike the moon.[288–290]

20. “ ‘For the extremely radiant king of the brahmans desires only the welfare of the world. And I will give you a mantra in case of any threat to your life.[291–292]

21. “ ‘For whoever should recall this mantra shall not die.’ Addressed in this fashion, Daśagrīva, his hands cupped in reverence, spoke these words:[293–294]

22. “ ‘If you are pleased with me, greatly effulgent god, Lord of the worlds, and if this mantra may be given to me, then please give it to me, O righteous one.[295–296]

23. “ ‘By reciting this, O illustrious one, may I become free from any danger with respect to all the gods. And through your grace, O Lord of the gods, may I become invincible to all the asuras, dānavas, and mighty birds, without any doubt.’[297–299]

24. “Addressed in this fashion, Brahmā said these words to Daśagrīva: ‘I give you this only in case your life is threatened, O lord of the rākṣasas, not for constant use.[300–301]

25. “ ‘Holding a rosary of akṣa beads, you must recite this mantra on each occasion. And if you recite it, lord of the rākṣasas, you will become invincible.[302–303]

26. “ ‘But if you fail to recite it, foremost of the rākṣasas, you will have no success. Now listen to the mantra, bull among rākṣasas, as I recite it.[304–305]

27. “ ‘Through recitation of this mantra alone, you will attain victory in battle:[306]

28. “ ‘ “Homage to you, Lord of the God of gods, worshiped by the gods and asuras, great god of the past and future, you of the tawny-yellow eyes.[307–308]

29. “ ‘ “You are young but appear to be old, O you who wear a tiger skin. You are worthy of worship, O God, for you are the lord and master of the triple world.[309–310]

30. “ ‘ “You are Hara, you are Haritanemin, and you are the fire that burns at the end of a cosmic era. You are Gaṇeśa and the auspiciousness of the worlds. You are the great-armed protector of the worlds.[311–312]

31. “ ‘ “You are the illustrious great Lord with great fangs who carries a mighty lance. You are Kāla in the form of time. You are the illustrious black-throated lord of mighty girth.[313–314]

32. “‘“You are the ender of the gods and the goal of austerities. You are the undecaying lord of beasts. You hold the lance in your hand and have a huge banner. You are the leader and the protector. You are Hara and Hari.[315–316]

33. “‘“You wear matted locks, a monkish tonsure, and a tuft of hair. You are the illustrious bearer of the staff. You are the lord of malignant spirits and the leader of the hosts. You are the inner soul of everything and bring all things into being.[317–318]

34. “‘“You are omnipresent and the destroyer of all. You are the creator and the undecaying guru. You are the god who bears the water pot; you wield the trident Pināka, and you hold the ascetic’s drum.[319–320]

35. “‘“You are to be honored and to be worshiped, for you are the syllable oṃ. You are the foremost chanter of the sāmans. You are Mṛtyu and Mṛtyu’s messenger. You are the heavenly Pārijāta tree and the one of excellent vows.[321–322]

36. “‘“You are a celibate and dwell in a cave. You play the lute and the paṇava drum, and you carry a quiver. You are immortal and beautiful and are as radiant as the rising sun.[323–324]

37. “‘“You are the blessed Lord who haunts the cremation ground. You are the husband of Umā and a tamer of your foes. You knocked out Bhaga’s eyes and smashed Pūṣan’s teeth.[325–326]

38. “‘“You bring on fever and hold the noose in your hand. You are cosmic destruction and Kāla himself. Your mouth is like a burning torch, and your banner is fire. You are a sage and the radiant lord of the people.[327–328]

39. “‘“You are both madness and the incarnation of sobriety. You are the fourth and highest stage and the foremost in the world. You are Vāmana, and you are Vāmadeva. You are respectful circumambulation and Vāmana.[329–330]

40. “‘“You are a mendicant and wear the guise of a mendicant; you yourself wear the three tufts and matted hair. You immobilized the hand of Indra and paralyzed the Vasus as well.[331–332]

41. “‘“You are the season and Kāla, the author of the season. You are Madhu and have eyes as yellow as honey. You are the fruit of the great forest tree and Vājasana. And you are constantly worshiped in the ashrams.[333–334]

42. “‘“You are the creator of the world and its agent. You are the eternal and unchanging Puruṣa. You are the supervisor of righteousness and have an odd number of eyes. You are the one of three paths and are the creator of all beings.[335–336]

43. "'"You have three eyes and many forms. Your splendor is equal to that of ten thousand suns. You are the God of gods and the Supreme God, and your matted locks are marked by the moon.[337–338]

44. "'"You are the dance master and the dancer, and your face is like the full moon. You are propitious to brahmans, and you are the highest refuge. You consist of the seeds of all things.[339–340]

45. "'"You are the sound of all musical instruments and the liberator from all bondage. You are the infatuator, the binder, the foundation of everything, and the Supreme Man.[341–342]

46. "'"You are Puṣpadanta and Vibhāga. You are the foremost and the destroyer of everything. You have a tawny beard and bear the bow. You are fearsome and of fearsome valor."[343–344]

47. "'I have recited this supreme, holy mantra of one hundred and eight names. This prayer, Daśagrīva, will bring about the destruction of your enemies.'"[345–346]

[Colophon]

{1. When he had given this boon to Rāvaṇa, the eternal, lotus-born lord quickly returned to Brahmā's world.[347–348]}

Prakṣipta I, Sarga 5 = Appendix I, No. 1, lines 347–348

1. "When he had given this boon to Rāvaṇa, the eternal, lotus-born lord quickly returned to Brahmā's world.[347–348]

[Appendix I, No. 2, lines 1–140]

2. "Now after some time, the rākṣasa Rāvaṇa left his home and proceeded, together with his ministers, to the western ocean.[1–2]

3. "There on an island he saw a man all alone, who resembled fire and shone like fine gold.[3–4]

4. "He appeared to have a terrifying form, like a veritable fire arisen at the end of a cosmic era. He was like the lord of gods among the gods, like the sun among the heavenly bodies.[5–6]

5. "And he was like a lion among śarabhas, like Airāvaṇa among elephants, like Mount Meru among mountains, and like the Pārijāta among trees.[7–8]

6. "When Daśagrīva saw that man standing there in the middle like fire, he said to him, 'Please give me battle.'[9–10]

7. "His glance was flickering wildly like the circle of planets. The sound of his grinding teeth was like that of a machine being torn apart.[11–12]

8. "And mighty ten-faced Rāvaṇa roared loudly, together with his ministers. He released various roars at that terrifying man, whose hands hung down.[13–14]

9. "He had fangs, and he was monstrous. His neck was like a conch shell, and he had a mighty chest. His belly was like a frog's, and his jaws were like a lion's. He resembled the peak of Mount Kailāsa.[15–16]

10. "He was fearsome. The soles of his feet were like lotuses, and his lotuslike hands had red palms. He had a mighty roar and a huge body. His mind was equal in speed to the wind.[17–18]

11. "He was fearsome and had strapped on a quiver. He bore a yak-tail fly whisk covered with bells. He was surrounded by a wreath of flames, and he resounded with the sound of bells.[19–20]

12. "He had a garland of golden lotuses hanging around his hips. He was as radiant as the Ṛgveda and was adorned with a garland of lotuses. [21–22]

13. "Resembling a mountain of collyrium, the lord of the rākṣasas struck him, who was like a mountain of gold, with lances, javelins, broadswords, and spears.[23–24]

14–15. "But that man, who was as unshakable as is a lion by a leopard, an elephant by a śarabha, Mount Sumeru by an elephant, or the ocean by the currents of a river, said these words to the rākṣasa: 'I shall destroy your faith in battle, you evil-minded rākṣasa.'[25–28]

16. "Whatever striking force—terrifying to all the worlds—that Rāvaṇa possessed, a thousand times that force was resident in that man.[29–30]

17. "Righteousness and austerity, the two bases for success in the world, having taken recourse, resided in his thighs and Manmatha in his penis. [31–32]

18. "The Viśvadevas were in his hips, and the Maruts were in his head and abdomen. The eight Vasus were in his midsection, and the oceans were established in his stomach.[33–34]

19. "All the directions were in his sides, and so forth, and the wind was in all his joints. The ancestors were in his back, and Grandfather Brahmā was in his heart.[35–36]

20. "Holy donations of cows, land, and gold were in the hairs of his armpits.[37–38]

21. "The mountains Himavān, Hemakūṭa, Mandara, and Meru, having taken recourse to this man, were established as his bones.[39–40]

22. "The thunderbolt was the tip of his penis, and Dyaus was in his body. The twilight was in the back of his neck, and the clouds were in his urine.[41–42]

23–25. "The creator and arranger were his two arms, and Bhaga and Pūṣan were his two hands. Śeṣa, Vāsuki, Viśālākṣa, Irāvata, both Kambala and Aśvatara, Karkoṭaka and Dhanañjaya, and that fearsomely venomous great serpent Takṣaka, along with Upatakṣaka—all eager to spew forth the power of their venom—were all resident in his fingernails. Fire was his mouth, and his shoulders were inhabited by the Rudras.[43–48]

26. "The fortnights, months, and seasons were situated in his two fangs. The night and day of the new moon were his nose. And the winds were in his nostrils.[49–50]

27. "The goddess of speech, Sarasvatī, was his throat. The two Nāsatyas were his ears, and the hare-marked moon and the sun were his eyes.[51–52]

28. "The adjunct vedic sciences and the sacrifices, which were in the form of stars, and also the well-spoken utterances, energies, and austerities all resided in the body of the person in the form of a man.[53–55]

29. "Struck, merely brushed as if in play, by his hand, which had the striking force of the vajra, the rākṣasa fell to the ground.[56–57]

30. "Realizing that the rākṣasa had fallen and having put the night-roaming rākṣasas to flight, he who, adorned with a garland of lotuses, resembled the Ṛgveda and looked like a mountain, entered Pātāla dancing.[58–60]

31. "When Daśagrīva got up, he summoned his ministers himself and said, 'Tell me, Prahasta, Śuka, and Sāraṇa, where has he gone so suddenly?'[61–62]

32. "Addressed in this fashion by Rāvaṇa, the rākṣasas now said to him, 'That man, who crushes the pride of the gods and dānavas, entered in right here.'[63–64]

33. "Then swiftly seizing his sword, as Garuḍa might a serpent, that evil-minded rākṣasa quickly entered the mouth of that cave.[65–66]

34. "Upon passing through that opening, Rāvaṇa, fearless on account of his boon, saw there men who were like heaps of black collyrium.[67–68]

35. "Wearing armlets, those heroes had red garlands and unguents. And they were adorned with rings, diamonds, and so forth, of various kinds. [69–70]

36. "And there he saw thirty million of those great beings dancing. They were constantly festive, free from any anxiety, and spotless. They resembled fire.[71–72]

37. "That rākṣasa of fearsome valor saw them dancing there.[73]

38. "Standing at the opening, Rāvaṇa watched those thirty million fearless men, who looked in every way just like the man he had seen.[74–75]

39. "The rākṣasa watched those immensely powerful beings, who shared the same complexion, the same strength, and the same appearance. They all had four arms and enormous energy.[76–77]

40. "When Daśagrīva saw them, the hairs on his body bristled, and though he had been granted a boon by self-existent Brahmā, he quickly withdrew.[78–79]

41. "And there, along with a priceless white mansion equipped with beds and seats, he saw another man lying on a bed. And that man lay there wreathed in fire.[80–82]

42–43. "And there, too, stood a virtuous goddess with a yak-tail fly whisk in her hand. She wore a heavenly garland and unguents and was adorned with heavenly ornaments. She wore heavenly garments and was truly an ornament to the triple world. For it was the goddess Lakṣmī, shining with her lotus. She was truly the most beautiful woman in all the worlds. [83–86]

44. "But when he entered there and saw her with her beautiful smile, Rāvaṇa, the evil-minded lord of the rākṣasas, without his ministers, rashly desired to seize that virtuous woman as she sat on her lion throne. [87–89]

45. "Just as one might wish to seize a sleeping venomous serpent, Rāvaṇa, under the power of Manmatha and impelled by fate, desired to seize her by the hand.[90–91]

46. "That great-armed being, who had been sleeping, wreathed in fire, realized that Rāvaṇa desired to seize her and had pushed aside the curtain.[92–93]

47. "And seeing the lord of the rākṣasas, the god laughed loud and long.[94]

48. "Scorched by the god's blazing energy, Rāvaṇa, who makes the worlds resound, fell to the ground like a tree cut off at the roots.[95–96]

49. "When he realized that the rākṣasa had fallen, he spoke these words: 'Arise, foremost of rākṣasas, for death will not be yours this day.[97–98]

50. " 'I must protect Prajāpati's boon, by reason of which you are still alive, rākṣasa. Now depart without fear, Rāvaṇa, for death will not now be yours.'[99–100]

51. "Regaining consciousness after a while, Rāvaṇa was seized with fear. Addressed in this fashion, Rāvaṇa, thorn in the side of the gods, arose.[101–102]

52. "His body hair bristling, he addressed that being of enormous splendor: 'Who are you, sir, endowed with such valor and resembling the fire at the end of a cosmic age?[103–104]

53. " 'Tell me, sir, who are you—a god or a malignant spirit—standing here before me?'[105]

54. "Now, when he was addressed in this fashion by the evil-minded Rāvaṇa, the god replied, laughing, in a voice as deep as the rumbling of storm clouds:[106–107]

55. " 'What use am I to you, Daśagrīva? You are soon to be slain by me.' Addressed in this fashion, Daśagrīva, cupping his hands in reverence, said:[108–109]

56. " 'Because of the words of Prajāpati, I shall not come under the power of death. That being has not been born, nor will he ever be born, even among the gods, who will be my equal and who, relying on his might, would dare transgress Prajāpati's boon.[110–112]

57. " 'It is inevitable, and every effort will prove futile. Nor do I see anyone in the triple world who could falsify my boon.[113–114]

58. " 'I am immortal, foremost of the gods, and that is why I am not afraid.[115]

59. " 'And, moreover, even should my death be at your hands and those of none other, Lord, then my death at your hands would be glorious and praiseworthy.'[116–117]

60. "And then Rāvaṇa of fearsome valor saw within the body of the god the entire triple world with its fixed and moving contents.[118–119]

61–64. "For within the limbs of him who lay on that bed were visible in their subtle forms the Ādityas, the Maruts, the Sādhyas, the Vasus, and the two Aśvins as well. And there were the Rudras, the ancestors, Yama, and Kubera Vaiśravaṇa; the oceans, the mountains, the rivers, the vedas, ancillary knowledge, and the three sacred fires; the planets, the hosts of stars, the heavens, the perfected beings, the gandharvas, and the celestial bards; the great seers, who know the vedas, Garuḍa, the great serpents, and the other divinities who were resident there, as well as the yakṣas, the daityas, and the rākṣasas."[120–126]

65. Then righteous Rāma said to Agastya, the foremost of sages:[127]

66. "Who was that man on the island, and who were those thirty millions? Who was that man lying there, the crusher of the pride of the daityas and dānavas?"[128–129]

67. When Agastya had heard Rāma's speech, he spoke these words: "Listen, I will tell you about the eternal god of gods.[130–131]

68. "The man on the island is said to be the holy sage called Kapila. Those who were dancing there before that wise one were the gods.[132–133]

69–70. "They were all equal to the man Kapila in blazing energy and power. But that enraged person did not see the rākṣasa of evil intentions, and therefore, Rāma, he did not reduce Rāvaṇa to ashes. His limbs exhausted, Rāvaṇa fell to the earth like a tree.[134–137]

71. "For the person had swiftly pierced Rāvaṇa merely with verbal darts, just as a treacherous person might penetrate a secret.[138]

72. "Then after a long time, the rākṣasa of immense blazing energy regained consciousness and returned to where his ministers were waiting."[139–140]

[Colophon]

1. Then, when he had heard this, Rāma said, "Wonderful!" And the monkeys and rākṣasas, who stood there being honored at Rāma's side, likewise said, "Wonderful!"[141–143]

2. And righteous Vibhīṣaṇa, who stood beside him, spoke these words: "Now I am reminded of that wonderful thing that took place so long ago."[144–145]

3. Then Agastya said to Rāma, "Now you have heard everything. You have been seen and honored. Rāma, we shall depart."[146–147]

[sarga 24]

Prakṣipta II, Sarga 1 / Appendix I, No. 3, lines 1–120

1. When Rāghava had heard this in its entirety, he said to Agastya: "Who was that one named Ṛkṣarajas, the father of Vālin and Sugrīva?[1–2]

2. "And, indeed, who was she, O brahman, who was made the mother of Vālin and Sugrīva by him? Blessed one, you have not told me about her.[3–4]

3. "Please tell me this, O brahman, for I am curious." Addressed in this fashion by Rāghava, Agastya spoke these words:[5–6]

4. "Listen, Rāma, to this tale in brief, just as Nārada related it long ago when he had come to my ashram.[7–8]

5. "Once, while wandering about, he came to me as a guest. He was honored properly in accordance with the rites set down in the ritual texts.[9–10]

6. "Once he was comfortably seated, that righteous seer, questioned by me out of curiosity about this very tale, said: 'Please listen, great seer.[11–12]

7. " 'Radiant and majestic Mount Meru, made of gold, is the foremost of mountains. Its midmost peak is worshiped by all the gods.[13–14]

8. " 'On it is Brahmā's heavenly and lovely assembly hall, a hundred leagues in breadth. And in it, the four-faced God born from a lotus always sits.[15–16]

9. " 'Since water had flowed from his eyes while he was practicing yoga, the blessed Lord took it in his hand and worshiped it.'[17–18]

10. "O Rāma, no sooner had Brahmā, the creator of the world, placed that teardrop on the ground than a monkey was born from it.[19–20]

11. "And no sooner had that monkey been born, O best of men, than the great Lord, so they say, addressed him, comforting him with these pleasing words:[21–22]

12–13. " 'Look at this very extensive mountain, which is always frequented by the gods. Feeding on its abundant fruits and roots, you should always wander on this excellent and charming mountain, bull among monkeys, remaining close to me. You must dwell here for some time, and that will be best for you.'[23–26]

14–15. "Addressed in this fashion by Brahmā, O Rāghava, that foremost of monkeys, bowing his head at the feet of that god of gods, said this to him who is the creator of the worlds, the primal divinity, and the Lord of the universe: 'As you command, Lord. I will abide by your orders.'[27–30]

16. "Having spoken in this fashion to the god, the tawny monkey, his mind delighted, then went off among those parts of the forest that were thick with fruits and flowers.[31–32]

*17. "Equal in strength to Brahmā, feeding on fruits in the forest, he quickly collected the choicest honeys and many flowers.[33–34]

18–19. "But every day, in the evening, Rāma, he would return to Brahmā, bearing the choicest of fruits, and he would offer them at the feet of Brahmā, the god of gods. As he was wandering widely over the mountain in this fashion, time passed.[35–38]

20. "And, Rāghava, after some time had passed, that lord of the apes and foremost of monkeys was afflicted by thirst.[39–40]

21. "He went to the northern peak of Mount Meru, and there he saw a lake of clear water crowded with all kinds of birds.[41–42]

22. "As he stood there on its bank, shaking loose his mane, he spied the reflection of his own face in the lake.[43–44]

23–24. "Thinking, 'What great enemy of mine is this, dwelling within the water?' the tawny monkey, spying within the lake that image, which was staring back at him, his mind seized with rage, [thought again,] 'Surely he holds me in contempt. This must be the splendid lair of this evil-minded and wicked creature.'[45–48]

25. "Reflecting thus in his mind, in his simian capriciousness, that foremost of monkeys leapt up and plunged into the lake.[49–50]

26. "And having jumped in, that leaping monkey came out of the lake once more, and that very instant, Rāma, the monkey became a woman.[51–52]

27. "That splendid woman was a ravishing beauty, desirable in her loveliness. She had broad hips, lovely brows, and her dark hair fell in locks.[53–54]

28. "Her face had a charming smile, and she was splendid with her full, sloping breasts. She shone on the lakeshore like a straight and slender creeper.[55–56]

29. "She was the most beautiful woman in the triple world, desirable and disturbing the minds of everyone. She was like Lakṣmī but for her lotus and was as resplendent as moonlight.[57–58]

*30. “In beauty she was like a goddess—Śrī or Umā. That magnificent woman illuminated all directions there.[59–60]

31. “Now at this juncture, the god, who is the leader of the gods, after having worshiped the feet of the god Brahmā, was returning by that very path.[61–62]

32. “And at that very same moment, Āditya, too, was wandering about in that very same place where that slender-waisted woman was.[63–64]

33. “Then that heavenly beauty was seen simultaneously by the two gods. When they saw her, they both fell under the power of Kandarpa, the god of love.[65–66]

34. “Then those two lords of the gods shuddered throughout their bodies like two serpents. When they saw that marvelous beauty, they both lost their self-control.[67–68]

35. “Then the lord of the gods ejaculated on her head. And then, without having approached that woman, he turned back.[69–70]

36. “But because great Vāsava was one of infallible semen, she gave birth to a lordly monkey, who became the lord of the monkeys.[71–72]

37. “Since his seed had fallen on her hair, he was called Vālin, ‘The Hairy One.’[73]

38. “And the Sun, too, being under the power of Kandarpa, the god of love, shed his seed on her neck. And he acted in the same way as Indra.[74–75]

39. “Sūrya, too, did not say a single pleasant word to that woman of splendid body, and he, too, was one whose passion was spent.[76–77]

40. “When that seed had fallen on her neck, Sugrīva, ‘He of the Beautiful Neck,’ was born. In this way, they fathered those two immensely powerful and heroic lords.[78–79]

41. “And Śakra, having presented an indestructible golden necklace with many strands to Vālin, the lord of the monkeys, proceeded to the highest heaven.[80–81]

42. “And as for Sūrya, the impeller, having chosen Pavana’s son, Hanumān, to assist his own son Sugrīva with the feats that he one day would have to perform, he returned to the heavens.[82–83]

43. “When the night had given way to dawn and the sun, maker of day, had risen, Ṛkṣarajas recovered his simian form once again, O king.[84–85]

44–45. “When he had once more become a monkey, he fed his two sons—those mighty yellow-eyed, leaping monkeys—who were the foremost of tawny monkeys and could take on any form at will—on honey that was like the nectar of immortality. Then, taking them with him, Ṛkṣarajas returned to Brahmā.[86–89]

46. “When Brahmā, grandfather of the worlds, saw his son Ṛkṣarajas, he comforted that tawny monkey, together with his two sons, in many ways.[90–91]

47. “Then, after he had comforted them, he instructed a messenger of the gods, saying: ‘Go, messenger, at my command, to the splendid city known as Kiṣkindhā.[92–93]

48. “ ‘For that vast and splendid city, endowed with every virtue, shall be his. And very many troops of monkeys dwell there.[94–95]

49. “ ‘It is filled with many gems and with monkeys who can take on any form at will. It is pleasant and auspicious, although inaccessible, and honored by all four of the social classes.[96–97]

50. “ ‘That heavenly and beautiful city was constructed by Viśvakarman at my command.[98]

51–52. “ ‘There, after you have waited upon Ṛkṣarajas, that bull among monkeys, together with his sons, you must summon the troop leaders and the other common tawny monkeys. Once you have honored them all, you must consecrate my son as king in the public assembly, placing him on the throne of his illustrious predecessors.[99–102]

53. “ ‘The moment that wise monkey Ṛkṣarajas casts his eye upon those monkeys, they shall all be forever obedient to him.’[103–104]

54. “When Brahmā had spoken these words in this fashion, the messenger, placing the lord of the tawny monkeys before him, proceeded to that splendid city.[105–106]

*55. “And he whose speed was that of the wind entered that cave and, on the orders of Grandfather Brahmā, established that foremost of monkeys as king.[107–108]

56–57. “Thus, when he had bathed in accordance with the rite of royal consecration and had been honored, the majestic monkey was consecrated. Then, having assumed the diadem and being well adorned, he, with a delighted mind, ruled over all the tawny monkeys and whatever leaping monkeys were on the earth, including its seven continents and oceans.[109–112]

58. "And so it was that he, this very same Ṛkṣarajas, was both the father and the mother of Vālin and Sugrīva. May blessings be yours.[113–114]

59. "And whichever learned person shall narrate this and whichever man shall hear it, his affairs shall all meet with success and increase the joy of his heart.[115–116]

60–61. "And so, lord, I have told you all of this in detail, just as it happened. Now I have told you about the origin of the night-roaming rākṣasas as well as of the lords of the tawny monkeys."[117–120]

Prakṣipta II, Sarga 2 = Appendix I, No. 3, lines 121–170

1. Then, when Rāghava had heard this ancient and divine tale, that hero, together with his brothers, was smitten with the greatest wonder.[121–122]

2. When Rāghava had heard the seer's words, he then said these words: "It is through your grace that I have heard this great and holy tale.[123–124]

3–4. "I was filled with immense curiosity, bull among sages. How amazing to me, O twice-born brahman-seer, is such a divine origin of Vālin and Sugrīva. How amazing that both the lord of the gods and the blazing sun should have been born as those tigers among monkeys who are foremost in might among the mighty."[125–128]

5. When Rāma had spoken in this fashion, the pot-born sage said: "Great-armed one, that is exactly how it took place long ago, so they say.[129–130]

6. "Now, O Rāma, your majesty, listen to another ancient and divine tale about the reason for which Vaidehī was earlier abducted by Rāvaṇa.[131–132]

7–9. "I will tell it to you. You must concentrate on listening. Long ago, Rāma, in the Kṛta Yuga, Rāvaṇa, the lord of the rākṣasas, his hands cupped in reverence, respectfully saluted Lord Sanatkumāra, Prajāpati's son. Bowing in humility, O Rāma, Rāvaṇa addressed that truthful seer, who resembled the sun in beauty and who was seated, blazing as it were, with blazing energy.[133–138]

10. " 'Who, indeed, is the greatest being in the world and the most powerful among the gods, relying upon whom the wise gods conquer their enemies in battle?[139–140]

11. “ ‘To whom do the twice-born brahmans constantly sacrifice? And upon whom do the yogins meditate? Please tell me that in detail, blessed ascetic.’[141–142]

12. “Possessed of insight born of meditation, that very illustrious seer, realizing what was in Rāvaṇa’s heart, addressed him out of affection, saying: ‘Listen my son.[143–144]

13. “ ‘He who sustains the entire universe and whose origin we do not know, he before whom the gods and asuras ever prostrate themselves, is the Lord Hari Nārāyaṇa.[145–146]

14. “ ‘He from whose navel Brahmā was born is the Lord of the entire universe, by whom this entire world, along with its fixed and moving contents, was created.[147–148]

15. “ ‘Relying on Hari, the wise gods drink the nectar of immortality according to the ritual prescriptions at the sacrifice and, being honored, worship him.[149–150]

16. “ ‘According to the purāṇas, the vedas, and the pañcarātras, yogins always meditate upon him and worship him with sacrificial rites.[151–152]

17. “ ‘He conquers in battle the daityas, dānavas, rākṣasas, and whatever other enemies there are of the immortal gods. And he is always worshiped by all.’[153–154]

18. “When Rāvaṇa, lord of the rākṣasas, had heard these words of the great seer, he prostrated himself and once again addressed that great sage.[155–156]

19. “ ‘What world do those enemies—the daityas, dānavas, and rākṣasas—attain when they are slain in battle? And what about those slain by Hari?’[157–158]

20. “Upon hearing those words of Rāvaṇa, the great sage replied: ‘Those slain by the gods always attain the heavenly realm.[159–160]

21. “ ‘And when they have fallen once again from there, they are born on earth in accordance with the virtuous or evil acts they have accumulated previously. And thus they are born and they die.[161–162]

22–23. “ ‘But whichever ones, your majesty, are slain by Janārdana, the wielder of the discus and lord of the triple world, those kings attain to his abode. For even the wrath of that god is equal to a boon.’[163–166]

24–25. "When the night-roaming rākṣasa had heard those words that had issued from the mouth of Sanatkumāra, he was delighted and filled with wonder, thinking, 'How might I meet Hari in a great battle?' "[167–170]

[Colophon]

Prakṣipta II, Sarga 3 = Appendix I, No. 3, lines 171–236

1. Agastya continued: "As evil-minded Rāvaṇa was pondering in this fashion, the great sage Sanatkumāra once more spoke the following words:[171–172]

2. " 'What your heart desires will come about in a great war. Rest content, great-armed warrior, and wait for some time.'[173–174]

3. "When that great-armed warrior had heard this, he replied to the seer, 'What are his characteristics? Tell me everything, leaving nothing out.'[175–176]

4. "When the sage had heard the words of the rākṣasa lord, he replied: 'Listen! I will tell you everything, bull among rākṣasas.[177–178]

5. " 'He is, indeed, the omnipresent God, subtle, unmanifest, and eternal. He pervades the entire triple world together with its fixed and moving contents.[179–180]

6. " 'He is present on the earth, in heaven, in Pātāla, in the mountains, the forests, all unmoving things, the rivers, and the towns.[181–182]

7. " 'He is the syllable oṃ the highest truth, the Sāvitrīmantra, and the earth. He is the god known as Ananta, who upholds the mountains, the upholders of the earth.[183–184]

8–9. " 'He is day and night, and both of the twilights. He is the sun, maker of day, Yama, and the moon. He alone is Kāla, Anila, and Anala. He is Brahmā, Rudra, and Indra, and he is, indeed, the waters.[185–188]

10–11. " 'He illuminates, makes radiant, and manifests the worlds. He creates, destroys, and rules them. The eternal Lord of the world, he plays. He is the ancient Viṣṇu; he alone is the agent of creation and destruction.[189–192]

12. " 'But why go on talking, ten-faced Rāvaṇa? He pervades the entire triple world together with its fixed and moving contents.[193–194]

13. “ ‘He is as dark as the petals of a blue lotus, and, with his garment as yellow as a lotus filament, he resembles a storm cloud streaked with lightning in the sky during the rainy season.[195–196]

14. “ ‘He is majestic, and, being dark, he has the appearance of a cloud. He is splendid and his eyes are lotuses. He is endowed with a chest bearing the śrīvatsa mark and he bears the hare-marked moon as his characteristic sign.[197–198]

15. “ ‘Success in battle always accompanies his person, just as does lightning the body of a storm cloud.[199–200]

16. “ ‘Not even the gods, the asuras, or the great serpents can see him. Only he upon whom he sheds his grace is worthy of seeing him.[201–202]

17. “ ‘For it is not through the fruits of sacrifice, my son, nor through heaped-up austerities that one can see the Lord, nor is this possible through donations or rituals.[203–204]

18. “ ‘Indeed, the Lord can be seen only by those who are his devotees, who have dedicated their lives to him, who have focused their thoughts on him, who have made him their highest recourse, and whose sins have been burned away by knowledge.[205–206]

19. “ ‘Or, having inquired, lord of the rākṣasas, if you really want to see him, I will tell you everything. Listen and see if it suits you.[207–208]

20. “ ‘When the Kṛta Yuga has passed, he will come into being at the onset of the Tretā Yuga in the body of a king for the welfare of gods and mortals.[209–210]

21. “ ‘And Daśaratha, king of the Ikṣvākus, who will then be on the earth, will have a son named Rāma, who will be of immense blazing energy.[211–212]

22. “ ‘He will be of immense blazing energy, immensely intelligent, and of immense might and valor. Great-armed and immensely powerful, he will be the equal of the earth in forbearance.[213–214]

23. “ ‘As impossible to gaze upon by his enemies in battle as is Āditya, Lord Nārāyaṇa will at that time become the man Rāma.[215–216]

24. “ ‘On the orders of his father, that very wise and righteous lord will wander in the diverse Daṇḍaka wilderness together with his brother.[217–218]

25. “ ‘The illustrious Lakṣmī will be his wife, known as Sītā, who will be the daughter of Janaka and who will be born from the surface of the earth.[219–220]

26. “ ‘Unequaled in beauty in this world and marked with every excellent mark, she will follow Rāma like his shadow, just as does its radiance the moon, maker of night.[221–222]

27. “ ‘A virtuous woman endowed with morality, good conduct, and all good qualities, she will be endowed with fortitude. She will be like a ray of the thousand-rayed sun and will be a unique beauty, as it were.[223–224]

28. “ ‘Thus, Rāvaṇa, I have told you in detail everything about the great, eternal, imperishable God of gods.’[225–226]

29. “When the great-armed and valorous lord of the rākṣasas had heard this, he began to reflect, eager for hostility with you, Rāghava.[227–228]

30. “Pondering those words of Sanatkumāra again and again, majestic Rāvaṇa was delighted and roamed about for the sake of battle.”[229–230]

31. When Rāma had heard this tale, his eyes grew wide with amazement. Shaking his head, he was filled with the greatest wonder.[231–232]

32. Then, when the lord of men had heard those words, he was filled with delight, and his eyes were filled with wonder. Once again he addressed words to the foremost of those possessed of knowledge, saying, “Tell me more of this ancient history.”[233–236]

[Colophon]

Prakṣipta II, Sarga 4 = Appendix I, No. 3, lines 237–254

1. Then the illustrious pot-born sage Agastya of immense blazing energy once more addressed Rāma, who was prostrate before him as Grandfather Brahmā might be before the Lord.[237–238]

2. And he said to Rāma of true valor, “Listen!” Then that lord of immense blazing energy narrated the remainder of the tale.[239–240]

3. Delighted at heart, the immensely wise sage recounted to Rāghava the story just as he had heard it and just as it had happened.[241–242]

4. “That is the reason, great-armed and immensely wise Rāma, that evil-minded Rāvaṇa carried off the daughter of King Janaka.[243–244]

5. "O great-armed, unassailable Rāma, it was the extremely illustrious Nārada who recounted this tale on that foremost of great mountains, Meru.[245–246]

6. "O Rāghava, humbler of pride, Nārada of immense blazing energy, smiling gently, once again recounted the rest of the tale to the gods, gandharvas, perfected beings, and great seers.[247–249]

7–8. "Now, great-armed Rāma, best of kings, hear this tale, which is destructive of even the greatest of sins, and, which, upon hearing, all the seers, along with the gods, said to Nārada, whose eyes were filled with joy, 'Whoever constantly recites this or even listens to it with devotion will have many sons and grandsons and will rejoice in heaven.' "[250–254]

[Colophon]

Prakṣipta II, Sarga 5 = Appendix I, No. 3, lines 255–377

1. "Then, O Rāma, surrounded by immensely heroic rākṣasas, the rākṣasa, arrogant in his might and seeking victory, wandered over this earth. [255–256]

2. "In his desire for battle, Rāvaṇa challenged whomever among the daityas, dānavas, and rākṣasas he heard of as being of extraordinary might. [257–258]

3–4. "And as he was wandering over the entire earth in this fashion, O lord of the earth, Rāvaṇa encountered Nārada, who was returning from Brahmā's world and who, like a second, many-rayed sun, was traveling on the back of a cloud. Approaching him with a delighted heart, he saluted him with his hands cupped in reverence.[259–262]

5. "With a delighted mind, he then addressed him: 'You have visited the worlds, up to the abode of Brahmā, many times.[263–264]

6. " 'In which world, illustrious seer, are men the mightiest? For I wish to fight with them at my pleasure and as I may find them.'[265–266]

7. "After reflecting for a moment, Nārada replied to him: 'Near the ocean of milk, your majesty, there lies a vast continent.[267–268]

8. " 'On this continent dwell immensely mighty men who resemble the moon. They are gigantic and of enormous strength, and their voices are like the thundering of storm clouds.[269–270]

9–10. " 'I myself have seen in Śvetadvīpa such men as you are seeking here—huge, possessing fortitude, with arms like great iron bars and endowed with might and valor.' When Rāvaṇa had heard Nārada's words, he replied:[271–274]

11. " 'Nārada, were these immensely powerful men born on that continent? Or did those great men obtain residence in Śvetadvīpa?[275–276]

12. " 'Please tell me all of this, Lord Nārada, just as it happened. For you have always observed the entire universe as if it were a myrobalan fruit in your hand.'[277–278]

13–15. "When Nārada had heard Rāvaṇa's words, he replied: 'Lord of the rākṣasas, those for whom Nārāyaṇa is the highest refuge and whose minds are never focused on any other, those who are devoted to his worship, whose thoughts are of him, those for whom he is the highest refuge, those men who follow him with single-minded devotion, those men whose thoughts are on him and whose lives are always dedicated to Nārāyaṇa are the very great ones who have earned residence in Śvetadvīpa.[279–284]

16. " 'And those who are slain in battle by the Lord of the worlds, the god who wields the discus, once he has drawn back the Śārṅga bow, they, too, attain residence in Triviṣṭapa, Indra's heaven.[285–286]

17. " 'For it is not through the fruits of sacrifice, my son, nor through austerities and acts of self-control, nor through the outstanding fruits of donations that that world can be easily attained.'[287–288]

18. "When Daśagrīva had heard Nārada's words, he was greatly astonished. After brooding for a very long time, he thought, 'I will fight with him in battle.'[289–290]

19–20. "After taking his leave of Nārada, Rāvaṇa set out for Śvetadvīpa. And Nārada, too, after pondering for a long time and being filled with curiosity, went there swiftly as well, eager to see that great wonder. For that brahman was fond of amusements and always enjoyed a battle.[291–294]

21. "And, Rāghava, as for Rāvaṇa, he went there, along with the rākṣasas, rending the ten directions with a great leonine roar.[295–296]

22. "After Nārada had gone there, the greatly illustrious Rāvaṇa, too, arrived at the vast continent Śveta, which was impossible for even the gods to reach.[297–298]

23. "But because of the blazing energy of that island, Puṣpaka, the vehicle of mighty Rāvaṇa, was battered by the force of the wind.[299–300]

24–25. "Like a cloud battered by the wind, it was unable to hold its place. Then the rākṣasa ministers of the rākṣasa lord, having reached that island, which was so difficult to look upon, were frightened. Filled with alarm, they addressed Rāvaṇa: 'O lord of the rākṣasas, we are stupefied.[301–304]

26. "'We have lost our senses and are confused. By no means will we be able to take a stand in order to fight.' When they had spoken in this fashion, all the night-roaming rākṣasas fled.[305–306]

27. "But as for Rāvaṇa, he then dismissed the gold-adorned Puṣpaka vehicle, along with those night-roaming rākṣasas.[307–308]

28. "Once the Puṣpaka had departed, O Rāma, Rāvaṇa, the lord of the rākṣasas, deserted by all the rākṣasas, took on an extremely fearsome form.[309–310]

29. "Rāvaṇa then entered Śvetadvīpa. And as he entered, he was immediately spotted there by some women.[311–312]

30. "One of them, smiling, took ten-faced Rāvaṇa by the hand and inquired with regard to his arrival: 'Tell us! For what purpose have you come here?[313–314]

31–32. "'Who are you? Whose son are you? And who has sent you? Speak!' When he was addressed in this fashion, your majesty, Rāvaṇa was infuriated, and he spoke these words: 'I am Viśravas's son, the rākṣasa called Rāvaṇa. I came here for the sake of battle, but I do not see a single man.'[315–318]

33. "And even as evil-minded Rāvaṇa was speaking in this fashion, all the young women laughed loudly.[319–320]

34. "Then one of them, enraged, easily seized him as if he were a child. And, having seized ten-faced Rāvaṇa by the waist, she whirled him around in the midst of her friends.[321–322]

35. "Then, calling to another friend, she said, 'Look at the insect I have caught. It has ten heads and twenty arms, and its appearance is like black collyrium.'[323–324]

36. "Tossed from hand to hand, he was whirled about and utterly dizzy. Then, as the powerful and wise rākṣasa was being whirled about, he bit a beautiful young woman on the hand in anger.[325–327]

37. "She dropped that repulsive insect, shaking him off because of the pain in her hand, but another seized the lord of the rākṣasas and flew up through the sky.[328–329]

38–39. "Then, in a towering rage, he powerfully raked her as well with his nails. Violently shaken off by her, that night-roaming rākṣasa, overcome with terror, fell into the waters of the ocean like a mountain peak torn off by a thunderbolt.[330–333]

40. "Thus cast down, he fell into the waters of the ocean.[334]

41. "And thus, Rāma, was Rāvaṇa immediately seized and whirled about here and there by the young women who lived in Śvetadvīpa.[335–336]

42. "But as for Nārada of immense blazing energy, when he reached Rāvaṇa, who had been handled so roughly, he was lost in amazement for a very long time, and then he laughed and danced about.[337–338]

43. "After realizing this, O great-armed Rāma, evil-minded Rāvaṇa, who was anxious for death at your hands, abducted Sītā.[339–340]

44. "For you, sir, are the god Nārāyaṇa, the bearer of the conch, the discus, and the mace, and whose insignia are the Śārṅga bow and the lotus. You are the wielder of the vajra, and all the gods do homage to you.[341–342]

45. "You are Hṛṣīkeśa, marked with the śrīvatsa, and worshiped by all the gods. You are the great yogin Padmanābha who grants safety to your devotees.[343–344]

46. "It was in order to slay Rāvaṇa that you entered a human body. Do you not remember yourself thinking, 'I am indeed Nārāyaṇa'?[345–346]

47. "You must not be confused, greatly blessed one; you must remember yourself by yourself. For you are the greatest of mysteries, as was stated by Grandfather Brahmā.[347–348]

48. "You are the three guṇas and you possess the three vedas. You possess the three abodes and you encompass the three paths, O you whose actions span the three times! O you who possess the three branches of knowledge! O you who crush the enemies of the thirty gods![349–350]

49. "You traversed the three worlds with your three strides of old when you became the majestic younger brother of great Indra for the purpose of binding Bali.[351–352]

50. "Born from the womb of Aditi, you are the eternal Viṣṇu, who entered a human body to show your grace to the world.[353–354]

51. "Thus the work of the gods has been accomplished, O foremost of the gods, since evil Rāvaṇa has been slain, along with the hosts of his sons and his kinsmen.[355–356]

52. "All the gods are delighted, as are the seers, those treasure-houses of austerity. Through your grace, O Lord of the gods, the entire world is now at peace.[357–358]

53. "It was for your sake, O Lord, that Sītā, who is the immensely blessed Lakṣmī, was born from the surface of the earth in the House of Janaka. [359–360]

54–55. "She was taken to Laṅkā, where she was as carefully guarded as if she were someone's mother. Thus, illustrious Rāma, I have now recounted to you what was told to me regarding that rākṣasa by the long-lived seer Nārada just as it had been narrated by Sanatkumāra.[361–364]

56. "Thus Nārada, in turn, immediately rendered everything, omitting nothing.[365]

57. "A wise man who recites this tale in the presence of brahmans at a śrāddha ceremony places before his ancestors an inexhaustible gift of food."[366–367]

58. When lotus-eyed Rāma Rāghava, together with his brothers, had heard this divine tale, he was filled with the greatest wonder.[368–369]

59–60. The monkeys, together with Sugrīva; the rākṣasas, along with Vibhīṣaṇa; the kings, together with their ministers; and whichever others were assembled there—brahmans, kshatriyas, vaiśyas, and śūdras—all of them, filled with righteousness, were wide eyed and filled with joy. [370–373]

61. They gazed upon Rāma fixedly and experienced extreme joy. Then Agastya of immense blazing energy said this to Rāghava:[374–375]

62. "We have been seen and been honored, Rāma, and now we must go." Having spoken in this fashion, all of them, duly honored, departed as they had come.[376–377]

[Colophon]

Prakṣipta III, Sarga 1 = Appendix I, No. 8, lines 303–360

1. Then, while Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa were conversing in this fashion, the spring night came on, neither too cool nor too warm.[303–304]

2–3. Then, in the bright dawn, Kākutstha, having completed his morning routine, with an eye toward his kingly duties and cognizant of his duty to the people, proceeded, together with his purohita Vasiṣṭha, the seer Kaśyapa, and the vaidika brahmans to the audience hall.[305–308]

4. The assembly hall was filled with counselors learned in governance, other interpreters of the dharmaśāstra, courtiers versed in polity, and tributary kings.[309–310]

5. The assembly hall of that lion among kings, Rāma, tireless in action, was as beautiful as those of great Indra, Yama, or Varuṇa.[311–312]

6. And then Rāma said to Lakṣmaṇa of auspicious marks: "Go out, great-armed increaser of Sumitra's joy.[313–314]

7–8. "And go forth, Saumitri, to speak with those who have business to be attended to." When Lakṣmaṇa of auspicious marks had heard Rāma's speech, he proceeded to the gateway, where he himself summoned those who had business to be attended to. But no one there said, "I have some business to be attended to here today."[315–318]

9–10. For when Rāma was ruling his kingdom, there were no mental or physical afflictions. The earth was covered with all kinds of plants and was filled with ripened grain. No child, youth, or person of middle age died at that time. Everything was governed in accordance with righteousness, and so no cause for grievance arose.[319–322]

11. Therefore, while Rāma was ruling his kingdom, one could find no one who had business that needed to be attended to. Cupping his hands in reverence, Lakṣmaṇa reported as much to Rāma.[323–324]

12. But Rāma, his mind calm, said this to Saumitri: "Go back again and seek out those who have business that needs to be attended to.[325–326]

13. "Through properly executed statecraft, no unrighteousness is to be found anywhere. Therefore, in fear of the king, everyone always protects one another.[327–328]

14. "Just as the arrows I loose protect my people here, so must you, great-armed prince, protect the people with the utmost devotion to that task."[329–330]

15. Addressed in this fashion, Saumitri went forth from the king's residence. Then, at the gateway, he saw a dog standing on its hind legs.[331–332]

16. And seeing that it was gazing at him and crying continually, mighty Lakṣmaṇa inquired:[333–334]

17. “What is your business, illustrious one? Speak quickly and freely.” When that descendant of Saramā had heard Lakṣmaṇa’s words, he said:[335–336]

18. “I would make so bold as to speak to Rāma, who is tireless in action, who is the refuge of all beings, and who is the granter of safety against all dangers.”[337–338]

19. Then, when Lakṣmaṇa had heard those words of the descendant of Saramā, he entered the king’s residence in order to speak to Rāghava.[339–340]

20. When he had informed Rāma, he once more came out of the king’s residence, saying, “If you have something to say, then you must tell it truthfully to the king himself.”[341–342]

21–22. Upon hearing Lakṣmaṇa’s words, the descendant of Saramā said: “We, the most degraded of creatures, are not permitted in a temple, in a king’s residence, or in the houses of the twice-born, Saumitri. Thus I shall not be able to enter here, for he is righteousness incarnate.[343–346]

23. “He is a speaker of truth, skilled in battle, and devoted to the welfare of all creatures. Rāghava knows the basis of the six strategies and is an agent of sound policy.[347–348]

24. “Rāma, the foremost of those who give delight, knows everything and sees everything. He is Soma, Death, Yama, and Kubera, the bestower of wealth.[349–350]

25. “He is Vahni, the god of fire, Indra of the hundred sacrifices, and Sūrya and Varuṇa as well. So, O Saumitri Rāghava, please inform that guardian of the people.[351–352]

26–27. “For without being instructed, Saumitri, I would never dare to enter the assembly hall.” Then, out of compassion, the immensely radiant Lakṣmaṇa entered the king’s residence and said these words: “Now please hear my report, increaser of Kausalyā’s joy.[353–356]

28. “What I said, great-armed lord, was entirely in keeping with your instructions. And now a dog who seeks the resolution of some matter has approached, and he is standing at your gateway.”[357–358]

29. When Rāma had heard Lakṣmaṇa’s words, he spoke these words: “Whoever is waiting here, seeking the resolution of some matter, you must immediately usher him in.”[359–360]

[colophon]

Prakṣipta III, Sarga 2 = Appendix I, No. 8, Lines 361–465

1. When wise Lakṣmaṇa had heard Rāma's words, he quickly summoned the dog and reported to Rāghava.[361–362]

2. When Rāma saw the dog, who had been waiting by the gate, he spoke these words: "In your desire to speak, please speak clearly, descendant of Saramā. Don't be afraid."[363–364]

3. Then the dog, whose head was injured, saw Rāma, who was seated there. And as that descendant of Saramā looked upon the king, he spoke these words:[365–366]

4. "The king alone is the creator of all creatures, and the king is their destroyer. The king is awake when all others are asleep, and the king protects his subjects.[367–368]

5. "When governance is properly carried out, the king, as protector, protects righteousness. But when the king does not offer protection, his subjects soon perish.[369–370]

6. "The king is the creator, the protector, and the father of the entire world. The king is Kāla and the cosmic age. Indeed, the king is this entire world.[371–372]

7. "Because he sustains (dhāraṇāt), they call him dharma, 'righteousness.' And it is by dharma, 'righteousness,' that the subjects are sustained, since he sustains (dhārayate) the entire triple world together with its fixed and moving contents.[373–374]

8. "Because he restrains (dhāraṇāt) his enemies, thus pleasing his subjects through righteousness (dharmeṇa), he is called 'the restrainer' (dhāraṇam), and he is, it is certain, righteousness (dharmaḥ) itself.[375–376]

9. "This is the highest righteousness, Rāma, because it protects in this world and when one has passed on. For indeed, in my opinion, there is nothing that cannot be accomplished through righteousness.[377–378]

10. "Charity, compassion, honoring the virtuous, and honesty in all transactions: all this, your majesty, constitutes the highest righteousness, which yields its fruit, Rāghava, after one has passed on.[379–380]

11. "You, Rāghava of excellent vows, are the highest authority. And you know the righteousness that is practiced by the virtuous.[381–382]

12. "You are the highest abode of all righteousness, comparable to an ocean of virtues. It is only out of ignorance, your majesty, that I have addressed you, foremost of kings.[383–384]

13. “I propitiate you with bowed head. Please do not be angry.” When Rāghava had heard those words of the dog, he spoke these words:[385–386]

14. “What business of yours can I attend to today? Speak quickly and without hesitation.” When the descendant of Saramā had heard Rāma’s words, he said this:[387–388]

15. “A king should attend to his kingdom in accordance with righteousness, and he should govern righteously. Through righteousness he becomes a refuge who banishes all fears.[389–390]

16. “Having been informed of this, please listen to what was done to me, Rāghava. There is a mendicant called Sarvārthasiddha, who dwells in the brahmans’ quarter.[391–392]

17. “He struck me for no reason although I had done him no harm.” When he had heard this, Rāma dispatched his gatekeeper.[393–394]

18. And the latter fetched that learned twice-born brahman Sarvārthasiddha. Then, once there, that bull among the twice-born brahmans, whose blazing energy was great, said:[395–396]

19. “Please tell me, sinless Rāma, what I may do for you.” Addressed in this fashion by the brahman, Rāma spoke these words:[397–398]

20. “You struck this dog, twice-born brahman. Indeed, what injury did he do you in that you struck him with your staff?[399–400]

21. “Anger is a mortal enemy. Anger is an enemy with the face of a friend. Anger is a sharp sword. Anger deprives one of everything.[401–402]

22. “Whatever austerities one performs, whatever mantras one recites, and whatever charity one gives, he burns all that up with anger. Therefore one should avoid anger.[403–404]

23. “Restricting the range of his senses, one should act like a charioteer and steadfastly control the senses that are running wild like ill-disciplined horses.[405–406]

24. “In thought, deed, speech, and regard, one should act for the well-being of animate creation. One should cultivate neither hatred nor attachment.[407–408]

25. “Not even a sharp sword, an enraged serpent, or an implacably angry enemy can do what a poorly disciplined mind can.[409–410]

26. “Even if a person is chastised by discipline, his true nature is not brought under control. For upon investigation, the true nature of one who tries to conceal his true nature is unchanged.”[411–412]

27. Addressed in this fashion by Rāma, who was tireless in action, the twice-born brahman Sarvārthasiddha said in the king's presence:[413–414]

28. "My mind consumed with anger, I delivered that blow as I was wandering about in search of alms, at a time when alms were not to be had.[415–416]

*29. "This dog was on the main road, and I said to it, 'Get away! Get away!' But then, it only went slowly and stood in the rough area at the edge of the road.[417–418]

30. "Then, overcome by anger and hunger, I struck him, Rāghava. You must punish me, as I have committed this offence, foremost among the kings of kings.[419–420]

31. "If I am punished by you, best of kings, I will have no fear of hell." Then Rāma asked all those present in the assembly:[421–422]

32. "Tell me what should be done with him? What punishment should be imposed? For when punishment is properly imposed, the people are protected."[423–424]

33–35. Then Bhṛgu, Aṅgirasa, Kutsa, and the rest, Vasiṣṭha and Atri, together with Kaśyapa, as well as the foremost interpreters of dharma, the ministers, and the vaidika brahmans, as well as many other learned men who were assembled there, being well grounded in the rules of kingship, said to Rāghava, "A brahman may not be executed or punished. Those conversant with the śāstras know this." Then all of those sages said to Rāma:[425–430]

36. "A king, and especially you, Rāghava, must be the one who disciplines everyone, just as the eternal god Viṣṇu must be the one who disciplines the triple world."[431–432]

37–38. When they had all spoken in this fashion, the dog said these words: "I heard you promise, hero: 'What can I do for you?' If you are pleased with me, Rāma, if I am to be given a boon, then, lord of men, give this brahman the leadership of a kaula sect.[433–436]

39. "Great king, let him be granted the leadership of the kaulas in Kālañjara." When he heard that, Rāma had him consecrated as leader of a kaula sect.[437–438]

40. And the brahman, delighted and honored, departed on the back of an elephant. Then Rāma's ministers, astonished, spoke these words:[439–440]

41. “This is a boon that has been given to him, immensely effulgent king. This is no curse.” Addressed in this fashion by his ministers, Rāma spoke these words:[441–442]

42. “You don’t know the whole history. Only the dog knows the reason.” Then, upon being questioned by Rāma, the descendant of Saramā said this:[443–444]

43. “I was formerly the leader of the kaula sect there. Eating only leavings, Rāghava, I distributed them to male and female devotees during the worship of the gods and the twice-born brahmans.[445–446]

44. “I took pleasure in righteous acts and guarded the wealth of the divinity. I was humble, endowed with piety, and devoted to the well-being of all creatures.[447–448]

45. “Nevertheless, I have attained this terrible state, this low birth. This brahman is filled with anger. He has abandoned righteousness and is devoted to maliciousness.[449–450]

46. “He is pitiless, cruel, and violent. He thinks he is wise, but he is not righteous. He will consign his descendants to hell for seven generations and seven, Rāghava.[451–452]

47. “Therefore, under any circumstances, one should not undertake the leadership of a kaula sect.[453]

48. “So whoever desires to go to hell together with his sons, livestock, and relatives should take up a position of authority with respect to the divinities, cows, and cows and brahmans.[454–455]

49. “Moreover, whoever misappropriates donations—the property of brahmans, the wealth belonging to the divinities, and the wealth of women and children—perishes along with his sacrificial offerings.[456–457]

50. “One who appropriates the wealth of brahmans and divinities, Rāghava, instantly falls into the dreadful hell known as Vīci.[458–459]

51. “For that lowest of men who, even in his thoughts, abuses the property of the divinities or of the brahmans falls into hell after hell.”[460–461]

52. After Rāma, his eyes wide with wonder, had heard this, that dog of immense blazing energy went back to whence he had come.[462–463]

53. And that wise and fortunate one, who had been defiled only by reason of his species because of his previous birth, then fasted to death in Vārānasī.[464–465]

[Colophon]

Prakṣipta III, Sarga 3 = Appendix I, No. 10, lines 1–134

1–2. Now, in a delightful forested region ornamented with trees, on a splendid mountain filled with streams, adorned with hundreds of kokilas, resounding with the cries of various birds, filled with various wild animals, crowded with lions and tigers, and thronged with flocks of various birds, there dwelt for many, many years a vulture and an owl. [1–5]

3. Then once, regarding the owl's dwelling, the vulture, whose intentions were malicious, said, "This is mine," and picked a quarrel with him.[6–7]

4–5. Impatient, their anger aroused, the vulture and the owl formed this firm resolution: "Lotus-eyed Rāma is the king of the entire world. Let us quickly approach him with regard to whose abode this should be." Then they approached him in order to resolve the matter.[8–11]

6. Then, having quickly approached Rāma on account of their mutual hostility, their minds obsessed with their dispute, they touched his feet. [12–13]

7. Now, when the vulture had seen that lord of men, he said these words: "I regard you as the foremost among the gods and asuras.[14–15]

8. "You are superior to Bṛhaspati and Śukra, O greatly resplendent one. You, who are like a second moon in splendor, know the past and the future of all beings.[16–17]

9. "You are as impossible to gaze upon as the sun and are like the Himalayas in weightiness. You are like the ocean in profundity and are equal to the guardians of the world.[18–19]

10. "In patience you are the equal of the earth; in swiftness you are like the wind. You are the guru, endowed with magnanimity and possessed of renown, Rāghava.[20–21]

11. "You are wrathful, invincible, and a conqueror who has mastered the use of all divine weapon-spells. Now, Rāma, bull among men, please hear my petition.[22–23]

12. "Your majesty, this owl has appropriated my dwelling, which I built by my own efforts long ago. Please protect me in this matter, Rāghava."[24–25]

13–14. When the vulture had spoken in this fashion, the owl said these words: "An ordinary king, O Rāma, is born from Soma, Indra of the hundred sacrifices, Sūrya, Kubera the bestower of wealth, and Yama, and yet he is to some extent human. You, however, like a second Nārāyaṇa, are a god consisting of all of the divinities.[26–29]

15. "And your benevolence is properly directed, your majesty. Lord, since you act correctly after having investigated, you, sir, are, by virtue of that, a portion of Soma.[30–31]

16. "In your use of treasure, punishment, and donations, you remove all fear of evil, lord of the people. You are the giver, the taker, and the protector, and in that, sir, you are like Indra to us.[32–33]

17. "Unassailable by all beings, you are similar to Anala, god of fire, in your blazing energy. You continually burn up sins, and therefore you resemble the sun.[34–35]

18. "You are like the lord of wealth incarnate or even superior to that, O bestower of wealth. For Śrī, the bearer of the lotus, upon whom all wealth depends, belongs to you, O foremost of kings.[36–37]

19. "For through the treasure of Kubera, the bestower of wealth, you, sir, are our own bestower of wealth, you who are impartial with respect to all beings, both fixed and moving.[38–39]

20. "And you look impartially upon friend and foe, Rāghava. Moreover, your punishment is always in keeping with righteousness and the due process of law.[40–41]

21. "Death rushes upon him who arouses your anger, Rāma, and therefore, your majesty, you of immense valor are celebrated as Yama.[42–43]

22. "In that you have a human nature, foremost of kings, you are a king devoted to benevolence and filled with compassion for all.[44–45]

23. "A king is the power of those who are powerless and have no one to protect them. He must be the eyes of the sightless and the refuge of the one who has no refuge.[46–47]

24. "You are our protector, so listen to me, righteous king. This vulture, having invaded my home, is tormenting me.[48–49]

25. "For you are the chastiser of gods and men, bull among men." When Rāma had heard this, he personally summoned his ministers.[50–51]

26–27. Those ministers of Rāma—Dhṛṣṭi, Jayanta, Vijaya, Siddhārtha, Rāṣṭravardhana, Aśoka, Dharmapāla, and immensely powerful Sumantra—had also been the ministers of King Daśaratha. Those great men were versed in statecraft and adept in all the śāstras.[52–55]

28–29. Once he had summoned those men, who were modest, well born, and expert in policy and counsel, that righteous one, the foremost of the

Raghus, descended from the flying palace Puṣpaka and investigated the dispute between the vulture and the owl, [saying]: "For how many years, vulture, have you made this your home?[56–59]

30. "Tell me truthfully the legal basis, if you know it." When the vulture had heard this, he addressed Rāghava:[60–61]

31. "This has been my home, Rāma, from the time when this entire earth became completely populated by men, who had just then come into being."[62–63]

32. But the owl then said to Rāma, "This has been my home from the time that the earth was first adorned with trees."[64–65]

33. When Rāma had heard this, he said to the men of the assembly:[66]

34. "That in which there are no elders is not an assembly. They who do not preach righteousness are not elders. That in which there is no truth is not righteousness. That which is permeated by deception is not the truth.[67–70]

35. "Those members of the assembly who, having gone to the assembly hall, sit quietly, pondering, and do not speak appropriately, are all no different from those who speak falsehoods.[71–72]

36. "And one who knows the answer to a question but fails to speak, whether out of greed, anger, or fear, fastens upon himself a thousand nooses of Varuṇa.[73–74]

37. "In a full year only a single noose is unbound. Therefore, one who knows it should speak the truth truthfully and straightforwardly."[75–76]

38. Then, when the ministers had heard this, they said to Rāma: "The owl shines forth, your majesty, but the vulture does not, O wise one.[77–78]

39. "But you are the judge, great king, for the king is the ultimate recourse. All people are dependent upon the king. The king is eternal righteousness.[79–80]

40. "Those men who have a king to govern them never come to a bad end. Instead, spared by Vaivasvata, they become the foremost among men."[81–82]

41. When Rāma had heard the words of his ministers, he spoke these words: "Listen, I will tell you what is stated in the purāṇa:[83–84]

42. " 'In the beginning, the heavens, along with the moon, the sun, and the constellations; and the earth, together with its mountains and vast forests; indeed, the entire triple world with its fixed and moving contents was all just a great ocean of water.[85–86]

43. “ ‘It was all joined as one, like a second Mount Meru. Then the earth, along with Lakṣmī, entered the belly of Viṣṇu.[87–88]

44. “ ‘Holding her within him, that god of immense blazing energy, the inner soul of everything, entered that ocean of water and slept for many eons.[88–90]

45. “ ‘Then, while Viṣṇu was sleeping, Brahmā entered his belly. Realizing that his orifices were blocked, that great yogin nonetheless entered.[91–92]

46. “ ‘Then, when a lotus adorned with gold had arisen in Viṣṇu’s navel, the great Lord Brahmā, who had become a yogin, emerged and desired to create the earth, the air, and the mountains together with their trees.[93–95]

47. “ ‘At that time, that great ascetic created all creatures, including men and serpents and all those born from the womb and from eggs.[96–97]

48. “ ‘There from earwax Kaiṭabha was born, together with Madhu. They were two immensely powerful and fearsome-looking dānavas who were unassailable.[98–99]

49. “ ‘When they saw Prajāpati there, they were seized with rage, and they charged at the self-born god with tremendous speed.[100–101]

50. “ ‘Upon seeing them, the self-born Brahmā released a terrible cry. On account of that sound, Hara came there, along with Hari.[102–103]

51. “ ‘Then Madhu and Kaiṭabha were slain with a stroke of the discus, and the entire earth was inundated on every side with their fat.[104–105]

52. “ ‘But Hari, the upholder of the worlds, cleansed it once again, and he filled the entire earth, now cleansed, with trees.[106–107]

53. “ ‘Various types of plants and all crops came forth. And since the earth retained the odor of fat [medas], it came to be known as medinī.’[108–109]

54. “Therefore, it is my opinion that the dwelling belongs to the owl and not to the vulture. Therefore, the wicked vulture, who took away another’s home, must be punished.[110–111]

55. “For this evil and undisciplined creature has caused harm and a great wrong.” Just then a disembodied voice announced from the sky:[112–113]

56. "Do not harm the vulture, Rāma, for he was previously burned by the power of asceticism. O lord of men, he was the protector of the people. [114–115]

57. "He was known by the name Brahmadatta. Heroic, of true vows, and virtuous, he was burned up by Kālagautama. That brahman came to his house and asked for food.[116–117]

58–59. "Then he ate for a full one hundred years, O foremost of kings. King Brahmadatta himself, in preparation for feeding him, kindly offered him the guest-offering water to wash his feet, O immensely radiant king. But there was a piece of meat in the great sage's food.[118–121]

60. "And so the angry sage pronounced a terrible curse: 'May you become a vulture, your majesty!' And the king then said to him: 'No! No![122–123]

61. " 'Be propitiated with regard to what I have done out of ignorance, O you of great vows and knower of righteousness. O fortunate and blameless one, please set a limit to this curse.'[124–125]

62–63. "Realizing that that had been done out of ignorance, the sage said to the king, 'A greatly illustrious king named Rāma will be born in the House of the Ikṣvākus. He will be the fortunate, lotus-eyed Rāma. Once you have been touched by him, best of men, you will be freed from the curse.' "[126–129]

64. Then, when he had heard this and had been touched by Rāma, that king, the lord of men and lord of the earth, ceased to be a vulture and became a man with a divine appearance, covered with divine fragrances and unguents. He said this to Rāghava:[130–132]

65. "Well done, Lord Rāghava, knower of righteousness! Through your grace I have been freed from hell. Rāma, you have put an end to the curse."[133–134]

NOTES

Prakṣipta I, Sarga 1 = Appendix I, No. 1, lines 1–123

Following sarga 23, Ś,Ñ,V1,3,B,D1–4,6–12,T1 (lines 1–122),M3 insert a passage of three hundred forty-eight lines, which constitutes Appendix I, No. 1, in the critical edition. Many of these same manuscripts (see notes to Prakṣipta I, sarga 4) then insert a passage of one hundred forty-seven lines (Appendix I, No. 2). Among those printed editions that include these two appendix passages, they are normally broken up into five sargas (prakṣipta sargas 1–5). In the critical edition, the passage that in other editions constitutes the second of these five is relegated to an insert passages (15*) following Prakṣipta

I, sarga 1 (see notes following verse 59), leaving our version with only four prakṣipta sargas. Despite the fact that it has been relegated correctly to an insert passage, we have numbered it as Prakṣipta I, sarga 2, in conformity with the printed editions. The end of each of these sargas is indicated in the appendix by the term "colophon."

From the standpoint of the southern recension, these passages are generally regarded as interpolated (prakṣipta). They appear as part of the genuine text only in the editions of Lahore (7.27–30) and Gorresio (7.28–31). These passages are omitted from the printed edition of Gita Press, and they are marked as interpolated passages in the other printed editions of the southern recension. They are omitted from the translations of Roussel, Gita Press, and Benoît. Gita Press and Benoît note their existence. Gita Press (1969, vol. 3, p. 1985) rejects them, explaining that their rejection is "to avoid prolixity." Benoît (1999, p. 1722) observes, "Notre édition mentionne en note, à la suite du chapitre XXIII, cinq chapitres considérés comme interpolés, également rejetés par l'édition critique."

We have provided a concordance of the various editions with the critical apparatus. (CE = critical edition)

Gorresio: sarga 28 = App. I, No. 1, lines 1–123
sarga 29 = App. I, No. 1, lines 124–245
sarga 30 = App. I, No. 1, lines 246–346
sarga 31 = App. I, No. 1, lines 347–348; App. I, No. 2, lines 1–140

Lahore: sarga 27 = App. I, No. 1, lines 1–123
sarga 28 = App. I, No. 1, lines 124–245
sarga 29 = App. I, No. 1, lines 246–346
sarga 30 = App. I, No. 1, lines 347–348; 26* [followed by CE sarga 24]

KK: Prakṣipta I, sarga 1 = CE 7.23.45cd–454*, line 1; App. I, No. 1, lines 1–123
Prakṣipta I, sarga 2 = App. I, No. 1, 15*, lines 1–29
Prakṣipta I, sarga 3 = App. I, No. 1, lines 124–245
Prakṣipta I, sarga 4 = App. I, No. 1, lines 246–346; CE 7.24.1
Prakṣipta I, sarga 5 = App. I, No. 1, lines 347–348; App. I, No. 2, lines 1–147

VSP: Prakṣipta I, sarga 1 = CE 7.23.45cd–454*, line 1; App. I, No. 1, lines 1–123
Prakṣipta I, sarga 2 = App. I, No. 1, 15*, lines 1–29
Prakṣipta I, sarga 3 = App. I, No. 1, lines 124–245
Prakṣipta I, sarga 4 = App. I, No. 1, lines 246–348; CE 7.24.1
Prakṣipta I, sarga 5 = App. I, No. 2, lines 1–147

GPP and NSP [inserted in smaller font, as an extended footnote]:
Prakṣipta I, sarga 1 = App. I, No. 1, lines 1–123
Prakṣipta I, sarga 2 = App. I, No. 1, 15*, lines 1–29
Prakṣipta I, sarga 3 = App. I, No. 1, lines 124–245
Prakṣipta I, sarga 4 = App. I, No. 1, lines 246–346
Prakṣipta I, sarga 5 = App. I, No. 1, lines 347–48; App. I, No. 2, lines 1–147

These passages clearly do not belong to the best reconstruction of the text, being in the main northern interpolations. Additional translations of the southern version can be found in the works of Dutt (1894, pp. 1630–51 [sargas 24–29, not marked as interpolations]), Shastri (1959, vol. 3, pp. 439–57), and Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, pp. 435–53). The Northeast or Bengal version of these sargas is translated by Gorresio (1870, pp. 96–115).

Before verse 1, KK and VSP insert two lines, which are variants of 7.23.45cd and 454*.

The lines as they occur in KK are: "Then, releasing roars in his delight, he set forth from Varuṇa's realm, together with Mahodara, whose voice was breaking with joy (harṣān nādāṃs tu visṛjan niṣkrānto varuṇālayāt / mahodareṇa saṃyukto harṣagadgadabhāṣiṇā //)."

1. "delighting in battle" yuddhalālasāḥ: D1,3,4,6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead yuddhadurmadāḥ, "intoxicated with battle."

"the rākṣasas marched" viceruḥ: Literally, "they wandered."

"Aśmanagara" aśmanagaram: This is the name of a city protected by the Kālakeyas and said to be located in Rasātala. See 7.23.14,15 and notes.

"and there Daśagrīva" sa tu tatra daśagrīvaḥ: D1,3,4,6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead yatrāpaśyad daśagrīvaḥ, "where Daśagrīva saw."

"spied a resplendent mansion" gṛhaṃ paśyati bhāsvaram: D1,3,4,6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK and VSP read instead gṛhaṃ paramabhāsvaram, "an exceedingly resplendent mansion."

2–3. "filled with fretworks of bells" kiṅkinījālasaṃkūlam: D10,11,T1,3, and GPP and NSP read kiṅkinījālasaṃvṛtam, "covered with fretworks of bells," while Ñ1,V1,3,D3,6,7, and KK and VSP read instead kiṅkinījālasaṃyutam, "endowed with fretworks of bells."

4. "When . . . spied that magnificent mansion" taṃ tu dṛṣṭvā gṛhavaraṃ: Literally, "and having seen that best of mansions." D7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead dṛṣṭvā gṛhavaraṃ ramyam, "having seen that charming best of mansions."

"he said": The text provides no transition to Rāvaṇa's speech. We have added the phrase for the sake of readability.

6. "And observing that its gateway was deserted" śūnyaṃ saṃprekṣya taddvāram: KK and VSP read instead sa śūnyaṃ prekṣya taddvāram, "He, having observed that its gateway was deserted," while D10,11, and GPP and NSP read niḥśūnyaṃ praikṣata varam, "He saw that the excellent [gateway] was deserted."

"an interior courtyard" kakṣāntaram: Ś2,B4,D12,T1,3,4,M3, and Gorresio, KK, and VSP read instead the synonymous kakṣyāntaram, while GPP and NSP read instead the locative singular kakṣyāntare, "in an interior courtyard."

7. "When Prahasta heard" sa tu śrutvā: Literally, "and he, having heard." KK and VSP read śrutvā sa tu by transposition.

8. "enchanting person" vimohanaḥ: V3,D1,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead the more or less synonymous vimohitaḥ. Commenting on the variant, Cs explains that vimohita means "he by whom others are especially stupefied (vimohito viśeṣeṇa mohitā itare yena saḥ)."

10. "desired to enter" praveṣṭukāmaḥ: D1,3,4,6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead praveṣṭum icchan, "[he] desiring to enter."

11. "handsome . . . man . . . wearing a crown" baddhamaulir vapuṣmān: Literally, "a handsome one having a fastened or attached diadem." GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead candramauliḥ, "having the moon for his crown." Cs on this latter term understands the man to have the form of Rudra (i.e., Śiva) (candramaulir vapuṣmān raudrākāraḥ).

12–13. "His eyes were red and his teeth were lovely. His lips were like the bimba fruit, and he was beautiful to behold." raktākṣaś cārudaśano bimboṣṭhaś cārudarśanaḥ: T1,M3, and KK and VSP read instead raktākṣaḥ śvetavadano bimboṣṭhaś cordhvaromavān, "His eyes were red and his face was pale. His lips were like bimba fruit, and his bodily hair was bristling."

"His beard was thick" gūḍhaśmaśruḥ: Literally, "hidden-beard." We understand the compound as a paranipāta in the sense of "hidden by his beard."D1,3,4,6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead rūḍhaśmaśruḥ, "having a grown [-out] beard."

"He was fanged" daṃṣṭrālaḥ: KK and VSP read instead daṃṣṭrābhā, which is probably a typo for M3's daṃṣṭrābhaḥ [o], "having a fanged appearance."

"hair-raising" lomaharṣaṇaḥ: V1,B4,D9,T1,3,M3, and KK and VSP read instead the synonymous variant romaharṣaṇaḥ.

"he stood" tiṣṭhati: M3 and KK and VSP read instead the adjective susthitam, "standing firmly," which modifies puruṣam of 1* (see below).

Following line 25 ("His beard was thick and his bones deep set. He was fanged and hair-raising."), M3 and KK and VSP insert a passage of one line [1*]: "And Rāvaṇa spied such a man (etādṛśaṃ vai puruṣaṃ dadarśa sa tu rāvaṇaḥ)."

14. "the hairs on Rāvaṇa's body bristled" ūrdhvaromā babhūva saḥ: Literally, "he became one whose body hair was bristling."

"His heart pounded" hṛdayaṃ kampate cāsya: Literally, "and his heart trembled." M3 and KK and VSP read instead aspandatāsya hṛdayam, "his heart palpitated."

"and he began to tremble" vepathuś ca vyajāyata: Literally, "and a trembling arose." Ñ2,D10,11,T1,M3, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead vepathuś cāpy ajāyata, "and a trembling arose as well."

15. "When Rāvaṇa perceived" dṛṣṭvā: Literally, "having seen."

16. "Tell me quickly and with confidence." viśrabdhaṃ brūhi mā ciram: Literally, "speak confidently with no delay." Ñ2,D10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead brūhi visrabdhamānasaḥ, "[you] with a confident mind speak."

17. "And" tu: D1,3,4,6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead saḥ, "he."

"What do you think . . . or with me" mayā vā manyase katham: Literally, "How do you think . . . or with me." D7,10, and GPP and NSP read instead athavā manyase katham, "or how do you think," while Ñ,V1,3,T1,3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read mayā vā tad vidhīyatām, "Let that be ordained . . . or with me."

18. "Then Rāvaṇa once more" rāvaṇo hi tato bhūyaḥ: Ś2,3,D9,12, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead rāvaṇo 'bhihito bhūyaḥ, "Rāvaṇa, addressed . . . once more."

"plucking up his courage" dhairyaṃ samālambya: Literally, "having recourse to his fortitude."

19. "tell me" tad brūhi: Literally, "speak that." B2,T1,3,M3, and KK and VSP read instead taṃ brūhi, "speak about him."

"Who lives here in this house?" gṛhe 'tra tiṣṭhate ko vai: Literally, "Who indeed stays here in the house?" T1,3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read vā, "and or or," for vai, "indeed." D3,6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead gṛheṣu tiṣṭhate ko hi, "Who indeed stays in [these] houses."

"with him" anena: D1,3,4,6,7,10,11,T1,3,4,M3, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead tenaiva, "with him alone."

20. "The man then spoke once more in this fashion." sa evaṃ punar evāha: Literally, "he once more indeed spoke in this fashion." D7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead sa enaṃ punar apy āha, "and he again said to him."

21. "like Yama, the ender of all things" ivāntakaḥ: Literally, "like the ender."

22. "powerful" balavān: M3 and KK and VSP read instead balir hi, "indeed Bali."

23. "accustomed to sharing with others" saṃvibhāgī: Literally, "possessing sharing or distribution." Cs understands, "an agent of sharing of wealth, etc., in accordance with the śāstras (samvibhāgī yathāśāstraṃ dravyādivibhāgaṃ kartā)."

"and always performs kindnesses for his guru" gurupriyakaraḥ: D1,3,4,6,7,10,11, T1,3,4,M3, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead guruviprapriyaḥ, "devoted to [his] guru and brahmans or beloved by [his] guru and brahmans."

"He acts appropriately to the moment." kālākāṅkṣī: Literally, "one who waits for the [proper] time." Cs explains, "one who desires not to transgress the proper time for virtuous actions (satkarmayogyakālānatikramaṇam ākāṅkṣan)."

24. "He is skillful" dakṣaḥ: Gorresio, KK, and VSP read instead sa ca, "And he."

"He roars" eṣa garjati: Ñ,V3,B1–3,D7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead eṣa gacchati, "He goes against or attacks." Cs notes that eṣaḥ, "he," refers to the person who is hidden within or that this expression is intended to produce fear. (eṣa etad antargataḥ. yadvā bhayotpādanārtham evam uktiḥ.)

"and" tathā: Literally, "as well." KK and VSP read instead sadā, "always." The reading is not noted in the critical apparatus.

25. "of . . . mighty birds" patatribhiḥ: Literally, "with winged ones." T1,3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead maharṣibhiḥ, "with great seers."

26. "exceedingly mighty" mahāsattva: V3,D1,3,4,7,11, and KK and VSP read instead the awkward mahāsattvam, which would then best be read as an adverb, "extremely courageously."

"if it please you to engage with Bali" balinā yadi te sārdhaṃ rocate: Literally, "if it pleases you with Bali." D1,3,4,6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead balinā yadi te yoddhuṃ rocate, lending the line the sense "if it pleases you to fight with Bali."

27. "who resembled fire . . . he burst out laughing" jahāsa dahanopamaḥ: Literally, "he who was similar to fire laughed." T1,M3, and KK and VSP read instead aṭṭahāsaṃ jahāsa ca, "and he laughed a loud laugh."

29. "who had taken on a cosmic form" viśvarūpavān: Literally, "possessing a universal form." According to Cs, this refers to Bali's fully expanded form, which the asura had received through the grace of the Lord (i.e., Viṣṇu) (īśvarānugraheṇa vyāyatarūpaḥ)."

"the rākṣasa, whom he had seized" samudgrahītaṃ rakṣo vai: Literally, "indeed, the seized rākṣasa." GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead sa gṛhītvā ca tad rakṣo, "he having seized that rākṣasa."

"upon his hip" utsaṅge: Literally, "on the hip." We follow Cs, who glosses, "on the curve above the hip (aṅke)." Both aṅka and utsaṅga refer to the space above the hip, where, for example, someone might carry a small child. KK and VSP read instead hy utsaṅge, "indeed upon the hip," to avoid the hiatus.

30. "Can I fulfill a desire of yours . . . ?" kiṃ te kāmaṃ karomy aham: Literally, "Do I effect your desire?" D1,2,3,6,7,10,11,T1,3,4, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read the accusative masculine singular pronoun kam for the question marker kim, lending the phrase the sense "What desire of yours may I fulfill?"

32. "addressed in this fashion" evam uktas: D1,3,4,6,7,10,11,T1,3,4,M3, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead evam ukte, "when that had been said."

"let loose . . . said to him" muktvainam abravīt: KK and VSP read instead kṛtvedam abravīt, "having made [a laugh], he said this."

"that which" yat: Lahore, KK, and VSP read instead the masculine yam, lending the line the sense "I will tell you about him whom you are asking about." Cs, who reads muktvā, "having released," with the critical edition, glosses it as kṛtvā, "having done."

33. "arrogant in their strength" baladarpitāḥ: D1,3,4,6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead balavattarāḥ, "exceedingly mighty."

"both in the recent past and in antiquity" pūrve pūrvatarāś ca ye: Literally, "those in the past and those in distant past." Cs understands pūrvatarāḥ to refer to those who were even prior to the earlier ones (prapūrvāḥ)."

"always standing at the doorway" dvāri tiṣṭhati nityaśaḥ: D1,3,4,6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read the synonymous dvāre, "at the doorway," for dvāri, "at the doorway." B2,4,D3,4,6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read the synonymous nityadā, "always," for nityaśaḥ, "always."

34. "was he himself who bound me" baddhaś cāham anenaiva: Literally, "I was bound by him, indeed." D1,3,4,6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead so 'ham, "I am he [who]," D10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read evam, "thus," for the emphatic marker eva, lending the line the sense "I was bound by him thus."

"Rāvaṇa" rāvaṇa: D3,6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead mānavaḥ, "a human," which would agree with kaḥ, "who," lending the phrase the sense "what human?"

35. "And" ca: D7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead vai, "indeed."

36. "nor do I" na caivāham: Literally, "and indeed I do not." Cs explains that Bali is saying that he does not fully know or comprehend Viṣṇu (na cāhaṃ sākalyena [veda]).

"He is Kali and Kāla" kaliś caivaiṣa kālaś ca: Ñ1,V3,T1,3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead kaliś caiva hi kālaś ca, "For he is Kali and Kāla." Kali is the personification of strife or discord or the spirit of destruction at the end of a cosmic age. Cs understands, "the one who gives the capacity or capability for discord (kalahasāmarthyapradaḥ)."

37. "He is the destroyer as well as the creator" hartā sraṣṭā tathaiva ca: Cs notes that Viṣṇu's role as the destroyer is mentioned first in accordance with chronological sequence (hartā srasṭeti hartṛtvapuraskaraṇam etat samayānusārāt).

38. "it has neither beginning nor end" anādyantam: B2,4,D1,T1,3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead the masculine singular anādyantaḥ, which would then modify maheśvaraḥ, "the great lord."

Following line 75 ("And then, that great lord creates it all over again so that it has neither beginning nor end."), T1,3,4,M3, and KK and VSP insert a passage of one line [5*]: "He, the supreme person, is the primal cause, the action, and the actor (karaṇaṃ kāraṇaṃ kartā so 'yaṃ puruṣasattamaḥ)."

39. "no other great being such as he" naivaṃvidhaṃ mahadbhūtam: Literally, "there is no great being of such a type."

40. "foremost of kings" rājendra: D1,3,4,6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead paulastya, "O descendant of Pulastya."

"that great being" mahābhūtaḥ: D3,6,7,9–11, and GPP and NSP read instead the synonymous neuter mahad bhūtam, "great being." T1,M3, and KK and VSP read instead mahātmaiṣaḥ, "this great one."

"of us all" hy eṣām: Literally, "indeed of all of these." V1,3,T1,4,M3, and KK and VSP read teṣām, "of those."

41–42. "Śambhu" śambhuḥ: Ś2,3,B1,D12, and KK and VSP read instead śumbhaḥ, "Śumbha." See 7.17.11–12 and notes.

"Śumbha" śumbhuḥ: KK and VSP read instead dambhuḥ, "Dambhu."

"Prahlāda" prahlādaḥ: D10 and GPP and NSP read instead prahlādiḥ.

"Kūṭa" kūṭaḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead tathā, "as well."

"Mṛdu" mṛduḥ: Ñ1,T1,3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead baliḥ, "Bali."

"the twin arjuna trees" yamalārjunau: The reference is taken from a well-known episode in the childhood of Kṛṣṇa. The twin arjuna trees were uprooted by the young Kṛṣṇa as he was crawling through the forest with a mortar tied around his waist. See Harivaṃśa 51.15–18.

"they all burned" ete tapanti: Literally, "these burn." Cs argues that this term is used because of the dānavas' ability to obstruct or resist [Viṣṇu] (tapanti tatpratibandhasāmarthyād evam uktiḥ)."

Following 41cd (= line 82) (Kālanemi, Prahlāda, Kūṭa, Vairocana, Mṛdu), KK and VSP insert a passage of two lines [7*]: "Kālakeya,[1] the one called Tāraka, Mucukunda, Vivardhana, Hiraṇyākṣa, Madhu, Kaiṭabha, and Dhūma and Śambara."

[1] "Kālakeya" kālakeyaḥ: KK and VSP read instead the masculine plural kālakeyāḥ, "the Kālakeyas."

Following 42cd (= line 84), D3,6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP (first set of prakṣiptas, sarga 1.43–46), KK, and VSP (first set of prakṣiptas, sarga 1.46–49), insert a passage of eight lines [8*]:

They all offered hundreds of sacrifices, and all performed great austerities. They were all very great, and all practiced the path of yoga. All attained supreme lordship, and all partook of the finest objects of enjoyment.[1] They gave lavishly, sacrificed, and studied, and were protectors of the people. They were protectors of their own people and destroyers[2] of their enemies. They had no equals[3] in all the worlds, including the immortal gods.[4] They were heroic, endowed with noble birth, and masters of all weapons and divine weapon-spells. They had mastered all branches of knowledge and never turned back in battles.

[1] "partook of the finest objects of enjoyment" bhuktaṃ bhogair mahattaraiḥ: KK and VSP read instead bhuktabhogair mahattaraiḥ, "they were all great enjoyers of the objects of enjoyment."

[2] "destroyers" prahantāraḥ: KK and VSP read instead prahartāraḥ, "attackers."

[3] "They had no equals" naiteṣāṃ vidyate samam: Literally, "Nothing is the equal of them." Cs understands the neuter samam to refer to anything equal (samaṃ vastu). KK and VSP read naiteṣāṃ vidyate samaḥ, "No one is the equal of them."

[4] "including the immortal gods" sāmareṣu: KK and VSP read instead samareṣu, "in battles."

43. "those great dānavas ruled the kingdoms" rājyāni kāritāni mahātmabhiḥ: Literally, "the kingdoms were caused to be carried out by the great ones." M3 and KK and VSP read kāṅkṣitāni, "[were] coveted," for kāritāni, "[were] caused to be carried out."

Following verse 43 (= lines 85–86), D3,6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP (= first set of prakṣiptas, sarga 1.48ab), KK, and VSP (= first set of prakṣiptas, sarga 1.51ab) insert a passage of one line [9*]: "Fixed in their enmity to the gods, they protected their own."

44. "and addicted to pleasures" bhogasaktāś ca: D3,6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead copasaktāś ca, "and addicted [to worldly things] and," while T1,M3, and KK and VSP read instead bhogaraktāś ca, "and devoted to pleasures."

"those mighty dānavas, who could take on any form at will" balinaḥ kāmarūpiṇaḥ: Literally, "the mighty ones, who could take on any form at will." Ś,D2,8,12,T1,3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead balinā kāmarūpiṇā, "by that mighty one, who could take on any form at will."

Following 44ab ("But although they were equal in blazing energy to the rising sun, they were negligent and addicted to pleasures.") (= line 87), D3,6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP (= first set of prakṣiptas, sarga 1.49–51ab), KK, and VSP (= first set of prakṣiptas, sarga 1.1.52–54ab) insert a passage of five lines [10*]: "But then Lord Viṣṇu devises stratagems to compass the destruction of him who[1] assaults the gods. For the blessed Lord Hari is the knower.[2] He manifests himself, whereby he leads them to destruction. And then, once again, returning by himself to his own inherent form, he abides. And in this way, by this great god, the lords of the dānavas . . ."

[1] "then . . . of him who" yaḥ saḥ . . . tadaiṣām: Literally, "he who . . . then of them." The grammar is rather awkward with its number disagreement. Cs understands somewhat differently, taking yaḥ saḥ as "whichever daitya [should attack the gods]" and construing eṣām to refer to the gods of whom Viṣṇu is the lord. (yo daityaḥ. eṣāṃ devānām.) D10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead yas tu . . . tad eṣām, "but which [daitya] . . . then of them," reading tat as tataḥ, while KK and VSP read instead yat saḥ . . . tad eṣaḥ, "in that one [a daitya] . . . so he [Viṣṇu]."

[2] "the knower" sa vettā: NSP and KK read instead saṃvettā: "the one who knows fully."

45. "It is heard that . . . unconquered" śrūyante ye 'parājitāḥ: Literally, "those who were heard to be . . . unconquered." T1,M3, and KK and VSP read instead nṛpās te ca parājitāḥ, "and those kings [were] conquered."

"And yet, even those great beings . . . were brought to destruction" te 'pi nītā mahadbhūtāḥ: Literally, "even those who had become great ones were brought." We read the awkward but well attested mahadbhūtāḥ, "who had become great ones," as mahābhūtāḥ, "great ones," which is the variant reading of Ś,V1,3,B3,D2,8,9,12. Cs explains the reading somewhat differently. He takes bhūtam to be a variant of bhūtiḥ, "might or superhuman power," for which he glosses the synonymous aiśvaryam. He then reads the compound as a bahuvrīhi in the sense of "those whose superhuman power was that of the great beings." (bhūtaṃ bhūtir aiśvaryam. mahatāṃ bhūtaṃ yeṣāṃ te tathā.) The line, additionally, is elliptical, and following verse 44cd (= line 88) we have completed its sense, adding kṣayam, "destruction." KK and VSP avoid the ellipsis, reading instead tena nītāḥ kṣayaṃ sarve, "By him they were all brought to destruction."

Following verse 45 (= line 90), D3,6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP (= first set of prakṣiptas, sarga 1.53–70ab), KK, and VSP (= first set of prakṣiptas, sarga 1.1.56–73ab), insert a passage of thirty-six lines [11*]: "Having spoken in this fashion, the lord of the dānavas once more addressed the rākṣasa: 'Immensely mighty hero, please take that circlet,[1] which you see—it resembles a blazing fire—and come to my side.[11*, lines 1–3] Then I shall tell you the unfailing cause of liberation.[2] Do it, great-armed Rāvaṇa, do not delay.'[11*, lines 4–5] When he heard that, delight of the Raghus, the immensely powerful rākṣasa went laughing to where that celestial circlet[1] was. Arrogant in his might, Rāvaṇa tried to raise it as if in play. But Rāvaṇa was unable to budge it by any means.[11*, lines 6–9] Embarrassed, the immensely powerful rākṣasa tried once again. But no sooner had he raised that divine weapon than, covered with gouts of blood, he fell to the ground like a tree[3] cut off at the roots.[11*, lines 10–12] At that moment, a great sound arose from the Puṣpaka,[4] as a great cry of 'Hā! Hā!' went forth from the ministers of the rākṣasa lord.[11*, lines 13–14] Then, after a while, the rākṣasa regained consciousness and stood up, and Bali told him, who was bowed down with shame: 'Come, foremost of rākṣasas, listen to the words that I will speak.[11*, lines 15–17] This bejeweled circlet that you tried to raise[5] was one of my ancestor's earrings. Look at it. Thus it fell to the ground right here,[6] immensely powerful one. After that earring [fell], the other earring fell on a mountainside. And as he was fighting, his crown, too, fell on the ground near a sacrificial altar.[11*, lines 18–22] It belonged to my great-grandfather Hiraṇyakaśipu. Neither Kāla nor Mṛtyu nor disease nor violent foes could be the death of him by day or night or dawn or dusk.[7] Nor could it be compassed by any weapon, wet or dry, nor by any divine weapon-spell, foremost of rākṣasas.[11*, lines 23–27] He had a very terrible argument with Prahlāda, and as the argument developed, on behalf of great Prahlāda—that hero who was foremost of all[8]—there arose a valiant [being] terrifying to the worlds and bearing the form of a man-lion,[9] O foremost of the rākṣasas.[11*, lines 28–31] Everyone upon whom that terrible creature cast his eye was deeply shaken, without exception. Then, taking Hiraṇyakaśipu[10] up in his arms, he led him with his claws to the abode of Yama. And it is that Vāsudeva, who is without taint, who stands there at the doorway.[11] As I speak[12] of that overlord of the gods, listen to my words with great devotion, if you hold him in your heart.' [11*, lines 32–36]"

[1] "circlet" cakram: Literally, "discus or wheel." As becomes clear at lines 18–22, the object in question is a circular ornament, not a weapon. Cs glosses, "circular [object] (vartulam)."

[2] "cause of liberation" muktikāraṇam: The term mukti, "liberation," is somewhat ambiguous here, perhaps intentionally so. On the one hand, Rāvaṇa had claimed earlier (see verse 31, specifically, line 61) that he was able to liberate Bali from the bondage to which he had been subjected by Viṣṇu. On the other hand, in the powerfully Vaiṣṇava context of the passage (see verses 57 and 58 below), there is Bali's discussion of the spiritual liberation awaiting those who know Viṣṇu to be the Supreme Spirit. Cs appears to focus on the former meaning, glossing, "the cause of my liberation (manmokṣahetum)."

[3] "a tree" śākhī: D7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead śālaḥ, "a śāla (v.l. sāla) tree."

[4] "arose from the Puṣpaka" puṣpakasaṃbhavaḥ: KK and VSP read instead the rather awkward puṣkarasaṃbhavaḥ, "arose from the sky." Presumably the ministers are in the Puṣpaka in the sky. Other meanings of the word puṣkara, such as lotus, lotus pond, and the like seem inappropriate to the context.

[5] "that you tried to raise" yat tvayā codyatam: Literally, "and which was raised by you." Given the context, we must read the participle inceptively, as Rāvaṇa was not able to lift the circlet. KK and VSP read they synonymous coddhṛtam, "and lifted."

[6] "Thus it fell to the ground right here" etat patitavac caivam atra bhūmau: KK and VSP read instead etat patitam atraivam anyad bhūyaḥ, "Thus this the other fell right here after that."

[7] "nor . . . dawn or dusk" sandhyayor na hi: KK and VSP read instead sandhyayor api, "even by dawn or dusk."

[8] "who was foremost of all" sarvavaryasya: Literally, "of him who was foremost of all." KK and VSP read instead sarvadṛśyasya, "of him who was most handsome of all."

[9] "bearing the form of a man-lion" nṛsiṃhākṛtirūpadhṛk: Literally, "bearing a form in the shape of a man-lion." KK and VSP read instead the synonymous nṛsiṃhākṛtirūpadhṛt.

[10] "taking Hiraṇyakaśipu" uddhṛtya: Literally, "having taken [him] up."

[11] "who stands there at the doorway" dvāristhaḥ: Literally, "who stands at the doorway." KK and VSP read instead dvāḥstho vai, "who, indeed, stands at the doorway," while GPP and NSP read instead dvārasthaḥ, "who stands at the doorway."

[12] "As I speak" gadato me: Literally, "while I am speaking or of me who is speaking." KK and VSP read instead tattvataḥ, "in accordance with the truth."

46. "and the foremost seers" ṛṣīṇāṃ caiva mukhyānām: M3 and KK and VSP read instead ṛṣīṇāṃ saptasaṃkhyānām, "of the great seers, who are seven in number."

"in their hundreds and thousands" śatāny atha sahasraśaḥ: Literally, "the hundreds, moreover, by the thousands." D3,6,7,11, and KK and VSP read instead the awkward śatāny abdasahasraśaḥ, "hundreds [of seven sages] by thousands of years." Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 439), the only translator to render this phrase, translates, "hundreds of the seven sages have in the past thousands of years been bought under his subjection."

48. "shot forth great flames" mahājvālaḥ: Literally, "possessing great flames."

"His hair was standing on end" hy ūrdhvaromā: B2,D1–4,6–8,10,11, T4 and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead ūrdhvaromā.

"He had great fangs, his tongue was lightning" daṃṣṭrālo vidyujjihvaś ca: T1,3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read vidyujjihvaś ca daṃṣṭrālaḥ by transposition.

49. "He was the chastiser of the wicked" pāpānāṃ śāsitaḥ: KK and VSP read instead pāpānāṃ śamitā, "He was a killer of the wicked."

50. "nor any anxiety" vyathā vā: Ś,Ñ1,V1,D2,8,12,T1, and GPP and NSP read instead yathā vā, "or in which way," which in the context is difficult to construe.

52. "Jiṣṇu" jiṣṇuḥ: Literally, "the victorious one." Ñ2,B,D2,6,T1,3,4,M3, and Gorresio, KK, and VSP read instead viṣṇuḥ, "Viṣṇu."

"Narasiṃha" narasiṃhaḥ: B2,T1,3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead the slight variant nārasiṃhaḥ, "Nārasiṃha."

"Ṛtadhāman" ṛtadhāmā: D3,6,7,9–11, and GPP and NSP read instead kratudhāmā, "Kratudhāman." See 6.105.6 and notes on the figure of Ṛtadhāman.

54. "of the mighty roar" mahānādaḥ: D1,3,4,6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead the vocative masculilne singular mahābāho, "O great armed-one!" KK and VSP read instead the nominative masculine singular mahābāhuḥ, "the great-armed one."

55. "He is the sacrificer" yajvān: D1,3,4,6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead yajñaḥ, "the sacrifice."

57. "Thus do . . . conceive of him in his world" evam . . . cintayantīha: Literally, "Thus do they think here." T1,3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead evam . . . kathayantīha. "Thus do they describe here." Ś1,Ñ2,B1,D1,2,7,8,12, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read enam, "him," for evam, "thus," providing an object for the verb.

58. "is freed from all sins" sa tu pāpaiḥ pramucyate: Literally, "he is freed from sins." GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead na ca pāpair vilipyate, "he is not tainted with sins." The variant vilipyate is not noted in the critical apparatus; however, the critical apparatus does show D1,3,4,6,7,10,1 reading the variant pralipyate, which may have been incorrectly transcribed by the editors.

"It is through constantly remembering" smṛtvā smṛtvā: Literally, "having remembered, having remembered." Ñ1,D3,4,6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead smṛtvā stutvā, "having remembered, having praised."

"one would gain everything from him" sarvam asmād avāpnuyāt: D1,3,4,6,7,9–11,T1, 3,4,M3, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead sarvam asmād avāpyate, "everything is obtained from him."

59. "And" tu: Literally, "but or and." B1 and KK and VSP read instead ca, "And."

Following verse 59 (= line 120), D3,6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP (= prakṣipta sarga 1.85cd), KK, and VSP (= prakṣipta sarga 1.88ab) insert a passage of four lines [14*]: "His eyes red with rage and his weapon raised, that immensely powerful one [went forth]. Now, when Lord Hari, who held a cudgel,[1] saw him in that state, he, who had taken on that form,[2] thought, 'I will not kill this evil creature now,' and, in his desire to favor Brahmā, he vanished, Rāma."

[1] "who held a cudgel" musaladhṛk: KK and VSP read instead musaladhṛt, "bearing a cudgel."

[2] "who had taken on that form" rūpadhṛk: Literally, "bearing a form." KK and VSP read instead viśvadhṛt, "upholder of all."

60. "did not see" na . . . paśyate: Literally, "he does not see." M3 and KK and VSP read instead the perfect na . . . dadarśa, "he did not see."

"releasing a roar in his delight, he set forth from Varuṇa's realm, returning by the path on which he had entered" harṣān nādaṃ vimuñcan vai niṣkrāman varuṇālayāt [122] / yenaiva saṃpraviṣṭaḥ sa pathā tenaiva niryayau [123] /: These lines (122–123) are placed in brackets in VSP. The editor (page 65) notes that this śloka is found only in his manuscript jha (ayaṃ ślokaḥ jha pāṭhe dṛśyate).

Following verse 59, D7,10,11,T3,4,M3, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP (= prakṣipta sarga 2) insert a passage of twenty-nine lines [15*], which constitutes a separate prakṣipta sarga in these southern printed editions. See Prakṣipta I, sarga 2 and notes.

Prakṣipta I, Sarga 2 = Appendix I, No. 1,15*, lines 1–29

Following Prakṣipta I, sarga 2 (= App. I, No. 1, lines 1–123), D7,10,11,T3,4,M3, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP (= prakṣipta sarga 2) insert a passage of twenty-nine lines [15*], which constitutes a separate prakṣipta sarga in these southern printed editions.

1–2. "the lord of Laṅkā" laṅkeśvaraḥ: T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead paulastyaḥ, "Paulastya."

"it could travel by various paths of flight" nānāpātagatim: Literally, "whose movement was through various flights." Cs understands, "paths that ascend, descend, etc. (uḍḍīnā- vaḍīnādigatiḥ)." T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead manovātagatim, "whose pace was that of thought or wind."

"It had been left in a region of the sky devoted to pleasure." vihāraviyati sthitam: Literally, "stationed in the pleasure-sky." Cs understands, "the region of the sky designed for the purpose of pleasure (vihārārthakṛlptaṃ viyat)."

3. "There" yatra: Literally, "Where." T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead tatra, "There."

"jewels, and garments" -ratnāmbara-: T3,M3, and KK and VSP read instead -raktāmbara-, lending the sequence the sense "[and] red garments."

5. "whose steed was Ucchaiḥśravas" ucchaiḥśravasavāhanam: Cs is evidently disturbed by the mythological lapse of assigning Indra's legendary steed, Ucchaiḥśravas, to Sūrya, who is normally said to ride a chariot drawn by seven horses. Cs, noting that the name here, ucchaiḥśravasa, is a synonym for the standard ucchaiḥśravaḥ, offers two possible interpretations. According to the first, Sūrya has a horse that is similar to Ucchaiḥśravas. Or, as an alternative, he has multiple horses as his vehicles. Cs then cites ṚV 1.164.2, in which the sun is described as having a single horse with seven names. [Moreover], an epithet of Sūrya is saptasapti[n], "having seven horses" (see, for example, MBh 3.3.14 [1*, line 56], 8.8.33). Cs argues that there is no contradiction between these two positions, because the singular mention of the one horse is intended to refer to the lead horse [of the seven]. (uccaiḥśravasavāhanam ucchaiḥśravaḥparyāya uccaiḥśravasaśabdaḥ. tatsadṛśaṃ vāhanam aśvo yasya saḥ. vāhanāny aśvā yasya sa vā. eko 'śvo vahati saptanāmā (ṚV 1.164.2) . . . saptasaptinn ityādimānāt. avirodho mānayos tu purogāśvavivakṣayā eka ity uktir ity abhiprāyād itaḥ saṃpādyaḥ.) M3 and KK and VSP read instead vibhuṃ saptāśvavāhanam, "the lord, who has seven horses as his vehicle."

6–7. "indestructible" avadhyam: D10,11,M3, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead amadhyam, "having no midpoint."

"He was the witness of the worlds and the lord of the universe." lokasākṣiṃ jagatpatim: M3 and KK and VSP read instead lokasākṣiṇam īśvaram, "the lord who was the witness of the world[s]."

"foremost of the rākṣasas" rakṣasāṃ varaḥ: T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead rākṣasādhipaḥ, "the overlord of the rākṣasas."

"he was afflicted by the power of the blazing splendor of Ravi" ravitejobalārditaḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead the masculine accusative ravitejobalārditam, which makes the adjective refer to Prahasta rather than Rāvaṇa.

"and at my direction deliver to him this command" vadasvainaṃ nideśān mama śāsanam: Literally, "speak to him a command because of my order." M3 and KK and VSP read instead vada hy enaṃ saṃdeśān mama śāsanam, "indeed speak to him a command at my instructions."

Following verse 7 (= 15*, line 14), M3 and KK and VSP insert a passage of one line [15(A)*]: "You must speak truthfully without delay to that excellent Mārtāṇḍa,[1] the maker of light (mārtāṇḍaṃ bhāskaraṃ śreṣṭhaṃ tattvato brūhi mā ciram)."

[1] "Mārtāṇḍa" mārtāṇḍam: KK and VSP read instead the slight variant mārtaṇḍam, "Mārtaṇḍa."

8. "for the purpose of battle" yuddhārtham: M3 and KK and VSP read instead the adjective yuddhārthī, "seeking battle," which then modifies Rāvaṇa.

9. "he saw" paśyate: M3 and KK and VSP read instead the imperfect so 'paśyat, "he saw."

10. "the two of them" tābhyām: M3 and KK and VSP read instead the synonymous ābhyām.

"there . . . illuminated by the rays of blazing energy" tu tatra tejoṃśudīpitaḥ: Literally, "and there . . . illuminated by rays of blazing energy." M3 and KK and VSP read instead sa sūryatejaḥpratāpitaḥ, "he, scorched by Sūrya's rays."

11–12. "went" gataḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead the gerund gatvā, "having gone."

"Ravi's . . . to him" raveḥ . . . raveḥ: Literally, "Ravi's . . . to Ravi" T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead vibhum, "to the lord," for the second raveḥ.

"that wise one," dhīmān: M3 and KK and VSP read instead śrīmān, "majestic."

"the destroyer of the night" kṣapāpahaḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead divākaraḥ, "the maker of day."

13–14. "Do whatever you wish with the night-roaming rākṣasa for a while." yat te 'bhikāṅkṣitaṃ kārṣīḥ kaṃcitkālaṃ kṣapācaram: Literally, "What is desired by you, do for some time to the night-roaming one." M3 and KK and VSP read instead kuru yat te kāṅkṣitaṃ tan nāhaṃ kālakṣipāṃ sahe, "Do that which you desire. I cannot bear the waste [lit., 'throwing away'] of time."

"to the great rākṣasa" tasya rākṣasasya mahātmanaḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead tasya rākṣasāya mahātmanaḥ, "to the rākṣasa [on the instructions] of that great one."

"speech that had been spoken by Sūrya" sūryoktavacanam: T3,4,M2, and KK and VSP read instead the synonymous sūryoktaṃ vacanam.

"the lord of the rākṣasas . . . the overlord of the rākṣasas" rākṣaseśvaraḥ . . . rākṣasādhipaḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead vai mahātmanaḥ . . . rākṣaseśvaraḥ, "indeed of the great [Sūrya] . . . the lord of the rākṣasas."

"his triumph" svajayam: Literally, "his own triumph." M3 and KK and VSP read instead vijayam, "victory."

Prakṣipta I, Sarga 3 = Appendix I, No. 1, lines 124–245

Prakṣipta I, sarga 3, consists of lines 124–245 of Appendix I, No. 1 (Lahore 7.27; Gorresio 7.28; GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP = prakṣipta sarga 3).

Before verse 1, D7,10,11,T3,4,M3, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP (= prakṣipta sarga 2) insert a passage of twenty-nine lines [15*], which constitutes a separate prakṣipta sarga in these southern printed editions. See Prakṣipta I, sarga 2.

1. "the . . . lord of the rākṣasas" rakṣendraḥ: T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead paulastyaḥ, "descendant of Pulastya." D1,3,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead laṅkeśaḥ, "lord of Laṅkā." Compare notes to Prakṣipta I, sarga 2.1–2 (= 15*, line 1).

"the world of Soma, the moon god" somalokam: Literally, "the world of Soma."

2. "And then someone passed by, mounted in a chariot." atha syandanam ārūḍhaḥ . . . / . . . gacchati: Literally, "Now, mounted on a chariot, one goes." M3 and KK and VSP read instead tadā kaścid rathārūḍhaḥ . . . / . . . gacchati, "Then someone mounted on a chariot . . . goes."

3. "Rāvaṇa saw this person" dṛṣṭas tu puruṣas tena: Literally, "And the man was seen by him." T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead rāvaṇas tv atha taṃ dṛṣṭvā, "Now Rāvaṇa having seen him."

"lying across the bodies of the apsarases" apsaroṅgeṣu: Literally, "on the limbs or bodies of the apsarases."

"and being awakened with kisses" cumbitaiḥ sa vibudhyate: Literally, "he is awakened by kisses." M3 and KK and VSP read instead cumbitaḥ san vibudhyate, "he, being kissed, is awakened."

4. "You have come here at an appropriate time." kāleneha gato hy asi: The instrumental kālena normally means "after some time." However, on contextual grounds we agree with Cs, who understands, "at an appropriate time (kālena yogyena)." D7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read kālenaiva, "at just the right time," for kāleneha, "here in the course of time." T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead diṣṭyā caivāgato hy asi, "Indeed, how fortunate that you have come."

Following 4a (= App. I, No. 1, line 130, prior half), M3 and KK and VSP insert a passage of two half lines [17*]: "Daśagrīva [having seen] . . . the great Parvata, foremost of sages (parvataṃ munisattamam / daśagrīvo māhātmānam)."

5. "as if he finds nothing to fear" bhayasthānaṃ na vindati: Literally, "he finds no place or basis for fear." Cs glosses, "in the form of me (i.e., Rāvaṇa) (madrūpam)."

6. "I shall tell it" vakṣye tv aham: Literally, "and I shall speak." Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read the similar cāham, "and I," for tv aham, "and I." Ñ1,T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead vakṣye tava, "I will tell you."

7. "He has conquered" etena nirjitāḥ: Literally, "by him [the worlds] were conquered." Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read the synonymous anena, "by him," for etena, "by him."

"now he is proceeding" saiṣa gacchati: Literally, "he is the one [who] goes." The sandhi between saḥ and eṣaḥ is defective. Ñ2,B,D6,7,10,11,T3,4,M3, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead eṣaḥ, "he."

8. "just as you . . . lord of the rākṣasas" yadvad bhavatā rākṣasādhipa: T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead lokā vikrameṇa yathā tvayā, "just as the worlds [were conquered] through valor by you."

"that meritorious person . . . is proceeding on his way" prayāti puṇyakṛt tadvat: Literally, "In just same way the meritorious person proceeds." T3,M3, and KK and VSP read instead prayāti puṇyavān vatsa, "the one possessed of merit is proceeding, dear child."

9. "But" tu: Ñ,V1,3,T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead ca, "and."

"true to your vows" satyavratas tathā: Literally, "and one whose vows are true." Ñ2,V3,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead satyaparākramaḥ, "one of true valor."

"and . . . do not interfere with such" nedṛśeṣu virudhyanti: Literally, "they do not make obstruction with regard to such." Ñ1,V1,T3, and KK and VSP read instead nedṛśeṣu ca krudhyanti, "and they do not show anger toward such," while Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead naivedṛśeṣu krudhyanti, "Indeed, they do not show anger toward such."

"seekers of spiritual knowledge" brahmacāriṣu: Literally, "those who move toward Brahman." Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead dharmacāriṣu, "those who practice righteousness."

10. "Rāvaṇa spied" apaśyat: Literally, "he saw."

"in a splendid chariot" rathavare: Ñ2,B2,D6,7,10,11,T3,4,M3, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead the accusative rathavaram, "a splendid chariot." In this reading, all the following adjectives modify the chariot and not its occupant.

"serenaded with the sounds of singing and musical instruments" gītavāditraniḥsvanaiḥ: Literally, "with the sounds of singing and musical instruments." T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead gītavāditrasaṃkulam, "filled with singing and musical instruments."

11. "Who is this" ko 'yam: Ñ1,D7,10,11,T3,4,M3, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead kvaiṣaḥ, "Whither is he [going]?"

"splendid" śobhamānaḥ: Literally, "shining." V3,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead the synonymous bhrājamānaḥ.

"so charmingly" manoharam: Ñ,B1,3,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead the synonymous manoramam.

12. "this" cedam: Literally, "and [having heard] this." Ñ,V1,3,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead cainam, "and . . . him." This lends the line the sense "And, having heard, he then said to him."

13. "grievously wounded" jarjarīkṛtaḥ: Literally, "made broken or torn."

14. "Although this hero was slain . . . he first slew many in combat" nihato vīraḥ hatvā ca ca samare bahūn: Literally, "And the hero was slain, having slain many in battle." Ñ2,B,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read [a]mitraiḥ, "by enemies," for vīraḥ, "hero," lending the line the sense "slain by enemies and having slain many in battle." M3 and KK and VSP read nihato vīrān hatvā sabalān bahūn, "slain . . . and having slain many heroes together with their armies."

"with dancing, singing, and amorous gestures" nṛtyagītavilāsitaiś ca: M3 and KK and VSP read instead the synonymous nṛttagītavilāsitaiś ca. Ñ2,B,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead nṛtyagītaparair lokaiḥ, "by people intent on singing and dancing."

16–17. "he whose face is like the full moon" pūrṇendusadṛśānanaḥ: Literally, "possessing a face similar to the full moon." Ñ,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead the synonymous pūrṇacandranibhānanaḥ.

"endowed with enormous splendor" sumahādyutiḥ: Literally, "possessing very great splendor." D10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead tu mahādyutiḥ, "and possessing great splendor."

18. "These . . . that" ya ete: B,D2,6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead ete vai, "indeed these."

"them" tān: B,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead tvam, "you."

19. "Which among them, if asked" ko hy atra yācitaḥ: Literally, "For who, here, asked?" Ś,D8,12,M3, and KK and VSP read instead ko 'tra me yācataḥ, "who here [would give] to me asking."

"me . . . this very day" mamādya vai: T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead mahādyutiḥ, "[which one] possessed of great splendor."

"Please tell me that" tan mamākhyāhi: D7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read tam, "him," for tat, "that," lending the phrase the sense "Please tell me about him." T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read kṣipram ākhyāhi, "Please tell at once."

"in accordance with righteousness" dharmataḥ: Literally, "according to dharma." D9,T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead the vocative parvata, "O Parvata." Cs explains, "by reason of dharma that consists of austerities, etc., that are equal to those of Viśravas (dharmataḥ viśravaḥsamatapaādidharmataḥ.)"

20. "These kings are seeking heaven . . . not battle" svargārthinaḥ . . . naite yuddhārthino nṛpāḥ: Cs explains, "Having completed those effective means [to obtain heaven], such as battle, they are now seeking the fruits of that. Therefore, they are not seeking battle. (svargārthinaḥ kṛtayuddhādisādhanās tatphalārthinaḥ. ato na yuddhārthinaḥ.)"

"But . . . I will tell you" vakṣyāmi te: Literally, "I will tell you." B2,T3,M3, and KK and VSP read ca, "and," for te, "to you."

"who will offer you battle" yas te yuddhaṃ pradāsyati: M3 and KK and VSP read instead vicitrābharaṇāmbaraḥ, "having variegated ornaments and garments." This pāda is identical with 17b (= line 157) above.

21. "There is a king" eṣa rājā: Literally, "This king." Ñ2,D7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead sa tu rājā, "And that king," while M3 and KK and VSP read instead yas tu rājā, "And the king who."

22. "'Where is this king to be found? Tell me that truthfully." kutrāsau vidyate rājā tan mamācakṣva tattvataḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead kutrāsau vartate rājā taṃ mamācakṣva tattvataḥ, lending the line the sense "Where is that king? Please tell me about him truthfully." Ñ2,D6,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead kuto 'sau tiṣṭhate rājā tat samācakṣva suvrata, "Where does that king stay?" Please tell me that, O one of excellent vows."

"I shall go there this very day" so 'haṃ yāsyāmi tatrādya: Literally, "I am he who will go there today." T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read aham, "I," for so 'ham, "I am he who." Ñ2,B,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read tatraiva, "to that very place," for tatrādya, "there, today."

23. "Having conquered the seven continents up to the limit of the seas, he will come here this very day." saptadvīpasamudrāntāṃ jitvehādyāgamiṣyati: Literally, "he will come here today, having conquered that which has the seven continents and the sea for its limit." The compound saptadvīpasamudrāntām is, evidently, a kenning for the earth. M3 and KK and VSP read saptadvīpān samudrāntān, "the seven continents, whose limit is the ocean," for saptadvīpasamudrāntām, "that which has the seven continents and the sea for its limit." GPP and NSP read jitvehābhyāgamiṣyati, "Having conquered . . . he will arrive here" for jitvehādyāgamiṣyati, "Having conquered . . . he will come here this very day." M3 and KK and VSP read instead jitvādya svargam eṣyati, "Having conquered . . . he will go to heaven today."

24. "arrogant in his strength throughout the triple world" trailokyabaladarpitaḥ: D1,2,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead trailokye varadarpitaḥ, "arrogant in the triple world because of a boon." T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead viriñcivaradarpitaḥ, "arrogant because of a boon from Viriñci [i.e., Brahmā]."

"the . . . overlord of Ayodhyā" ayodhyādhipatim: Ñ2,V3,B,D7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead ayodhyāyāḥ patim, "the lord of Ayodhyā."

25. "radiant" virājatā: Ś,Ñ1,D8,12, and KK and VSP read instead the accusative masculine singular virājitam, which would then modify Māndhātṛ.

"magnificent" mahodāreṇa: D7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead māhendrābheṇa, "resembling Māhendra." Cs glosses the variant mahendrābheṇa, the reading of Ñ2 and D6, "resembling Mahendra." KK and VSP read instead the awkward mahāhāreṇa, "having great garlands[?]."

"wore heavenly garments and unguents" divyavastrānulepanam: Literally, "having heavenly garments and unguents." Ñ,V1,B,D6,7,10, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead divyagandhānulepanam, "having heavenly fragrances and unguents," while D9, T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead divyasraganulepanam, "having heavenly garlands and unguents."

26. "If you have no care for your life" yadi te jīvitaṃ neṣṭam: Literally, "if life is not desired by you."

"rākṣasa" rākṣasa: M3 and KK and VSP read instead mām iti, lending the line the sense "then fight me."

27. "Rāvaṇa was not perturbed when faced with Varuṇa, Kubera, or even Yama." varuṇasya kuberasya yamasyāpi na vivyathe / . . . rāvaṇaḥ: Literally, "Rāvaṇa does tremble of Varuṇa, of Kubera, and even of Yama." We follow Cs, who understands, "in the presence of (sakāśāt)." Cs understand Rāvaṇa's indirect reference to himself in the third person is because of his egotism (yo rāvaṇa iti pārokṣyeṇa nirdeśo 'haṃkārāt).

"How much less . . . a mere man" kiṃ punaḥ . . . mānuṣāt: Literally, "How much less a man." M3 and KK and VSP read instead kim are, lending the line the sense "Fool (are), would he be afraid of you, a man?" We translate are freely. It is an exclamation of contempt or anger.

28. "the lord of the rākṣasas" rākṣasendraḥ: T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead daśagrīvaḥ, "Daśagrīva."

"burning him up, as it were" taṃ pradahann iva: B3,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and KK read instead saṃprajvalann iva, "as if blazing."

29. "poured forth masses of arrows" vavarṣuḥ śarajālāni: M3 and Gorresio, KK, and VSP read instead vavṛṣuḥ śaravarṣāṇi, "they rained or poured forth hails of arrows."

30. "together with Mahodara and Dhūmrākṣa . . . led by Akampana" samahodaradhūmrākṣā hy akampanapurogamāḥ: Ñ2,B1,3,4,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead the grammatically awkward plural for the expected dual mahodaravirūpākṣāḥ, "Mahodara [and] Virūpākṣa, for samahodaradhūmrākṣāḥ, "together with Mahodara and Dhūmrākṣa." Cs notes that one explanation for the plural is that it stands for "etc." (bahuvacanam ādyarthe mahodaravirūpākṣādaya ity arthaḥ). T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead mahodaravirūpākṣamārīcākamapanādayaḥ, "Mahodara, Virūpākṣa, Mārīca, Akampana, etc."

"sharpened on a whetstone" śilāśitaiḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead ajihmagaiḥ, "the straight-going ones," a kenning for arrows.

31–32. "the king with hails of arrows" nṛpatim iṣuvarṣaiḥ: Ñ2,V1,B3,D7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead tu nṛpam iṣuvarṣaiḥ, "but the king with hails of arrows," while V1,B4,D6,T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead nṛpatiṃ śaravarṣaiḥ, "the king with hails of arrows." V1,B2,D6, and Gorresio read a combination of the variants, tu nṛpaṃ śaravarṣaiḥ.

"those arrows . . . as moths might be by a flame" śarabhā iva te 'gninā: Literally, "they . . . like moths by a fire." Ñ2,B1,D6,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead tṛṇabhārā ivāgninā, "like a bundle of straw by fire."

33–34. "Then" tataḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead punaḥ, "once again."

"wounded Prahasta with . . . iron cudgels of tremendous striking force" bibheda tam / tomaraiḥ sumahāvegaiḥ: Literally, "he split him with tomaras of very great striking force." The term tomara is either a type of iron cudgel or a javelin. Because of the act of piercing here, javelins might be meant. On this, see notes to 6.58.10 and Dikshitar 1944, p. 107. D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read ca, "and" for the intensifier su-, lending the phrase the sense "and with javelins of great striking force." M3 and KK and VSP read instead tomaraiḥ sa mahāghoraiḥ, lending the phrase the sense "he [Māndhātṛ] . . . with extremely fearsome javelins."

"long ago" purā: Ñ2,D11, and GPP and NSP read instead punaḥ, "once again."

"Skanda, born of fire, pierced Mount Krauñca" krauñcam ivāgnijaḥ: Literally, "just as the one born of fire [pierced] Krauñca." For the legend of Skanda's piercing Mount Krauñca, see MBh 3.186.112ff. and MBh 13.166.30ff. See, too, notes to 6.51.19.

"which resembled Yama" yamasaṃnibham: T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead vajrasaṃnibham, "which resembled the vajra or a thunderbolt."

"he struck" prāharat: M3 and KK and VSP read instead mumoca, "he released."

35. "Rāvaṇa . . . by it, was toppled" rāvaṇas tena pātitaḥ: Literally, "by it, Rāvaṇa was felled." D6,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead pātitas tena rāvaṇaḥ by transposition. Ñ1,V3,M3, and KK and VSP read the simplex rāvaṇas tena patitaḥ, "because of it, Rāvaṇa fell."

"being crushed" saṃcūrṇya: Literally, "having been crushed." Ñ2,B1,2,4,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead sa tūrṇam, "he [Rāvaṇa] [was felled] swiftly," while M3 and KK and VSP read ghūrṇitaḥ, "shaken [because of it]."

36. "in his delight" prītyā: M3 and KK and VSP read instead the masculine singular prītaḥ, "delighted," which would then modify the king, Māndhātṛ.

"increase in strength through his excitement" harṣoddhatabalaḥ: Literally, "having strength increased through excitement." B2,3,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead harṣodgatabalaḥ, "having strength elevated through excitement," while KK and NSP read harṣodbhūtabalaḥ, "having strength raised up through excitement." The reading of KK and VSP is not noted in the critical apparatus.

"when touched by the rays of the full moon" sakalendukaraspṛṣṭam: Literally, "touched by the rays of the moon with its digits." T3,M3, and KK and VSP read instead the synonymous sakalendukaraiḥ spṛṣṭam, while GPP and NSP read sakalendukalāḥ spṛṣṭvā, "having touched the digits of the full moon."

37. "with cries of distress" hāhābhūtam: Literally, "which had become one given over to "Hā! Hā!" D6 and KK and VSP read instead mahābhūtam, "that great being," which best construes with rākṣasendram, "lord of the rākṣasas." Raghnunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 444) translates the pāda as "who lay like a huge inert mass."

"stood their ground" tasthau: Literally, "it [the host] stood."

38. "regaining consciousness" samāśvāsya: Literally, "having been caused to regain consciousness." B1,D1,7,10,11,T4, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read in the simplex samāśvasya, "having regained consciousness," while M3 and KK and VSP read instead the participle samāśvastaḥ, "restored to consciousness."

"Rāvaṇa, who makes the worlds resound" rāvaṇo lokarāvaṇaḥ: See notes to 7.16.27 on the epithet lokarāvaṇaḥ.

39. D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP omit verses 39–42 (= lines 208–216).

"The immensely powerful Rāvaṇa" mahābalaḥ: Literally, "the immensely powerful [one]."

"Māndhātṛ's chariot, charming with its horses and yoke" rathaṃ sāśvayugākṣepam: The compound sāśvayugākṣepam is obscure, as the word ākṣepa does not refer to a part of a chariot. The best we can do with the reading is to take ākṣepa in its sense of "charming," which still leaves an awkward construction both formally and contextually. M3 and KK and VSP read the facilior rathaṃ cāśvayujaṃ kṣipram, "quickly a chariot, with its pair of horses" or "quickly a chariot furnished with or yoked to horses." Gorresio reads another facilior, rathaṃ sāśvayugākṣaṃ ca, "the chariot, together with its horses, yoke, and axle." We have added the proper noun Māndhātṛ for the sake of clarity.

"he took from it" rathāt prāpya: Literally, "having obtained from the chariot." T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read the accusative ratham, lending the line the sense "having reached the chariot."

40. D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP omit verses 39–42 (= lines 208–216).

"hurled" pravicikṣepa: T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead by metathesis vipracikṣepa.

41. D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP omit verses 39–42 (= lines 208–216).

"brightly shining javelin" rucirābhāsām: Literally, "having a shining glow." Ś,Ñ2,D8,T3, and KK and VSP read instead the synonymous rucirābhāsam, which, however, involves the fault of liṅgabheda. We supplied the referent "javelin" based on verse 39 above.

"loosed from Māndhātṛ's hand" māndhātuḥ karavicyūtām: KK and VSP read instead māndhātṛkaraniḥsṛtām, "released from the hand of Māndhātṛ."

42. D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP omit verses 39–42 (= lines 208–216).

"Ten-faced Rāvaṇa" daśānanaḥ: Literally, "the ten-faced [one]."

"drew out" viniṣkṛṣya: Literally, "having drawn out." KK and VSP read instead nikṛṣyātha, "now having drawn out."

"it struck Māndhātṛ" sa tenābhihataḥ: Literally, "he was struck by it."

43. "the king" tu nṛpam: Literally, "and the king." V3,M3, and KK and VSP read instead nṛpatim, "the king."

"the immensely powerful night-roaming rākṣasas" niśācarāḥ / . . . mahābalāḥ: Literally, "the very powerful night-roaming [ones]." T3,M3, and KK and VSP read instead the redundant niśācarāḥ / . . . niśācarāḥ.

"They . . . bellowed" cikṣveḍuś ca: T3 and KK and VSP read instead the present participle kṣvelantaś ca, "And [they] bellowing," while Ñ2,B1,4,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead the present participle prakṣvelantaḥ, "[They] bellowing."

44–46. "the overlord of Ayodhyā" hy āyodhyādhipatiḥ: Ñ2,D2,6,7,9–11, and GPP and NSP read ayodhyādhipatiḥ, with hiatus.

"seeing his enemy" dṛṣṭvā tam . . . śatrum: Literally, "having seen that enemy." V1,T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead taṃ dṛṣṭvā for dṛṣṭvā tam by transposition.

"by his . . . enemies" śatrubhiḥ: Literally, "by the enemies." Ñ,V3,B,6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead mantribhiḥ, "by the counselors."

"joyful" mudānvitaiḥ: Literally, "endowed with joy." Ñ2,B3,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead niśācaraiḥ, "by the night-roaming [ones]."

"That unassailable warrior" durādharṣaḥ: Literally, "that unassailable [one]."

"afflicted" pīḍayan: Literally, "afflicting." D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead pātayat, which we understand to be an augmentless imperfect, "he caused to fall." Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 448) translates, "began to slay."

"of . . . bow" cāpasya tu: Literally, "and of the bow." Ñ1,V1,3,T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead the synonymous cāpasya ca, while D10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead cāpasyaiva, "of that very bow."

"agitated" uddhūtaḥ: Ñ2,B1,D6,7, and GPP and VSP read instead udbhūtaḥ, "risen up."

47. "as if possessed" athāviṣṭau: Literally, "then those two, possessed." KK and VSP read instead krudhāviṣṭau, "those two, possessed by rage."

"each took up a warrior's stance" vīrāsanagatau: Literally, "went to the position of a hero." M3 and KK and VSP read instead śarāsanagatau, "went to [their] bows."

48. "they released" amuñcatām: Ñ2,V3,B,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead the irregular perfect mumocatuḥ, "those two released." M4 and KK and VSP read instead vavarṣatuḥ, "those two poured forth."

"and Rāvaṇa" rāvaṇaḥ: D1–4,9,12,T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead rākṣasaḥ, "the rākṣasa."

49. "severely wounded" kṣatavikṣatau: Literally, "severely wounded by wounds." M3 and KK and VSP read the similar jarjarīkṛtau, "those two [were] grievously wounded." Cs understands the compound as a bahuvrīhi meaning "those two who had severe wounds on top of their wounds (kṣate punar viṣkataṃ yayos tau)."

"Then, nocking a divine missile to his bow, Rāvaṇa released the divine missile of Rudra." kārmuke 'straṃ samādhāya raudram astram amuñcata: Literally, "Nocking the missile, he released the raudra astra." M3 and KK and VSP read instead "rāvaṇo raudram astraṃ tu prāyuṅkta sa mahābalaḥ, "The immensely powerful Rāvaṇa employed the raudra astra." On the term astra, see Goldman and Goldman 2009, p. 112.

50. "But" tu: B1,M3, and KK and VSP read instead saḥ, "he."

"warded off . . . then warded off . . . warded that one off" paryavārayat: Literally, "he warded off." The second half of the verse is elliptical, and we supply the verb to fill out the ellipsis. Ñ1,D1,3,4,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead the synonymous pratyavārayat.

"Māndhātṛ, the king of kings" rājarāṭ: Literally, "the king of kings."

51. "took up . . . while Rāvaṇa took up" gṛhītvā: Literally, "having taken up." The second half of the verse is elliptical, and we supply the subject and verb to fill out the ellipsis. Both Gorresio (1870, p. 105) and Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 444) identify the pāśupatāstra with the brahmāstra. Gorresio renders, "Ma Mandhātri grappato allora il telo di Brahma, terror di tutte le creature, si mise in punto di lanciare il divino e grande telo Pāsupato," while Raghunathan similarly understands, "Then Māndhātā took Brahmā's missile, which all the world dreaded, and he swung that missile of Paśupati in his hand." But this leaves no corresponding weapon for Rāvaṇa. In any case, the pāśupatāstra is always associated with Śiva. Dutt (1894, p. 1641) understands similarly to us, rendering, "the king Māndhata [took up] the Brahma-weapon stricking [sic] terror unto all. Rāvaṇa then took up the celestial Pāsupata weapon." Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 449) apparently following Dutt, offers, "King Mandhata [took up] the Brahma-astra, a source of terror to all. And Ravana took up the Celestial and dreadful Pasupata-weapon . . ."

53. "Through the granting of a boon from Rudra, that great weapon had been acquired by austerities." varadānāt tu rudrasya tapasārādhitaṃ mahat: Literally, "That great [one] had been achieved through austerities because of the granting of a boon on the part of Rudra." The syntax of the line is very awkward. The participle ārādhita normally means "propitiated" and refers to the divinity who grants the boon rather than the gift received. We follow Cs, who takes the adjective to mean "accomplished or mastered (sādhitam)." M3 and KK and VSP read the facilior tapasādhigatam, "obtained through austerities," for tapasārādhitam, "achieved through austerities."

"trembled" sma kampate: Ñ,V1,B,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead saṃkampate, "it quakes," while M3 and KK and VSP read instead prakampate, "it trembles."

54–55. "great serpents huddled together in their dens" layaṃ nāgāś ca saṃgatāḥ: Literally, "and the nāgas went together to the dwelling." Cs understands the term nāga here to refer either to large horses or elephants (mahāhayā gajā vā). M3 and KK and VSP read instead layaṃ nāgāś ca menire, "the nāgas thought [it was] the end of the world."

"perceiving what was happening through the practice of meditation" dhyānayogād apaśyatām: Literally, "they saw through the application of meditation."

"Pulastya and Gālava . . . stopped the king" pulastyo gālavaś caiva vārayāmāsatur nṛpam: Literally, "those two, Pulastya and Gālava, prevented the king." B1,D7,10,11, and GPP and NSP, through attraction with the singular gālavaḥ, "Gālava," read instead the singular vārayāmāsa taṃ nṛpam, "he prevented that king," for vārayāmāsatur nṛpam, "those two prevented the king." Pulastya is the grandfather of Rāvaṇa (see notes to 7.12.18), while Gālava is a son of Viśvāmitra and thus associated with the Ikṣvāku lineage.

"while the foremost of rākṣasas was rebuked with various utterances" upālabdhaś ca vividhair vākyai rākṣasasattamaḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead upalabdhaiś ca vividhair vākyai rākṣasasattamam, which construes with vārayāmāsatuḥ, lending the line the sense "and stopped the foremost of the rākṣasas with various reproachful words." Ñ2,B1,3,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP similarly read sopālambhaiś ca vividhair vākyai rākṣasasattamam, lending the line the sense "and stopped the foremost of the rākṣasas with various words that were filled with censure."

56. "Then those two sages" tau tu: Literally, "And those two."

"in great delight" susaṃhṛṣṭau: KK and VSP read instead tu tau hṛṣṭau, "and those two, delighted."

"just as they had come" yathā yenaiva cāgatau: Literally, "and in the same way and by the very same [path] they had come." Ñ1,V1,B1–3,D4,T4, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead pathā yenaiva cāgatau, "and by that very path they had come [by]."

Prakṣipta I, Sarga 4 = Appendix I, No. 1, lines 246–346; Appendix I, No.1, lines 347–348

Prakṣipta I, sarga 4, consists of lines 246–346 of Appendix I, No. 1 (= Lahore 7.27; Gorresio 7.28; GPP, NSP = first set of prakṣiptas, sarga 4), KK, and VSP (lines 246–348 of App. I, No. 1, and 7.24.1 [crit. ed] = first set of prakṣiptas, sarga 4).

1. "Rāvaṇa . . . ascended" rāvaṇaḥ . . . / . . . tu: Literally, "Rāvaṇa . . . and." M3 and KK and VSP read saḥ, "he," for tu, "and." The verse lacks a verbal element, so we have supplied an appropriate verb for Rāvaṇa's ascent.

"always reside" nityasthāḥ: Literally, "always stationed." D7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead the adverbial phrase nityaṃ hi, "always indeed," while M3 and KK and VSP read instead the participle saṃnyastāḥ, "encamped or settled."

Following 1cd (= line 247, "ten thousand leagues to the first path of the wind"), M3 and KK and VSP insert a passage of one line [21*]: "That immensely powerful [rākṣasa] of immense blazing energy passed beyond it by means of the Puṣpaka (atyakrāman mahātejāḥ puṣpakeṇa mahābalaḥ)."

2. "He proceeded still higher than that to the next excellent path of the wind" ata ūrdhvaṃ tu gatvā vai marutpatham anuttamam: Literally, "Having gone higher than that indeed to the unsurpassed path of the wind." B3,D10, and GPP and NSP read atha, "now or then," for ataḥ, "than that." M3 and KK and VSP read instead ata ūrdhvaṃ dvitīyaṃ tu gatvā caiṣa marutpatham, "And he, having gone higher than that to the second path of the wind."

"which, too, is reckoned as yet another ten thousand leagues beyond that" daśayojanasāhasraṃ tad eva parigaṇyate: Literally, "that [which is] reckoned as ten thousand yojanas." KK and VSP read hi vai, "indeed verily," for eva, "indeed."

3. "There, close at hand, are permanently located the three types of clouds" tatra saṃnihitā meghās trividhā nityaśaḥ saṃsthitāḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead tatra meghāḥ sthitāḥ sarve trividhā nityasaṃśritāḥ, "There are located all three types of clouds, always in close proximity."

"the āgneya, the pakṣin, and the brāhma. Indeed, the three types are located there." āgneyāḥ pakṣiṇo brāhmās trividhās tatra te sthithāḥ: KK and VSP read instead āgneyāḥ pakṣajā brāhmās trividhā iti saṃsthitāḥ, "There, located together, are those known as the three types, [i.e.,] the āgneya, the pakṣaja, and the brāhma."

5. "scorcher of your foes, he swiftly rose" śīghraṃ gatvā paraṃtapa: Literally, "having gone swiftly, O scorcher of your foes." M3 and KK and VSP read instead gatavān rāvaṇas tathā, "thus Rāvaṇa went."

"the malignant spirits, together with the vināyakas" bhūtāś ca savināyakāḥ: Dutt (1894, p. 1642) understands, "the goblins and Vinayakas," while Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 445) renders, "the Spirits and the elementals that cause obstacles." Gorresio (1870, p. 106) and Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 450) both simply use the Sanskrit terms. Cs understands the term bhūta here to refer generically to all types of supernatural beings and vināyaka to refer to Gaṇeśa. (bhūtā devayoniviśeṣāḥ. savināyakā vināyakena sahitāḥ.) As a class of beings the vināyakas are often depicted as destructive or hostile. On bhūtas, see 6.47.9, 135; 6.55.127; and notes.

"permanently located" nityasthāḥ: KK and VSP read instead nityaṃ vai, lending the line the sense "where the malignant spirits always dwell."

6. "to the fifth realm of the wind" pañcamaṃ vāyugocaram: Literally, "to the fifth wind-range." Note the slight lexical shift from the other verses in the passage, which speak of "the path (pathin or mārga) of the wind."

"that foremost of rivers . . . as well as the elephants, Kumuda, etc." saricchreṣṭhā nāgā vai kumudādayaḥ: Literally, the most of excellent of rivers, indeed the elephants." The sentence lacks a conjunction. T3,M3, and KK and VSP read instead ca, "and." Cs does not wish to take the term nāga here in its sense of elephant, apparently in order to avoid redundancy with the synonymous kuñjarāḥ in the following verse. Through breaking up the sandhi between saricchreṣṭhā and nāgā to read anāgāḥ, he ingeniously understands the term as an adjectival compound made up of the words ana, "breath or wind," and aga, "unmoving." He explains: "Even when a great wind has come, they [the elephants], Kumuda, etc., are immobile, just like mountains (kumudādayo 'nāgā ane mahati vāta āgate 'py agāḥ parvatatulyāḥ)." Kumuda is the elephant of the southwestern quarter. On the directional elephants, see notes to 7.5.4 and notes to 1.39.12. See, too, AmaK 1.3.182.

7. "there" tatra: D1,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead the relative adverb yatra, "where."

"releasing showers of spray" ye tu muñcanti śīkaram: Literally, "and who release a shower." T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read the plural śīkarān, "showers," for śīkaram, "shower." Ñ,V1,B1–3,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read the virtually synonymous ca, "and," for tu.

"They play . . . shower the holy water" krīḍanti puṇyaṃ varṣanti: Literally, "they play . . . they shower merit or auspiciousness." KK and VSP read instead tiṣṭhantaḥ puṇyaṃ kurvanti, lending the line the sense "standing in the waters of the Ganges, they cause auspiciousness all around."

8. "That water is broken into drops by the wind as it falls from the trunks of the elephants." tataḥ karikarād bhraṣṭaṃ vāyunātha lavīkṛtam / jalam: D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead tato ravikarabhraṣṭaṃ vāyunā peśalīkṛtam, "Then, fallen from the rays of the sun, the water is made delicate by the wind." M3 and KK and VSP read instead tataḥ karikarād bhraṣṭaṃ vāyunā lolitaṃ bhṛśam, "Then, fallen from the trunk of the elephant, it is violently broken up by the wind."

"And then, Rāghava, it falls on the holy places in the form of snow showers." puṇyeṣu patati himavarṣaṃ tu rāghava: D7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead puṇyaṃ prapatati himaṃ varṣati rāghava, "the holy [water] falls and showers snow, Rāghava." M3 and KK and VSP read instead kuñjeṣu patitaṃ himaṃ bhavati rāghava, "[that water] fallen into the bowers turns into snow, Rāghava."

9. "yet another ten" daśaiva: V1,T3,M3, and KK and VSP read instead tathaiva, lending the line the sense "he proceeded . . . for another thousand leagues."

10. "Next he rose ten" daśaiva: Literally, "just ten." M3 and KK and VSP read instead tathaiva, limiting the rise, as in the previous verse, to a mere thousand yojanas.

"to the seventh path of the wind" saptamaṃ vāyumārgam tu: Literally, "and to the seventh path of the wind." Ñ2,B1,3,4,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead the locative saptame vāyumārge ca, "and on the seventh path of the wind."

"where the seers dwell" yatraite ṛṣayaḥ sthitāḥ: Literally, "where they, the seers, are located." Note the hiatus. M3 and KK and VSP read instead yatraiva ṛṣayaḥ sthitāḥ, "just where the seers are located." Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead yatraite ṛṣayaḥ smṛtāḥ, "where they, the seers, are known [to be?; lit., 'remembered']." Note the hiatus.

11–12. "he proceeded" tu gatvā vai: Literally, "and just having gone." M3 and KK and VSP read sa gatvātha, "now he, having gone."

"ten thousand leagues" sahasrāṇi daśaiva: Literally, "just ten thousand."

"located along the path of the sun" ādityapathasaṃsthitā: M3 and KK and VSP read instead hy ādityapatham āsthitā, "indeed, situated along the path of the sun."

"it rushes along with tremendous force" mahāvegā: Literally, "having tremendous force or speed." The clause lacks a verb, and we have provided one.

13. "at a height of eighty thousand leagues" aśītiṃ tu sahasrāṇi yojanānāṃ pramāṇataḥ: Literally, "and eighty thousand yojanas by measurement." V3,D1–4,12,T3,M3, and KK and VSP read instead tathopari, "still higher," for pramāṇataḥ, "by measurement."

14. "ten million" śataṃ śatasahasrāṇām: Literally, "a hundred of hundred thousands." Ñ2,B,D6,7,9–11,M3, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead the synonymous śataṃ śatasahasrāṇi.

"as the orb of the moon" candramaṇḍalam: D7,10,11,T3,M3, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead candramaṇḍalāt, "from the orb of the moon," lending the line the preferable sense "from the orb of the moon, the rays illuminate the worlds."

"bringer of delight to all creatures" sarvasattvasukhāvaham: D7,10,11,T3,4,M3, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead sarvasattvasukhāvahāḥ, making the compound modify the rays (raśmayaḥ) rather than the orb.

16. "Rāvaṇa's ministers" sacivāḥ: Literally, "the ministers."

"beginning with the words, 'Be victorious!'" jayaśabdena: Literally, "with the word 'Victory!'"

"addressed this speech to Rāvaṇa" rāvaṇam . . . vākyam abravīt: Literally, "he spoke speech to Rāvaṇa." Ñ,V1,B,D10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read rāvaṇam . . . athainam abravīt, "he said to him, Rāvaṇa."

17. "the cold is killing us" śītena vadhyāmaḥ: Literally, "we are being killed by cold." D3,T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read bādhyāmaḥ, "we are being oppressed," for vadhyāmaḥ, "we are being killed." One would expect ātmanepada endings.

18. "the cold-rayed moon by his very nature" svabhāvenaiṣaḥ . . . śītāṃśuḥ: Literally, "by his nature, this cold-rayed [one]." Ñ,V1,3,D1–4,9–11,T3,4, and NSP and KK read svabhāva eṣaḥ, "this is [his] nature," for svabhāvenaiṣaḥ, "by his nature, he," while M3 and KK and VSP read instead svabhāsā hy eṣaḥ, "he through his own radiance."

"burns" dahanātmakaḥ: Literally, "characterized by burning."

"he . . . injured" apīḍayat: M3 and KK and VSP read instead hy apīḍayat, "indeed, he injured."

"the moon" tam: Literally, "him."

19. "came" samāgacchat: Ñ2,B,D67,9–11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead tadāgacchat, "then, he came," while M3(?) and KK and VSP read instead samāgamya, "having come."

"the realm of the moon" somalokam: M3 and KK and VSP read instead the synonymous candralokam.

"saying": We have added this word to provide a transition.

"do not strike the moon" mā candraṃ pīḍayasva vai: M3 and KK and VSP read pīḍayāśugaiḥ for pīḍayasva vai, lending the line the sense "do not strike the moon with swift-going [arrows]."

20. "the . . . king of the brahmans" dvijarājaḥ: Literally, "the king of the twice-born [ones]." Cs, citing a common vedic passage, "the moon or Soma is the king of us brahmans," glosses, "overlord of brahmans." (brāhmaṇādhipatiḥ somo 'smākaṃ brāhmaṇānāṃ rājeti śruteḥ.) See, for example, TaiS 1.8.10.2; 1.8.12.2; ŚatBr 5.3.3.12, etc.

"I will give you" te pradāsyāmi: Ñ2,B3,4,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead saṃpradāsyāmi, "I will give."

"in case of any threat to your life" prāṇātyayagatir yadi: Literally, "if [there is a] stratagem or means to endanger life breaths." Ñ,V1,B4,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read yadā, "when," for yadi, "if." T3, M3, and KK and VSP read instead prāṇātyayabhaye 'bhayam, "a protection [mantra] in case of danger that threatens your life." See verse 24 below and notes.

21. "whoever" yaḥ . . . asau: Literally, "who . . . he." M3 and KK and VSP read the synonymous yaḥ . . . [na] saḥ.

"this" imam: Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read the synonymous etam.

22. "greatly effulgent . . . Lord of the worlds" lokanātha mahādyute: Ñ2,B,D6,7,9–11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read mahāvrata, "O you of great vows," for mahādyute, "O greatly effulgent [one]." M3 and KK and VSP read instead anugrāhya yadi hy aham, "if indeed I am worthy of favor."

"and. . . mantra . . . to me" mantraś ca me: M3 and KK and VSP read instead mantreśvaraḥ, "that lord of mantras." The idea here is that this is the sovereign mantra.

23. This account of Rāvaṇa's boon is at variance with the other versions of the story in the Rāmāyaṇa, as at, for example, Uttarakāṇḍa sarga 10, where his boon is a result of his austerities.

"By reciting this . . . I" yaṃ japtvāham: Literally, "having muttered which, I."

"may I become invincible . . . without any doubt" ajayaḥ syāṃ na saṃśayaḥ: Ñ2,B1,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead syām ajayo na saṃśayaḥ by transposition. M3 and KK and VSP read instead na bhayaṃ vidyate mama, "that there exists no danger to me."

24. "I give you this only in case your life is threatened . . . not for constant use" prāṇātyayeṣu te dadmi na nityam: Literally, "I give to you with regard to threats to life breaths, not always." Cs understands the term prāṇātyayeṣu, "in case of dangers to life breaths," to mean "dangers conformable to this or that [situation] (tattatsadṛśānusaṃkaṭeṣu)." KK reads saṃkuṭeṣu, which is evidently a typographical error. See verse 20 and notes above. M3 and KK and VSP read prāṇātyaye tu vai, "but indeed with regard to a threat to life breaths," for prāṇātyayeṣu te, "with regard to threats to your life breaths." Ñ,B,D6,7,9–11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read japtavyaḥ for te dadmi, lending the line the sense "It is to be muttered with regard to threats to life breaths, not always."

25. "a rosary of akṣa beads" akṣasūtram: Literally, "a string of akṣas." Cs glosses, "a rosary of lotus seeds (kamalākṣamālām)." Normally, rosaries for the use of counting mantras are made of the seeds of the rudrākṣa tree (Elaeocarpus ganitrus).

"you must recite" japa: V1,3,D7,9–11,T3,4,M3, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead the first person singular optative japet, "one should recite."

"on each occasion" sadā: Literally, "always or every time." D1,4,6,7,10,11,T3,4,M3, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead the adjective śubham, "auspicious," which would then modify the mantra.

"And" ca: Ñ,V1,B1,3,4,D1,3,4,6,7,10,11,T3,4, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead the contextually synonymous tu, "and."

26. "But if you fail to recite it" ajaptvā: Literally, "not having muttered."

"foremost of the rākṣasas" rākṣasaśreṣṭha: Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead rākṣasapate, "O lord of the rākṣasas."

"as I recite it" pravakṣyāmi yena: Literally, "I will proclaim by which." The syntax is very loose here. Cs struggles to interpret the instrumental relative yena, reading it back with the first half of the verse to mean "Listen to the mantra through which [mantra] having muttered [it], there will be success (japtvā yena siddhir bhaviṣyati taṃ mantraṃ śṛṇu)."

27. "Through recitation" kīrtanāt: Literally, "From reciting." Normally, kīrtana refers to reciting something out loud. Here, however, since it is a mantra, Cs glosses, "soft recitation consisting of muttering (japapūrvakaṃ mandam uccāraṇāt)."

28. It is interesting to note that what follows is a Śaivite stotra interpolated into a Vaiṣṇava text, but it is in keeping with the tradition that Rāvaṇa is a devotee of Śiva.

"you of the tawny-yellow eyes" haripiṅgalalocana: D10,11,T3,M3, and KK and VSP read instead hara piṅgalalocana, "O Hara, you of the yellow eyes."

29. "You are worthy of worship" arcanīyo 'si: KK and VSP read instead āruṇeyo 'si, "You are Āruṇeya." The epithet āruṇeya is slightly obscure in its meaning. Most likely it is intended to indicate the son of Āruṇi, the sun, that is to say, Yama Vaivasvata, the god of death.

30. "Haritanemin, and" haritanemī ca: Literally, "having golden fellies." The epithet is understood to refer to Śiva. Cs, relying on the Viśvakośa, which gives "cave (garta)" as one of the meanings of the term nemin, takes the epithet to mean "possessing a penance cave decorated with dūrva grass." (dūrvālaṅkṛtatapogartavān. nemiḥ kīle 'vadhau garta iti viśvaḥ.) T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead haritanemis tvam, "you are Haritanemi." See notes to verse 36 below.

31. "You are the illustrious great Lord" mahābhāgaḥ . . . maheśvaraḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead mahādevaḥ . . . mahābhujaḥ, "You are the great-armed great god."

31. "with great fangs" mahādaṃṣṭraḥ: Ñ2,D3,6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead the synonymous mahādaṃṣṭrī.

32. "You are the ender of the gods and the goal of austerities." devāntakas tapo 'ntaś ca: KK and VSP read instead vedāntago vedamayaḥ, "You are a master [lit., 'have gone to the end'] of the vedas, [and] you consist of the vedas."

"You hold the lance in your hand and have a huge banner." śūlapāṇir bṛhadketuḥ: Literally, "having lance in hand [and] having a great banner." M3 and KK and VSP read instead śūladhṛc chūlaketuś ca, "[you] bear a lance and have a lance for your banner," while D9,11, and GPP and NSP read instead śūlapāṇir vṛṣaḥ ketuḥ, "[you are] one who has a lance in hand [and has] a bull [and] a banner." Typically the phrase would be vṛṣaketuḥ, "one who has a bull on his banner or bull-bannered," and this is how Dutt (1894, p. 1644) understands it.

"Hara and Hari" haro hariḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead hariḥ śivaḥ, "Hari [and] Śiva."

33. "a monkish tonsure and tuft of hair" muṇḍī śikhaṇḍī: Literally, "bald or having a shaven head [and] having a tuft of hair." Cs glosses the latter as "wearing side-locks (śikhaṇḍī kākapakṣī)." Optionally, Cs observes that the word śikhaṇḍa here is expressive of a twisting of the locks of hair, as in the use of "four locks or twists" (catuśśikhaṇḍetyādivac chikhaṇḍaśabdo jaṭājūtavācī vā). See notes to 1.18.8, where the term kākapakṣa is discussed.

"bearer of the staff" laguḍī: GPP and VSP read instead the variant lakuṭī, "possessing a club or stick."

34. "You are omnipresent" sarvagaḥ: Literally, "[you are] going everywhere."

"you hold the ascetic's drum" jharjharī: Literally, "possessing an ascetic's drum." D7,10,11,T3,4,M3, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead dhūrjaṭiḥ, "having a burden of matted locks."

35. "You are to be honored and to be worshiped, for you are the syllable oṃ. You are the foremost chanter of the sāmans." mānanīyo 'rcanīyaś ca oṃkāro jyeṣṭhasāmagaḥ: "[You are] to be honored and to be worshiped, [you are] the syllable oṃ. [You are] the eldest chanter of the sāmans." M3 and KK and VSP read instead mānanīyo 'rhaṇīyaś ca oṃkāraḥ sāmavedagaḥ, "[You are] to be honored, and [you are] most worthy; [you are] the syllable oṃ. [You are] a chanter of the sāmaveda." Ñ2,B1–3,D6,7,9–11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read mānīyaś ca oṃkāro variṣṭho jyeṣṭhasāmagaḥ, "[You are] to be honored, [you are] the syllable oṃ; [you are] the best chanter of the sāmans."

"Mṛtyu's messenger" mṛtyudūtaḥ: Ñ,V1,3,B3,4,D3,6,9–11,T4, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead mṛtyubhūtaḥ, "who has become death." It appears that the idea here is that we are to take mṛtyuḥ as the personification of death, "Mṛtyu," and mṛtyubhūtaḥ as the phenomenon of death itself. Translators who share this reading offer a variety of interpretations. Gorresio (1870, p. 109) renders, "Tu sei la Morte e il morbo," evidently taking the latter term to refer to fatal illness. Dutt (1894, p. 1645) translates, "the death, the element of death." Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 452) understands, "Thou art Death and the nature of death."

"You are the heavenly Pārijāta tree" parijātaḥ: Literally, "[You are] the Parijāta." This is the name of the heavenly wish-fulfilling tree. D1,3,4,6,7,9–11,T3,4,M3, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead pāriyātraḥ, which is a name of the western range of the Vindhya mountains or anyone who lives there. Both Dutt (1894, p. 1645) and Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 452) share this reading and provide footnotes identifying the term as the name of a mountain in the Vindhya chain.

36. "You . . . dwell in a cave" guhāvāsī: Cs notes that this is for the purpose of practicing asceticism. Cs further notes that this is what gives the proper interpretation to the term haritanemin in verse 30 above. (guhāvāsī tapaścaraṇārtham. haritanemīty ataḥ saṃbhavadarthaḥ.) M3 and KK and VSP read instead gṛhī yogī, "[you are] a householder [and] a yogin."

"You play the lute and the paṇava drum, and you carry a quiver." vīṇāpaṇavatūṇavān: Literally, "[You are] possessed of a vīṇā, a paṇava, and a quiver."

37. "who haunts the cremation ground" śmaśānacārī: Literally, "a wanderer in the cremation ground." Ñ2,V1,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead śmaśānavāsī, "whose dwelling is in the cremation ground."

"a tamer of your foes" ariṃdamaḥ: Ñ2,B1–3,D1,3,4,6,7,9–11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead aninditaḥ, "blameless."

"You knocked out Bhaga's eyes and smashed Pūṣan's teeth." bhagasyākṣinipātī ca pūṣṇo daśananāśanaḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead bhaganetraprahartā ca pūṣadantanipātanaḥ, lending the line the sense "the one who was the striker of Bhaga's eyes and the one who caused Pūṣan's teeth to fall out."

38. "You bring on fever" jvarakartā: Ñ,B3,D6,7,10,11,M3, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead jvarahartā, "the remover of fever."

39. "You are both madness and the incarnation of sobriety. You are the fourth and highest stage and the foremost in the world." unmādo vimadākāraś caturtho lokasattamaḥ: Literally, "[You are] madness [and] have the form of sobriety; the fourth, the foremost in the world." Cs understands the word fourth (caturthaḥ) to refer to daṇḍa, "coercive force" (cathurtho daṇḍarūpopāyaḥ). This is the fourth of the well-known set of the four political strategies of conciliation (sāma), bribery (dāna), dissension (bheda), and coercive force (daṇḍa). Gorresio (1870, p. 109) translates, "il quarto fra gli esseri più eccellenti." Dutt (1894, p. 1645) merely renders, "Thou . . . art the fourth," while Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 452) similarly offers, "the Fourth." Ñ2,V3,B1,2,D1,3,4,7,10,11,T3,4, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read vepanakaraḥ, "[you] cause [all things] to tremble," for vimadākāraḥ, "having the form of sobriety." M3 and KK and VSP read the facilior unmādamohanakaraḥ samarthas tridaśottamaḥ, "[You] cause madness and delusion; [You are] the powerful, foremost of the thirty [gods]."

"You are respectful circumambulation and Vāmana." prādakṣiṇyaś ca vāmanaḥ: T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead prāgdakṣiṇyaś ca nāmataḥ, lending the line the sense "Prāgdakṣiṇya ['the southeastern one'] by name." This avoids the repetition of the word vāmanaḥ found in the critical text and in Gorresio, GPP, and NSP. Ñ2,V3,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read prāgpradakṣiṇavāmanaḥ, "and you are the dwarf of the southeast." Gorresio's text shows the slight variant prācyadakṣiṇavāmanaḥ. This passage is obscure in any of its variants. Cs struggles to make sense of it, offering two rather ingenious, if less than persuasive, explanations. According to him, the term prākpradakṣiṇavāmana means "he to whom all goods things accrue even from those who are exceedingly skilled (prākpradakṣiṇavāmanaḥ pradakṣiṇā atikuśalās tebhyo 'pi vāmāni saṃyanti yaṃ saḥ). Cs's second explanation is that pradakṣiṇo vāmanaḥ means "that blessed one of whom there is the accrual of all good things." Cs supports this latter interpretation with a quote from an unidentified vedic source that says: "He is a vāmani to whom all good things accrue." (yadvā pradakṣiṇo vāmano vāmanir bhagavān yasya sa iti vā. vāmāni saṃyanti sa vāmanir iti śruteḥ.) Compare ChāndoU 4.15.2. Translators also have difficulty with the passage. Gorresio (1870, p. 109) translates, "il nano, Vāmadeva, il nano delle plage orientale e meridionale." Dutt (1894, p. 1645) offers, "thou art a dwarf, Vāmanadeva [sic] and the dwarf who circumambulates the east." Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 452), following Dutt, understands, "Thou art the Holy Dwarf, Vamanadeva [sic], and the Dwarf who circumambulates the East." Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 448) translates, "Thou art Vāmana and Vāmadeva, and Thou art known as Prāg-dākshinya."

40. "matted hair" jaṭilaḥ: D6,7,10, and GPP and NSP read instead kuṭilaḥ "crooked or devious one."

"You immobilized the hand of Indra" śakrahastapratiṣṭambhī: Ñ1,B2,T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead cakrahastaḥ pratiṣṭambhī, "[You] have a discus in your hand, and [you are] the one who immobilizes."

"paralyzed the Vasus" vasūnāṃ stambhanaḥ: Ñ1,V1,D1,3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead camūnāṃ stambhanaḥ: "paralyzed the armies."

41. "You are Madhu and have eyes as yellow as honey." madhur madhukalocanaḥ: T3,4,M4, and KK and VSP read madhuralocanaḥ, "having charming eyes," for madhukalocanaḥ, "having eyes as yellow as honey." Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 448) takes the term madhuḥ in its sense of the spring season. This is equally plausible.

"Vājasana" vājasanaḥ: KK and VSP read instead the somewhat unusual śīkaraḥ, "the mist."

"And you are . . . worshiped in the ashrams" āśramapūjitaḥ: KK and VSP read instead āśritapūjitaḥ, "worshiped by those who have taken refuge [in you]." The variant is not noted in the critical apparatus.

42. "unchanging" dhruvaḥ: The term can also refer to the pole star and a wide variety of other referents. M3 and KK and VSP read instead hy ajaḥ, "indeed the unborn [one]."

"the one of three paths" trivartmā: Literally, "having three ways or paths." V1,D6,7,9–11, and GPP and NSP read instead tridharmā, "having three characteristics."

"the creator of all beings" bhūtabhāvanaḥ: Literally, "the creator of beings."

44. "propitious to brahmans and" brahmaṇyaś ca: M3 and KK and VSP read instead subrahmaṇyaḥ, "very dear or kind to brahmans" or "Subrahmaṇya," which is an epithet of Skanda.

"You consist of the seeds of all things." sarvabījamayaḥ: Ñ2,D7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead sarvajīvamayaḥ, "[You] consist of all living things," while Ñ1,V1, D1,3,4,T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead sarvadevamayaḥ, "[You] consist of all gods."

45. "You are the sound of all musical instruments" sarvatūryanināḍī: M3 and KK and VSP read instead sarvabhūtanivāsaḥ, "[You are] the abode of all beings."

"and the liberator from all bondage" sarvabandhavimocanaḥ: Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead the synonymous sarvabandhavimokṣakaḥ.

"the binder" bandhanaḥ: KK and VSP read instead vañcakaḥ, "the deceiver."

"the foundation of everything and the Supreme Man" sarvadhārī narottamaḥ: T3 and KK and VSP read sarpadhārī, "wearer of serpents," for sarvadhārī," foundation of everything." D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead sarvadā nidhanottamaḥ, "[you are] the eternal great destroyer."

47. "this . . . holy mantra" idaṃ puṇyam: Literally, "this holy [thing]."

"of one hundred and eight names" nāmāṣṭaśatam: KK and VSP read instead the synonymous nāmnām aṣṭottaraṃ śatam.

"This prayer" japyam: Literally, "that which is to be muttered." Ñ2,D1,3,4,6,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead japtam, "recited." The idea is "once or when recited it will bring . . ."

Following 47ab (= line 345, "I have recited this supreme, holy mantra of one hundred and eight names.") Ñ2,D6,7,9–11, and GPP, NSP, KK (in brackets), and VSP insert a passage of one line [25*]: "It is celestial[1] and destroys all sins; it is a source of refuge for those seeking refuge (sarvapāpaharaṃ divyaṃ śaraṇyaṃ śaraṇārthinām)."

[1] "celestial" divyam: D10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead puṇyam, "holy."

Following verse 47 (= lines 345–346), KK and VSP read lines 347–348 as their verses 50 and 52, respectively. These same lines constitute verse 1 of Prakṣipta I, sarga 5 (Lahore = [7.30.1], Gorresio [= 7.31.1], GPP [Prakṣipta I, sarga 5.1], NSP [Prakṣipta I, sarga 5.1]).

1. When he had given this boon to Rāvaṇa, the eternal, lotus-born lord quickly returned to Brahmā's world.

Following verse 1 (= App. I, No. 1, lines 347–348), Ñ2,B2–4,D6,7,10,11,T4, and Lahore (= 7.30.2ab), Gorresio (= 7.31.2ab), GPP (= prakṣipta sarga 5.2ab), NSP (= prakṣipta sarga 5.2ab), KK (= prakṣipta sarga 4.51ab), and VSP (= prakṣipta sarga 4.53ab) insert a passage of one line [26*]: "And[1] now, when Rāvaṇa had received that boon, he once more returned (rāvaṇo 'pi varaṃ labdhvā punar evāgamat tathā)."

[1] "And" tathā: Ñ2,B2,4, and KK and VSP read instead tadā, "then."

Following 26*, KK (= prakṣipta sarga 4.51cd,ef) and VSP (= prakṣipta sarga 4.53cd–54) insert two lines, which constitute 7.24.1 of the critical edition: "As he was returning in great delight, the evil-minded Rāvaṇa abducted along the way the daughters of kings, seers, gods, and gandharvas (nivartamānaḥ saṃhṛṣṭo rāvaṇaḥ sa durātmavān / jahre pathi narendrarṣidevagandharvakanyakāḥ).[1]"

[1]See 7.24.1 and notes. These lines are translated only by Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 448).

Prakṣipta I, Sarga 5 = Appendix I, No. 1, lines 347–348; Appendix I, No. 2, lines 1–140

Following Appendix I, No. 1, line 346, Ñ2,B,D6,7,10,11, and, Lahore, Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP insert a passage of two lines (App. I, No. 1, lines 347–348), followed by a passage of one hundred forty-seven lines, which constitutes Appendix I, No. 2, in the critical edition. Ś,Ñ1,V1,3,D1–5,8,9,12,T4,M3 insert after sarga 30 of the critical edition. Combined, these lines constitute sarga 30 in Lahore, 31 in Gorresio, and prakṣipta sarga 5 in GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP. See notes to verse 1 [Appendix I, No. 1, lines 347–348] and end of notes to Prakṣipta I, sarga 4 above.

2. "rākṣasa" rākṣasaḥ: B2,M3, and KK and VSP read instead rākṣasaiḥ, lending the phrase the sense "with his rākṣasa ministers."

"left his home" prayayau gṛhāt: Literally, "he went from the house." Ñ2,B,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead lokarāvaṇaḥ, "he who made the worlds resound," which then modifies Rāvaṇa.

3. "There . . . he saw" dṛśyate tatra: Literally, "There was seen." B2,D1,3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead dadṛśe tena, "by him was seen."

4. "He appeared to have a terrifying form" dṛśyate bhīṣaṇākāraḥ: Literally, "with a terrifying form he was seen." M3 and KK and VSP read instead yathā dṛśyeta bhayadaḥ, "Like one who gives fear, he would appear."

"like a veritable fire arisen at the end of a cosmic era" yugāntānala utthitaḥ: Literally, "the arisen fire at a yuga's end." Ñ2,B1–3,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead yugāntānalasaṃnibhaḥ, "resembling the fire at the end of a yuga."

5. "like a lion among śarabhas" śarabhāṇāṃ yathā siṃhaḥ: The simile seems to be defective. The other examples in this mālopamā represent the foremost of a class of entities. In this one, not only is the lion not one of the śarabhas but, according to the literary tradition, the śarabha, a mythical eight-legged Himalayan creature, is supposed to be more powerful than a lion or an elephant. See notes to verses 14–15 below. See also notes to 6.31.39 and 7.7.19–21.

"Airāvaṇa" airāvaṇaḥ" Ñ2,B1,2,4,D6,7,10,11,M3, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead airāvataḥ, "Airāvata."

6. M3 and KK and VSP read verses 6–16 (lines 9–30) in a different sequence: 9,14 [= KK 6; VSP 5]; 15,16 [= KK 7; VSP 6]; 17,18 [= KK 8; VSP 7]; 19,20 [= KK 9; VSP 8]; 21,22 [= KK 10; VSP 9]; 23,10 [= KK 11; VSP 10]; 13,24 [= KK 12; VSP 11]; 25,26 [= KK 13; VSP 12]; 27,28 [= KK 14; VSP 13]; 29,30 [= KK 15; VSP 14]; 11,12 [= KK 16; VSP 15].

6ab (line 9) = 6ab of KK and 5ab of VSP; 6cd (line 10) = 11cd of KK and 10cd of VSP.

"standing there in the middle like fire" sthitaṃ madhye 'nalaṃ yathā: It is not clear what this reference is to. Perhaps the idea is that the man is in the middle of the island. M3 and KK and VSP read instead kuṇḍamadhye 'nalaṃ tathā, lending the phrase the sense "as a fire in the midst of a vessel." Ñ2,B3,4,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, and NSP read instead sthitaṃ madhye mahābalam, "an extremely powerful [man] stood in the middle."

"to him" tam: Ñ2,B1–3,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead ca, "and."

7. 7ab (line 11) = 16ab of KK and 15ab of VSP; 7cd (line 12) = 16cd of KK and 15cd of VSP.

"His glance" tasya sā dṛṣṭiḥ: It is not entirely clear who is being described in this verse. The rolling of the eyes and gnashing of the teeth in anger could be signs of Rāvaṇa's rage for battle or the man's response to Rāvaṇa's challenge. Given the sequence of verses in the critical edition, we believe it is more likely to be Rāvaṇa. Gorresio (1870, pp. 110–11) and Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 453) appear to understand the reference to be to Rāvaṇa, while Dutt (1894, pp. 1646–47) seems to understand that it is the man who shows these signs of anger. Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 449), who follows the text of KK, reads the verse later in the passage (at KK verse 16), where it clearly modifies the man.

"flickering wildly like the circle of planets" grahamālā ivākulā: M3 and KK and VSP read instead grahamāleva cādbhutā, "[his] wondrous [glance] was like a row of planets." The lines in these editions and manuscripts modify the man. See note above.

"The sound of his grinding teeth was like that of a machine being torn apart." dantānāṃ daśataḥ śabdo yantrasyevābhibhidyataḥ: B1–3,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read dantān saṃdaśataḥ, "of him who was grinding his teeth together," for dantānāṃ daśataḥ, "of him who was grinding [of] the teeth." KK and VSP read atibhīkaraḥ, "extremely frightening," for abhibhidyataḥ, "of [the yantra] being split apart." This would lend the line the sense "was like the extremely frightening sound of a machine."

8. 8ab (line 13) = 12ab of KK and 11ab of VSP; 8cd (line 14) = 6cd of KK and 5cd of VSP.

"And mighty ten-faced Rāvaṇa roared loudly, together with his ministers." jagarja coccair balavān sahāmātyair daśānanaḥ: D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read jagarjoccaiḥ saḥ, "he roared loudly," for jagarja coccaiḥ, "and he roared loudly." Ñ2,V3,B1,2,4,D6,7,10,11,M3, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read the similar sahāmātyaḥ, "he, along with his ministers," for sahāmātyaiḥ, "together with his ministers."

"He released various roars" sa garjan vividhair nādaiḥ: Literally, "he, roaring with various sounds." M3 and KK and VSP read instead the accusative participle garjantam, "roaring," for sa garjan, making it the man who is roaring.

9. 9ab (line 15) = 7ab of KK and 6ab of VSP; 9cd (line 16) = 7cd of KK and 6cd of VSP.

"he had a mighty chest" mahorasam: M3 and KK and VSP read instead mahaujasam, "he had great power."

"his jaws were like a lion's" siṃhāsyam: Literally, "he had a lion's mouth." Ś,Ñ1,D1–3,5,8,9,12,M3, and KK and VSP read instead piṅgākṣam, "he had yellow eyes."

10. 10ab (line 17) = 8ab of KK and 7ab of VSP; 10cd (line 18) = 8cd of KK and 7cd of VSP.

"The soles of his feet were like lotuses, and his lotuslike hands had red palms." padmapādatalam . . . raktatālukarāmbujam: Literally, "having lotuslike soles of feet and having a red palate and lotus-hands." We are somewhat suspicious of the reading -tālu-, "palate," in conjunction with -kara-, "hands." Indeed, a few manuscripts (Ś,V1,D2) do read -tāla-. On the other hand, it is possible that the poet wishes to call attention to the redness of the feet, hands, and inner mouth of the roaring man. Gorresio (1870, p. 111) takes the term at its face value, rendering, "rosso il palato." Dutt (1894, p. 1647) silently corrects to -tāla-, offering, "red palms, red hands." Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 453) also silently corrects, translating, "the palms of his hands and the soles of his feet like unto red lotuses." M3 and KK and VSP read raktāmbujanibhānanam, "whose face was like the red lotus," for raktatālukarāmbujam. Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 449) follows this reading, rendering, "his formidable face was like the red lotus."

"He had a mighty roar and a huge body." mahānādaṃ mahākāyam: Ś,Ñ1,V1,3,D2, 8,9,12,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead mahākāyaṃ mahānādam by transposition.

11. 11ab (line 19) = 9ab of KK and 8ab of VSP; 12cd (line 20) = 9cd of KK and 8cd of VSP.

"He bore a yak-tail fly whisk covered with bells" saghaṇṭābaddhacāmaram: Literally, "having an attached yak-tail fly whisk, together with bells." KK and VSP read instead saṃghaṭṭaṃ baddhacāmaram, "[ready] for an encounter, and having an attached yak-tail fly whisk."

"he resounded with the sound of bells" kiṅkinīkṛtaniḥsvanam: "having a sound made by bells." KK and VSP read the synonymous kiṅkinīkṛtanisvanam. GPP and NSP read instead kiṅkinījālaniḥsvanam, "having the sound of masses of bells."

12. 12ab (line 21) = 10ab of KK and 9ab of VSP; 12cd (line 22) = 10cd of KK and 9cd of VSP.

"hanging around his hips" kaṭideśāvalambayā: Literally, "hanging from the region of the hip." V1,B4,D1,2,5,9,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead vakṣodeśāvalambayā, "hanging at his chest," while Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read kaṇṭhadeśāvalambayā, "hanging from his throat."

"He was as radiant as the Ṛgveda." ṛgvedam iva śobhantam: Literally, "shining like the Ṛgveda." The visual image here is hard to imagine. Compare verse 30 and notes below for a similar image.

13. 13ab (line 23) = 11ab of KK and 10ab of VSP; 11cd (line 24) = 12cd of KK and 11cd of VSP.

"the lord of the rākṣasas struck him . . . with lances, javelins, broadswords, and spears" prāharad rākṣasapatiḥ śūlaśaktyṛṣṭipaṭṭiśaiḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead dhṛtvā sa rākṣasapatiḥ śūlaśaktyṛṣṭipaṭṭiśam, lending the line the sense "the lord of the rākṣasas, having taken up lances, javelins, broadswords, and spears."

14–15. 14ab (line 25) = 13ab of KK and 12ab of VSP; 13cd (line 26) = 13cd of KK and 12cd of VSP; 15ab (line 27) = 14ab of KK and 13ab of VSP; 16cd (line 28) = 14cd of KK and 13cd of VSP.

"who was as unshakable" akampamānaḥ: Literally, "not shaking." Ś,Ñ1,V1,D2,3,5,8, 12,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead the passive participle akampyamānaḥ, "not being shaken."

"as is a lion by a leopard" sa dvīpinā siṃha iva: Ñ2,D1,6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead dvīpinā sa siṃha iva by transposition.

"an elephant by a śarabha" śarabheṇeva kuñjaraḥ: Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead ṛṣabheṇeva kuñjaraḥ, "an elephant by a bull." The variant seems contextually preferable, as, according to tradition, a śarabha is indeed able to kill an elephant. See notes to verse 5 above.

"Mount Sumeru by an elephant" sumerur iva nāgena: KK and VSP read the somewhat unusual sumerur iva chāgena, "like Sumeru by a goat." The reading is not noted in the critical apparatus. Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 449), mixing up his domestic animals, renders, "like the great mountain Meru by a sheep."

"to the rākṣasa" rākṣasam: B2,M3, and KK and VSP read instead rāvaṇam, "Rāvaṇa."

16. 16ab (line 29) = 15ab of KK and 14ab of VSP; 16cd (line 30) = 15cd of KK and 14cd of VSP.

"terrifying to all the worlds" sarvalokabhayaṅkaraḥ: Ś,D1–3,5,8,9,12,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead the similar sarvalokabhayāvahaḥ, "conveying terror to all the worlds."

"resident in that man" saṃśritāni tam: Literally, "had recourse to him."

17. "two bases for success" siddhihetukau: Ś,V1,3,D1,3,8,12,M3, and KK and VSP read instead the synonymous neuter siddhihetuke.

"having taken recourse" hy āśritya: V1,B1,2,D2,5,12,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read the similar saṃśritya, "having taken recourse."

18. "in his head and abdomen" vastiśīrṣayoḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead yasya śīrṣagāḥ, "were gone to the head of whom," and Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read vastipārśvayoḥ, "in his abdomen and side."

"were established in his stomach" kukṣisaṃsthitāḥ: Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead the awkward but similar kukṣitaḥ sthitāḥ, "resided stomach-wise." Cs glosses the locative singular (kukṣitaḥ kukṣau).

19. "All the directions were in his sides, and so forth" pārśvādiṣu diśaḥ sarvāḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead pārśvasthāḥ diśaḥ sarvāḥ, "All the directions are located in his sides."

"the wind" mārutaḥ: Ñ1,B,D1–3,5,9,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead mārutāḥ, lending the line the sense "the winds were in all his joints."

"and Grandfather Brahmā was in his heart" hṛdayaṃ ca pitāmahaḥ: Literally, "and the grandfather, his heart." D5,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read pitāmahāḥ, "the grandfathers," for pitāmahaḥ, "grandfather." Cs understand the plural to refer to those who were among the hosts of the departed ancestors (pitāmahāḥ pitṛgaṇasthāḥ).

Following 19ab (= line 35), Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, and KK (in brackets) insert a passage of one line [3*]: "And the blessed Rudra was in his back and Grandfather [Brahmā] in his heart (pṛṣṭhaṃ ca bhagavān rudro hṛdayaṃ ca pitāmahaḥ)."

20. "donations of . . . gold" suvarṇasya ca dānāni: Literally, "and gifts of gold." Ñ2,B3,4,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead suvarṇavaradānāni, "gifts of excellent gold or excellent gifts of gold."

"in the hairs of his armpits" kakṣalomānugāni vai: Literally, "indeed had entered into the body hairs of the armpits." KK and VSP read instead śaśval lomāśritāni vai, "indeed had recourse to the body hairs eternally." The variant is not noted in the critical apparatus. D7,10, and GPP and NSP read ca, "and," for vai, "indeed."

21. "as his bones" asthibhūtāḥ: Literally, "had become bones." Ñ1,V1,D2,5,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead the synonymous hy asthibhūtāḥ to avoid the hiatus.

22. "The thunderbolt was the tip of his penis" maṇir vajro 'bhavat tasya: Ñ2,B4,D6,7, 10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead pāṇir vajro 'bhavat tasya, "The thunderbolt was his hand," while M3 and KK and VSP read instead mahī vakṣo 'bhavat tasya, "The earth was his chest."

"Dyaus" dyauḥ: Dyaus is the god of the sky, known from the vedas.

"The twilight was in the back of his neck and" kṛkāṭikāyāṃ sandhyā ca: M3 and GPP and VSP read instead ubhe sandhye kāyāsandhau, "The two twilights [morning and evening] were in joint[s] of the body." Cs understands the two sandhyās, "twilights," to be the presiding divinities of those phenomena (sandhyā tadabhimāninī devatā). Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 450) translates this variant as "the twilights in the holes (joints) of the body."

"the clouds were in his urine" jalavāhāś ca mehane: Literally, "and the bearers of water [were] in his urine." Ñ2,B,D4,5,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead jalavāhāś ca ye ghanāḥ, which lends the line the sense "The twilight as well as those clouds, the bearers of water, were in the back of his neck."

23–25. "and Bhaga and Pūṣan were his two hands" bhagaḥ pūṣā ca tau karau: T4,M3, and KK and VSP read ubhau, "both," for ca tau, "and those two," lending the pāda the sense "both Bhaga and Pūṣan were his hands." Ñ2,B1,3,4,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead tathā vidyādharādayaḥ, lending the line the sense "The creator and arranger and Bhaga and Pūṣan, as well as the vidyādharas and so forth, were his two arms.

"Śeṣa, Vāsuki, Viśālākṣa, Irāvata" śeṣaś ca vāsukiś caiva viśālākṣa irāvataḥ: M3 and GPP and KK reorder the names, reading airāvato viśālākṣaḥ śeṣo vāsukir eva ca, "Airāvata, Viśālākṣa, Śeṣa, and Vāsuki."

"both . . . and" cobhau: V1,3,M3, and KK and VSP read instead nāgau, "the two nāgas."

"along with Upatakṣaka" sopatakṣakaḥ: Ñ1,B1–3,D12,M3, and KK and VSP read instead copatakṣakaḥ, "and Upatakṣaka."

26. "The fortnights, months, and seasons were situated in his two fangs." pakṣamāsartavaś caiva daṃṣṭrayor ubhayoḥ sthitāḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead dantān māsā daṃṣṭrayoś ca ubhayor ṛtavaḥ sthitāḥ, "The months [inhabited] his teeth, and the seasons were situated in both his fangs." Note the hiatus.

"his nose" nāsā: Ñ2,D1,6,710,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read the dual nāse, which here would have the same meaning.

"And the winds were in his nostrils." tacchidreṣu ca vāyavaḥ: Literally, "the vāyus were in his openings or the openings of that [nose]." D10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead chidreṣu vāyavaḥ sthitāḥ, "the winds were situated in his nostrils. Both readings are ambiguous in that the word chidra can refer to any opening or orifice of the body or, as we take it, the openings of the nose, i.e., the nostrils. In this we are aligned with Gorresio (1870, p. 112) and Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 450). Dutt (1894, p. 1648), however, renders, "and the airy currents are in the pores of his body." This translation is taken virtually verbatim by Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 454), who renders, "the airy currents are the pores of his body."

27. "The goddess of speech" devī vāṇī: D10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead devī vīṇā, "the goddess Vīṇā (Lute)." It is possible that this is the result of a scribal metathesis for vāṇī, "speech," although it is worth noting that the vīṇā, "lute," is an invariable āyudha of the goddess Sarasvatī. Only Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 454) takes this variant at face value, rendering, "Saraswati with her Vina is in his throat."

"his ears" śravaṇau: B2,D6,7,9–11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP all read instead the locative singular śravaṇe, "in his ear."

28. "which were in the form of stars" tārārūpāṇi: V3,D7,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead nānārūpāṇi, "which were of various forms."

"energies, and austerities" tejāṃsi ca tapāṃsi ca: Ñ1,V1,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead tejaḥ siddhis tapāṃsi ca, lending the pāda the sense "blazing energy, perfection, austerities."

"all resided in the body" dehāśritāni: Literally, "took recourse to the body." D2,9,M3, and KK and VSP read instead dehaṃ śritāni, "took recourse to [his] body."

29. "Struck" pīḍitam: Literally, "pressed or injured." D1,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead tāḍitam, "struck."

"merely brushed as if in play" labdhamātreṇa līlayā: Literally, "merely met with in play." M3 and KK and VSP read instead svalpamātreṇa līlayā, "by a small measure in play."

"which had the striking force of the vajra" tena vajraprahāreṇa: Literally, "that having a blow of the vajra or thunderbolt." Ñ1,V1,3,D2,9,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead muṣṭiprahāreṇa, "with a blow of the fist."

30. "the night-roaming rākṣasas" niśācarān: Literally, "the night-roaming [ones]."

"he" saḥ: Ś,Ñ1,V1,3,D1,3,5,8,9,12,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead ca, "and."

"resembled the Ṛgveda" ṛgvedapratimaḥ: Cs grapples with this awkward simile, explaining, "The Ṛgveda is the foremost among the vedas; in the same way, he [the man] is foremost among the gods. Or he stands as the personification [of the Ṛgveda]. (vedeṣv ṛgvedaḥ pradhānaṃ tadvad devapradhānaḥ. pratimāsthānīya iti vā.)" Compare verse 12 above, where the man was described as "as radiant as the Ṛgveda."

"looked like a mountain . . . dancing" nṛtyan parvatasaṃnibhaḥ: Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read nijam, "his own," for nṛtyan, "[he] dancing," lending the line the sense "he, resembling a mountain, entered his own Pātāla. M3 and KK and VSP read gacchatparvatasaṃnibhaḥ, "he, resembling a moving mountain."

31. "he summoned . . . and said" āhūya: Literally, "having summoned."

32. "now . . . to him" tam atha: D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead te tadā, "they then."

33. "seizing his sword" asiṃ gṛhya: Literally, "having seized [his] sword." Ñ,B1,3,4,D2,5–7,10,11,T4, and GPP and NSP read instead saṃgṛhya, "having understood or having composed [himself]." We take the latter meaning, which slightly stretches the semantic range of the verb saṃ + √gṛh to indicate that Rāvaṇa is composing himself after having been knocked down by the man. Cs, however, takes the former interpretation, which we believe is less appropriate in the context. Cs says, "Having grasped, that it to say, having heard, their words (saṃgṛhya tadvaco gṛhītvā śrutveti yāvat)." Translators who share the variant struggle to make sense of the line. Gorresio (1870, p. 113) takes the gerund in its sense of "having seized" but must then add an object. He renders, "Afferrata subitamente un' arma sì come Garuda ghermisce un serpente." Dutt (1894, p. 1648) offers, "As Garuda goes speedily, taking a serpent, so that vicious-minded Rāvana arrived quickly at the entrance of the den." Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 455) translates, "As Garuda swoops on a serpent, so did that wicked-minded Ravana speedily approach the entrance of that cave."

"that evil-minded rākṣasa quickly" sa tu śīghram . . . durmatiḥ: Literally, "he, the evil-minded [one], quickly." Ñ1,V1,D12,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read śīghraṃ sa tu by transposition.

34. "Upon passing through that opening" saṃpraviśya ca tad dvāram: Literally, "And having entered that door." Ñ2,B1,3,4,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead praviveśa ca tad dvāram, "And he entered that door," while M3 and KK and VSP read instead praviśya ca sa tad dvāram, "And having entered that door, he."

"fearless on account of his boon" varanirbhayaḥ: D7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead nirbhayas tadā, "then fearless."

"saw there men" apaśyat sa narāṃs tatra: Literally, "he saw there men." V1,D2,5,9,M3, and KK and VSP read ca, "and," for saḥ, "he." D7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead sa praviśya ca paśyad vai, "and having entered, he saw, indeed."

35. "And they were adorned with rings, diamonds, and so forth, of various kinds." aṅgulīkavajrādyair vividhaiś ca vibhūṣitān: Literally, "[He saw them who were] adorned with various rings, diamonds, and so forth." M3 and KK and VSP read instead aṅgulīkahārādyair bhūṣaṇaiś ca vibhūṣitān, "[He saw them who were] adorned with ornaments, such as rings [and] pearl necklaces." GPP and NSP read instead varahāṭakaratnādyair vividhaiś ca vibhūṣitān, "[He saw them who were] adorned with various [pieces of] fine gold, jewels, and so forth."

36. "free from any anxiety" vītabhayāḥ: Literally, "whose fear had departed." Ś,V1,D2,5,8,9,12,M3, and KK and VSP read instead śāntabhayāḥ, "whose fears had been pacified."

37. "That rākṣasa" rākṣasaḥ: Ñ2,B1,3,4,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead rāvaṇaḥ, "Rāvaṇa."

"saw them dancing there" nṛtyantyaḥ paśyate tatra: B1 and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read tāṃs tu, "and them," for tatra, "there." According to the critical apparatus, Ñ2,D6,7,10,11 read the difficult to construe feminine plural tās tu, which is probably an error for tāṃs tu. M3 and KK and VSP read instead krīḍataḥ prekṣate tān vai, "he saw them playing indeed."

38. "Rāvaṇa watched those thirty million fearless men" rāvaṇas teṣāṃ tisraḥ koṭyas tu nirbhayāḥ: Literally, "Rāvaṇa the fearless thirty millions of them." The line lacks a verb, so we have brought the verb paśyate, "he saw," from the preceding verse 37 (line 73). Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead rāvaṇas tatra [teṣām—KK and VSP] tāsu koṭiṣu nirbhayaḥ, "Fearless Rāvaṇa [saw] there [of them—KK and VSP] among tens of millions."

"who looked in every way just like the man he had seen" yathā dṛṣṭaḥ sa tu naras tulyās te tasya sarvaśaḥ: Literally, "but they were all the same as the man just as he had been seen." Ñ2,D7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read tulyāṃs tān api, "[he saw] them who were equal as well." KK and VSP read instead tulyāṃs tāṃs tasya. "[he saw] them who were equal to that [man]."

39. "The rākṣasa" rākṣasaḥ: V1,3,B1,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead rāvaṇaḥ, "Rāvaṇa."

"who shared the same complexion, the same strength" ekavarṇān ekabalān: Literally, "having one complexion, having one strength." D5,9,M3, and KK and VSP read instead ekavarṇāṃs tv ekabalān, "but having one complexion, having one strength." D7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read ekaveṣān, "having one [i.e., the same] garments," for ekabalān, "having one strength."

40. "When . . . saw them" tāṃs tu dṛṣṭvā: Literally, "But having seen them." Ñ1,V1, B3,4,M3, and Gorresio, KK, and VSP read instead tān dṛṣṭvātha, "Now, having seen them."

"by self-existent Brahmā" svayaṃbhuvā: Literally, "by the self-existent [one]."

41. "a . . . mansion equipped with beds and seats" śayanāsanaveśmanā: Literally, "with a dwelling having a bed and seats." M3 and KK and VSP read instead kaustubhena virājitam, "[the other (man) was] resplendent with the Kaustubha jewel." The Kaustubha jewel arose from the churning of the ocean. It is normally said to reside on the chest of Kṛṣṇa or Viṣṇu.

"man lying on a bed" puruṣaṃ śayane sthitam: M3 and KK and NSP read instead bhujaṅgaśayane sthitam, "lying on a bed consisting of a serpent."

"wreathed in fire" pāvakenāvaguṇṭhitaḥ: B3,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read the similar pāvakenāvakuṇṭhitaḥ, "surrounded by fire."

42–43. "She wore a heavenly garland and unguents and was adorned with heavenly ornaments." divyasraganulepā ca divyābharaṇabhūṣitā: V1,M3, and KK and VSP read the adjectives as masculine singulars, which then modify puruṣaḥ, "the man," in verse 41ef above (line 82—"And that man lay there wreathed in fire.").

"was truly an ornament to the triple world" trilokasyaiva bhūṣaṇam: D7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead trilokasyaikabhūṣaṇam, "the sole ornament of the triple world."

"For it was the goddess Lakṣmī . . . with her lotus" lakṣmīr devī sapadmā vai: Literally, "Indeed, it was the goddess Lakṣmī, with a lotus." Ś3,Ñ2,D2,6–8,10–12, and GPP and NSP read the slight but synonymous variant lakṣmī devī sapadmā vai, while M3[?] and KK and VSP read instead lakṣmīr bahiḥ sapadmā vai, "[there] indeed, outside, was Lakṣmī with her lotus."

"shining" bhrājantī: Ñ2,B1,3,4,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead bhrājate, "she shines."

44. "But . . . without" vinā tu: Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead vināpi, "even without."

"when he entered" praviṣṭaḥ: Literally, "[he who had] entered." Ś1,Ñ,V1,3,D2,8,9,12, T4,M3 read instead prahṛṣṭaḥ, "greatly excited."

"lord of the rākṣasas" rakṣendraḥ: Ñ2,B4,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead laṅkeśaḥ, "the lord of Laṅkā."

"rashly desired to seize" jighṛkṣuḥ sahasā: V1,3,T4,M4, and KK and VSP read sa tadā, "he then," for sahasā, "rashly."

"as she sat on her lion throne" siṃhāsanam upasthitām: Literally, "[she,] situated on a lion seat." Ñ1,V3,D1,4,12,M3, and KK and VSP read instead siṃhāsanam upāśritām, "[she], resting on a lion seat." Ñ2,B1,4,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead siṃhāsanasamāsthitām, "[she], sitting on a lion seat."

45. "Just as one might wish to seize . . . desired to seize her by the hand" haste grahītuṃ tām aicchan . . . yadvat: Literally, "He desired to seize her at the hand just as." M3 and KK and VSP read the instrumental plural hastaiḥ for the locative singular haste, lending the phrase the sense "he desired to seize her with his hands." Note that Rāvaṇa is sometimes represented as having twenty arms. D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read anvicchan, "[he] seeking," for tām aicchan, "he wished . . . her."

"impelled by fate" kālanoditaḥ: Literally, "impelled by kāla." Ñ,V3,B1,3,4,D2,6,T4,M3, and Gorresio, KK, and VSP read instead the similar kālacoditaḥ "urged on by kāla."

46. "wreathed in fire" pāvakenāvaguṇṭhitaḥ: T4,M3, and KK and VSP read the similar pāvakenāvakuṇṭhitaḥ, "surrounded by fire."

"Rāvaṇa desired to seize" grahītukāmaṃ tam: Literally, "[realized that] he was one who had the desire to seize."

"had pushed aside the curtain" vyapaviddhapaṭam: Literally, "him by whom the cloth had been parted or pushed aside." KK and VSP read instead vyapavidhya paṭam, "having pushed aside the cloth." Our understanding is that the reference is to a transparent bed curtain.

48. "Scorched by the god's blazing energy" tejasā tasya saṃdīptaḥ: Literally, "burned by his tejas." Ñ2,B1,3,4,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead tejasā sahasā dīptaḥ, "suddenly burned by [his] blazing energy."

Following 48ab (= line 95—"Scorched by the god's blazing energy, Rāvaṇa, who makes the worlds resound"), Ñ1,V1,3,D3,5,T4,M3, and KK and VSP insert one line [6*]: "[burned by that tejas] by means of a long nasal exhalation,[1] [he fell to the ground] there in Rasātala, Rāma (ghoṇavātena dīrgheṇa tasmin rāma rasātale)."

[1] "nasal exhalation" ghoṇavātena: Literally, "wind from the nose." M3 and KK and VSP read instead the synonymous ghrāṇavātena.

50. "I must protect . . . by reason of which" rakṣyo yena: Literally, "it is to be protected because of which." Ñ,B1,3,4,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read tena, "because of that," for yena, "because of which."

"rākṣasa" rākṣasa: T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead rāvaṇa, "O Rāvaṇa."

"without fear . . . not now" visrabdho nādhunā: M3 and KK and VSP read instead the adverbial visrabdhaṃ nātra, "fearlessly . . . not here or not now."

51. "was seized with fear" bhayam āviśat: Literally, "he entered or possessed fear." M3 and KK and VSP read instead the facilior bhayam āpa saḥ, "he obtained fear."

"arose" tathotthāya: Literally, "having thus arisen." Ñ1,V1,D3,5,7,10,11,T4,M3, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead tadotthāya, "then having arisen."

Following 51a (= line 101, prior half—"Regaining consciousness after a while"), M3 and KK and VSP insert a passage of two half lines [8*]: "The rākṣasa of fearsome valor, having seen that great person (rākṣaso bhīmavikramaḥ / taṃ tu dṛṣṭvā mahātmānam . . .)."

52. "His body hair bristling" lomaharṣaṇam āpannaḥ: Literally, "who had attained the bristling of the body hair." M3 and KK and VSP read the minor yet synonymous variant romaharṣaṇam.

"that being of enormous splendor" mahādyutim: M3 and KK and VSP read instead mahāmunim, "the great sage."

"endowed with such valor" śauryasaṃpannaḥ: Ñ2,B1,2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead the more or less synonymous vīryasaṃpannaḥ.

53. "Tell me, sir, who are you—a god or a malignant spirit—standing here before me?" brūhi tvaṃ ko bhavān devo bhūto veha vyavasthitaḥ: Literally, "You speak: Who [are] you, sir? Is a god or malignant spirit standing here?" Ñ2,B2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read kuto bhūtvā for bhūto veha, lending line the sense "You speak: What god [are] you? From where having come, are [you] standing?" M3 and KK and VSP read instead brūhi hi tvaṃ devadevo vā sarvadeheṣu susthitaḥ, "You speak: Are you the God of gods who is firmly established in all bodies?"

54. "Now . . . he . . . by the" sa tenātha: Literally, "Now he by the . . ." D6,7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead tato devaḥ, "then the god [addressed]."

55. "What use am I to you . . . You are soon to be slain by me." kiṃ te mayā . . . vadhyo 'si na cirān mama: KK and VSP read instead kiṃ tvaṃ mayā . . . vadhyo 'si na cirād iha, "Are you not to be killed here by me soon?

56. "I shall not come under the power of death" nāhaṃ mṛtyuvaśaṃ gataḥ: Literally, "I do not go to the control of death." Ñ2,B3,D2,7,9–11, and GPP and NSP read mṛtyupatham for mṛtyuvaśam, lending the line the sense "I do not travel the path of death."

"who will be my equal" mama tulyaḥ: Ś,Ñ1,V1,D2,8,12,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead mattulyo vā, "or equal to me."

57. "every effort will prove futile" prayatnaś cāpi durbalaḥ: Literally, "and even effort is weak." Ś,D8,9,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read durlabhaḥ for durbalaḥ, lending the line the sense "and even effort would be hard to come by."

"Nor do I see anyone in the triple world" na taṃ paśyāmi trailokye: Literally, "Nor do I see him in the triple world." D1,3,4,6,7,10,11,M3, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead trailokye taṃ na paśyāmi by transposition.

"who could falsify my boon" yo me kuryād varaṃ vṛthā: M3 and KK and VSP read tat for me, lending the phrase the sense "who could do that which [would make] the boon false."

58. "I am immortal" amaro 'ham: D2,M3, and KK and VSP read instead amaro vā, "And [being] immortal."

"that is why I am not afraid" tena me nāviśad bhayam: Literally, "because of that fear has not possessed me." Ñ2,B3,4,D6,7,10,11,T4,M3, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read the facilior accusative mām for the genitive me.

59. "at your hands . . . at your hands" tvaddhastāt . . . / . . . tvaddhastāt: Literally, "from your hand . . . from your hand." M3 and KK and VSP read instead tvatto me . . . / . . . tvatto me, "my [death] . . . from you . . . my [death] from you."

"my death" maraṇaṃ mama: M3 and KK and VSP read instead [me] maraṇaṃ tv idam, "and this [my] death."

60. "then . . . saw within the body" athāsya gātre saṃpaśyat: Literally, "now he, seeing in his body." T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead athāpaśyat tasya gātre, "now he saw in his body."

"of the god" tasya devasya: V3,D1–5,9,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead devadevasya, "of the god of gods."

61–64. "the Ādityas, the Maruts, the Sādhyas, the Vasus, and the two Aśvins as well" ādityā marutaḥ sādhyā vasavo 'thāśvināv api [= line 120]: M3 and KK and VSP read instead ādityā vasavo rudrā maruto 'thāśvināv api, "The Ādityas, the Vasus, the Rudras, the Maruts, and the two Aśvins as well."

"And there were the Rudras" rūdrāś ca: M3 and KK and VSP read instead siddhāś ca, "and the perfected beings."

"the vedas, ancillary knowledge" vedā vidyāḥ: The term vidyā has an extremely broad semantic range. In this context, we believe it refers to the ancillary knowledge associated with the vedas, that is to say, the vedāṅgas. Gorresio (1870, p. 115) leaves the term essentially untranslated, rendering, "i Vidyi." Dutt (1894, p. 1650) translates simply, "knowledge." Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 456) renders, "all the branches of learning." Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 452) translates, "the secret lores." D9,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read vidyā vedāḥ by transposition.

"the perfected beings, the gandharvas, and the celestial bards" siddhagandharvacāraṇāḥ: D7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read the synonymous siddhā gandharvacāraṇāḥ. M3 and KK and VSP read instead sādhyā gandharvacāraṇāḥ, "the Sādhyas, the gandharvas, and the celestial bards."

"and the other divinities who were resident there, as well as the yakṣas, the daityas, and the rākṣasas" ye cānye devatā yakṣāḥ saṃsthitā daityarākṣasāḥ: Literally, "and the other divinities, the yakṣas, the daityas, and the rākṣasas, who remained." Ñ2,B1,D6,7, 10,11, and GPP and NSP read devatāsaṃghāḥ, "the hosts of the divinities," for devatā yakṣāḥ, "divinities, yakṣas." M3 and KK and VSP read instead ye cānye saṃsthitā devā daityadānavarākṣasāḥ, "and other gods who remained, as well as the daityas, dānavas, and rākṣasas."

66. "and who were those" tu kāś ca tāḥ: KK and VSP read instead ca tāś ca kāḥ by transposition.

67. "I will tell you about the eternal god of gods" abhidhāsyāmi devadevaṃ sanātanam: M3 and KK and VSP read the nominative devadevaḥ sanātanaḥ, which makes the phrase part of the subject of the following line (132). GPP and NSP read the vocative devadeva sanātana, "O eternal God of gods," for the nominative. This would then refer to Rāma.

68. "the man" naraḥ: Up until now the mysterious man on the island has been referred to as puruṣaḥ, "man." The term naraḥ for man here may have been chosen for its resonance with the proper noun Nara, the name of the primordial sage closely associated in Vaiṣṇava theology with the primordial divinity Nārāyaṇa.

"holy sage" bhagavān: Literally, "the holy [one]."

"called" nāma: Literally, "by name." D1–4,9,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead the vocative singular rāma, "O Rāma."

"the gods" surāḥ: GPP and NSP read the impossible to construe svarāḥ, "sounds." The variant is not noted in the critical apparatus, and no translator renders it. We believe that this is a typographical error in GPP that was copied by the compositors of NSP.

Following 68ab (= App. I, No. 2, line 132), Ś1,Ñ1,V1,3,D3,5,8,12,T4,M3, and KK and VSP (= prakṣipta sarga 5.65) insert a passage of three lines [10*]: "And[1] he is the god Nārāyaṇa, who bears the conch, the discus, and the mace. He[2] is both the creator and destroyer of all beings. He is Viṣṇu, the eternal, unchanging, unfailing, beginningless cause of existence."

[1] "And" ca: Ñ1,V1,3,D3,5,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead vai, "Indeed."
[2] "He" saḥ: Ñ1,V1,3,D3,5,12,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead ca, "and."

69–70. "equal . . . in blazing energy and power" tulyatejaḥprabhāvāḥ: Literally, "having equal strength and power." M3 and KK and VSP read instead the similar tulyatejaḥpratāpāḥ, "having equal strength and energy."

"But that enraged person did not see the rākṣasa of evil intentions" nāsau kruddhena dṛṣṭas tu rākṣasaḥ pāpaniścayaḥ: Literally, "But the rākṣasa of evil intentions was not seen by the enraged [one]." M3 and KK and VSP read nātikruddhena, "not by the extremely enraged [one]" for nāsau kruddhena, literally, "he [the rākṣasa] . . . not . . . by the angry [one]."

"and therefore, Rāma, he did not reduce Rāvaṇa to ashes" na babhūva tadā tena bhasmasād rāma rāvaṇaḥ: Literally, "then, Rāma, Rāvaṇa was not reduced to ashes by him." M3 and KK and VSP read instead na babhūva tato rāma bhasmasād rāvaṇaḥ prabho, "Therefore, O Lord Rāma, Rāvaṇa was not reduced to ashes."

"His limbs exhausted" khinnagātraḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead bhinnagātraḥ, "his limbs shattered."

"like a tree" nagaprakhyaḥ: Literally, "having the appearance of a naga." The simile is ambiguous. The term naga, "that which does not move," can refer here to either a mountain or a tree. Both mountains and trees are common upamānas, "objects of comparisons," for fallen heroes in Sanskrit literature. All translators consulted who share this passage take the term naga to mean "mountain." However, we believe that, given the reference to Rāvaṇa's limbs, the simile works best if we understand naga in its sense of "tree." It is also possible to understand the simile nagaprakhyaḥ as a simple descriptive adjective of Rāvaṇa, thus lending the passage the sense "Rāvaṇa, who resembled a mountain or tree, fell to the earth, his limbs exhausted." And this, in fact, is the understanding of Dutt (1894, p. 1651): "And he, resembling a mountain, with his person pierced, fell on the ground." In this he is followed by Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 457), who renders, "But Ravana, who resembled a mountain, with his person pierced, fell to the ground." On the other hand, Gorresio (1870, p. 115), who reads the unattested variant svinnagātraḥ "having sweaty limbs"—perhaps erroneously for khinnagātraḥ—translates, "Colle membra bagnate di sudore Rāvano pari ad un monte cadde allora a terra." Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 453), offers, "Ravana fell down on the earth, his body cloven like a riven mountain."

71. "just as a treacherous person might penetrate a secret" bibheda . . . rahasyaṃ piśuno yathā: The image is unusual. The idea is perhaps one of a false friend verbally worming his or her way into someone's confidence. VSP alone and reads rahasyapiśunaḥ as a compound, lending the phrase the sense "just like betrayer of secrets." This variant is not noted in the critical apparatus.

72. "of immense blazing energy" mahātejāḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead hataujās tu, "and he of diminished strength." Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 453), the only translator to render this term, translates, "crest-fallen."

"were waiting" sthitāḥ: Literally, "were standing."

Following verse 72 (= line 140, "and returned to where his ministers were waiting"), V3,T4,M3, and KK and VSP insert a passage of one line [11*]: "And ten-faced [Rāvaṇa] returned immediately to Laṅkā together with them (tair eva sahito laṅkāṃ jagāmāśu daśānanaḥ)."

[colophon]

1–3. Verses 1–3 (= lines 141–147) are found in Ś,Ñ1,2,V1,3,B,D,T4, and GPP and NSP following the critical edition's sarga 30.

1. "Then, when he had heard this, Rāma" śrutvaitat tu tato rāmaḥ: Literally, "And then, having heard this, Rāma." M3 and KK and VSP read instead śrutvaitad vacanaṃ sarvam, "having heard that entire speech."

"said" cābravīt: Literally, "and he said." M3 and KK and VSP read instead rāghavaḥ, "Rāghava."

"And the monkeys and rākṣasas . . . likewise said: "Wonderful!" te 'py āścaryam iti prāhur vānarā rākṣasās tathā: M3 and KK and VSP read instead āścaryam iti tat prāhur vānarā rākṣasaiḥ saha, "Then the monkeys together with the rākṣasas said, "Wonderful!"

2. "And righteous" ca dharmātmā: Ñ1,V1,3,B4,D1–5,9,M3, and KK and VSP read instead tu rāmasya, lending the line the sense "And Vibhīṣaṇa, standing at Rāma's side."

3. "Then Agastya said to Rāma: 'Now you have heard everything.' " agastyo 'thābravīd rāmaṃ sarvam etac chrutaṃ tvayā: M3 and KK and VSP read instead athāgastyo 'bravīt sarvam etad rāma śrutaṃ tvayā, "Now Agastya said: "All of this has been heard by you, Rāma."

"You have been seen and honored. Rāma, we shall depart." dṛṣṭaḥ sabhājitaś cāsi rāma gacchāmahe vayam: Literally, "You are seen and honored. Rāma, we are going." M3 and KK and VSP read instead dṛṣṭāḥ sabhājitāś cāpi rāma yāsyāmahe vayam, "Received[1] and honored as well, Rāma, we shall depart."

[1] "Received" dṛṣṭāḥ: Literally, "seen." This is the reading of M3 and VSP. KK reads hṛṣṭāḥ, "delighted," which is probably a typographical error. Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 453) translates, "You have received and honored us."

Following 3cd ("You have been seen and honored. Rāma, we shall depart.") M3 and KK and VSP insert a passage of one line [13*]: "Having heard that speech of his, Rāma, the foremost of those who give delight . . . (tasya tad vacanaṃ śrutvā rāmo ramayatāṃ varaḥ)."

Prakṣipta II, Sarga 1 = Appendix I, No. 3, lines 1–120

Following line 46 of Appendix I, No. 4 (see notes to the opening of sarga 37), D7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP insert, while V3 inserts following 7.35.53ab, D9 inserts following sarga 36, and T4,M3 insert following line 2, 736*, a passage of three hundred seventy-seven lines (App. I, No. 3). GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP (Gita Press omits—see footnote [1969, vol. 3, p. 2045]), read this passage, dividing it up into five prakṣipta, or interpolated, sargas. Of the translators consulted, only Dutt (1894, pp. 1693–1705), Shastri (1959, vol. 3, pp. 500–511), and Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, pp. 496–506) translate the passage following sarga 36. Lahore, too, knows these prakṣipta sargas, placing them following its sarga 39 (pp. 154–61). Among the commentators consulted, only Cs comments on the passage. According to Cs, Ct rejects the section that begins with the description of the birth of Vālin and Sugrīva and ends with Rāvaṇa's journey to Śvetadvīpa on the grounds that at the end of the previous sarga, Agastya departed for his ashram (and therefore could not be narrating this passage to Rāma). Cs rejects Ct's argument, however, because he claims that such a rash judgment is improper when one has not examined a large number of manuscripts. He claims that the passage is found in several manuscripts and that, in some of them, Agastya actually departs at the end of this passage. Therefore, Cs concludes, he has chosen (unlike most of his predecessors) to comment on the passage. (atra vālisugrīvotpattītihāso rāvaṇaśvetadvīpagamanetihāsaś ca kaiścana sargair agastyoktitayā pratipādyate. te prakṣiptāḥ pūrvasargānte 'gastyasya svāśramaṃ pratigamanakathanād iti nāgojibhaṭṭaḥ. tan na. bahupustakasaṃpuṭīm anavalokyaitat sāhasakaraṇasyāyuktatvāt. vartate ca kāsucit saṃpuṭīṣu kathitetihāsasamāptyanantaraṃ tasya svāśramagamanakathā. tasmād asmābhir vyākhyāyante.)

1. "Who was" yaḥ: The line is an unresolved relative clause without an explicit finite verb. In the context, it makes little sense. Cs glosses the relative pronoun yaḥ with the interrogative pronoun kaḥ, which he argues is meant to inquire about Ṛkṣarajas's characteristics and his parentage (yaḥ kaḥ kiṃ guṇakaḥ kasya putraḥ).

2. "And, indeed . . . O brahman, who was made the mother of Vālin and Sugrīva by him" vālisugrīvayor brahman mātā nāma ca tatkṛtā: Literally, "O brahman, the mother, indeed, of Vālin and Sugrīva, made by him." Once again, the syntax is all but incomprehensible. The translation reflects the best we can do with the reading in the critical apparatus. Printed editions available for the passage present variations but little improvement. GPP and NSP read instead vālisugrīvayoś cāpi nāmanī kena hetunā, "For [by] what reason were the names of Vālin and Sugrīva [given]?" while KK and VSP read instead vālisugrīvayor brahman mātā me nāmataḥ kutaḥ, "[Tell] me by [from] what name was the mother of Vālin and Sugrīva [known]?" Cs attempts to clarify the murky syntax by seeing Rāma as simply asking for their mother's name (nāma ca kim).

"Blessed one, you have not told me about her." bhagavan na tvayā parikīrtitā: Literally, "Blessed one, she was not named by you." D10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead bhavanaṃ sā tvayā parikīrtitā, lending the line the sense "Who was the mother that was named by you [and what was her] origin [bhavanam]?" Dutt (1894, p. 1693 understands the term bhavanam in its sense of abode or residence, while Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 500) understands, "From whence did she come?"

5. "he came to me as a guest" atithir mām upāgataḥ: D7,10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead atidharmam, "[wandering about] most righteously or piously." KK and VSP read instead atithitvam, "achieved the state of being a guest," i.e., became a guest.

6. "righteous seer . . . this very tale" kathām enām . . . /. . . dharmātmā: Literally, "this tale . . . that righteous [one]." KK and VSP read kathāṃ tv enām, "and this tale."

8. "Brahmā's" brahmaṇaḥ: KK and VSP read instead the similar brāhmī yā, "which belongs to Brahmā."

"assembly hall, a hundred leagues in breadth" sabhā . . . śatayojanā: Literally, "an assembly hall possessing a hundred yojanas."

9. "Since water had flowed" yad raso 'sravat: According to the critical apparatus, D11 reads instead yad asusravat, "which flowed or was made to flow." GPP and NSP both read, however, asusruvat, which appears to be a shared typographical error for the reading of D11, the reduplicated aorist. Dutt (1894, p. 1693—"tears trickled down"), Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 501—"a few tears fell"), and Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 496—"the teardrop that fell") all understand the phrase to refer to tears falling, which is in line with the reading of D7,10 (yad aśru sravat, "which tear flowing").

10. "was born from it" saṃbabhūva: Literally, "[a monkey] was born."

14–15. "Lord of the universe" jagatpatim: KK and VSP read instead jagadgurum, "the guru of the universe."

16. "among those parts" -khaṇḍeṣu: Literally, "among the portions [with trees]." KK and VSP read instead -ṣaṇḍeṣu, "among thickets [of trees]." This variant is not noted in the critical apparatus.

*17. "Equal in strength to Brahmā" brahman pratibalaḥ: Literally, "O brahman [i.e., Agastya], equal in strength." The reading in the critical apparatus makes little sense, as the term pratibala, "equal in strength," does not normally appear other than in compound with the noun indicating the person or thing to which someone or something is equal. We have therefore emended our text in keeping with the reading of KK and VSP, brahmapratibalaḥ. It should be noted, however, that GPP and NSP read with the critical edition.

"quickly" śīghram: KK and VSP read instead śaighyre, "in swiftness." The locative construes poorly. Presumably the sense is that the monkey is equal in strength and speed to Brahmā.

"collected" cinvan . . . cinvan: Literally, "collecting . . . collecting." KK and VSP read instead kvacit . . . cinvan, "collecting here and there."

20. "by thirst" tṛṣayā: V3,D9,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read the synonymous variant tṛṣṇayā.

22. "shaking loose his mane" calatkesaram ātmānaṃ kṛtvā: Literally, "having made himself one whose mane was shaking."

23–24. "Thinking": We have added the word in order to maintain the narrative sequence.

"spying within the lake that image, which was staring back at him" rūpaṃ cāntargataṃ tatra vīkṣya tat paśyataḥ: Literally, "having seen there the form, that had gone within, of him who was seeing or looking at that." KK and VSP read pāthasaḥ, "from the water," for paśyataḥ, "of him seeing."

"This must be the splendid lair of this evil-minded and wicked creature." tad asya duṣṭabhāvasya puṣkalaṃ kumater gṛham: Literally, "The splendid home of this one of evil mind and wicked nature." Lacking an explicit verb, the line seems syntactically disconnected and is difficult to construe. We have supplied a copula verb, reasoning that Ṛkṣarajas, thinking that an enemy lives in the lake, now prepares to enter it to fight him. Dutt (1894, p. 1694) and Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 502) both elaborately flesh out the line, translating identically, "I shall destroy the excellent abode of the vicious-souled one." T4,M2, and KK and VSP read the facilior asya duṣṭabhāvasya puṣkalaṃ kartavyo nigraho mayā. This lends the line the sense "Therefore, I must severely punish this evil creature." This reading, in turn, has been rendered by Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 497) as "I must punish his wickedness."

25. "Reflecting" saṃcintya: Literally, "having reflected." GPP and NSP both read the pronoun saḥ and the irregular gerund cintya, that is, sa cintya, "he, having thought." This reading is not found in the critical apparatus and, as before, may be a case of a shared misprint. Compare note 9 above.

26. "that . . . out of the lake . . . became a woman" tasmāt sa hradāt . . . / . . . strītvaṃ prāpa: KK and VSP read instead tasmāt sarasaḥ, "from that lake," for tasmāt sa hradāt, "that [one] from that lake." For the motif of a change of gender upon immersion in water, see Brown 1927; Penzer 1927, pp. 222–33, and R. Goldman 1993.

27. "her dark hair fell in locks" nīlakuntalamūrdhjā: Literally, "having hair consisting of dark locks." V3,D7,9,M3, and KK and VSP read instead nīlakuñcitamūrdhajā, "having dark, wavy hair.

28. "Her face had a charming smile" mugdhasasmitavaktrā: Literally, "having a charming [and] smiling face." KK and VSP read instead mugdhā sasmitavaktrā, "that charming young woman, having a smiling face."

"She . . . on the lakeshore" hradatīre ca sā: Literally, "And she on the lakeshore." KK and VSP read instead hradatīrasthitā, "She stood on the shore of the lake."

29. "disturbing the minds of everyone" sarvacittapramāthinī: Cs hastens to add "of all men (sarveṣāṃ puṃsām)."

*30. "she was like a goddess—Śrī or Umā" śriyaṃ devīm umāṃ yathā: There is simply no possible way to construe the accusatives in this sentence. We have been forced, therefore, to regard them as the nominatives that they should have been. KK and VSP read instead śrīr gīr devī umā yathā, "[she was] like a goddess, Śrī, Gīḥ [the goddess of speech] or Umā."

"there" tatra: GPP and NSP read instead tathā, "thus."

32. "in . . . place" pade: KK and VSP read instead vane, "in [that very same] forest."

33. "heavenly beauty" surasundarī: Literally, "beautiful woman of the gods."

34. "those two lords of the gods shuddered throughout their bodies like two serpents" kṣubhitasarvāṅgau surendrau pannagāv iva: The image is an odd one, but not without its appeal. B3,M3, and KK and VSP read instead surendratapanāv ubhau, "both of them, the lord of the gods [Indra] and the blazing [Sūrya]."

35. "ejaculated on her head" skannaṃ śirasi pātitam: Literally, "[by him] ejaculate was caused to fall on the head." Cs glosses "semen (retaḥ)" for "skannam (that which was ejaculated)."

"he turned back" saṃnivṛttam athābhavat: Once again, the accusative is impossible to construe properly, and again we have taken it as if it were a nominative, saṃnivṛttaḥ. By a stretch of the imagination, one might also take it adverbially with abhavat in the sense of "he was in such a way as to be withdrawn." Perhaps in an attempt to correct this reading, KK and VSP read instead saṃnivṛttamatho 'bhavat. The sequence itself is not entirely transparent. It may be understood in a similar fashion to the critical reading, with the word division being saṃnivṛttam atho 'bhavat, and thus would have to be understood in a similar manner. A possible alternative, it would appear, would be to take the sequence as a compound saṃnivṛttamathaḥ. The term mathaḥ is not found in the lexicons but may be a defective form or variant for māthaḥ, "agitation," yielding the sense "his agitation ceased." This is the idea perhaps suggested by the variant cited by the editors of KK and commented upon by Cs, nivṛttamadaḥ, "whose sexual excitement had subsided," which is an adjective modifying Indra (nivṛttamadaḥ sa indraḥ). Compare the compound nivṛttamadanaḥ, "whose passion or lust had subsided," at note to verse 39 (= line 77) below.

36. "one of infallible semen" amogharetasas tasya: Literally, "of that one of infallible semen." KK and VSP read instead amogharetastvāt tasya, "because of the fact of his being one whose semen was infallible."

"she gave birth to a lordly monkey" jajñe vānaram īśvaram: Literally, "she gave birth to a monkey lord." M3 and KK and VSP read instead prāsūta balaśālinam, "she gave birth to one endowed with strength." This reading eliminates the redundancy of the critical text.

37. "Since his seed had fallen on her hair, he was called Vālin, 'The Hairy One.'" vāleṣu patitaṃ bījaṃ vālī nāma babhūva saḥ: Literally, "The seed that fell on the hairs became he who was named Vālin ['possessing abundant hair']." The term vāla, which is a variant for bāla, can refer to the hair of any animal, particularly the hair of a tail, to the tail itself, or to hair in general. Here, however, the term vāla is clearly applied to the hair of a woman's head. Cs glosses romeṣu, "on the body hairs." Thus the punning name of the child, Vālin, can mean either "the hairy one," or "the one with a tail." Rāghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 497) translates, "the semen that fell on the hairs (tail) (of the woman became) Vāli." This translation appears to confuse the issue further. The preceding text makes it abundantly clear that Ṛkṣarajas has been transformed into a beautiful woman; therefore the term vāla, here, especially as it is plural, can hardly refer to a tail. Compare KumāSaṃ 1.48, where the mass of the hair on Pārvatī's head compels the yaks to lose their fondness for their [own] hairy tails (taṃ keśapāśaṃ prasamīkṣya kuryur vālapriyatvaṃ śithilaṃ camāryaḥ/). V3 and KK and VSP read ha, "indeed," for saḥ, "he." Compare 40ba (line 78) and notes to verse 40 below.

38. "the Sun" bhāskareṇa: Literally, "by the maker of light."

"of Kandarpa, the god of love" kandarpa-: Literally, "of Kandarpa."

"shed" niṣiktam: KK and VSP read instead tu siktam, "and [it was] shed [by the maker of light]."

"And he acted in the same way as Indra." vidhānam anuvartata: Literally, "and he imitated that method." The idea is that Sūrya acts in the same way as did Indra, that is to say, after his ejaculation he leaves without approaching the woman. D9,M3, and KK and VSP read instead vidhānam anuvartinā, "by him [the maker of light] who was imitating that activity." For vidhānam, "method or practice," Cs glosses, "the accomplishment or performance of Hari (harikḷptim)," by which compound we understand him to be referring to Indra by his epithet Hari.

39. "whose passion was spent" nivṛttamadanaḥ: Literally, "one whose passion has ceased." See verse 35 (= line 70) and notes above.

40. "When that seed had fallen on her neck, Sugrīva, 'He of the Beautiful Neck,' was born." grīvāyāṃ patite bīje sugrīvaḥ samajāyata: Literally, "When that seed had fallen on the neck, Sugrīva was born." D10,11, and GPP read patitaṃ bījam for patite bīje, lending the line the sense "The seed that fell on [her] neck became Sugrīva." Compare verse 37 (line 73) and notes above.

"they fathered those two" utpādya tau: Literally, "having produced those two." The way the critical reading is structured, the gerund utpādya can only be resolved by the phrase śakras tu tridivaṃ yayau, "And Śakra went to the highest heaven." This clearly violates the sense of the narrative, since Indra manifestly did not father both monkeys. M3 and KK and VSP resolve this problem, reading instead utpāditau, "[in this way] those two were produced."

41. "with many strands" guṇopetām: Literally, "endowed with strands or qualities."

42. "having chosen Pavana's son, Hanumān, to assist his own son Sugriva with the feats that he one day would have to perform" svasutasyaiva nirūpya pavanātmajam / kṛteṣu vyavasāyeṣu: Literally, "having selected Pavana's son with regard to the energetic acts of his very own son that needed to be done." This somewhat obscure expression is an explanation of how in the future, in connection with Rāma's search for Sītā and the war against Rāvaṇa, Pavana's son, Hanumān, will assist Sūrya's son, Sugrīva. Cs indicates this by explaining, "having chosen Pavana's son as one performing beneficial service (pavanātmajaṃ nirūpya hitakāriṇam)." M3 and KK and VSP read instead svasutasyainam, "of his own son . . . him [that son of Pavana]."

43. "the sun, maker of day" divākare: Literally, "[when] the maker of day."

"Ṛkṣarajas" saḥ: Literally, "he."

"his" tad-: KK and VSP read instead tu, "but." This reading leads to a second occurrence of the particle in the line.

44–45. "he fed his two sons" putrau . . . pāyitau tena tau: Literally, "those two sons were made to drink by him."

"mighty" balinau: M3 and KK and VSP read instead apaśyat, "he saw."

"taking them with him" gṛhya . . . tau: Literally, "having taken those two."

"returned to Brahmā" brahmaṇo 'ntikam āgamat: Literally, "he came to the vicinity of Brahmā." KK and VSP read the synonymous āgataḥ "he came," for āgamat, "he came."

47. "to the splendid city known as Kiṣkindhā" kiṣkindhāṃ nāma . . . śubhām: Literally, "to the splendid [one] named Kiṣkindhā."

48. "that . . . city . . . shall be his" sā . . . asya . . . purī: Literally, "that city of him."

"with every virtue" guṇasaṃpannā: Literally, "endowed with virtues."

"very many . . . dwell" subahūni vasanti: M3 and KK and VSP read instead bahūni nivasanti, "many reside."

49. "It is filled with many gems and with monkeys who can take on any form at will." bahuratnasamākīrṇā vānaraiḥ kāmarūpibhiḥ: Literally, "filled with many gems . . . with monkeys, who take on [any] form at will." The syntax is, again, elliptical, as it is missing a passive participle for which vānaraiḥ would be the kartṛ. We have made the compounded participle -ākīrṇā, "filled," serve this purpose.

"It is pleasant and auspicious, although inaccessible, and honored by all four of the social classes." puṇyā puṇyavatī durgā cāturvarṇyapuraskṛtā: Literally, "[It is] pleasant and auspicious, inaccessible, honored by the four social classes." D7 and KK and VSP read paṇyā paṇyavatī for puṇyā puṇyavatī, while KK and VSP read cāturvarṇyayutā sadā for cāturvarṇyapuraskṛtā, lending the line the sense "It is filled with shops with wares, [and although] inaccessible, it is always filled with the four social classes." One does not normally think of vānara society as having the same hierarchical social structure as brahmanical society; nonetheless, it is clear that there is a ruling class, whose monarchs are consecrated in the brahmanical mode. Also note that at the consecration of Sugrīva, as described at Kiṣkindhākāṇḍa sarga 25, the brahmans are said to perform the ceremony. See 4.25.26–33 and notes, where several of the commentators are quoted to the effect that the vānaras have brahmans and vedic practitioners just as humans do. Compare also Vālin's cremation ceremony as described at 4.24.13–42.

50. "That . . . beautiful city" śobhanā: Literally, "the lovely [one]."

51–52. "after you have waited upon" dṛṣṭvā: Literally, "having seen." We take the verb in its less common sense of "to tend or wait upon" (Apte s.v., meaning no. 3). M3 and KK and VSP read instead putram, "[my] son," which would lend the passage the sense "you must consecrate my son, Ṛkṣarajas, along with his sons there."

"you must summon . . . Once you have honored . . . you must consecrate my son" samāhvāya . . . / . . . saṃbhāvya . . . madīyam . . . / abhiṣecaya: Literally, "having summoned, having honored, you must consecrate the one belonging to me." As Cs notes, one must understand madīyam, "the one belonging to me," to mean "my son (matputram)." M3 and KK and VSP read the synonymous samāhūya for samāhvāya, "having summoned." KK and VSP read the synonymous abhiṣicaya for abhiṣecaya, "you must consecrate." The variant is not noted in the critical apparatus.

"on the throne of his illustrious predecessors" mahadāsane: Literally, "on the seat of the great." We follow Cs, who glosses, "on the seat of the great ones who preceded him (mahatāṃ pūrveṣām āsane)."

53. "The moment that wise monkey Ṛkṣarajas casts his eye upon those monkeys, they shall all be forever obedient to him." dṛṣṭamātrāś ca te sarve vānareṇa ca dhīmatā / asyarkṣarajaso nityaṃ bhaviṣyanti vaśānugāḥ: Literally, "And they all, merely seen by the wise monkey, will become forever obedient to the will of that Ṛkṣarajas."

54. "the lord of the tawny monkeys" taṃ hariśvaram: KK and VSP read tu, "but," for tam, "the."

*55. "he . . . established the foremost of monkeys as king" saḥ . . . vānarottamaḥ / sthāpayāmāsa rājānam: The nominative vānarottamaḥ of the critical reading is impossible to construe in this sentence. The messenger of the gods, who is the logical subject, is at no point represented as a monkey. KK and VSP read instead the expected accusative vānarottamam, and we have emended and translated accordingly. This variant is not noted in the critical apparatus.

"cave" guhām: The reference is to Kiṣkindhā, which is sometimes referred to as a cave in the Kiṣkindhākāṇḍa. See 4.19.4 and notes and 4.25.7.

"of Grandfather Brahmā" pitāmaha-: Literally, "of Pitāmaha."

56–57. "Thus" tathā: M3 and KK and VSP read instead tadā, "then."

58. "And . . . he, this very same . . . and" eṣa eṣa ca . . . caiṣa: Literally, "he and he and he." D7,9,M3, and KK and VSP read instead eva hy eṣa tu . . . caiva, "indeed, he, indeed, but . . . and indeed."

60–61. "it" tat: D7,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead tava, "to [of] you."

The verse that comprises lines 117–120 is irregular in the critical text, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP. In GPP, NSP, and the critical text it appears to be an upajāti verse with a hypermetric pāda a, while in KK and VSP pādas a and b each have twelve syllables, as one would expect to find in a vaṃśasthavila (vaṃśastha) verse, while pādas c and d have eleven syllables, as one finds in an upajāti.

Prakṣipta II, Sarga 2 = Appendix I, No. 3, lines 121–170

1. "Then" tadā: VSP and KK read instead tataḥ, "then, after that."

3–4. "I was filled with great curiosity" bṛhatkautūhalenāsmi saṃvṛta`ḥ: D10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead kautūhale cāsmin [vāsmin—D10,11] saṃvṛtaḥ, "and [I was] enveloped in great curiosity."

"How amazing to me, O twice-born brahman-seer . . . How amazing that" dvija / kiṃ citraṃ mama brahmarṣe: Literally, "O twice-born [one] . . . what an amazing thing of me O brahman-seer." Cs comments: " 'What an amazing thing.' That is to say, 'What sort of wonder?' The meaning is 'This appears as an extraordinary wonder to me.' (kiṃ citraṃ kīdṛśaṃ citram. atyadbhutam idaṃ mama bhātīty arthaḥ.)" M3 and KK and VSP read instead brahmarṣe mama kiṃ citram by transposition.

"both the lord of the gods and the blazing sun" surendratapanau: Literally, "the lord of the gods and the blazing [one]."

5. "the pot-born sage" kumbhayoniḥ: Literally, "he who has a pot for a womb." The reference, of course, is to the sage Agastya, who is narrating these tales to Rāma. See 7.2.1 and notes.

7–9. "in beauty" vapuṣā: M3 and KK and VSP read instead dadarśa, "he saw."

10. "the greatest being" pravaraḥ: Literally, "the chief or most excellent [one]."

"the wise gods" vibudhāḥ: Literally, "the wise [ones]." This is a common kenning for the gods.

11. "To whom do the twice-born brahmans . . . sacrifice?" kaṃ yajanti dvijāḥ: Literally, "to whom do the twice-born [ones] sacrifice?" KK and VSP read janāḥ, "the people," for dvijāḥ, "the twice-born [ones]," yielding the sense "to whom do the people sacrifice?" GPP reads jayanti, "they conquer," for yajanti, "they sacrifice." This reading makes no sense in the context. Although it is noted in the apparatus as belonging only to GPP, we believe that it could well be a typographical error.

12. "very illustrious seer" mahāyaśāḥ: Literally, "the one of great renown."

13. "He who sustains" yo vai bhartā: Literally, "who indeed is the supporter." The syntax demands that we read the normally nominal bhartṛ, "lord," in its fully agentive sense of "sustainer or supporter." KK and VSP read the finite bibharti, "he supports or sustains," for vai bhartā.

15. "the wise gods" vibudhāḥ: Literally, "the wise [ones]."

"being honored" mānitāḥ: KK and VSP read instead mānavāḥ, lending the final pāda the sense "and men worship him."

16. "pañcarātras" pañcarātraiḥ: KK and VSP read instead pāñcarātraiḥ.

19. "And what about those" kiṃ ca te: KK and VSP read instead ke ca te, yielding the somewhat awkward sense "And who are those?"

22–23. "by . . . lord of the triple world" trailokyanāthena: KK and VSP read instead trilokanāthena, "by the lord of the three worlds."

"to his abode" tannilayam: KK and VSP read instead tatra layam, "absorption in him [lit., 'there']."

Lines 163–166 constitute a four-lined verse in the indravajrā meter.

24–25. Lines 167–170 constitute a four-lined verse. Pāda a is in the indravajrā meter, while pādas b, c, and d are in the vaṃśasthavila (vaṃśastha) meter.

"Thinking": The participle has been added for the sake of readability.

Prakṣipta II, Sarga 3 = Appendix I, No. 3, lines 171–236

1. "Agastya continued": The words have been added for the sake of continuity and readability.

"Sanatkumāra": The sage's name has been added for clarity.

2. "What" yat tat: Literally, "what . . . that." VSP and KK read instead yat te, "what by [lit., 'of'] you."

"great-armed warrior" mahābāho: Literally, "O great-armed [one]."

3. "that great-armed warrior" mahābāhuḥ: Literally, "that great-armed [one]."

"this" evam: Literally, "thus."

4. "the words of the rākṣasa lord" rākṣaseśavacaḥ: KK and VSP read instead rākṣasasya vacaḥ, "the words of the rākṣasa."

5. "He pervades the entire triple world together with its fixed and moving contents." tena sarvam idaṃ vyāptaṃ trailokyaṃ sacarācaram. This line (line 180) is identical to line 194; see verse 12 below. KK and VSP read instead the virtually synonymous protam, "pervaded," for vyāptam, "pervaded."

6. "rivers" nadīṣu: KK and VSP read instead the redundant vaneṣu, "in the forests."

7. "the highest truth" satyam: Literally, "the truth." We understand with Cs that the reference is to the highest or absolute truth as preached in the upaniṣads. Cs quotes a line repeated four times in the Muṇḍakopaniṣad (1.2.1; 2.1.1; 2.2.2; 3.2.11), "This is that truth" (tad etat satyam iti śruteḥ). D10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead satyaḥ, "Satya or the Truthful or Existent One," a common epithet of Viṣṇu.

"the Sāvitrīmantra" sāvitrī: Literally, "the thing that refers to Savitṛ." This term refers to any vedic ṛc dedicated to the deity Savitṛ, but most especially, and undoubtedly here, the famous verse at Ṛgveda 3.62.10, more commonly known as the gāyatrī. On the Gāyatrīmantra, see Introduction, "Gāyatrīmantra," pp. 187–98, and notes to 7.1.1.

"known as Ananta" ananta iti viśrutaḥ: The context makes it clear that the reference is to the great mythological serpent Ananta or Śeṣa, on which Viṣṇu rests in the cosmic ocean and which is often regarded as supporting the earth. Cs reads the term in its etymological sense of "endless," glossing, "devoid of limitation either in space or time." Alternatively, Cs offers, "unbound or unrestricted." (anantaḥ deśataḥ kālataḥ paricchedaśūnyaḥ. abaddha iti vā.)

"who upholds the mountains, the upholders of the earth" dharādharadharaḥ: Literally, "the upholder of the upholder of the upholder." Cs understands the compound to mean "the upholder of the earth and the mountain," seeing it as a reference to Viṣṇu's incarnations as the boar (who uplifted the earth) and as Kṛṣṇa (who upheld Mount Govardhana) (varāhakṛṣṇarūpeṇa pṛthivīparvatadharaḥ). On the boar incarnation, see notes to 7.88.*6 and 7.94.5–6.

8–9. "Anila, and Anala" hy anilo 'nalaś ca: Literally, "indeed Anila and Anala." Anila is an epithet for wind, here the god of wind, and Anala is an epithet for fire, here the god of fire. KK and VSP read instead the virtually synonymous hy analaś ca vāyuḥ, "indeed Anala and Vāyu."

"He is Brahmā, Rudra, and Indra, and he is, indeed, the waters." sa brahmarudrendra sa eva cāpaḥ: There is no clear explanation other than a possible metrical consideration for the absence of the visarga from the final syllable of the compound brahmarudrendra. Cs offers two rather tenuous explanations. In the first, he reads the sequence as single word, sabrahmarudrendrasa[ḥ], "and [Viṣṇu] is accompanied by Indra, who is accompanied in turn by Brahmā and Rudra. (sabrahmarudrendrasa iti padam. brahmarudrābhyāṃ sahitaḥ sabrahmarudraḥ. sa cāsāv indraś cāsau sa cendrasaḥ.)" Alternatively, Cs proposes that there has been a substitution of the uninflected stem -indra (for the declensional form -indraḥ) (indreti prātipadikanirdeśo vā). KK and VSP read instead sa brahmarudrau ca sa eva bālaḥ, "he is Brahmā and Rudra, and he is ever young [lit., 'he is himself a child']." Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 501) the only translator to render this variant, offers, rather unhelpfully, "and He is the boy."

Lines 185–188 constitute a four-line verse in the upendravajrā meter.

10–11. "He illuminates, makes radiant, and manifests the worlds. He creates, destroys, and rules them." vidyotati jvalati bhāti lokān / sṛjaty ayaṃ saṃharati praśāsti /: The line is in the upajāti meter, which Cs notes is irregular (jvalati bhātīti lāghavam ārṣam). KK and VSP substitute the metrically anomalous half verse whose pādas consist of 12 and 13 syllables, respectively: vidyotati jvalati bhāti ca pāti / lokān sṛjaty ayaṃ saṃharati praśāsti / "He illuminates, he makes radiant, he manifests, he protects, he creates, he destroys, and he rules the worlds."

"he plays" krīḍāṃ karoti: The reference is to the notion of Viṣṇu's līlā, that is, his playful creation, maintenance, and destruction of the universe. As Cs notes, the phrase is inserted in response to the implicit question as to the purpose of Viṣṇu's involvement in the world (kiṃ proyojanam etena tasyety ata āha krīḍām iti).

"he alone is the agent of creation and destruction" bhavanāśakaikaḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead bhavanāśahetuḥ, "he is the cause of creation and destruction." Lines 189–192 constitute a four-line verse in the upajāti meter.

12. "why go on talking, ten-faced Rāvaṇa" bahunānena kim uktena daśānana: Literally, "what is [to be gained] by this much talk, O ten-faced [one]." D7,M3, and KK and VSP read the virtually synonymous bahunā tena for bahunānena, "by this much."

"He pervades the entire triple world together with its fixed and moving contents." tena sarvam idaṃ vyāptaṃ trailokyaṃ sacarācaram. This line (line 194) is identical to line 180; see verse 5 above.

13. "with his garment as yellow as a lotus filament" kiñjalkāruṇavāsasā: Literally, "with a garment as reddish or tawny as a lotus filament." Although aruṇa typically refers to a reddish color, the tradition of Viṣṇu being yellow-robed (pitāmbaraḥ) and the force of this simile compel us to take it in the sense of yellow here. Cs seems to be perturbed by the term as well, glossing it as "an indistinct color (avyaktarāgam)." KK and VSP read instead kiñjalkāruṇavastrakaḥ, "whose garment is as yellow [lit., 'reddish'] as a lotus filament."

"he resembles" yathā . . . yathā: Literally, "just like . . . just like." D9,T4, and KK and VSP read instead yathā . . . tathā, "just like . . . like that."

14. "He is splendid, and his eyes are lotuses." śubhaḥ paṅkajalocanaḥ: KK and VSP read instead paṅkajāruṇalocanaḥ, " having eyes as red as lotuses."

"he bears the hare-marked moon as his characteristic sign" śaśāṅkakṛtalakṣaṇaḥ: Literally, "having a characteristic mark made by the one whose mark is a hare." It is not clear what is meant by this. Cs understands the compound to mean that he is the one by whom—because he possessed the appearance of that [i.e., the moon]—the characteristic mark, that is, the sign, was placed on the hare-marked one [i.e., the moon]. Cs supports this interpretation with a quotation from an unknown source, describing him as having a body or appearance that is like the orb of the moon. (śaśāṅkakṛtalakṣaṇaḥ śaśāṅke kṛtaṃ lakṣaṇaṃ cihnaṃ tatsaṃsthatvādinā yena saḥ. 'śaśibimbasaṃstham' ityādeḥ.) Normally, the crescent moon is a characteristic attribute of Śiva.

15. "Success in battle always accompanies his person" saṃgrāmarūpiṇī lakṣmīr deham āvṛtya tiṣṭhati: The syntax and vocabulary are rather obscure, although we believe the meaning is relatively clear. A literal rendering would be "Lakṣmī (success or the goddess of prosperity), having the form of battle, stands, having enclosed the body." Cs glosses, "having the form of battle means primarily [concerned] with battle; lakṣmīḥ means success. (saṃgrāmarūpiṇī saṃgrāmamūlikā. lakṣmīḥ sampat.)" Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 501), perhaps following Cs, translates, "the Goddess Śrī, presiding over the destinies of battle, is ever present in His body.

16. "he upon whom he sheds his grace is worthy of seeing him" yasya prasādaṃ kurute: Literally, "for [of] whom he makes grace, he is worthy or able to see him." Cs glosses, "Of whom, i.e., upon whom, he makes grace, that entitled person is worthy to see [him]." Cs cites a passage from śruti (MuṇḍaU 3.2.3; KāṭhU 1.2.23) in justification of the text's claim of Viṣṇu's selectivity. (yasya yad upari prasādaṃ kurute so 'dhikārī taṃ draṣṭum arhati. yam evaiṣa vṛṇute tena labhya iti śruteḥ.)

17. "that one can . . . is this possible" śakyate: Literally, "it is possible."

19. "Or, having inquired, lord of the rākṣasas" athavā pṛcchya rakṣendra: Note the double sandhi of rākṣendra. M3 and KK and VSP read instead athavā rākṣasendra tvam, "or you . . . O lord of the rākṣasas."

"Listen and see if it suits you." śrūyatāṃ yadi rocate: Literally, "Listen, if it pleases." The idea, however, is not that Rāvaṇa has to listen only if it pleases him; rather, he has to decide whether Sanatkumāra's expedient, which will amount to a form of religious suicide, is agreeable to him.

20. "Kṛta Yuga . . . Tretā Yuga" kṛte yuge . . . tretāyugasya: See 7.17.31 and notes.

21. "who will then be on the earth" bhāvyaḥ . . . bhuvi: Literally, "future or yet to be on earth."

"will have a son named Rāma, who will be of immense blazing energy" tasya sūnur mahātejā rāmo nāma bhaviṣyati: Literally, of him there will a son named Rāma of immense blazing energy."

23. "at that time" tadā: B3,D9,M3, and KK and VSP read instead sadā, "always, ever."

24. "very wise" mahāmanāḥ: V3 and KK and VSP read instead the instrumental mahātmanā, "[with his] great or noble," which then modifies bhrātrā, lending the phrase the sense "together with his noble brother."

26. "the moon, maker of night" niśākaram: Literally, "the maker of night."

27. "She will be like a ray of the thousand-rayed sun and will be a unique beauty, as it were." sahasrāṃśo raśmir iva hy ekamūrtir iva sthitā: Literally, "like a ray of the thousand-rayed one, she will stand like a single form." M3 and KK and VSP read the relatively minor and synonymous variant ekamūrtiḥ for ekā mūrtiḥ, "one form." The line is fairly obscure. We understand it to contain two separate similes, referring respectively to Sītā's radiance and her beauty. The three other translators consulted attempt to combine the two similes, with unimpressive results. Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 502) renders, "She would be like a figure compounded of all the rays of the sun." Dutt (1894, p. 1699) offers, "and Sitā and Rāma shall always appear together like the rays of the sun." Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 506), who tends to follow Dutt in the absence of Roussel, offers, "Sita and Rama will always appear together as the sun and its rays."

It appears that Dutt may be following a commentator whose work we have not seen in that Cs strongly rejects this interpretation, which he attributes to "others," that the second simile suggests the non-differentiation of Rāma and Sītā, which comes about because of her being Lakṣmī and because of the power of the mind. Cs bases his argument on the fact that the word iva, "like," expresses differentiation. His idea is that Sanatkumāra is praising Sītā's beauty in order to induce Rāvaṇa to go to see her so that, at that later time, he, i.e., Rāvaṇa, will devise a way of getting [himself] slain [by Rāma]. (ekā mūrtir iva ity anena sītayā lakṣmītvena cicchaktitvād rāmeṇābhinnaiva seti keṣāṃcid āśāsanaṃ nirastam. ivena bhedasyaivokteḥ. tadā cet tatra gamiṣyasi taddarśanaṃ tava bhaviṣyati. tadānīṃ tasmād vadhopāyaṃ tvam eva cintayeti bhāvaḥ.)

29. "When . . . had heard this" evaṃ śrutvā: Literally, "having heard thus."

Following line 228, V3 and KK (in brackets as verse 28) insert a passage of two lines [2*]: "When that bull among rākṣasas had heard that speech from Sanatkumāra, he was granted leave and returned to his city after assenting to that great one." KK reads for the second line "he proceeded toward his appointed enemy, after having prostrated [himself before] the great sage (anujñātaṃ ripuṃ prāyāt praṇipatya mahāmunim)."

30. "those words of Sanatkumāra" sanatkumārād vākyam: Literally, "the words from Sanatkumāra." V3 and KK and VSP read instead vākyaṃ sanatkumārasya, "the words of Sanatkumāra."

"for the sake of battle" yuddhārtham: V3,M3, and KK and VSP read instead yuddhārthī, "[he] seeking battle."

31. "he was filled with the greatest wonder" vismayaṃ paramaṃ gataḥ: Literally, "he went to the highest amazement." KK and VSP read instead tam arthaṃ paricintayan, "reflecting on this matter."

32. "he" saḥ: KK and VSP read instead ca, "and." The variant is not noted in the critical apparatus.

"more of this ancient history" purātanam: Literally, "that which is old." We follow Cs, who adds the word vṛttāntam, "history."

The meter of lines 233–236 is faulty: pādas a and d consist of twelve syllables each, in the indravaṃśā meter, while pādas b and c each consist of eleven syllables in the upendravajrā meter.

Prakṣipta II, Sarga 4 = Appendix I, No. 3, lines 237–254

1. "the . . . pot-born sage Agastya" kumbhayoniḥ: Literally, "the pot-born one." See 7.2.1 and notes.

"Grandfather Brahmā" pitāmahaḥ: Literally, "grandfather."

"the Lord" īśvaram: The term normally applies to Śiva, and, accordingly, Cs glosses Rudra (rudraḥ). Given the tenor of this passage, which is, in fact, a stotra to Viṣṇu, the reference is probably to that divinity.

2. "And he said" covāca: V3 and KK and VSP read instead cāmantrya, "and having addressed."

3. "the immensely wise sage" mahāmatiḥ: Literally, "the immensely wise [one]."

"just as" yathā tathā: Literally, "just as . . . thus." D9,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead ca tat tathā, "and that thus."

5. "unassailable Rāma" durdharṣa: Literally, "O unassailable [one]." KK and VSP read instead mahyaṃ vai, "to me indeed." This variant is not noted in the critical apparatus.

6. "O . . . humbler of pride" mānada: The term is ambiguous, as it can also mean "bestower of honor." See 6.108.7; 6.110.6; 7.25.41; and notes.

7–8. "whose eyes were filled with joy" harṣaparyākulekṣaṇam: V3,D9,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead harṣaparyākulekṣaṇāḥ, which makes the adjective describe the seers rather than Nārada.

Prakṣipta II, Sarga 5 = Appendix I, No. 3, lines 255–377

1. "surrounded . . . wandered" paryaṭan . . . / . . . parivāritaḥ: Literally, "[he] wandering was surrounded."

"the rākṣasa" rākṣasaḥ: KK and VSP read rāvaṇaḥ for rākṣasaḥ.

"this earth" pṛthivīm imām: D7 and KK and VSP read instead pṛthivītalam, "the surface of the earth," while D10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead pṛthivītale, "on the surface of the earth."

3–4. "Rāvaṇa encountered . . . who was returning" nivartantaṃ samāsādyātha rāvaṇaḥ: Literally, "then Rāvaṇa, having encountered [Nārada], who was returning." KK and VSP read instead nivṛttaṃ tam āsasādātha nāradam, "then [Rāvaṇa] encountered Nārada, who had returned."

"like a second, many-rayed sun" aṃśumantam iva: Literally, "like the many-rayed one."

"Approaching him" tam abhisṛtya: Literally, "having approached him." KK and VSP read instead taṃ cābhisṛtya, "and having approached him."

5. "he then addressed him" uvāca . . . nāradaṃ rāvaṇas tadā: Literally, "Rāvaṇa then addressed Nārada. M3 and KK and VSP read instead uvāca . . . rāvaṇo nāradaṃ tathā, "Rāvaṇa addressed Nārada thus."

"You have visited the worlds, up to the abode of Brahmā, many times." ābrahmabhavanāl lokās tvayā dṛṣṭā hy anekaśaḥ: Literally, "The worlds have been seen by you many times, up until the abode of Brahmā." GPP and NSP read instead ābrahmabhuvanam, "up to the world of Brahmā." Dutt (1894, p. 1701) has a strange interpretation of this line. He renders Rāvaṇa's initial speech as follows: "O thou gifted with six sorts of wealth, thou hast seen many a time all creations from Brahmā down to an insect." The critical apparatus records no variants that could remotely support such a reading. Dutt's reading, however, is virtually replicated by Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 508), who renders, "O Thou gifted with the six kinds of wealth, many times thou has beheld all creation from Brahma down to an insect."

6. "In which world" kasmiṃl loke: KK reads instead asmiṃl loke, "in this world." This reading is not noted in the critical apparatus, does not appear in VSP, and is given no variants in the apparatus of KK. For these reasons, as well as the semantic difficulties with the reading, we feel that it is probably a misprint.

"illustrious seer" mahābhāga: Literally, "O illustrious [one]."

"as I may find them" yadṛcchayā: Literally, "by chance." KK and VSP read instead the somewhat redundant yathāsukham, "at my ease or pleasure."

Following line 266, M3 and KK and VSP insert a passage of one line [3*]: "Nārada, having heard the words of evil-minded Rāvaṇa (tacchrutvā nārado vākyaṃ rāvaṇasya durātmanaḥ)."

7. "Nārada" nāradaḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead mahātmā, "the great [one]."

"Near the ocean of milk, your majesty, there lies a vast continent." asti . . . mahādvīpaṃ kṣīrodasya samīpataḥ: Literally, "There is a great island or continent in the vicinity of the ocean of milk." KK and VSP read the nominative masculine singular mahādvīpaḥ for the nominative neuter singular mahādvīpam. We take the term dvīpa in its sense of "continent" because neither here nor in the Mahābhārata's more elaborate description of Śvetadvīpa and its inhabitants is this land said to be "in" the milk ocean. In the Mahābhārata (12.323.23) it is said to lie to the north of the ocean of milk. Śvetadvīpa is not named among the seven well-known continents (dvīpas), known to the geography of the purāṇas.

8. "On this continent" yatra: Literally, "where or on which." D10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead tatra, "on that or there."

9–10. "I myself have seen in Śvetadvīpa . . . men" śvetadvīpe mayā dṛṣṭā mānavāḥ: Literally, "by me men were seen in Śvetadvīpa." Cs glosses śvetadvīpe here as "in that exclusive abode of Hari (kevalaṃ harinilaye)." The idea is that, as we shall see in the coming verses, only the greatest devotees of Viṣṇu have access to the Lord's abode. See MBh 12.322–323 and 12.331ff. for two elaborate descriptions of the fantastic inhabitants of Śvetadvīpa.

"you are seeking here" tvam ihecchasi: Literally, "you desire here."

"endowed with" -samopetān: KK and VSP read instead the synonymous -samāyuktān.

11. "were these immensely powerful men born on that continent?" katham . . . jāyante tasmin dvipe mahābalāḥ: Literally, "How are the immensely powerful [ones] born on that continent?" Given the sequence of Rāvaṇa's questions, in which he first asks if the men were born on the continent and then how they came to live there, it seems best to take the indeclinable interrogative katham in its general sense of a question marker.

"Or did those great men obtain residence in Śvetadvīpa?" śvetadvīpe kathaṃ vāsaḥ prāptas tais tu mahātmabhiḥ: Literally, "And how is a residence in Śvetadvīpa obtained by those great [ones]?" KK and VSP read sumahātmabhiḥ, "by the very great [ones]," for tu mahātmabhiḥ, "and by the great [ones]."

12. "as if it were a myrobalan fruit in your hand" hastāmalakavat: The example of an āmalaka fruit in the palm of one's hand is used occasionally in the literature to illustrate something that is very clearly apparent or well known. See 154* following notes to 1.3.2, where Vālmīki, in a yogic trance, is said to be able to see Rāma's entire history as if it were an āmalaka fruit in his hand (tataḥ paśyati dharmātmā tat sarvaṃ yogam āsthitaḥ / purā yat tatra nirvṛttaṃ pāṇāv āmalakaṃ yathā /). The myrobalan tree is identified as Phyllanthus emblica, L.

13–15. "he replied" pratyuvāca ha: KK and VSP read instead pratyuvāca tam, "he replied to him."

"whose minds are never focused on any other" ananyamanaso nityam: Literally, "whose minds are constantly on none other." M3 and KK and VSP read the synonymous ananyamānasā nityam.

"whose thoughts are of him . . . whose thoughts are on him" taccittāḥ [line 281] . . . taccittāḥ [line 283]: Note the repetition of the compound.

"whose lives are always dedicated to Nārāyaṇa" tadgataprāṇāḥ narā nārāyaṇaṃ sadā" Literally, "those men whose life-breaths are gone to him [with reference to] Nārāyaṇa always." KK and VSP read śritāḥ, "have recourse to," for sadā, "always," lending the line the sense "the men, with their life-breaths gone to him, have recourse to Nārāyaṇa."

"the very great ones" sumahātmabhiḥ: Literally, "by those very great [ones] [a residence is earned]." KK and VSP read instead puṇyakartṛbhiḥ, "by those doers of meritorious or pious deeds."

16. "the Śārṅga bow" śārṅgam: The term refers to the composite type of bow made partly of horn or to a bow in general, or, as here, it serves as a proper noun, i.e., the name of Viṣṇu's great bow. See verse 44 (= lines 341–342) and notes below. See 108*, lines 3–5, and note 3, following notes to 7.6.52. See, too, 6.35.24; 6.105.14; and notes; and Emeneau 1953, pp. 80–82.

"in Triviṣṭapa, Indra's heaven" triviṣṭape: Literally, "in Triviṣṭapa." See 7.19.26 and notes. See, too, 6.90.5–7 and notes.

18. "he thought": The words have been added, as there is no indication in the text of either a quotation mark or a verb of speaking or thinking.

19–20. "filled with curiosity" kautūhalasamanvitaḥ: Cs glosses, "one who has an eagerness for the sight of an unprecedented battle (apūrvasamaradarśanakautukaḥ)."

"fond of amusements" kelikaraḥ: Literally, "maker of sport or play." We follow Cs, who glosses, "given over to play (krīḍāparaḥ)."

21. "rending" dārayan: V3,D9,M3, and KK and VSP read instead nādayan, "causing to resound."

22. "arrived" prāpya: Literally, "having reached." M3 and KK and VSP read instead the finite perfect prāpa, "he reached."

24–25. "which was so difficult to look upon" durdṛśam: Literally, "hard to see." The adjective can also be taken in the sense of "hard to attain or find."

26. "the night-roaming rākṣasas" niśācarāḥ: Literally, "the night-roaming [ones]."

27. "those night-roaming rākṣasas" kṣaṇadācaraiḥ: Literally, "by the night-roaming [ones]."

30. "One of them, smiling . . . ten-faced Rāvaṇa" ekayā sa smitaṃ kṛtvā . . . daśānanaḥ: Literally, "by one of them, who had made a smile, he the ten-faced [one]." KK and VSP read instead ekayā susmitaṃ kṛtvā, "by one of them having smiled sweetly." KK and VSP read instead sa rāvaṇaḥ, "that Rāvaṇa," for daśānanaḥ, "the ten-faced [one].

31–32. "a single man" kaṃcana: Literally, "anyone [masculine]." Cs understands, "a warrior (yoddhāram)."

33. "loudly" sasvanam: Literally, "with sound." KK and VSP read instead susvanam, "with a sweet sound."

34. "Then one of them, enraged, easily seized him as if he were a child. And, having seized ten-faced Rāvaṇa by the waist, she whirled him around in the midst of her friends." tāsām ekā tataḥ kruddhā bālavad gṛhya līlayā / bhrāmitas tu sakhīmadhye madhye gṛhya daśānanam: Literally, "Among them, one, then, enraged, having easily seized [him] like a child, having seized the ten-faced [one] at his middle, he was whirled around in the middle of the female friends." The syntax is tortured and impossible to construe properly. KK and VSP read instead the more grammatical ekayā kruddhayā tāsāṃ bālavad gṛhya līlayā / bhrāmitas tu sakhīmadhye vikṣiptaḥ sa daśānanaḥ, "By one of them who was angry, the ten-faced [one] was easily seized like a child, whirled around, and tossed into the midst of the female friends." This variant is not noted in the critical apparatus.

35. "she said": The words have been added.

"the insect I have caught" kīṭakaṃ dhṛtam: Literally, "the insect that is held."

36. "utterly dizzy" bhramalālasaḥ: Literally, "completely given over to dizziness." M3 and KK and VSP read instead śramalālasaḥ, "utterly exhausted." We understand the term lālasa here in its sense of "totally given over to." Cs, relying on the Viśvakośa, understands lālasa, "devotion or eager longing," either in its primary sense of desire, that is to say, Rāvaṇa's eager desire to be touched by the woman's hand, or thirst, in that Rāvaṇa's throat would have become dry because of his being whirled about. (bhramalālasas tatkarasparśo bhavatīty autsukyavān. bhrameṇa śuṣkakaṇṭhatayā tṛṣṇāvān iti vā. lālasas tṛṣṇātirekayoḥ. autsukye ceti viśvaḥ.)

"Then, as the powerful and wise rākṣasa was being whirled about, he bit a beautiful young woman on the hand in anger." bhrāmyamāṇena balinā rākṣasena vipaścitā / pānāv ekātha saṃdaṣṭā roṣeṇa vanitā śubhā /: Literally, "Then, by the powerful and wise rākṣasa, who was being whirled about, a beautiful woman was bitten on the hand because of anger." GPP alone reads, no doubt through a typographical error, the meaningless bhrāmyaprāṇena.

37. "She dropped that repulsive insect" muktas tayāśubhaḥ: Literally, "that repulsive [insect] was released by her." NSP, KK, and VSP read instead muktas tayā śubhaḥ, "that beautiful [insect] was released by her." Since manuscripts would not distinguish the two, there is no way to identify the correct reading.

38–39. "that night-roaming rākṣasa" niśācaraḥ: Literally, "the night-roaming [one]."

"that . . . into the waters of the ocean" so 'mbhaso madhye sāgarasya: Literally, "he [fell] in the midst of the water of the ocean." M3 and KK and VSP read instead cāmbhaso madhye sāgarasya, "and . . . into the water of the ocean." One would have thought that, perhaps, given the context, Rāvaṇa would have fallen into the ocean of milk (see verse 7 and notes above = line 268).

40. "Thus cast down, he fell into the waters of the ocean." prāpatat sāgarajale tathāsau vinipātitaḥ: KK and VSP read instead prāpatat sāgarasyaiva jale tasthau nipātitaḥ, "Thrown down, he fell into the water of the ocean and remained [there]."

41. "immediately seized . . . by the young women" yuvatībhir vigṛhyāśu: M3 and KK and VSP read instead strījanair vinigṛhyāśu, "by the womenfolk . . . having immediately been seized."

42. "when he reached" prāpya: Literally, "having reached." KK and VSP read instead vīkṣya, "[Nārada] having seen [Rāvaṇa]."

Following verse 42 (= line 338), M3 and KK (second prakṣipta, 5.43–103) and VSP (second prakṣipta, 5.43–104ab) insert, while V3 inserts following line 336, a passage of one hundred twenty-six lines [7*]. Because this is an insert to an appendix and is not translated in any edition of which we are aware and because no commentator that we have access to comments on it, we have only summarized its contents.

Rāvaṇa emerges dripping from the ocean and, upon reaching the southern shore, ponders in his amazement. He reflects that the people who defeated him fearlessly could not possibly have been women in reality. He thinks that they surely must have been the powerful men of that realm, who had been mentioned by Nārada, but who had taken on the appearance of women. Reflecting in this way, Rāvaṇa decides to return and begins to disturb the forest. Then Rāvaṇa spies Brahmā's son Sanatkumāra, foremost of yogins, who is blazing with ascetic energy like a fire with fuelwood.[1–11] Seeing that great ascetic in a cave, he approaches him respectfully and, embarrassed, questions that truthful brahman-seer. He asks him what great being has created this world and who lives in it. He also asks the omniscient Sanatkumāra to tell him what he is meditating upon.[12–19]

Thus addressed, the powerful sage, knowing what is in Rāvaṇa's mind, smilingly tells him to listen. He then tells him that he who supports the entire triple world with its fixed and moving contents, who is the soul of all beings, and the origin of whom we do not know, is he whom knowers of the vedas call the Puruṣa, who is beyond darkness. He is the unaging supreme ātman, the Lord, in the form of Āditya, the sun, of whom there is no defeat. He is Sanatkumāra's father, Grandfather Brahmā, as well as the majestic lord Bhava, born from anger, whose abode is Mount Kailāsa.[20–26] It is he upon whom the wise gods rely when they perform sacrifices and, delighted, drink the nectar of immortality, after conquering the sons of Diti. It is from his breath that those powerful women arose who had seized the undefeated Rāvaṇa and hurled him into the waters of the sea. It is he by whom the immensely powerful daityas and dānavas, together with the nairṛtas, were slain in great numbers in many forms, though they were endowed with mighty arms. It is by him, that is, Govinda, the great Lord of the world, that this world was created as a place of residence. Those who are loving toward all creatures and rely on the power of great yoga, and those who hold Nārāyaṇa as their highest refuge, always worship the lord of the world. They constantly sacrifice to him, Madhusūdana, with five sacrifices.[27–37] Those great beings, devoted solely to him, dwell in great concentration. He who is invoked in the purāṇas, the vedas, the Pāñcarātra, and in the sāṅkhyayoga is the one upon whom the sages meditate and to whom they sacrifice. He is the blessed Lord Hari, installed [in temples] by the hosts of gods and sages. He whom Rāvaṇa seeks is the slayer of Madhu and Kaiṭabha, and even Grandfather Brahmā does not truly know that divinity.[38–43] Whoever constantly contemplates Hari Nārāyaṇa, the holy sustainer of the world, will doubtless attain liberation.

Upon hearing these words of the sage, Rāvaṇa with a delighted heart once more questions him, asking how the God may be seen or heard about on earth, how he disports himself in the world, and how it may be possible to see him. He further asks how long it will take for him to enter Brahmā's world by means of asceticism.[44–51] Upon hearing this wishful speech, the eloquent sage responds by telling him everything in due order.

He tells him that Viṣṇu is the omnipresent, subtle, unmanifest, and eternal divinity by whom the entire triple world, together with its fixed and moving contents, is pervaded. He is present on earth, in the heavens, in Pātāla, in the mountains, in the forests, and in all the oceans and rivers. He is the day, the night, and both twilights. He is the sun, Yama, and the moon. He is Kāla, Varuṇa, he is Agni, and he is the leader of Brahmā, Rudra, and Indra. He is the syllable oṃ, the earth, the intermediate regions, and the heavens. He is the Gāyatrīmantra and the sandhyā rite. He is the god known as Ananta, who upholds the mountains that uphold the earth. He illuminates, he lights up, he rains upon, he blows upon, he protects, he thunders, he approaches, he glows, and he burns. He constantly creates, protects, and destroys the worlds. Overwhelming the daityas in the world, he consumes them.[52–67] He cannot be seen by the gods, asuras, or great serpents. Only those upon whom he sheds his grace are worthy of seeing him. Only those people who are absorbed in him, who devote their lives to him, who are pure and have him as their highest refuge, are able to enter into him once their sins are purged through knowledge. This realm is attainable only by those superior men of such a sort. Those gods who act without desire, who are free from anger, and whose tamas has been burned away may enter that one of immense body and this imperishable world. For there rests that great city, fashioned by Hari. In the twenty-eighth era [yuga] of Manu particularly, Rāvaṇa, having taken on a Vaiṣṇava form, will enter it.[68–77]

Sanatkumāra then tells Rāvaṇa that he will hear no more from him. He tells him to arise and depart, for he will surely attain his desired goal. Thus addressed, Rāvaṇa agrees, and, after worshiping that holy sage and after rejoining his vast army, he returns confidently to Laṅkā.

Now Nārada, having witnessed all of this in delight, proceeds swiftly to Mount Meru and enters a splendid assembly hall. After respectfully saluting Brahmā, who is seated there, he informs the gods, who are in the presence of the lotus-born Brahmā, about that extremely meritorious tale. Brahmā, who knows the past and the future, embraces Nārada and tells him that the rākṣasa was, in a previous birth, Hiraṇyakaśipu. He was invulnerable to many, as he had grown powerful through yogic practices and the gifts of boons.

Then one time, he, in his arrogance, in his assembly hall encountered Hari in the form of the man-lion. As Hiraṇyakaśipu was being torn open by the Lord's claws, there arose for him a divine eye born from contact with his blood. Therefore, Hiraṇyakaśipu saw with that divine eye his rākṣasa birth [as Rāvaṇa] and the future destruction of that rākṣasa on the part of one born as a human. Then that wretched daitya, who was on Viṣṇu's lap, his hands cupped in reverence, faintly addressed him who wore the śrīvatsa mark, as his heart was being torn out by claws.

He offered homage to Narasiṃha, that divine lion, the tips of whose mane were like burnished gold and whose eyes were like blazing fires, the touch of whose claws was like the vajra weapon. He further addressed Viṣṇu as Hari, the enemy of Kaiṭabha, the broadly striding one, and begged for salvation from him who is the Lord of the past and the future and who is loving toward those who take refuge with him.[78–101] He begged that, when in the form of a rākṣasa, he will be slain by the Lord in the form of a human, he would attain the world that consists of Viṣṇu. He thus implored the grace of the Lord of the world. Addressed in this fashion, Hari agreed and so informed the lord of the daityas before departing in a heavenly vehicle yoked to haṃsas and garlanded with fretworks of bells.

And it was he [Hiraṇyakaśipu], that great asura, who once again was born as a rākṣasa, who always acted like a rākṣasa. And, taking on yet a third form as a human, resolving to destroy the world, he [as Śiśupāla] was killed a third time by him [Kṛṣṇa] and will finally enter Śvetadvīpa, after having entered Viṣṇu's blazing energy as was foretold by that knower of brahman.[102–110]

Brahmā, too, having been present there, witnessed this with his own eyes. Brahmā, being wholly dependent on the God who is the Supreme Spirit, then says that any man who constantly recites from the beginning this holy tale told by him will go to the highest state. This supreme Vaiṣṇava tale destroys all sin, and whoever constantly listens to it will be free from sin. And he will obtain recollection of [past] lives, the status of a brahman, birth in a noble family, and omniscience. On this there can be no debate. Having thus praised Hari, the lotus-born Brahmā enters [his assembly hall]. After honoring all the gods, Lord Brahmā returns to his own world. Nārada, meanwhile, then wanders about the summit of Mount Meru, and, eager to see the twelvefold [sun], he soon comes to Agastya. Agastya salutes him properly, in accordance with the śāstras, and honors him. In order to show Agastya his favor, Nārada tells him this tale. And Agastya, too, then comes to the sacrificial assembly [of Rāma] for the sanctification [of the assembly] and with devotion tells great-armed Rāma this charming nectarlike story.[111–126]

43. "After realizing this . . . abducted" etad artham . . . / vijñāyāpahṛtā: Literally, "having realized this matter . . . [she was] abducted." We follow Cs, who glosses etad artham as "that which had been declared by the sage, that is to say, that liberation would come to one slain at Hari's hands (etad arthaṃ harihastahatasya mokṣo bhavatīti muniproktam). M3 and KK and VSP read vijñāya ca hṛtā, "and having realized [this matter] . . . [she was] taken," for vijñāyāpahṛtā, "having realized . . . [she was] abducted."

"O great-armed Rāma" mahābāho: Literally, "O great-armed [one]."

44. "whose insignia are the Śārṅga bow and the lotus. You are the wielder of the vajra" śārṅgapadmāyudho vajrī: Literally, "He who has the Śārṅga and the Padma for his weapons, the possessor of the vajra." The term āyudha, normally "weapon," must be taken here in its iconographic sense of any characteristic object or implement represented as being held by the divinity. M3 and KK and VSP read instead śārṅgapadmāyudhadharaḥ, "the bearer of the insignia of the Śārṅga and the lotus." On the Śārṅga bow, see verse 16 and notes above (line 285).

46. "thinking" yathā: Literally, "in such a way that [you realized]." M3 and KK and VSP read instead the vocative rāma, "O Rāma."

47. "the greatest of mysteries" guhyād guhyataraḥ: Literally, "you are more mysterious than what is mysterious."

"as was stated by Grandfather Brahmā" hi hy evam āha pitāmahaḥ: Literally, "For Grandfather indeed spoke thus." Note the extremely awkward repetition of the particle hi. D9,M3, and KK and VSP read, with hiatus, hi evam, "indeed thus," for hi hy evam, "for . . . indeed, thus."

48. "You are the three guṇas" triguṇaḥ: Perhaps concerned that Viṣṇu as the Supreme Puruṣa might be associated with matter (prakṛti), Cs glosses, "he who sets in motion sattva, rajas, and tamas (sattvarajastamaḥpravartakaḥ)."

"you possess the three vedas" trivedī: Cs glosses, "to be known through the Ṛg[veda], etc. (ṛgādivedyaḥ)."

"You possess the three abodes" tridhāmā: According to Dutt (1894, p. 1704), followed by Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 510), the three abodes are the regions of the gods, men, and the underworld, respectively. Compare prakṣipta II, sarga 3.6 above (= line 181), where Viṣṇu is said to reside in heaven, earth, and in the underworld, known as Pātāla. Cs glosses, "possessing the three abodes, starting with Vaikuṇṭha (vaikuṇṭhādidhāmatrayavān)."

"you encompass the three paths" tripathātmakaḥ: The reference here is most likely to the sky, the middle atmosphere, and the earth. Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 505), the only translator to engage with this term, sees it as a reference to Viṣṇu's famous three strides, but this is unlikely in light of the fact that this feat is mentioned in line 351. KK and VSP read instead tripadātmakaḥ. Because of the extreme polysemy of the word -pada-, the precise sense of the compound is difficult to determine. Several possible meanings would be redundant in this passage. We therefore believe that it is a synonym for -patha- in this compound. GPP and NSP read instead the obscure ca trirāghava, "and O you Triple-Rāghava."

"O you whose actions span the three times!" trikālakarma: The three times are, of course, the past, present, and future. The ending of the compound appears to be an irregular vocative. D9 and KK and VSP read instead the masculine singular trikālakarmā.

"O you who possess the three branches of knowledge!" traividya: Normally, the term traividya would refer to the three vedas, but in that case it would be redundant with the term trivedī in line 349 above. Dutt (1894, p. 1704), however, translates in this way. Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 505) contents himself with "the master of the three lores." Only Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 510) attempts to identify the three branches of knowledge, translating, "Thou art conversant with the science of archery, music, and medicine." M3 and KK and VSP read instead the nominative masculine singular traividyaḥ, "you possess the three branches of knowledge." Cs, who reads traividya, glosses simply "[O you who are] to be obtained by those (tatprāpya)."

"O you who crush the enemies of the thirty gods!" tridaśāripramardana: Literally, "O you who crush the enemies of the thirty." D9,11,T4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead the nominative masculine singular tridaśāripramardanaḥ, "you are the crusher of the enemies of the thirty [gods]."

49. "You traversed the three worlds" tvayākrāntās trayo lokāḥ: GPP and NSP read instead the obscure bhayākrāntās trayo lokāḥ, "The three worlds were overcome with fear."

"with your three strides of old" purāṇair vikramais tribhiḥ: Literally, "with three ancient strides."

51. "along with the hosts of his sons and his kinsmen" saputragaṇabāndhavaḥ: Literally, "together with his kinsmen and the hosts of his sons." The compound is poorly formed.

53. "O Lord" prabho: M3 and KK and VSP read instead śubhā, "virtuous or beautiful," which would then modify Sītā.

"from the surface of the earth" vasudhātalāt: M3 and KK and VSP read instead vasudhātale, "on the surface of the earth."

54–55. "carefully guarded as if she were someone's mother" yatnena māteva parirakṣitā: In this revisionist, devotional version of the story, Rāvaṇa takes pains to preserve the chastity of Sītā. For she is, as Cs notes, the mother of the universe (jagadambatvāt).

56. "Thus Nārada, in turn . . . rendered" tenāpi ca tat . . . kṛtam: Literally, "And by him as well it was done."

57. "this tale" etat: Literally, "this."

"an inexhaustible gift of food" annaṃ tad akṣayaṃ dattam: M3 and KK and VSP read instead anantam akṣayaṃ dattam, "an endless and inexhaustible gift."

59–60. "together with their ministers" sahāmātyāḥ: M3 and KK and VSP read instead mahāmātyāḥ, "[and] the great ministers."

61. "Then Agastya of immense blazing energy said this to Rāghava" tato 'gastyo mahātejā rāghavaṃ cedam abravīt: KK and VSP read instead agastyas tv abravīd rāmaṃ sarvam etac chrutaṃ tvayā, "And Agastya said to Rāma: 'You have now heard everything.' "

62. The verse (= lines 376–377) is a close variant of 7.36.46. See 7.36.46 and notes. For line 376 ("We have been seen and been honored, Rāma, and now we must go [dṛṣṭāḥ sabhājitāś cāpi rāma yāsyāmahe vayam.]"), KK and VSP read instead dṛṣṭaḥ saṃbhāṣitaś cāpi rāma gacchāmahe vayam, "[You, Rāma,] have been seen and conversed with. Now, Rāma, we must go."

"Having spoken in this fashion, all of them, duly honored, departed as they had come." evam uktvā gatāḥ sarve pūjitās te yathāgatam: KK and VSP place this line in brackets. According to the editors of KK 1913, this half line occurs in five of the manuscripts consulted for their edition (idam ardhaṃ ña, ca, cha, jha, ña, pāṭheṣu dṛśyate).

Following Prakṣipta II, sarga 5, many manuscripts and printed editions insert Appendix I, No. 4, lines 47–74 (= sarga 38 of GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP; Gorresio 7.42.1–13; and Lahore 7.40.22–35). See notes to sarga 37.

Prakṣipta III, Sarga 1 = Appendix I, No. 8, lines 303–360

Following sarga 51, Ś1(1–64),2,3 (omit 1–58), Ñ,V,B,D (8,12 omit 1–63), S (lines 307–465 are prakṣipta) insert a passage of 465 lines, Appendix I, No. 8. Shah (1975, pp. 23–24; 28–29) has presented his reasons for omitting these lines from the critical text in his introduction. On the textual considerations of these passages, see, too, Introduction, "Text," pp. 199–218, and S. Goldman 2015a. The translation of Appendix I, No. 8, lines 1–302, can be found at 7.51-1*–7.51.7*.

Appendix I, No. 8, lines 303–465, constitute the first and second sargas of the third set of the so-called prakṣipta, or interpolated passages. The third prakṣipta sarga of this third set is found at Appendix I, No. 10. T1,2,G,M1,2,4–10 omit lines 307–465, and, according to the critical apparatus (p. 618), the "commentators do not comment from line 307 to 465." Aklujkar (2000, p. 373, note 29) mentions this as well. According Mudholkar Śāstrī, the editor of GPP (1920), and repeated by Paṇśīkar, the editor of NSP (1930), the following passage—consisting of the story of the dog [lit., "the one whose mother was a dog"] and the tale of the vulture and the owl—are regarded as interpolated because they are not commented upon by Ck, Cm, etc., even though they are found in some manuscripts, and for that reason Ct also does not comment on them. (etad uttaraṃ śvamātur ākhyānaṃ gṛdhrolūkākhyānaṃ ca kvacid dṛśyate. tat tīrthakatakādyaspṛṣṭatvena prakṣiptam iti tilakakāreṇāpi na vyākhyātam.) Cs, who does comment on the passages, on the other hand, takes issue with Ct's position, arguing that the passage must be attended to just like [pilgrimage] places on the path situated along the Ganges and also because it is found in many manuscripts. Moreover, Cs notes, he comments upon them since these texts are also the words of Vālmīki. (yady api tīrthakatakādyaspṛṣṭam iti nāgojibhaṭṭena prakṣiptam iti tyaktaṃ gṛdhrolūkādyākhyānam. tathāpi vīthīpāthasāṃ tripathagāniviṣṭānāṃ yathā sevyatā tathaitasyāpīti vā bahukośeṣu darśanenaitat prakṣepaviṣaye nāgojibhaṭṭasya bhramasaṃbhavena vālmīkivākyatvād vā vyākhyāsyate.)

Appendix I, No. 8, lines 303–360 = Prakṣipta III, sarga 1. This first of the three interpolated sargas in this set is found following 7.59 in GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP and equals Gorresio 7.62 and Lahore 7.61 [= 7.51-7*; App. I, No. 8, lines 259–302].

The critical apparatus on this section is complicated to the point of opacity and appears to contain a number of mistakes. T1,2,G,M1,2,4–10 include lines 303–306 but omit lines 307–465. According to the critical apparatus, lines 303–306 have the same textual support as the previous sections of this appendix. Appendix I, No. 8, lines 303–304 = 7.60.1 in GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP; Lahore 7.61.1; and Gorresio 7.62.1. Lines 305–306 occur twice in GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP: first time = Prakṣipta I, sarga 1; second time = 7.60.2. They occur only once in Lahore (= 7.61.2) and Gorresio (= 7.62.2). See notes following 7.51-7*.22 and the opening notes to sarga 52.

1. "Then, while Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa were conversing in this fashion, the spring night came on, neither too cool nor too warm." tayoḥ saṃvadatayor evaṃ rāmalakṣmaṇayos tadā / vāsantikī niśā prāptā na śītā na ca gharmadā /: Literally, "Then, as Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa were conversing in this fashion, the spring night arrived, not cool and not giving heat." Cv, Ck, Cg, and Ct understand that the line suggests that this is a different season [than the spring season alluded to at 7.41.17 above]. Cv, Ck, and Cg explicitly note that Sītā was recovered [from Laṅkā] in the spring and was abandoned in a subsequent spring. (vāsantikī niśā prāpteti. kālāntara iti śeṣaḥ. etena vasante samānītā devī punar vasante tyakteti sūcayati—so Cg; Cv, Ck, and Ct similarly.) See 7.41.17 and note. Cv, Ck, Cg, and Ct also note that the specification of the time is to demonstrate the propriety of Rāma's acting on behalf of the seers, who will present themselves before him in the morning (idaṃ ca kālavacanam ṛṣikāryocitatvapradarśanārtham). Although not indicated in the critical apparatus to lines 303–304 of Appendix I, No. 8, these lines occur in GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP as the first two lines of sarga 52 (= 7.60.1 of GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP). The lines appear in Lahore as 7.61.2 and in Gorresio as 7.62.2. See notes to sarga 52.

2–3. "Then, in the bright dawn, Kākutstha, having completed his morning routine . . . and cognizant of his duty to the people, proceeded . . . to the audience hall" tataḥ pra- bhāte vimale kṛtvā paurvāhnikaṃ kramam [305] / abhicakrāma kākutstho darśanaṃ paurakāryavit [306] /: Literally, "Then, in the bright morning, having done the course of action appropriate to the early part of the day, Kākutstha, knowing the duty to the subjects, approached the viewing." As previously mentioned, this verse (= lines 305–306) is read twice by a number of manuscripts, including Ñ2,B2,D6,7,10,11,T1,2, as well as by GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP and the text of Cs. For correspondences in these printed editions, see the paragraph prior to note 1 above.

The phrase "having completed his morning routine (kṛtvā paurvāhnikaṃ kramam)" probably refers to Rāma's regular program of personal and religious actions, which he would perform each morning. D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead kṛtvā paurvāhnikīṃ kriyām. In this reading, the term kriyā can refer to activities in general or specifically to ritual performances. In general, translators who render this reading understand "ablutions" or "rituals." In the second occurrence of this line (see above), D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP and Cs read instead the nearly synonymous compound kṛtapaurvāhnikakriyaḥ, "he by whom the morning activities or rituals had been performed."

We follow Ct in understanding the phrase abhicakrāma . . . darśanam, "he approached the viewing," to mean that Rāma went to the place in which the populace were seen, i.e., granted audience (prajā dṛśyante yatra sthāne tatsthānaṃ darśanam abhicakrāma jagāma). Cr reads darśanam adverbially, lending the phrase the sense "Rāma proceeded in such a way that the people might see him (kākutstho rāmo darśanaṃ prajā kartṛkāvalokanaṃ yathā bhavati tathābhicakrāma)."

For line 306, abhicakrāma kākutstho darśanaṃ paurakāryavit ("Kākutstha . . . cognizant of his duty to the people, proceeded . . . to the audience hall"), GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP and Cs substitute, while Lahore (7.61.3ab) and Gorresio (7.62.3ab) insert, a passage of one line [102*]: "The king, lotus-eyed Rāma, having gone to the seat of judgment . . . (dharmāsanagato rājā rāmo rājīvalocanaḥ)." Cs, the only commentator to remark on this line, understands dharmāsana, "the dharma seat," to refer to the seat upon which, once seated, it is inappropriate to do any wrongful act. He supports this interpretation by quoting the Viśvakośa, which allows the use of dharma in the sense of nyāya, "legal judgment or proper behavior." (dharmāsanaṃ yatropaviśyānayo na yogyaḥ kartuṃ tādṛśanyāyāsanaṃ gato rāmaḥ. dharmaḥ puṇye ca nyāye ceti viśvaḥ.)

"with . . . the vaidika brahmans" brāhmaṇair nairgamaiḥ saha: The term naigama can refer to people learned in the vedic texts, merchants, or the general population of a town or country. Cs offers two explanations. The first is: "Those who know the vedas." The second is: "Those who dwell in neighboring towns." (naigamair vedajñair nikaṭavartipuṭabhedanasthair iti vā.) For a discussion of this term, see notes to 7.55.5.

4. "The assembly hall was filled" sā sabhā vṛtā: Literally, "that assembly hall was surrounded." D5,8,9, and KK and VSP read instead sā samāvṛtā, "it [the assembly hall] was completely filled [lit., 'surrounded']." In this reading, the referent sabhā, "assembly hall," must be supplied.

"interpreters of the dharmaśāstra" dharmapāṭhakaiḥ: Literally, "reciters of dharma." D5,T3,4,M3, and KK and VSP read instead dharmapāragaiḥ, "those who have reached the far shore of dharma," i.e., those who have mastered dharma[śāstra].

"with . . . tributary kings" rājabhiḥ: Literally, "with kings." These would be lesser or tributary monarchs such as the ones Rāma had dismissed at 7.37.10 and who departed at 7.38.1 above. Cs understands, "subordinate [kings] (avāntaraiḥ)."

6. "Lakṣmaṇa of auspicious marks" lakṣmaṇaṃ śubhalakṣaṇam: This is yet another example of the epic's common etymological epithets. On the use of this epithet, see notes to 7.43.2.

7–8. "And" tu: Ñ2,B1,2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead ca, "and."

"Lakṣmaṇa of auspicious marks" lakṣmaṇaḥ śubhalakṣaṇaḥ: See notes to verse 6 above.

"where he himself" svaym: Literally, "himself."

9–10. "and so no cause for grievance arose" na ca bādhā vidhīyate: Literally, "and oppression or affliction was not created."

13. "always protects" rakṣanti sma: Literally, "they protect always." D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead rakṣantīha, "they protect here," while KK and VSP read rakṣantīva, "they protect, as it were."

14. "great-armed prince" mahābāho: Literally, "O great-armed [one]."

"with the utmost devotion to that task" tatparaḥ: Literally, "having that [i.e., the people's protection] as [your] highest goal."

15. "Then, at the gateway, he saw a dog standing on its hind legs." athāpayśad dvāradeśe śvānaṃ pādadvaye sthitam: Literally, "Then, in the region of the gate, he saw a dog standing on a pair of feet." For this line (= line 332), D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead apaśyad dvāradeśe vai śvānaṃ tāvad avasthitam, "He saw a dog standing just there, right at the region of the gateway." The story of the dog is known to the Ānandarāmāyaṇa. See Aklujkar 2000, pp. 94 and 373, note 29.

16. "And seeing" dṛṣṭvā tu: Literally, "and having seen." Ś,Ñ2,D5,6,8,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead dṛṣṭvātha, "now, having seen."

17. "Speak quickly and freely." brūhi visrabdha mā ciram: Literally, "Speak, O trusting [one], let there be no delay." Ñ2,B (viśrabdha- B1,3),D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio (viśrabdha-), and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead brūhi visrabdhamānasaḥ, "having a trusting or confident mind, speak."

19. "he entered the king's residence in order to speak" vaktuṃ praviveśa nṛpālayam: B1,3,4,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead [ā-] khyātuṃ praviveśālayaṃ śubham, "he entered the lovely abode in order to tell."

20. "saying": The word has been added to provide a transition into the direct quote.

21–22. "Lakṣmaṇa's words, the" sa lakṣmaṇavacaḥ: Literally, "he [the dog] . . . the words of Lakṣmaṇa." Ñ2,B3,D6,7,10,11,T4,M3, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead lakṣmaṇasya vacaḥ, "the words of Lakṣmaṇa."

"the most degraded of creatures" yonīnām adhamāḥ: Literally, "the lowest of beings possessing a birth or a womb."

"permitted" yogyāḥ: Literally, "fit, qualified, or appropriate."

"in a temple, in a king's residence, or in the houses of the twice-born brahmans" devāgāre nṛpāgāre dvijaveśmasu vai tathā [344] /: Literally, "in a temple, in a king's residence, or in the houses of the twice-born [ones]." Following this line (= line 344), Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read verse 25ab (= line 351), "He is Vahni, the god of fire, Indra of the hundred sacrifices, Sūrya, and Varuṇa as well (vahniḥ śatakratuś caiva sūryo vai varuṇas tathā /)," for the first time, somewhat out of sequence. See verse 25 and notes below.

"I shall not be able" na . . . śakṣyāmi: KK and VSP read instead the plural na . . . śakṣyāmaḥ, "we shall not be able."

"for he is" hi saḥ: Literally, "for he." Ś,D3,7,8,10–12, and Lahore, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead nṛpaḥ, "the king or a king."

23. "creatures" -sattva-: Gorresio, KK, and VSP read instead the roughly synonymous -bhūta-, "beings."

"knows" vettā: Literally, "[he is] a knower." V2,B1,2,4,D6,7,10,11,M3, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the finite verb vetti, "he knows."

"the basis of the six strategies" ṣāḍguṇyasya padam: Literally, "the footing or foundation of the collectivity of six expedients." According to Apte (s.v. guṇa, ṣāḍguṇya), these are the expedients used by a king with respect to foreign powers: sandhi, "alliance," vigraha, "war," yāna, "expedition," sthāna or āsana, "stasis," saṃśraya, "seeking shelter," and dvaidhībhāva or dvaidha, "duplicity." The term is ubiquitous; see, for example, ManuSm 7.58, 7.167; RaghuVa 8.21; ŚiśuVa 2.26; YājñaSm 1.346; etc. See, too, AmaK 2.8.18 (sandhir nā vigraho yānam āsanaṃ dvidham āśrayaḥ). See 201* and note, following notes to 7.11.25.

24. "Kubera, the bestower of wealth" dhanadaḥ: Literally, "the giver of wealth."

25. "Vahni, the god of fire, Indra of the hundred sacrifices" vahniḥ śatakratuś caiva: Literally, "Vahni, and indeed he of a hundred sacrifices." See notes to verses 21–22 above.

"So, Saumitri Rāghava, please inform that guardian of the people." tasya tvaṃ brūhi saumitre prajāpālasya rāghava: D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead tasya tvaṃ brūhi saumitre prajāpālaḥ sa rāghavaḥ, which lends the line the sense "So, Saumitri, please inform him. For Rāghava is the guardian of the people."

26–27. "I would never dare to enter the assembly hall" praveṣṭuṃ notsahe sabhām: D7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead praveṣṭuṃ necchayāmy aham, "I do not wish to enter." Cs glosses the unusual causal verbal form icchayāmi with the simplex icchāmi, "I wish." See Whitney 1885, s.v. √iṣ, √ich.

28. "he is standing at your" tiṣṭhati te: Ñ2,D10–11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the synonymous te tiṣṭhate.

Prakṣipta III, Sarga 2 = Appendix I, No. 8, lines 361–464

2. "who had been waiting by the gate" dvāri sthitam: Literally, "[who was] standing at the gate." Given that Lakṣmaṇa had summoned the dog in the previous verse and that Rāma showed no inclination to go out, we have read the participle sthitam, "standing," as a pluperfect. Ñ2,B2,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead samāgatam, "[the dog] who had approached."

"In your desire to speak, please speak clearly" vivakṣayā sphuṭaṃ brūhi: Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead vivakṣitārthaṃ me brūhi, "tell me the matter you wish report."

3. "whose head was injured . . . who was seated there" tatrastham . . . bhinnamastakaḥ: Literally, "[Rāma who was] situated there . . . [the dog] whose head was broken."

"And as that descendant of Saramā looked upon the king, he spoke these words" taṃ tu dṛṣṭvā sa rājānaṃ sārameyo 'bravīd vacaḥ /: Literally, "And having seen the king, the descendant of Saramā spoke words." Ñ2,V2,B1,3,4,D6,7, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, and KK read tataḥ, "then," for taṃ tu, "and . . . the [king]." D10,11, and VSP omit lines 366 (taṃ tu dṛṣṭvā sa rājānaṃ sārameyo 'bravīd vacaḥ) and 367 (see notes to verse 4 below). KK reads them (in brackets, numbered as 3cd–4ab).

4. "The king alone is the creator of all creatures, and the king alone is their destroyer." rājaiva kartā bhūtānāṃ rājaiva ca vināśakaḥ /: D10,11, and VSP omit lines 366 and 367 (rājaiva kartā bhūtānāṃ rājaiva ca vināśakaḥ). See notes to verse 3 above. KK reads them (in brackets, numbered as 3cd–4ab). V2,B,D6,7, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, and KK read rāja caiva for rājaiva ca by transposition. GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read vināyakaḥ, "leader or guide," for vināśakaḥ, "destroyer."

"when all others are asleep" supteṣu: Literally, "among those who are sleeping." The phrase is elliptical.

"protects his subjects" pālayate prajāḥ: Literally, "he protects the subjects." V2,3, B2,D1,2,4–7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the synonymous parasmaipada verbal form pālayati, "he protects," for palāyate.

5. "When governance is properly carried out, the king, as protector, protects righteousness. But when the king does not offer protection, his subjects soon perish." rājā nītyāṃ sunītāyāṃ dharmaṃ rakṣati rakṣitā / yadā na pālayed rājā kṣipraṃ naśyanti vai prajāḥ /: Ñ2, D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read nītyā sunītāyā rājā, "Through governance, properly carried out, the king," for rājā nītyāṃ sunītāyāṃ, "When governance is properly carried out, the king." KK and VSP read verse 5 (= lines 369–370) following 6cd (= line 372).

6. "and the cosmic age" yugaś caiva: Ñ1,V2,B1,2,4,D1,3,4,6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the more standard neuter yugaṃ caiva.

7. "Because he sustains (dhāraṇāt), they call him dharma, 'righteousness.' And it is by dharma, 'righteousness,' that the subjects are sustained, since he sustains (dhārayate) the entire triple world together with its fixed and moving contents." dhāraṇād dharmam ity āhur dharmeṇa vidhṛtāḥ prajāḥ [373] / yasmād dhārayate sarvaṃ trailokyaṃ sacarācaram [374] /: Literally, "Because of sustaining or restraining (dhāraṇāt), they call him or it dharma, 'the sustainer or restrainer.' By dharma the subjects are maintained or restrained, since he or it sustains or restrains the entire triple world with its fixed and moving contents." The lines are ambiguous. The verbal root √dhṛ, the root from which the word dharma is derived, can mean both to maintain and to restrain. Both of these meanings are apposite for the term dharma. The particular etymology provided here can be read either as an etymology of the abstract concept dharma, "righteousness," as seen at MBh 8.48.50 and 12.110.11, or, in the present context, as an explanation of the term dharma as a metaphor for the king. Given the rhetoric of the dog's rājastuti, we, along with Dutt (1894, p. 1751) and Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 551), understand the term dharma, here, like the other generic terms, kāla, yuga, etc., (see line 372 above), as a metonym for the king. Additionally, we believe that in these lines the term is used in the sense of sustaining in contrast to its alternative meaning, "restraining," which is unambiguous in lines 375 and 376 below. Gorresio (1870, p. 198), Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 543), and Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 852) understand the line as an etymology of the abstract concept. Cs provides a subject for the verb āhuḥ, "they call," arguing that it is the vedas and the smṛtis that provide this etymology (dhāraṇād dharma ity āhuḥ śrutismṛtayaḥ).

8. "Because he restrains (dhāraṇāt) his enemies, thus pleasing his subjects through righteousness (dharmeṇa), he is called 'the restrainer' (dhāraṇam), and he is, it is certain, righteousness (dharmaḥ) itself." dhāraṇād vidviṣāṃ caiva dharmeṇārañjayan prajāḥ [375] / tasmād dhāraṇam ity uktaṃ sa dharma iti niścayaḥ [376] /: Literally, "And because of the restraining of enemies and delighting the subjects, therefore he [lit., 'it'] is called 'dhāraṇam, "restraining,"' and so it is the fixed opinion that he is dharma." Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 852), incorrectly in our opinion, continues to translate the word dhāraṇam in its previous usage of sustaining, rendering, "He sustains (even) his enemies, puts them on the right path, and delights his subjects by 'Dharma.' " Other translators consulted who render this passage understand the term here as we do (see Gorresio 1870, p. 198; Dutt 1894, p. 1751; Shastri 1959, vol. 3, p. 551; and Raghunathan 1982, vol. 3, p. 543). KK and VSP read dhāraṇād hi dviṣām, "for because of the restraining of enemies," for dhāraṇād vidviṣāṃ, "because of the restraining of enemies." The variant is not recorded in the critical apparatus." V1 and GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read yasmāt for tasmāt in line 376.

9. "This is the highest righteousness, Rāma, because it protects in this world and when one has passed on." eṣa rāma paro dharmo rakṣaṇāt pretya ceha ca: Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP transpose 9ab (= line 377) and 10cd (= line 380). See notes to verse 10 below.

10. "and honesty in all transactions" vyavahāreṣu cārjavam: The term vyavahāra has a broad range of meanings. We have taken it in its most general sense of "behavior or conduct." In this we agree with Dutt (1894, p. 1751), Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 551), and Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 852). Given the context, it can also be taken in its technical sense of a judicial proceeding. This is the sense chosen by Gorresio (1870, p. 199), who renders, "La rettitudine nelle contese giudiciali." Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 543) straddles the issue, translating, "Honesty and straightforwardness in the conducting of affairs (in dealing with justice)."

"all this, your majesty, constitutes the highest righteousness, which yields its fruit, Rāghava, after one has passed on" eṣa rājan paro dharmaḥ phalavān pretya rāghava: Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP transpose 9ab (= line 377) above and 10cd (= line 380). See notes to verse 9 above.

11. "You . . . are the highest authority" tvaṃ pramāṇaṃ pramāṇānāṃ bhāsi: Literally, "you shine forth or appear as the authority of authorities." Cs understands the phrase to mean that Rāma is the supreme authority in the form of a witness (sākṣirūpaḥ)." Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read asi, "you are," for bhāsi, "you shine or appear."

12. "You are the highest abode of all righteousness" dharmāṇāṃ tvaṃ paraṃ dhāma: Literally, "you [are] the highest abode or form of dharmas." Cs understands the phrase paraṃ dhāma to mean the principal resting place or support (mukhyāśrayaḥ).

13. "with bowed head" śirasā: Literally, "with [my] head."

"When . . . had heard those words of the dog, he" śunaḥ sa vacanaṃ śrutvā: Literally, "having heard the words of the dog." KK and VSP read instead śunakasya vacaḥ śrutvā, "having heard the speech of the dog."

14. "Speak quickly and without hesitation." brūhi visrabdha mā ciram: Literally, "Speak, O trusting one, and let there be no delay." Compare Prakṣipta III, sarga 1.17 and notes (= App. I, No. 8, line 335).

16. "Having been informed of this, please listen to what was done to me, Rāghava." idaṃ tu vijñāpya kṛtaṃ śrūyatāṃ mama rāghava /: Literally, "And having been caused to understand this, let what was done be heard from [lit., 'of'] me, Rāghava." The sentence is somewhat awkward and ambiguous. D6,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP appear to attempt a gloss on the passage, reading instead idaṃ vijñāya yat kṛtyaṃ śrūyatāṃ mama rāghava, "Having realized this, please listen to what needs to be done for me, Rāghava."

"Sarvārthasiddha" sarvārthasiddhaḥ: Literally, "perfected in every goal [of life]." According to Cs, this is the name of the offending renunciant (sarvārthasiddho nāmnā. bhikṣuḥ saṃnyāsī.) See notes to verse 18 below.

"in the brahmans' quarter" brāhmaṇāvasathe: We understand this to refer to the brahman village or agrahāra section of the city. According to Cs, the reference is to the house of a brahman (brāhmaṇagehe).

17. "although I had done him no harm" me . . . anāgasaḥ: Literally, "of me who was blameless."

18. "the latter fetched" ānītaḥ . . . tena: Literally, "[was] brought by him."

"that learned twice-born brahman Sarvārthasiddha" dvijaḥ . . . sarvārthasiddhakovidaḥ: Literally, "the twice-born [one] the learned Sarvārthasiddha." The compound sarvārthasiddhakovidaḥ is somewhat awkward. D7,10,11,T3,4,M3, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead sarvasiddhārthakovidaḥ, which transposes the elements of the proper name. Despite this transposition, Cs understands this still to be the brahman's name and reads the compound as a dvandva in the sense of "who was named Sar-vasiddhārtha, 'who had accomplished all goals,' and was learned (nāmnā sarvasiddhārthaś cāsau kovidaś ca)." See notes to verse 16 above.

"that bull among the twice-born brahmans" dvijarṣabhaḥ: Literally, "that bull among the twice-born [ones]." Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead dvijavaraḥ, "best or foremost of the twice-born [ones]."

19. "Rāma, what I may do for you" kiṃ te rāma mayā kāryam: Ñ2,B1,2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead the synonymous kiṃ te kāryaṃ mayā rāma by transposition.

20. "Indeed, what . . . you" kiṃ te hy [apakṛtam]: D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead kiṃ tavā[pakṛtam], "what [injury] to [lit., 'of'] you."

21. "Anger is an enemy with the face of a friend." krodho mitramukho ripuḥ: B4 and GPP and NSP read instead the tautologous krodho 'mitramukho ripuḥ, lending the phrase the sense "an enemy with the face of a foe."

22. "mantras one recites" japate: Literally, "he mutters or intones." Ñ,V1,3,B,1,4,D6,7, 10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead yajate, "he sacrifices."

"he burns all that up with anger" krodhena sarvaṃ dahati: Literally, "he burns all with anger." Ś,Ñ1,D8,10–12, and Lahore, GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead krodhena sarvaṃ harati, "he destroys all with anger." KK and VSP read instead krodhena vai saṃharati, "indeed, he destroys with anger."

23. "Restricting the range of his senses, one should act like a charioteer and steadfastly control the senses that are running wild like ill-disciplined horses." indriyāṇāṃ praduṣṭānāṃ hayānām iva dhāvatām [405] / kurvīta dhṛtyā sārathyaṃ saṃhṛtyendriyagocaram [406] /: Literally, "Having contracted the sphere of the senses, one should with firmness exercise the role of the charioteer for the senses, which are running like badly behaved horses." This is a somewhat awkwardly phrased version of the familiar upaniṣadic simile of the chariot. See, for example, KāṭhU 3.3–9.

24. "In thought, deed, speech, and regard, one should act for the well-being of animate creation. One should cultivate neither hatred nor attachment." manasā karmaṇā vācā cakṣuṣā samācaret [407] / śreyo lokasya carato na dveṣṭi na ca lipyate [408] /: Literally, "Through mind, action, speech, [and] sight, one should act for the well-being of the moving world. One does not hate or become attached." Again, the text restates one of the standard clichés of the spiritual literature, which is found much more eloquently articulated in the upaniṣads, the Bhagavadgītā, and the like. The literal sense of the verse is somewhat obscure, thanks particularly to the ambiguity of the participle carataḥ. We take it with Cs's second alternative to refer to the world of moving creatures. Cs's entire gloss is as follows: "One should act for the well-being of the world through mind, action, speech, and sight. Nobody hates someone who acts in this fashion. And for one's own part, one should not become tainted by sin, etc. Alternatively, one should act for the well-being of the moving world, that is to say, of [the collectivity of] living things. One who acts in this fashion hates nobody and is not tainted. (manasā karmaṇā vācā cakṣuṣā ca lokasya śreyaḥ samācaret. evaṃ carataś carantaṃ ko 'pi na dveṣṭi. svayaṃ ca pāpādinā na lipyate. yadvā carato lokasya jaṅgamasya śreyaḥ samācaret. evaṃ vartamānaḥ kamapi na dveṣṭi na lipyate ca.)"

25. "an enraged serpent" sarpo vāpi prakopitaḥ: B,D10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead sarpo vā vyāhataḥ padā, "[n]or a serpent struck with one's foot." KK (1905) and VSP read sarpo vā vyāhatas tathā, "[n]or a serpent that has been struck, as well." KK (1913) reads instead the weak and very awkward sarvo vā vyāhatas tathā, "[n]or any[one] struck as well." This reading, unattested in the critical apparatus, is almost certainly a typographical error for sarpo vā vyāhatas tathā.

"poorly disciplined" duradhiṣṭhitaḥ: D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead duranuṣṭhitaḥ, "improperly governed."

26. "Even if a person is chastised by discipline, his true nature is not brought under control. Upon investigation, the true nature of one who tries to conceal his true nature is unchanged." vinītavinayasyāpi prakṛtir na vidhīyate [411] / prakṛtiṃ gūhamānasya niścaye prakṛtir dhruvā [412] /: Again the verse and its variants are obscure and have led Cs and translators to struggle to make its intent clear. The apparent meaning is that one's true nature, here prakṛti, cannot be changed or dissimulated. In our opinion, the compound vinītavinayasya should be read as a paranipāta in the sense of "someone who has been chastised or disciplined by punishment," while the highly polysemic verb vidhīyate, which is difficult to construe in this context, should be taken in the sense of "is to be settled or under control." V3,D2,10,11, and KK and VSP read the adverb dhruvam for the adjective dhruvā. This variant must be understood as more or less synonymous with the critical reading. GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead niścayena kṛtir dhruvā, which lends 26cd (= line 412) the sense "The action or wickedness of someone who hides his true nature is truly unchanged." Interpretations vary widely. Cs understands the term vinīta in its sense of "removed or departed." Thus he understands 26ab (= line 411) to mean that the true nature of even a man from whom discipline has departed is impossible to determine because of the mischievousness of his true nature. Cs further understands 26cd to mean that at the time of making a determination, the true nature of a person who conceals his nature becomes clear. This, he claims, means that one's true nature never departs, even in the complete removal of all outward appearances, as in the case of a person wearing a disguise. (vinītavinayasya gatavinayasyāpi puṃsaḥ prakṛtir na vidhīyate vidhātum aśakyā svabhāvasyānapāyād iti bhāvaḥ. prakṛtiṃ svabhāvaṃ. gūhamānasyācchādayataḥ. niścaye nirṇayakāle dhruvaṃ prakṛtir eva spaṣṭā bhavati. veśadhārivad aupādhikasarvavilope 'pi nāpaiti prakṛtir iti bhāvaḥ.) Gorresio (1870, p. 200), who reads the variant niścayaḥ, "ascertainment," a nominative singular, for the critical edition's locative singular niścaye, "upon investigation," renders, "Non è certa ed aperta la natura dell' uom modesto ed umile: ma è certa ed aperta la rea natura e la deliberazione di colui che cerca di nascondere la sua natura." Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 552) understands, "Even the nature of one who has learnt humility cannot always be trusted; a study of the Scriptures does not alter the innate character of a man, he who conceals his nature, will reveal his true self at a given moment." Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 544) translates, "Even the man who has been subjected to discipline, is unable to get over his nature. A man may hide his true nature, but it will out." Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 853) offers, "One who has learnt discipline, even his temperament can not be changed. Even if some one conceals his (evil) nature, it is surely betrayed by his action."

27. "in the king's presence" nṛpasaṃnidhau: Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead rāmasaṃnidhau, "in the presence of Rāma."

28. "at a time when alms were not to be had" kāle vigatabhaikṣake: Literally, "at a time at which alms were gone."

29. "This" tv ayam: Literally, "And this." B1,D5,6,T3,4, and KK and VSP read instead svayam, "himself."

* "But then, it only went . . . and stood" atha . . . gacchantam . . . sthitam: As it stands, the syntax of the critical reading with its accusative participles is not construable. One alternative would be to supply a verbal participle, such as dṛṣṭvā, "having seen," which would allow one to construe the accusatives as its object. The line would have the sense "Having seen him [i.e., the dog] moving slowly and standing at the side of the road . . ." The second alternative would be to emend the critical reading to the nominative participles gacchan . . . sthitaḥ, as found in Ñ2,B2,D7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP. We have opted for the latter, in keeping with the majority of printed editions.

"in the rough area" viṣame: Our understanding is that the dog has merely shuffled off a short distance from the smooth surface of the road and that its continued proximity is what angers the brahman. GPP and NSP read instead viṣamaḥ, in which case the adjective must refer to the dog and have the sense of "mischievous or recalcitrant." Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead viṣamam, which then must serve as either the locus of the dog's motion, i.e., the dog went to the rough area and stood, or may be read adverbially as "menacingly." Gorresio (1870, p. 200), who reads the compound viṣamasthitaḥ, renders, "si fermò all'estremità della via in un sito di difficile accesso," while Dutt (1894, p. 1753) translates, "It stood fearfully on the roadside." Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 544) offers, "It . . . stopped again at the end of the street mischievously," and Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 854) renders, "it stood . . . in an odd manner." Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 552) omits the word in his translation.

31."If I am punished" śāstasya . . . me: Literally, "of me punished." B1,D2,6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead śastasya, normally, "praised," but here, doubtless, intended to be synonymous with śāstasya.

"asked . . . those" te pṛṣṭāḥ: Literally, "they [were] asked [by Rāma]." Ñ2,B1,2,D3,6,7, 10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead saṃpṛṣṭāḥ, "[were] asked."

32. "What punishment should be imposed?" daṇḍo vā ko nipātyatām: Literally, "or what rod of punishment should be caused to descend?" Ñ2,V2,B1,3,4,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, and Gita Press read instead daṇḍo vai ko 'sya pātyatām, "What punishment, indeed, should be made to fall on him?" KK and VSP read instead daṇḍo vai ko nu pātyatām, "What punishment, indeed, should be made to fall?" This variant is not noted in the critical apparatus.

33–35. "Vasiṣṭha and Atri, together with Kaśyapa" vasiṣṭhātrisakaśyapāḥ: This compound is badly formed, although its meaning is quite clear. Ñ2,V2,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead vasiṣṭhaś ca sakaśyapaḥ, "Vasiṣṭha together with Kaśyapa."

"as well as the foremost interpreters of dharma" dharmapāṭhakamukhyāś ca: V1 and KK and VSP read instead dharmapālakamukhyāś ca, "as well as the foremost among the protectors of dharma."

"the vaidika brahmans" naigamāḥ: See Prakṣipta III, sarga 1.2–3 and notes (= App. I, No. 8, line 307).

"A brahman may not be executed or punished." avadhyo brāhmaṇo 'daṇḍyaḥ: Ñ2,V2,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead avadhyo brāhmaṇo daṇḍair iti, "A brahman is not to be harmed with punishments."

36. "must be" bhavet: D1,3,4,7,10,11,T4, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead bhavān, "you," lending the line the sense "You, sir, are the god Viṣṇu, who disciplines the three worlds."

37–38. "the leadership of a kaula sect" kaulapatyam: Cs understands the position of kaulapatyam to be that of the headship of a Kaula tantric temple (devāgārādhipatyam). This appointment, given the context of the story, appears to be regarded as some a form of punishment. According to Sanderson (2006, p. 149), the first documented reference to the Kaulas as a discrete tantric tradition is from the eighth century of the common era. The Kaulas are said to have been founded by Macchandanātha, his consort, Koṅkanāmbā, and their sons. It is difficult to determine whether the present passage is older or later than that. According to the Ānandarāmāyaṇa (Aklujkar 2000, p. 93), the offender is to become the head of a Śiva temple.

39. "in Kālañjara" kālañjare: This is the name of a sacred mountain in Bundelkhand, the modern name being Kalliñjer, a place that is supposed to be well suited to the practice of pious devotion. The site is mentioned in the Mahābhārata (3.83.53–54; 3.85.15), the Matsyapurāṇa (13.31; 20.15), etc. Cs identifies this only as "a particular region or country (deśaviśeṣe)." KK and VSP read instead kaulañcare, "in Kaulañcara."

42. "You don't know the whole history." na yūyaṃ gatitattvajñāḥ: Literally, "You are not knowers of the truth of the process or course of events." The term gati here presumably refers either to the sequence of events leading to Rāma's surprising decision or to the dog's transmigrational history, which is about to be revealed. KK and VSP read instead na yūyaṃ nītitattvajñāḥ, "You are not knowers of the true nature of polity or governance."

43. "I was formerly the leader of the kaula sect there." ahaṃ kulapatis tatra āsam: Note the hiatus. Perhaps the selection of birth as a dog for the former kaula leader is based on a partial pun involving the term kauleya, "belonging to the house," a kenning for a domestic animal, usually a dog.

"during the worship of the gods and the twice-born brahmans" devadvijātipūjāyām: Literally, "at or in the worship of the gods and the twice-born [ones]."

45. "This" eṣaḥ: Ś2,V1,2,B,D5–7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead evam, "thus or in this fashion."

46. "pitiless" krūraḥ: D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead kruddhaḥ, "wrathful."

"He thinks he is wise, but he is not righteous." vidvanmānī na dhārmikaḥ: Literally, "[he is] considering [himself] wise; [he is] not righteous." D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead avidvāṃś cāpy adhārmikaḥ, "he is ignorant and unrighteous as well."

"He will consign his descendants to hell" kulāni pātayaty eva: Literally, "he causes his race or family to fall." The term kula is ambiguous in this context, as it can refer both to one's lineage and to the tantric sect referred to in this tale.

"for seven generations and seven" sapta sapta ca: Literally, "for seven and seven."

47. "under any circumstances" sarvāsv avasthāsu: Literally, "in all conditions."

"one should not undertake" na kārayet: Literally, "one should not cause [someone] to do." The context requires us to read the causal as a simplex (svārthe ṇic).

48. "So whoever desires to go to hell together with his sons, livestock, and relatives should take up a position of authority with respect to the divinities, cows, and cows and brahmans." ya icchen narakaṃ gantuṃ saputrapaśubāndhavaḥ [454] / deveṣv adhikṛtaḥ sa syād goṣu gobrāhmaṇeṣu ca [455] /: Literally, "Who wishes to go to hell along with sons, cattle, and kinsmen, he should be authorized with respect to gods, cows, and cows and brahmans." The redundant syntax of the second half of line 455 is troubling. Evidently the author is using the formulaic gobrāhmaṇa, "cows and brahmans," as a collective term for all that is respectable as apart from the actual protection of cattle per se. In any case, the evident intention is not to denigrate the priesthood or religious authority in general but to critique the practitioners of the vāmamārgīya rites. See S. Goldman 2015b. Ñ2,D6,7,9–11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead yam icchen narakaṃ netuṃ saputrapaśubāndhavam / deveṣv adhiṣṭhitaṃ kuryād goṣu taṃ [ca—D6,9, KK, VSP] brāhmaṇeṣu ca /, "Whomever one wishes to send to hell together with his sons, livestock, and kinsmen, one should establish him in authority with respect to the divinities, cows, and brahmans."

49. "Moreover, whoever misappropriates donations—the property of brahmans, the wealth belonging to the divinities, and the wealth of women and children—perishes along with his sacrificial offerings." brahmasvaṃ devadravyaṃ ca strīṇāṃ bāladhanaṃ ca yat [456] / dattaṃ harati yo bhūya iṣṭaiḥ saha vinaśyati [457] /: The exact sense of the passage is somewhat ambiguous. Our understanding is that the malfeasance referred to here is that of the priest or head of a temple or religious institution who misappropriates or embezzles charitable donations intended for the support of the gods (i.e., for the institution itself), brahmans, women, and children (presumably widows and orphans). The author of such misappropriation goes to hell, and his religious offerings are in vain. In this interpretation we are in agreement with Gorresio (1870, p. 202), who renders, "Colui che riprende la sostanza che ha donato ai Brahmani, ai Devi, alle donne, ed ai fanciulli, pere insieme coi sacrifizi." Dutt (1894, p. 1754) translates, "For all his good actions, he is slain who steals the wealth of a Brahmana, a deity, a woman, and a boy, and the riches given away by him." Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 533) paraphrases the lines and conflates them with the following two lines, offering, "O Raghava, he perishes who deprives the brahmins, women, or children of their legitimate possessions: one who misappropriates the offerings of the brahmins or the Gods, goes to the lowest hell." Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 545), taking the term iṣṭa, "sacrificial offering," in its sense of the homophone "desired or cherished," renders, "He who appropriates the property of a Brahmana, of the gods, of women and children, and the snatching of what he himself has given, perishes along with all those to whom he is attached." Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 855) understands somewhat similarly to Raghunathan and translates, "One who takes away the property of the Brāhmaṇas, gods, women and children, and takes back again what has been given away in charity, perishes along with one's all [sic] dear ones." V3,D1,3–5,7,10,11,M3, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read the more or less synonymous devatādravyam, "the wealth of the divinities," for devadravyaṃ ca, "and the wealth of the divinities."

50. "the . . . hell known as Vīci" narake vīcisaṃjñake: The name of the hell can be either "Vīci" or "Avīci." The sandhi here makes it impossible to determine which of the two is intended. A hell known as Avīci is mentioned more widely in the Hindu and Buddhist literature. See, for example, YājñaSm 3.224; Viṣṇusmṛti 43.9; LiṅgaP 1.53.45; Bodhicāryāvatāra 4.21; 5.2; 6.120; 8.107; etc. Dutt (1894, p. 1754), Gorresio (1870, p. 202), and Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 545) understand "Vīci," while Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 855) offers "Avīci." Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 553) does not mention a specific name, rendering merely, "the lowest hell." Ś,B2,D2,3,8,9,12, and KK and VSP read instead the synonymous narake vīcisaṃjñite.

Both Gorresio (1870, p. 328, note 79) and Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 553) offer notes commenting on the passage and its meaning either here (Shastri) or following 5cd (= line 461) (Gorresio). Gorresio notes that the precise sense of the idea expressed in the dog's closing remarks is not as clear and open as it might be. This, he says, has led him to suspect that the text might have been altered. He concludes his note by saying that he has attempted on the basis of the remainder of the passage to interpret with somewhat greater clarity. Shastri, in his note, remarks, "This story seems to imply that if a man is appointed to a position of authority and does not discharge his responsibilities faithfully, he is in grave danger in future incarnations."

51. "who . . . abuses . . . or" vā hinasti yaḥ: V2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead haret tu yaḥ, "and who would appropriate."

"falls" patate saḥ: D9–11, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead pataty eva, "he, indeed, falls."

52. "After Rāma . . . had heard this" etac chrutvā tu rāmo vai: Ñ2,B1,2,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead tac chrutvā vacanaṃ rāmaḥ, "when Rāma had heard this speech."

53. "And that wise . . . who had been defiled only by reason of his species because of his previous birth" manasvī pūrvajātyā sa jātimātro 'padūṣitaḥ: Our understanding is that the term manasvin, "wise, high-minded," refers, like the other positive epithets, such as mahātejāḥ and mahābhāgaḥ, to the dog in his present incarnation, despite his degraded species, to which he had been condemned by his evil prior incarnation as a kaulādhipati. Dutt (1894, p. 1754), Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 554), and Gita Press (1998, vol. 2, p. 855), however, understand the positive epithet manasvin to refer only to the previous birth of the dog. Thus, Dutt offers, "In its pristine birth the dog was high-minded—it is now cursed for being born in a degraded state of existence," while Shastri renders, "In its former birth it had been high-minded but was born in a degraded state in that existence." Gita Press understands similarly. Gorresio (1870, p. 202) and Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 545) share our view. Gorresio translates, "Macchiato solo dal presente suo nascimento," while Raghunathan renders, "he who was debased only by the body into which he had been condemned to hire [sic?]."

"then fasted to death" prāyaṃ copāviśat tadā: Literally, "and then he entered fast unto death." Ñ2,V2,B2,4,D7,10,11,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, Gita Press, KK, and VSP read instead prāyaṃ copāviveśa ha, "and he entered a fast unto death."

Prakṣipta III, Sarga 3 = Appendix I, No. 10, lines 1–134

Following Appendix I, No. 8, Ñ2,B1,2,4,D6,7,10,11, and Lahore, Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP insert, while Ś,Ñ1,V,B3,D1–5,8,9,12,T3,4 (following line 14),M3 (following line 8) insert, following line 9 of 1127* (following 7.67.5), a passage of one hundred thirty-four lines [App. I, No. 10].

Prakṣipta III, sarga 3 (= App. I, No. 10, lines 1–134): This is the third of three interpolated sargas found following 7.59 of GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP and equals Lahore 7.63 and Gorresio 7.64. Gita Press omits this passage. The story of the owl and the vulture is found virtually verbatim at Padmapurāṇa (ĀnSS) 5(Sṛṣṭikhaṇḍa).34.62–129ab.

1–2. "on a splendid mountain" girivare: Gorresio (1870, p. 202) appears to read the compound as a bahuvrīhi, modifying vanoddeśe, translating, "sparso di bei colli." Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 546) also seems to read the compound as a bahuvrīhi, but it is hard to see how his translation, "as young as the great mountain," is derived from the text (or any recorded variants) or, indeed, what it can actually mean.

"adorned with hundreds of kokilas" kokilāśatamaṇḍite: Literally, "adorned with hundreds of female kokilas." The kokila or koel (koyal) is identified as the Eudynamys scolopaceus. Although a member of the Cuculiformes, it is commonly compared with the nightingale for its mellifluous call. It is not clear why the compound appears to name the female kokilas only, as it is the loud call of the male that is one of the most characteristic and widely referenced features of the species, with the females making only a shrill "kik-kik-kik" call. Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read kokilānekakūjite, "[filled with the] warbling of many [male] kokilas." Cs glosses the first part of the compound as a paranipāta, "the large number of kokilas [should be read as] many kokilas, [filled with] warbling by them (kokilāneke 'nekakokilās taiḥ kūjite)."

"resounding with the cries of various birds, filled with various wild animals" nānāpakṣiravodghuṣṭe nānāmṛgasamākule [3] /: Ñ2,V2,B1,2,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP omit line 3.

"dwelt" pravasataḥ: Literally, "those two dwelt abroad." The use of the verb √vas here with the upasarga pra, whose sense is almost invariably "to be away from home or exiled," is unusual. Cs glosses the expected vasataḥ, "those two dwelt." For some reason, Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 554) adds the phrase "near the City of Ayodhya," although nothing in the text or its variants specifies this.

"for many, many years" bahūn varṣagaṇān: Literally, "for many multitudes of years." Ś,Ñ2,V1,B2,D6–12, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead the synonymous compound bahuvarṣagaṇān. Compare notes to verse 44 below.

4–5. "Impatient" amarṣitau: Cs glosses, "unable to bear each other (parasparāsahiṣṇū)."

"formed this firm resolution" iti kṛtvā matiṃ tāṃ tu . . . suniścitām: Literally, "having thus made that well-resolved determination." Ñ2,B2,4,D6,7, and KK and VSP read tau,

"those two," for tām, "that." This then construes with gṛdhrolūkau, "the vulture and the owl," in verse 5cd (= line 11).

8. "You . . . know the past and the future of all beings" parāvarajño bhūtānām: Literally, "[You] know the highest and lowest or the earlier and later of beings." Dutt (1894, p. 1755) translates, "Thou art cognisant of the good and bad conditions of creatures." Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 554) renders, "Thou art conversant with the good and evil karma of all creatures." Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 546) offers, "you know everything (all that is good and bad) about all creatures." Gorresio (1870, p. 203), who reads lokānām, "of the worlds or people," for bhūtānām, "of beings," translates, "tu conosci le cause e gli effetti delle cose mondiali." Cs is silent.

9. "You are as impossible to gaze upon as the sun and are like the Himalayas in weightiness. You are like the ocean in profundity and are equal to the guardians of the world." durnirīkṣyo yathā sūryo himavāṃś caiva gaurave [18] / sāgaraś cāsi gāmbhīrye lokapālasamo hy asi [19] /: Literally, "You are impossible to look upon like the sun, and, indeed, the Himalayas in weightiness, and you are the ocean in profundity; for you are the equal of the guardians of the world." D10,11, and GPP and NSP read sāgaraś caiva, "and indeed the ocean," for sāgaraś cāsi, "and you are the ocean." Ñ2,B3,D6,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read lokapālo yamaḥ, "[you are] the world guardian, Yama," for lokapālasamaḥ, "equal of the guardians of the world."

10. "endowed with magnanimity" sattvasaṃpannaḥ: The term sattva is highly polysemic, with meanings including virtue, purity, wisdom, moral or physical strength, courage, etc. Any of these meanings would be appropriate in this context, but we have chosen magnanimity, as it seems particularly appropriate because the speaker is a petitioner for a favorable judgment. In this we are in agreement with Gorresio (1870, p. 203), the only other translator to render this reading, translating, "generoso." Ś,V1,3,B3,D1,3,4,6–8,10–12,T3,4, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead sarvasaṃpannaḥ, "endowed with all [virtues?]." Of translators who share this reading, Dutt (1894, p. 1755) translates, "gifted with all sorts of wealth," Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 554) renders, "endowed with a every kind of wealth," and Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 546) offers, "possessed of opulence."

12. "by my own efforts" bāhuvīryeṇa: Literally, "by the strength of arms." Since birds conspicuously lack arms, we have chosen to paraphrase.

13–14. "An ordinary king" nṛpaḥ: Literally, "a king." We have added the term "ordinary" to highlight the distinction being made here between ordinary kings, who partake of both divinity and humanity, and Rāma, who is said to be like the Supreme Lord Nārāyaṇa, who consists of all divinities.

"from Soma, Indra of the hundred sacrifices . . . Kubera the bestower of wealth" somāc chatakratoḥ . . . dhanadāt: Literally, "from Soma, from the one of a hundred sacrifices, [and] from the bestower of wealth."

"and" vā: The word vā may be used here either as a simple conjunction, in the sense of "and," in keeping with the standard model that regards a king as made up of portions of all the lokapālas, "world guardian divinities," or, disjunctively, in the sense of "or" to distinguish kings who may incarnate as one particular divinity from Rāma, who is explicitly said to consist of all divinities.

"consisting of all of the divinities" sarvamayaḥ: Literally, "consisting of all." Cs glosses, "foremost of all (sarvapradhānaḥ)."

15. "And your benevolence" yā ca te saumyatā: Literally, "and which benevolence is yours." The relative clause is unresolved. GPP (p. 2948, second prakṣipta passage, verse 15) erroneously prints the three syllables together as if they constituted the verbal form yācate.

"you act correctly" samyak carasi: D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead samaṃ carasi, "you act impartially or equally."

"you, sir, are, by virtue of that, a portion of Soma" tena somāṃśako bhavān: The connection with soma, "the moon," is derived from Rāma's benevolence (saumyatā).

16. "In your use of treasure" kośe: Literally, "in treasure." B1,2,D6,7,10, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead krodhe, "in anger."

17. "you are similar to Anala, god of fire" analopamaḥ: Literally, "[you are] comparable to Anala."

"You . . . burn up sins" tapase pāpān: Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead tapase lokān, lending the phrase the sense "You shine on or burn up the worlds."

18. "Śrī, the bearer of the lotus, upon whom all wealth depends" vittāyattā sapadmā śrīḥ: The meaning of the passage is obscure, as the literal meaning of the compound vittāyattā would be "dependent on wealth." But this would appear to be the opposite of what the owl is trying to say. We therefore read the compound as a paranipāta, āyattavittā, "on whom wealth is dependent." B3,6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead vitteśasyeva (-aiva—KK, VSP) padmā śrīḥ, which lends the line the sense "For the lord of wealth's good fortune, Padmā, ever belongs to you, foremost of kings." This is more or less the interpretation of Cs, who glosses "wealth (saṃpat)" for śrīḥ. He also takes padmā as an epithet of Ramā or Lakṣmī. He thus understands the line to mean that Rāma is superior to Kubera because Lakṣmī is never separated from him, that is, Rāma, and thus śrīḥ, "prosperity or good fortune," belongs to or is dependent upon him. (padmā ramā. yathā nityāviyuktā tvayā tathā śrīḥ saṃpad api. te tvayā. tvadadhinā vā.) Gorresio (1870, pp. 203–4), the only translator to fully render the pāda, offers, "in te risiede di continuo siccome nel signor dei tesori Sri Padmâ (la Dea della fortuna del color del loto)."

19. "through the treasure of Kubera, the bestower of wealth" dhanadasya tu kośena: Literally, "and through the treasure of the bestower of wealth." D6,10,11, and KK and VSP read kopena, "with anger," for kośena, "through the treasure," giving the passage a somewhat obscure sense. Cs struggles with the reading, offering two equally unconvincing alternatives. According to the first, the people, reflecting on the maxim—"since there is honey in the flower of the [nearby] arka tree, why should one journey to the mountains?"—rely on the liberality of the earthly bestower of wealth (i.e., Rāma) [and neglect] the distant Kubera. This makes the latter angry. Alternatively, Cs suggests that it is because of anger at Kubera that Rāma must act [in his place]. (dhanadasya kopena. arke cen madhu vindeta kim arthaṃ parvataṃ vrajed ity ukter bhūmāv eva bhavān dhanada iti dūrasthe kubere roṣeṇa no 'smābhiḥ kṛta iti bhāvaḥ. dhanadasyopari kopeneti vā.) GPP and NSP read kāryeṇa, "occupation, duty, or function," for kośena. For some reason, both Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 555) and Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 547) omit the line entirely from their respective translations, although there is no textual support for doing so. Only Gorresio (1870, p. 204), who reads with the slight orthographic variant koṣeṇa, translates the line, rendering, "e per lo tesoro che tu dispensi come il Datore di ricchezze, tu sei a noi Kuvera."

20. "And you look impartially" ca te dṛṣṭiḥ samatāṃ yāti: Literally, "And your eye goes to equality."

"due process of law" vyavahāravidhikramāt: Literally, "because of the sequence of the rules of jurisprudence." D2,7,10,11,T3, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead the more or less synonymous vyavahāre vidhikramāt. Cs glosses this variant as "according to the rules set forth for the various stages of life, social classes, etc. (tattadāśramavarṇādyupadiṣṭavidhyanusārāt)."

21. "Death rushes upon him who arouses your anger" yasya ruṣyasi . . . mṛtyus tasyābhidhāvati: Literally, "Death runs toward him at whom you are angry." D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read tasya mṛtyur vidhāvati, "Death runs toward him," for mṛtyus tasyābhidhāvati, "Death rushes upon him." KK (1913) reads instead yasya kṛṣyasi, "whom you drag," which in turn is read as the causative karṣayasi, "whom you torment," by Cs. This variant is not noted in the critical apparatus.

"your majesty" rājan: Ñ2,V2,B,D6,7,10,11,T4, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead rāma, "Rāma."

"of immense valor" uruvikramaḥ: Ñ2,D6,7,11, and KK and VSP read instead ativikramaḥ, "of extreme valor," while V2,B2–4,D10, and GPP and NSP read instead abhivikramaḥ, "valorous."

22. "filled with compassion for all" sarveṣu kṛpayānvitaḥ: V2,B1,2,4,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead sattveṣu [satveṣu—KK] kṣamayānvitaḥ, "endowed with forbearance for creatures." Cs, who reads satveṣu with KK, glosses, "among living beings (prāṇiṣu)." VSP reads jātiṣu, "in regard to [all] classes [of beings]," for sarveṣu, "in regard to all." The critical apparatus ascribes this variant to KK, but our editions do not record it. Cs understands these lines to refer to the compassionate nature of Viṣṇu's earthly incarnation as the human Rāma, who, as a king, judges through compassion rather than strictly by actions [karma] (ānṛśaṃsyapara iti bhavato 'yaṃ mānuṣo bhāvaḥ. na tu karmāyattaḥ. karuṇāpāravaśyena rājatayā dharaṇāv avataraṇam iti bhāvaḥ.)

23. "He must be the eyes of the sightless" acakṣuṣo bhavec cakṣuḥ: Literally, "he should be the sight of the sightless." Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead acakṣuṣottamaṃ cakṣuḥ. This would appear to be an irregular sandhi, as noted by Cs, for acakṣuruttamam, or, as Cs offers as an alternative, one can take uttamam as a separate word [also with irregular sandhi], acakṣuṣa uttamaṃ cakṣuḥ, "the supreme eye of the sightless." (acakṣuṣaś cakṣūrahitasya cakṣus tatsthānīyaḥ. sandhir ārṣaḥ. uttamam iti vā padam.)

"and the refuge of the one who has no refuge" agateś ca gatir bhavet: D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead agateḥ sa gatir bhavān, "you, sir, are the refuge of the one without a refuge."

24. "having invaded my home" mamālayaṃ praviṣṭaḥ: Literally, "entered my abode." Ś2,3,Ñ2,B1,3,D8,12, and Lahore, KK, and VSP read instead the virtually synonymous māmālayapraviṣṭaḥ.

25. "you are the chastiser of gods and men" tvam . . . devamanuṣyeṣu śāstā: B3,4,D2, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead tvam . . . deva manuṣeṣu śāstā, "O god, you are the chastiser of men." Of the translators that read this variant, Dutt (1894, p. 1756) translates, "divine chastiser of mankind," while Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 555) renders, "Thou . . . art the divine chastiser of creatures!" and Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 547) offers, "You, O Lord . . . are the chastiser of the erring."

26–27. "Dhṛṣṭi, Jayanta, Vijaya, Siddhārtha, Rāṣṭravardhana, Aśoka, Dharmapāla, and immensely powerful Sumantra" dhṛṣṭir jayanto vijayaḥ siddhārtho rāṣṭravardhanaḥ [52] / aśoko dharmapālaś ca sumantraś ca mahābalaḥ [53] /: This list of the eight ministers of Rāma and Daśaratha is similar, but not identical, to the list given at 1.7.2 and at Yuddhakāṇḍa 3556* (following notes to 6.115.8 and 3555*). It differs in substituting the names Rāṣṭravardhana and Dharmapāla, respectively, for the earlier lists' Arthasādhaka and Mantrapāla. KK and VSP read sacivaḥ sumahābalaḥ, "the immensely powerful minister," for sumantraś ca mahābalaḥ, "immensely powerful Sumantra." This reading reduces the traditional list of eight to seven by making the phrase sacivaḥ sumahābalaḥ refer to the last-mentioned minister, Dharmapāla. Alternatively, one could take the phrase as a reference to Sumantra, who is not specifically named (i.e., "and the immensely powerful minister"). Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 547) takes the phrase to be the proper name of an eighth minister, translating, "and the minister Sumahābala."

"Those great men" mahātmānaḥ: Literally, "the great [ones]."

28–29. "he" saḥ: Ñ1,D10,11, and GPP and NSP read instead ca, "and."

"modest . . . and" hrīmantaś ca: KK and VSP read instead prītimantaḥ, "affectionate or kind." This variant is not noted in the critical apparatus.

"descended from the flying palace Puṣpaka" puṣpakād avarūhya: Literally, "having descended from the Puṣpaka." D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead the synonymous puṣpakād avatīrya. There has been no prior reference in this or the preceding passages to Rāma's being in the Puṣpakavimāna. Either the author is homologizing the fabulous flying palace with Rāma's regular palace in Ayodhyā or he understands that Rāma has now gone out to the forest in the flying palace to investigate the situation on the ground.

"have you made this your home" tvayā nilayaṃ kṛtam: Ñ2,V1,B,D1,4,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read the contextually synonymous tava, "by [lit., 'of'] you," for tvayā, "by you."

30. "the legal basis" kāraṇam: As this is a judicial proceeding, we take the term in its sense of "the basis upon which a legal judgment is founded." See Apte (s.v. kāraṇam, meaning no. 11) and Olivelle 2015 (s.v.).

"he addressed" bhāṣate . . . sma: V3,B1,2,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead bhāṣate . . . saḥ, "he addresses," substituting the pronoun saḥ, "he," for the past tense marker sma.

31. "populated" āvṛtā: Literally, "covered or filled with."

34. The meter of verse 34 [= lines 67–70] is upajāti.

35. "having gone to the assembly hall" sabhāṃ gatvā: Ñ2,D7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead sadā jñātvā, "always having known [the answer]." This lends the passage the sense "Those members of the assembly who, although knowing, never speak . . ."

"are all no different from those who speak falsehoods" te sarve 'nṛtavādinaḥ: Literally, "they are all speakers of untruth." As Cs notes, the idea is that, even though they say nothing, they are speakers of falsehood in the sense that they receive the same consequences as those who actually tell lies (te 'vādino 'py anṛtavādino mithyākathakaphalabhājaḥ).

36. "who knows the answer to a question" jānan . . . praśnān: Literally, "knowing questions." We follow Cs, who glosses, "knowing how to answer questions (praśnān uttarayituṃ jānan)."

"out of greed" kāmāt: Literally, "out of desire." Here we also follow Cs, who glosses, "out of covetousness of wealth (dravyalobhāt)."

40. "Those . . . never come to a bad end" na te gacchanti durgatim: Literally, "they do not go to misfortune or hell." Ñ2,V2,B1,3,4,D1,4,10,11,T3, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read te na for na te by transposition.

"men who have a king to govern them" śāstā rājā nṛṇāṃ yeṣām: Literally, "of those men of whom the king is the ruler." Ñ2,V2,B,D6,7,10,11,T4, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead the synonymous śāstā nṛṇāṃ nṛpo yeṣām.

"Instead, spared by Vaivasvata, they become the foremost among men." vaivasvatena muktās tu bhavanti puruṣottamāḥ: One could also translate, "But those foremost among men are released by Vaivasvata." Vaivasvata is a common patronymic for Yama, the god of death. The precise meaning of this line is unclear. We follow Cs, who glosses, "abandoned by Yama (yamatyaktāḥ)." Presumably they are spared from death. Those translators who render the line struggle with it. Gorresio (1870, p. 205) renders, "ma fatti liberi da Vaivasvata diventano sovrani fra gli uomini." Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 556) offers the opaque, "they are saved from hell and expand in virtue." Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 548) translates, "When they are liberated by Vaivasvata (Yama), they become (one with) the Supreme Spirit."

42. "In the beginning" tadā: Literally, "Then." Given the context, the adverb must be taken in the sense of in illo tempore.

"and the earth, together with its mountains and vast forests" saparvatamahāvanā: Literally, "together with its mountains and great forests." The reference must be to the earth.

"was all just a great ocean of water" salilārṇavasaṃbhūtam: Literally, "had become an ocean of water." D6,7,9–11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead salilārṇavasaṃpūrṇam, "was filled with an ocean of water."

43. "It was all joined as one, like a second Mount Meru." eka eva tadā hy āsīd yukto merur ivāparaḥ [87] /: Literally, "Then it was just one, joined like a second Meru." The sense of the simile is rather obscure. It is unclear why the primordial ocean is compared to Mount Meru unless the common quality is simply vastness. Cs is silent. Gorresio (1870, p. 205), whose text (7.64.41), along with B1, reads: eka eva tadā hy āsīd supto merur ivāparaḥ, "It was then just one, like a sleeping Mount Meru," renders, "Era solo allora e addormentato, pari al Meru." He reads the phrase with the following line (= line 88), as referring to Brahmā. Dutt (1894, p. 1757) also reads the line with what follows, translating, "At that time only Nārāyaṇa existed as the second Sumeru." This, however, is far from persuasive. Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 556), clearly influenced by Dutt, offers, "At that time, Narayana existed as a second Sumeru." Given the critical text and its variants, there is little support for construing this line with what follows. Only Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 548) understands the syntax as we do, rendering, "was in the far past an undifferentiated unity: it was like another Meru, in fact."

"Then the earth" punar bhūḥ: Literally, "once again, the earth." V2,Ñ2,B2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read purā, "long ago," for punaḥ, "once again." Gorresio (1870, p. 205), whose text reads punar bhūḥ with the critical edition, mistakenly takes the sequence as a proper noun, rendering, "Punarbhu," which he takes to be the subject of both the preceding and following lines. He translates, "Era solo allora e addormentato, pari al Meru, Punarbhu insieme con Laksmi ed entrò nell' umbilico di Visnu." It is not clear who Gorresio thinks this figure is. Perhaps he is associating it with svayaṃbhu, "the self-existent [one]," a common epithet of Brahmā, who famously arises from Viṣṇu's navel.

44. "the inner soul of everything" sarvātmā: V1,B2,4,D3,5–7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead bhūtātmā, "the inner soul of beings."

"many eons" bahūn varṣagaṇān: Literally, "for many multitudes of years." Given the context in which we find Viṣṇu sleeping on the cosmic ocean, we feel that the phrase should be understood in terms of cosmic eons rather than, as at verses 1–2 above, in mere years.

45. "his orifices were blocked" ruddhasrotam . . . tam: The exact meaning of the compound is uncertain. Presumably Viṣṇu has closed off all his bodily openings to prevent the escape of the earth, etc., which he was holding in his belly. We believe that this is the idea of Cs's gloss, "who had blocked his path or paths (niruddhamārgam)." Gorresio (1870, p. 205) similarly translates, "ne vedesse chiuse le vie." Shastri (1959, vol. 3, p. 556) similarly understands, "knowing all the entries to be obstructed." Raghunathan (1982, vol. 3, p. 548) offers, "Knowing that He had stopped His breath."

46. "who had become a yogin, emerged and desired to create" nirgamya . . . yogī bhūtvā . . . / sisṛkṣuḥ: Literally, "having emerged, having become a yogin, [he was] desirous of creating."

47. "those born from the womb and from eggs" jarāyujāṇḍajāḥ: Literally, "born from the amniotic sac and from eggs." This is a common distinction in the literature between viviparous and oviparous creatures.

48. "There from earwax Kaiṭabha was born together with Madhu" tatra śrotramalotpannaḥ kaiṭabho madhunā saha [98] /: In this version of the myth, it is ambiguous from whose earwax the two are produced. On this and the identity of these two demons, see notes to 7.4.14. KK and VSP read instead tataḥ, "then," for tatra, "there."

49. "the self-born god" svayaṃbhuvam: Literally, "the self-born [one]."

50. "the self-born Brahmā released" svayaṃbhuvā muktaḥ: Literally, "by the self-born [one] was released [a cry]."

"Hara came there" saṃprāpto haro vai: Literally, "Hara indeed arrived." B2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead saṃprāptau dānavau, "those two dānavas arrived."

54. "Therefore" tasmāt: The connection between Rāma's cosmological narrative and etymological excurses on the name medinī and his judgment as to the rightful ownership of the disputed residence is at best tenuous. According to Cs, Rāma bases his judgment on the fact that the owl had claimed ownership of the residence from the time of the creation of trees (see verse 32 [= lines 64–65]), while the vulture claimed ownership only from the time of the origin of men (see verse 31 [= lines 62–63]). According to the story of creation narrated by Rāma (see verses 46 and 47 [= lines 93–97]), the creation of trees precedes that of men, and therefore the right of prior possession belongs to the owl. (tasmād gṛdhrasya gṛhaṃ na. manuṣyair utthitair yadā tadā prabhṛti me gṛham iti gṛdhravacanena pādapair upaśobhitā / yadeyaṃ pṛthivī rāma tadā prabhṛti me gṛham ity ulūkavacanena ca gṛdhrato 'pi pūrvaṃ tatrolūkaniketanam iti tasmāt paurvāparyān na gṛdhragṛham iti me matiḥ.) Cs fails to explain how either of the birds, which fall under the category of "egg-born creatures," who were created after the creation of trees, etc., and at the same time as men (see 46ef–47 [lines 95–97]), could have held the residence from the time of the creation of trees.

56. "O lord of men" nareśvara: D3,5,8,12, and KK and VSP read instead the nominative singular dhaneśvaraḥ, "the lord of wealth," which would lend the line the sense "He was the lord of wealth and the protector of the people." B,D1,M3, and Lahore and Gorresio read instead the nominative singular nareśvaraḥ, "the lord of men."

57. "known by the name Brahmadatta" brahmadatteti nāmnaiṣaḥ: Note the double sandhi for the expected brahmadatta iti. Perhaps in an attempt to correct this, KK and VSP read brahmadattas tu nāmaiṣaḥ, "And this one was by name Brahmadatta."

"burned up by Kālagautama" kālagautamadagdhaḥ: According to Cs, Kālagautama is the name of a brahman. Ś1,2,V1,3,B3, and Gorresio, KK, and VSP read instead kāle gautamadagdhaḥ, "At [one] time [he was] burned by Gautama."

58–59. "he ate . . . O foremost of kings" bhuktavān nṛpasattama: Ñ2,V2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read bhoktavyam, "[it] is to be eaten," for bhuktavān, "he ate." This lends the phrase the sense "I am to be fed for a full hundred years, O foremost of kings." In this case, the vocative nṛpasattama, "O foremost of kings," must be taken as part of the direct quotation on the part of Gautama and would be addressed to Brahmadatta, unlike in the critical reading, where the vocative would be addressed to Rāma by the disembodied voice.

"kindly" hārdenaiva: Ñ2,V2,B1,3,4,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead the more or less synonymous hārdaṃ caiv[ākarot].

"O immensely radiant king" mahādyute: Literally, "O immensely radiant [one]." Ñ2,B2,3,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead the genitive mahādyuteḥ, making the adjective refer to the brahman rather than to Rāma, and lending the passage the sense "he offered to that immensely radiant one."

"a piece of meat" māṃsapeśī: Ñ2,D6,7,9–11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead māṃsam asya "meat . . . [in] his [food]." According to Cs, the offending flesh had fallen into the food through the design of fate [or the gods] (māṃsaṃ daivecchayā patitam).

"the great sage's" mahātmanaḥ: Literally, "of the great [one]."

60. "May you become a vulture" gṛdhratvaṃ gaccha: Literally, "Go to vulturehood." Ñ2,B,D7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead the similar gṛdhras tvaṃ bhava, "you must become a vulture."

"And the king said to him: 'No! No!' " mā mainaṃ hy atha so 'bravīt: Literally, "Then he said to him, 'Don't! Don't!' " KK (1905) and VSP read instead iti śaptvātha so 'bravīt, "having cursed in this fashion, he then said."

61. "what I have done out of ignorance" ajñānān me: Literally, "because of my ignorance." B3 and KK (1905) and VSP omit this verse, while KK (1913) places it in brackets (= lines 124–126).

62–63. "A . . . king . . . in the House of the Ikṣvākus" kule rājā . . . / ikṣvākūṇām: D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read rājñām, "of the kings," for rājā. This would lend the phrase the sense "in the lineage of kings . . . the Ikṣvākus." For line 126 ("Realizing that that had been done out of ignorance, the sage said to the king"), see above.

"Rāma" rāmaḥ: D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead rājā, "a king."

"best of men" narasattama: B,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, and NSP read instead the vocative narapuṅgava, "O bull among men," while Ñ2,V1,2,B,D1,4, and KK and VSP read instead the nominative singular narapuṅgavaḥ, lending the line the sense "You, a bull among men, will be freed from the curse."

"freed from the curse" viśāpaḥ: Ñ2,D6,7,10,11, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead vipāpaḥ, "free from transgression."

64. "ceased to be a vulture" gṛdhratvaṃ tyajya vai: Literally, "having abandoned vulturehood." V2,D6,7,10,11,T3,4,M3, and GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead gṛdhratvaṃ tyaktavān, "he abandoned vulturehood."

65. "from hell" narakāt: Cs understands the term to refer to Brahmadatta's previously degraded species (narakād dhīnajāteḥ).

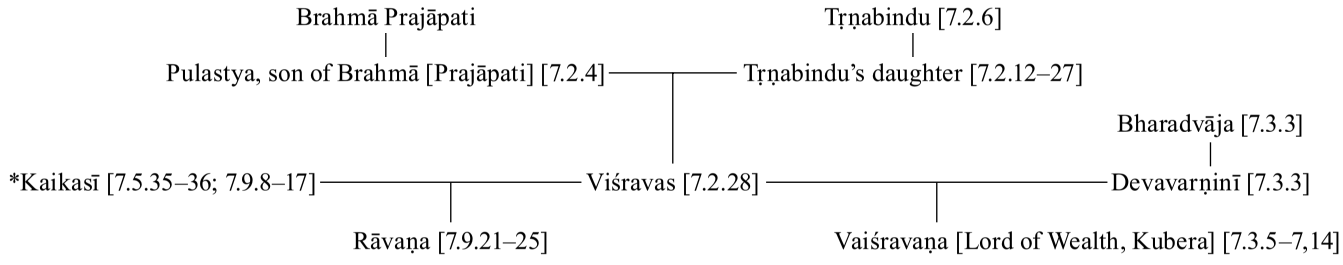
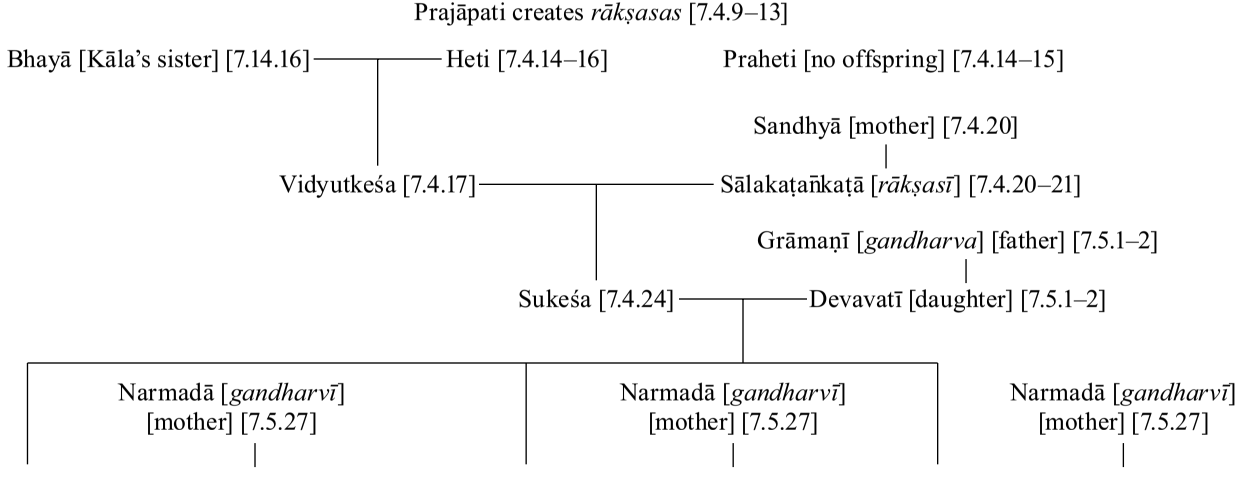
"Rāma" rāma: V2,B,D6,7,10,11, and Gorresio, GPP, NSP, KK, and VSP read instead ghorāt, "terrible or dreadful," which then construes with narakāt, lending the phrase the sense "from a terrible hell."

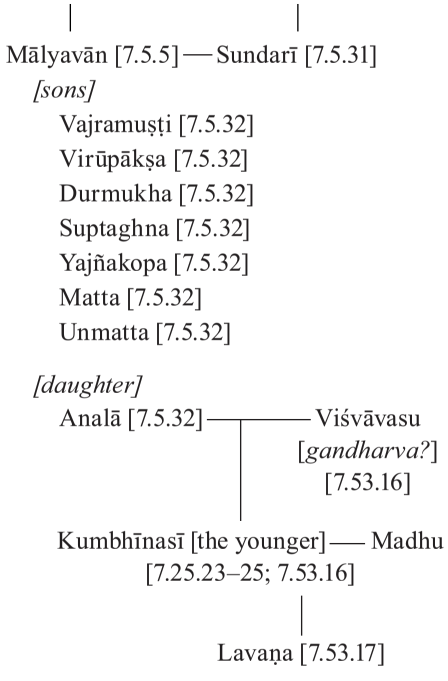
Rāvaṇa's Genealogy[1]

Paternal Lineage

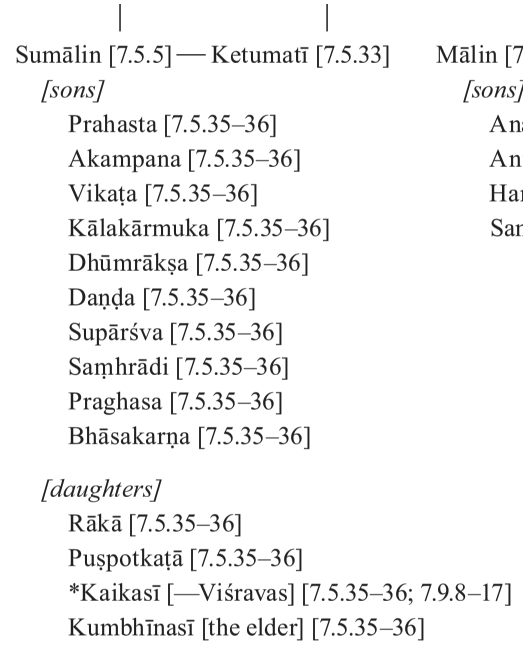


Maternal Lineage

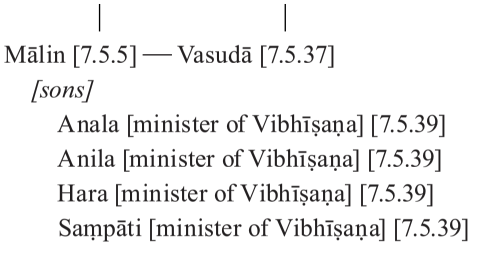




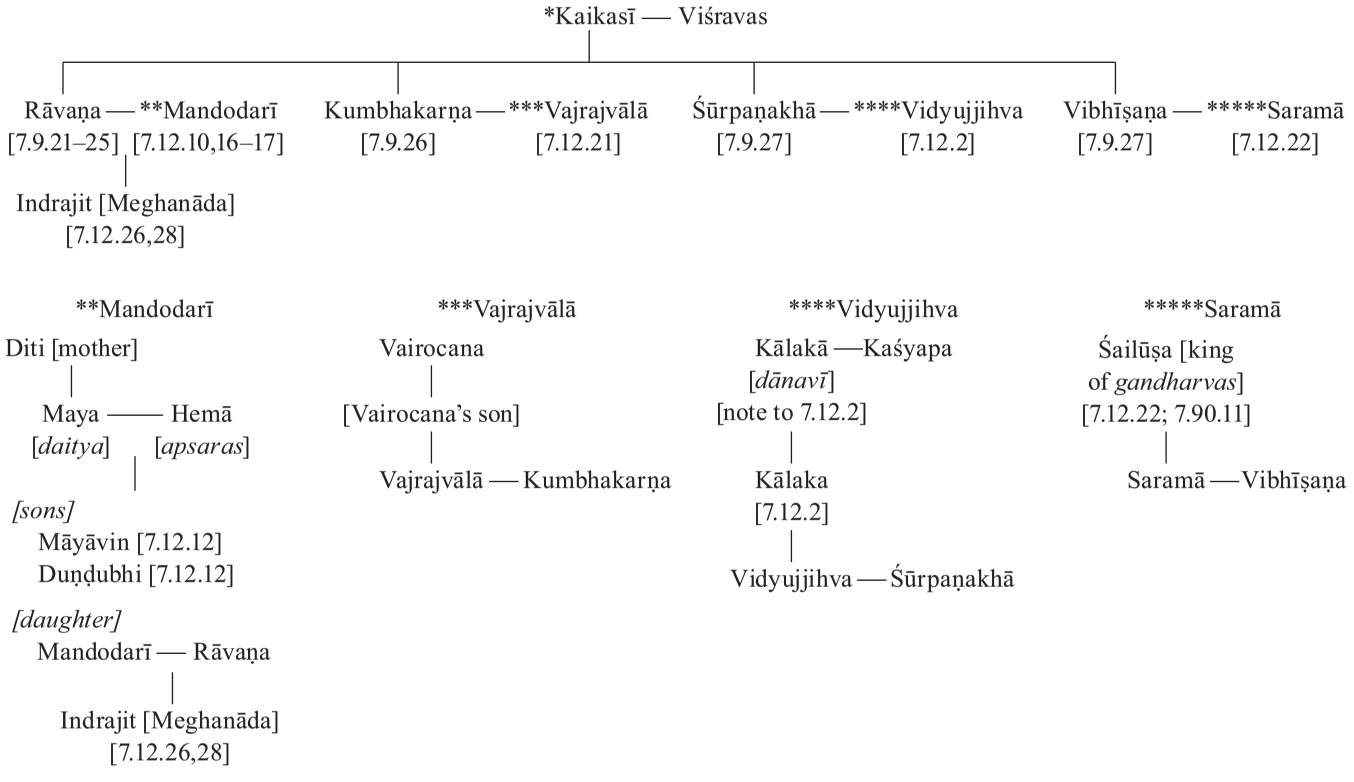
Mālyavān [7.5.5] — Sundarī [7.5.31]
[sons]
Vajramuṣṭi [7.5.32]
Virūpākṣa [7.5.32]
Durmukha [7.5.32]
Suptaghna [7.5.32]
Yajñakopa [7.5.32]
Matta [7.5.32]
Unmatta [7.5.32]
[daughter]
Analā [7.5.32] — Viśvāvasu [gandharva?] [7.53.16]
Kumbhīnasī [the younger] — Madhu [7.25.23–25; 7.53.16]
Lavaṇa [7.53.17]



Sumālin [7.5.5] — Ketumatī [7.5.33]
[sons]
Prahasta [7.5.35–36]
Akampana [7.5.35–36]
Vikaṭa [7.5.35–36]
Kālakārmuka [7.5.35–36]
Dhūmrākṣa [7.5.35–36]
Daṇḍa [7.5.35–36]
Supārśva [7.5.35–36]
Saṃhrādi [7.5.35–36]
Praghasa [7.5.35–36]
Bhāsakarṇa [7.5.35–36]
[daughters]
Rākā [7.5.35–36]
Puṣpotkaṭā [7.5.35–36]
*Kaikasī [—Viśravas] [7.5.35–36; 7.9.8–17]
Kumbhīnasī [the elder] [7.5.35–36]



Mālin [7.5.5] — Vasudā [7.5.37]
[sons]
Anala [minister of Vibhīṣaṇa] [7.5.39]
Anila [minister of Vibhīṣaṇa] [7.5.39]
Hara [minister of Vibhīṣaṇa] [7.5.39]
Saṃpāti [minister of Vibhīṣaṇa] [7.5.39]



[1] Compare, too, the chart created by Madeleine Biradeau (in Benoît 1999, pp. 1735–37).

Glossary of Important Sanskrit Words, Proper Nouns, and Epithets

Agastya: famous sage; pot-born son of Mitra-Varuṇa
Agni: god of fire
Ahalyā: wife of Gautama; cursed by her husband after she was seduced by the god Indra
Amarāvatī: Indra's heavenly city
Anaṅga: epithet of Kāma, the god of love
Anaraṇya: Solar Dynasty king slain by Rāvaṇa; predicts that an Ikṣvāku king will kill Rāvaṇa Aṅgada: 1) monkey prince; son of Vālin; 2) a son of Lakṣmaṇa; rules city of Aṅgadīya in the country of Kārāpatha (v.l. Kārupatha) apsarases: celestial maidens or nymphs; known for their beauty
Arajā: daughter of Uśanas Kāvya; raped by Daṇḍa; cursed by her father Arjuna Kārtavīrya: thousand-armed king of Māhiṣmatī; defeats and binds Rāvaṇa asuras: a class of demons; the half brothers and rivals of the gods Aśvapati: Bharata's maternal uncle; king of Rājagṛha
Aśvins: twin deities of the vedic pantheon; renowned for their beauty
Ayodhyā: capital city of the Ikṣvākus
Bhadra: companion of Rāma; reports peoples' criticism of Rāma
Bhaga: name of a vedic god
Bharadvāja: a sage; father of Devavarṇinī
Bharata: younger brother of Rāma
Bhava: epithet of Śiva
Brahmā: the creator divinity of the Hindu "trinity"; "Grandfather" of all living creatures Brahmahatyā: female personification of brahmahatyā brahmahatyā: the sin of killing a brahman
Brahman: a name for the Indian religio-philosophical concept of the impersonal and attributeless principle underlying existence
Budha: a sage; son of Soma; lover of Ilā; father of Purūravas
Candraketu: a son of Lakṣmaṇa; rules the city of Candrakāntā/Candrakānta in the country of Malla Cyavana: Bhārgava brahman; leader of the delegation of sages from the Yamunā region daityas: a class of demons descended from Diti, generally synonymous with asuras dānavas: a class of demons descended from Danu, generally synonymous with asuras
Daṇḍa: dull-witted royal son of Ikṣvāku; founds the city of Madhumanta; rapes Arajā; cursed by her father, Uśanas Kāvya
Daśagrīva: "Ten Necks"; original name of Rāvaṇa
Devavarṇinī: daughter of Bharadvāja; first wife of Viśravas; mother of Kubera Vaiśravaṇa
Devayānī: wife of Yayāti; daughter of Uśanas Kāvya Dharaṇī: epithet of Mādhavī, the earth goddess
Durvāsas: an irascible sage; predicts Rāma's future; interrupts Rāma's meeting with Kāla Gāndhāra: a country on the banks of the Sindhu River gandharvas: a class of semidivine beings known for their musical abilities; massacred by Bharata; gandharva women are noted for their beauty
Ganges: a famous and sacred river and river goddess

Garuḍa: king of birds; Viṣṇu's mount; son of Kaśyapa and Vinatā Hanumān: monkey son of the wind god; minister of Sugrīva and Rāma's devoted companion
Hari: epithet of Viṣṇu
Heti: a rākṣasa; husband of Bhayā; father of Vidyutkeśa
Himalaya[s]: name of a mountain range; king of the mountains
Ikṣvāku: son of Manu; ancestor of Rāma's lineage; father of Daṇḍa
Ila: son of Kardama; king of Bahli; transformed into a woman, Ilā
Ilā: originally Ila, who was transformed into a woman; wife of Budha; mother of Purūravas
Indra: king of the gods; leads their hosts into battle against the asuras; slayer of Vṛtra; captured by Indrajit
Indrajit: epithet of Rāvaṇa's son Meghanāda; captures Indra in battle; slain by Lakṣmaṇa
Janaka: lord of Mithilā; adoptive father of Sītā
Jayanta: Indra's son; wounded by Indrajit; rescued by Puloman
Kaikasī: second wife of Viśravas; mother of Rāvaṇa
Kaikeyī: second wife of Daśaratha; mother of Bharata
Kailāsa: mountain peak in the Himalayas; abode of Śiva and Pārvatī
Kaiṭabha: asura slain by Viṣṇu
Kākutstha: "descendant of Kakutstha"; patronymic of Rāma and his brothers
Kāla: time incarnate; name of the god of death; visits Rāma in the guise of an ascetic
Kalmāṣapāda: a king; ancestor of Rāma cursed by Vasiṣṭha to become a cannibal; also called Mitrasaha and Saudāsa
Kāma: god of love
Kardama: a Prajāpati; father of Ila
Kausalyā: senior wife of Daśaratha; mother of Rāma Khara: brother of Rāvaṇa; slain by Rāma in the Daṇḍaka forest kiṃpuruṣas: a class of semidivine beings who dwell in the Himalayas; sometimes represented as having the head of a horse and a human body; sometimes identified with kinnaras kinnaras: a class of semidivine beings with the head of a horse and a human body; kinnara women are noted for their beauty
Kiṣkindhā: capital city of the monkeys
Kubera: also known as Vaiśravaṇa; son of Viśravas; half brother of Rāvaṇa; the lord of wealth; king of the yakṣas; traditionally said to reside on Mount Kailāsa
Kumbhakarṇa: gargantuan brother of Rāvaṇa; slain by Rāma
Kuśa: son of Rāma and Sītā; twin brother of Lava; disciple of Vālmīki; singer of the Rāmāyaṇa at Rāma's aśvamedha; consecrated by Rāma in the kingdom of Kosala
Lakṣmaṇa: son of Daśaratha by Sumitrā; Rāma's brother and constant companion
Laṅkā: Rāvaṇa's capital city; location of Sītā's captivity
Lava: son of Rāma and Sītā; twin brother of Kuśa; disciple of Vālmīki; singer of the Rāmāyaṇa at Rāma's aśvamedha; consecrated by Rāma in the northern kingdom
Lavaṇa: a malevolent asura or rākṣasa slain by Śatrughna
Mādhavī: epithet of the goddess of the earth; also known as Dharaṇī; mother of Sītā Madhu: 1) asura slain by Viṣṇu; 2) rākṣasa or asura kinsman of Rāvaṇa; father of Lavaṇa Maheśvara: "the Great Lord"; epithet of Śiva
Maithilī: "Lady of Mithilā"; epithet of Sītā
Mālin: a rākṣasa; son of Sukeśa and the gandharvī Devavatī; husband of the gandharvī Vasudā; father of Anala, Anila, Hara, and Saṃpāti
Mālyavān: great-uncle and adviser to Rāvaṇa
Mandara: mountain used as the churning rod in the primordial churning of the ocean
Māndhātṛ: king; ancestor of Rāma slain by Lavaṇa; fights with Rāvaṇa

Mandodarī: daughter of the daitya Maya and the apsaras Hemā; chief queen of Rāvaṇa
Manu: primordial king; progenitor of the solar and lunar lineages
Mārīca: a counselor of Rāvaṇa
Marutta: king of Uśirabīja; defeated by Rāvaṇa
Meghanāda: given name of Indrajit, son of Rāvaṇa; captures Indra; slain by Lakṣmaṇa Meru: mythical mountain; the axis mundi
Mitra: a god; curses Urvaśī to live on earth with Purūravas
Mṛtyu: death incarnate
Nalakūbara: nephew of Rāvaṇa; lover of Rambhā; curses Rāvaṇa to die if he forces himself on a woman
Nandi(n)/Nandīśvara: a bull, Śiva's mount; curses Rāvaṇa
Nārada: a divine sage; gives a discourse on the yugas; tells Rāma of the asceticism of Śambūka
Nārāyaṇa: epithet of Viṣṇu; defeats the rākṣasas; toys with Rāvaṇa
Nimi: king cursed by Vasiṣṭha; granted a boon by the gods to live in peoples' eyes
Nivātakavacas: a class of demons who become allies of Rāvaṇa
Nṛga: a king cursed to become a lizard
Paulastya: "descendant of Pulastya"; epithet of Rāvaṇa
Prahasta: rākṣasa counselor and warrior
Prajāpati: "Lord of creatures"; epithet of Brahmā
Pratardana: king of Kāśī; ally of Rāma
Pulastya: mind-born son of Brahmā; grandfather of Rāvaṇa
Pūru: son of Yayāti; takes on his father's curse of decrepitude
Purūravas: son of Budha and Ilā; king in Pratiṣṭhāna
Pūṣan: a solar god in vedic mythology
Puṣkal(r)a: son of Bharata; rules in Puṣkarāvatī
Puṣpaka: flying palace stolen by Rāvaṇa from Kubera Vaiśravaṇa; acquired and dismissed by Rāma
Rāghava: "descendant of Raghu"; common patronymic of Rāma and his brothers Raghu: king; son of Kakutstha; ancestor of Rāma rākṣasas: a class of violent and bloodthirsty demons regarded as the implacable enemies of brahmanical culture and civilization
Rāma: eldest son of Daśaratha by Kausalyā
Rambhā: apsaras raped by Rāvaṇa
Rasātala: name of a hell
Rāvaṇa: main antagonist of the Rāmāyaṇa; the ten-headed overlord of the rākṣasas; also called Daśagrīva
Rāvani: patronymic of Meghanāda
Ṛkṣarajas: a monkey; both mother and surrogate father of Vālin and Sugrīva
Rudra: epithet of Śiva
Śakra: "mighty one"; epithet of Indra
Sālakaṭaṅkaṭā: daughter of Sandhyā; mother of Sukeśa
Śambūka: śūdra ascetic killed by Rāma
Śaṅkara: epithet of Śiva
Sarasvatī: goddess of learning and the arts
Śatrughātin: son of Śatrughna; king of Vaidiśa
Śatrughna: youngest son of Daśaratha by Sumitrā; Bharata's friend and constant companion; kills Lavaṇa and founds the city of Madhurā
Saudāsa: king cursed by Vasiṣṭha to become a cannibal; also called Kalmāṣapāda and Mitrasaha
Saumitri: "son of Sumitrā"; matronymic of Lakṣmaṇa

Sītā: daughter of Janaka; wife of Rāma
Śiva: one of the three main gods (the "trinity") of the Hindu pantheon, along with Brahmā and Viṣṇu
Śrī: goddess of fortune; consort of Viṣṇu; incarnated as Sītā
Subāhu: son of Śatrughna; becomes king of Madhurā
Sugrīva: king of the monkeys; son of Sūrya; younger brother of Vālin; friend and ally of Rāma
Sukeśa: a rākṣasa; son of Vidyutkeśa and his wife Sālakaṭaṅkaṭā; father of Mālin, Mālyavān, and Sumālin
Śukrācārya: the sage Uśanas; a scion of the Bhārgava gotra; father of Devayānī and Arajā
Sumāli[n]: a rākṣasa; father of Kaikasī
Sumantra: Rāma's charioteer and counselor; drives Sītā on her journey into exile
Sumitrā: youngest wife of Daśaratha; mother of Lakṣmaṇa and Śatrughna Śūrpaṇakhā: sister of Rāvaṇa
Śveta: ascetic king of Vidarbha; doomed to eat his own corpse
Takṣa: son of Bharata; rules in Takṣaśīlā Trikūṭa: mountain on which the city of Laṅkā is said to be located Tripura: name of the city of the demons; destroyed by Śiva
Tṛṇabindu: maternal grandfather of Viśravas
Umā: wife of Śiva; daughter of the mountain Himalaya; allows Ila, who was transformed into a woman, to alternate between genders
Uśanas or Uśanas Kāvya: see Śukrācārya
Vaidehī: "Lady of Videha"; epithet of Sītā
Vaiśravaṇa: "descendant of Viśravas"; epithet of Kubera and Rāvaṇa
Vaitaraṇī: the river of hell
Vālin: king of the monkeys; son of Indra; elder brother of Sugrīva Vālmīki: sage and composer of the Rāmāyaṇa; shelters Sītā and raises her sons; brings them back to Ayodhyā
Varuṇa: god of the waters
Vāsava: epithet of Indra
Vasiṣṭha: a brahman; household priest of the Ikṣvākus
Vāyu: god of the wind; divine father of Hanumān
Vedavatī: brahman woman assaulted by Rāvaṇa; vows to be reborn to destroy him Vibhīṣaṇa: rākṣasa lord; brother of Rāvaṇa; ally of Rāma; instructed by Rāma to remain on earth to rule the rākṣasas
Vidyujjihva: a dānava lord; husband of Śūrpaṇakhā; killed by Rāvaṇa Vidyutkeśa: a rākṣasa; son of Heti and his wife Bhayā; husband of Sālakaṭaṅkaṭā; father of Sukeśa
Vindhya: name of a mountain range north of the Narmadā River
Viṣṇu: one of the three principal gods ("the trinity") of the Hindu pantheon, along with Brahmā and Śiva; incarnated on earth in the form of Rāma in order to kill Rāvaṇa
Viśravas: a brahman sage; father of Kubera and Rāvaṇa and their siblings
Viśvakarman: god of craft; architect of the gods; father of the monkey architect Nala Vṛtra: powerful and ascetic asura killed by Indra yakṣas: semidivine beings associated with Kubera; their women are known for their beauty Yama: god of death; battles Rāvaṇa
Yayāti: king; husband of Devayānī; cursed by his father-in law Uśanas Kāvya

Emendations and Corrections of the Critical Edition

Listed below are the emendations and corrections to the critical text made by the translators. For a discussion of specific issues concerning the emendations, see the respective notes and Introduction, "Text, Commentaries, and Translations," pp. 199–218.

	Critical Text	Emendation
7.20.1	ghane tasmin	vane tasmin
following 7.50	App. I, No. 8, lines 1–48	insert 7.51-1*
	App. I, No. 8, lines 49–82	insert 7.51-2*
	App. I, No. 8, lines 83–123	insert 7.51-3*
	App. I, No. 8, lines 124–171	insert 7.51-4*
	App. I, No. 8, lines 172–212	insert 7.51-5*
	App. I, No. 8, lines 213–258	insert 7.51-6*
	App. I, No. 8, lines 259–302	insert 7.51-7*
7.51-7*.2 (App. I, No. 8, line 261)	dharmajña	dharmajñaḥ
following 7.55.1	971*	insert 971*
following 7.55.2a–d	973*	insert 973*, lines 1–6
following 7.55.2ef	977*	insert 977*
following 7.63.3ab	App. I, No. 9	insert App. I, No. 9, lines 1–52
following 7.67.4	App. I, No. 11	insert App. I, No. 11, lines 1–21
following 7.67.5	1127*	insert 1127*, lines 1–15
following 1127*, line 15	1128*	insert 1128*
7.67.6	7.67.6	elide 7.67.6
7.78.22	lokānām asi bhāmini	lokānām asi bhāminī
following 7.88	App. I, No. 13, lines 1–51	insert 7.88*
before 7.89	App. I, No. 13, lines 52–56	insert App. I, No. 13, lines 52–56
7.97.6	svargaloke na	svargalokena
Prakṣipta II, sarga 1.17	brahman pratibalaḥ	brahmapratibalaḥ
Prakṣipta II, sarga 1.30	śriyaṃ devīm umāṃ yathā	śrīr devī umā yathā
Prakṣipta II, sarga 1.55	vānarottamaḥ	vānarottamam

Prakṣipta III, sarga 2.29	gacchantam . . . sthitam	gacchan . . . sthitaḥ
99*, line 5, following 7.6.32ab	śrūyante 'parājitāḥ	śrūyante parājitāḥ
1091*, following 7.64.15	atyarūḍham	atyārūḍham

Bibliography of Works Consulted

TEXTS OF THE VĀLMĪKI RĀMĀYAṆA

Rāmāyaṇa. (1928–1947). 7 vols. Lahore: D.A.V. College. Northwestern recension critically edited for the first time from original manuscripts by Vishva Bandhu. D.A.V. College Sanskrit Series, nos. 7, 12, 14, 17–20.

Ramayana, poema indiano di Valmici. (1843–1867). 7 vols. Paris: Stamperia Reale. Testo sanscrito con note secondo i codici manoscritti della scuola Gaudana. Edited by Gaspare Gorresio.

Rāmāyan of Vālmīki. (1914–1920). 7 vols. Bombay: Gujarati Printing Press. With three commentaries called Tilaka, Shiromani, and Bhooshana. Edited by Shastri Shrinivas Katti Mudholkar.

The Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki. (1888). Bombay: Nirṇayasāgar Press. With the commentary (Tilaka) of Rāma. Edited by Kāśīnāth Pāṇḍurañg Parab.

The Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki. (1930). 4th rev. ed. Bombay: Nirṇayasāgar Press. With the commentary (Tilaka) of Rāma. Edited by Wāsudeva Laxmaṇ Śāstrī Paṇśīkar.

Śrīmad Vālmīki-Rāmāyaṇa. (1969). 3 vols. Gorakhpur: Gita Press. Translated by Chimmanlal Goswami. (Vol. 3 used for sargas 1–40.)

Śrīmad Vālmīki-Rāmāyaṇa. (1998). 5th ed. 2 vols. Gorakhpur: Gita Press. (Vol. 2 used for sargas 41–100.)

Śrīmadvālmīkirāmāyaṇam. (1905). 2 vols. Bombay: Nirṇayasāgar Press. Edited by T. R. Krishnacharya.

Śrīmadvālmīkirāmāyaṇam. (1911–1913). 7 vols. Bombay: Nirṇayasāgar Press. With the commentary of Sri Govindaraja and extracts from many other commentaries and readings. Edited by T. R. Krishnacharya and T. R. Vyasacharya. Reprint 1930.

Śrīmadvālmīkirāmāyaṇam. (1935). 3 vols. Bombay: Lakṣmīveṅkaṭeśvara Mudraṇālaya (Veṅkaṭeśvara Steam Press). With the commentaries of Govindarāja, Rāmānuja, and Maheśvaratīrtha and the commentary known as Taniślokī. Edited by Gaṅgāviṣṇu Śrīkṛṣṇadāsa.

Śrīmadvālmīkirāmāyaṇam. (1960–). Mysore: University of Mysore, Oriental Research Institute. With Amṛtakataka of Mādhavayogi. Edited by K. S. Varadacharya et al.

The Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa: Critical Edition. (1960–1975). 7 vols. Baroda: Oriental Institute. General editors: G. H. Bhatt and U. P. Shah.

TRANSCRIPTS OF UTTARAKĀṆḌA COMMENTARIES

Adyar Library. (1912). Vivekatilaka of Varadarāja Uḍāli (Uḍāri). Copied by N. Ramaswamy Sastrī. Collated by V. Kṛṣṇamācārya and N. Ramantha Sastrī. Ramanujacharya Collection. November 16, Madras.

Oriental Institute Library of Baroda, no. 24259. (n.d.) Amṛtakataka of Mādhava Yogīndra. Baroda.

———, no. 25664. (1964). Vivekatilaka of Varadarāja Uḍāli (Uḍāri). April 6, Baroda.

TRANSLATIONS OF THE UTTARAKĀṆḌA

Benoît, Philippe, trans. (1999). Le Rāmāyaṇa de Vālmīki. Canto 7: Jusqu'à la fin des temps. Paris: Gallimard. Edited by Madeleine Biardeau and Marie-Claude Porcher.

Dutt, M. N., trans. (1894). The Ramayana. Vol. 7: Uttara Kāndam. Calcutta: Girish Chandra Chackravarti.

Gita Press Edition translation. See Śrīmad Vālmīki-Rāmāyaṇa (1969 and 1998).

Gorresio, Gaspare, trans. (1870). Uttaracanda, versione italiana. Parigi: Stamperia Nazionale.

Raghunathan, N., trans. (1982). Srimad Vālmīki Ramayana. Vol. 3. Madras: Vighneswara Publishing House.

Roussel, Alfred, trans. (1903). Le Rāmāyana de Vālmīki. Vol. 3. Paris: Librairie des cinq parties du monde. Bibliothèque Orientale, no. 8.

Shastri, Hari Prasad, trans. (1959). The Ramayana of Valmiki. Vol. 3. London: Shanti Sadan. 2nd ed., 1969.

SANSKRIT TEXTS

Abhijñānaśākuntala of Kālidāsa. (1891). 3rd rev. ed. Bombay: Nirṇayasāgar Press. Edited by Nārāyaṇa Bālakṛṣṇa Godabole and Kāśīnāth Pāṇḍuraṅg Parab.

Adbhut Rāmāyaṇa (= Adbhuta Rāmāyaṇa): Attributed to the Sage Vālmīki. (2001). Delhi: B. R. Publishing. Translated by Shantilal Nagar. Sanskrit with translation into English and Hindi.

Adhyātma-Rāmāyaṇa. (1884). Calcutta: Valmiki Press. With the commentary of Ramavarman. Edited by Pandit Jibananda Vidyasagara.

Aitareyabrāhmaṇa. (1931). Poona: Ānandāśrama Press. With the commentary of Śrīmatsāyaṇācārya. Ānandāśrama Sanskrit Series, no. 32.

Aitareyopaniṣad. See Eighteen Principal Upaniṣads.

Amarakośa. (1971–1983). 3 vols. Madras: Adyar Library and Research Centre. With the unpublished South Indian commentaries Amarapadavivṛti of Liṅgayasūrin and the Amarapadapārijāta of Mallinātha. Edited by A. A. Ramanathan. Adyar Library Series, vol. 101.

Āpastambaśrautasūtra. (1955–1963). 2 vols. Baroda: Oriental Institute. With Dhūrtasvāmibhāṣya. Edited by Paṇḍita A. Chinnaswāmī Śāstrī.

Āpastambīyadharmasūtram. (1932). 3rd ed. Poona: Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute. Edited by Georg Bühler. Bombay Sanskrit and Prakrit Series, nos. 44 and 50.

Araṇyasanhita of Samaveda (Āraṇyasaṃhitā). (1891). 2nd ed. Calcutta: Saraswati Press. With the commentary of Sayanacharya. Edited by Pandit Jibananda Vidyasagara.

Arthaśāstra. See Kauṭilīya Arthaśāstra.

Āruṇikopaniṣad. See Upaniṣatsaṃgraha.

Aṣṭādhyāyī of Pāṇini. (1987). Austin: University of Texas Press. Translated by Sumitra M. Katre.

Atharvaveda (Śaunaka). (1960–1964). 4 vols. Hoshiarpur: Vishveshvaranand Vedic Research Institute. With the commentary of Sāyaṇācārya. Edited by Vishva Bandhu et al. Vishveshvaranand Indological Series, no. 13.

Avadānaśataka. (1958). Darbhanga: Mithila Institute. Edited by P. L. Vaidya. Buddhist Sanskrit Texts, no. 19.

Bālabhāratam of Agastya Paṇḍita. (1983). Tirupati: Sri Venkateswara University Oriental Research Institute. Edited by K. S. Ramamurthi.

Bālarāmāyaṇa of Rājaśekhara. (1984). Varanasi: Chowkhamba Surbharati Prakashan. Edited by Ganga Sagar Rai. Chowkhamba Surbharati Granthamala, 69.

The Bhagavad-Gita. (1935). Bombay: Gujarati Printing Press. With eleven commentaries. Edited by Shastri Gajanana Shambhu Sadhale.

Bhagavadgītātātparyanirṇaya. See Srimad Bhagavad Gita Tatparya Nirnaya of Acharya Madhva.

Bhāgavatapurāṇam. (1983). Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass. With the commentary Bhāvārthabodhinī of Śrīdhara Svāmin. Edited by J. L. Shastri. Reprint 1988.

Bhartṛhari's Nītiśataka and Vairāgyaśataka. (1874). Bombay: Government Central Book Depot. Edited by Kāshināth Trimbak Telang. Bombay Sanskrit Series, no. 11.

Bhāsanāṭakacakram: Plays Ascribed to Bhāsa. (1937). Edited by C. R. Devadhar. Reprint Poona: Oriental Book Agency, 1962.

The Bhaṭṭikāvya of Bhaṭṭi. (1920). 6th ed. Bombay: Nirṇayasāgar Press. With the commentary (Jayamaṅgalā) of Jayamangala. Edited by Vināyak Nārāyaṇ Shāstrī Joshi and Wāsudeva Laxmaṇ Śāstrī Paṇśīkar.

Bodhicāryāvatāra of Ācārya Śāntideva. (2011). New Delhi: Rashtriya Sanskrit Sansthan.

Brahmāṇḍapurāṇa. (1973). Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass. Edited by J. L. Shastri.

Brahma-Purana. (2015). Adhyāyas 1–246 input by Peter Schreiner and Renate Söhnen-Thieme for the Tübingen Purāṇa Project, University of Zürich, Department of Indology. Göttingen Register of Electronic Texts in Indian Languages (GRETIL), Archive of E-Texts in Unicode (UTF-8), http://gretil.sub.uni-goettingen.de/gretil/1_sanskr/3_purana/brahmap/brahmppu.htm.

Brahmavaivartapurāṇam. (1935). 2 vols. Poona: Ānandāśrama Press. Ānandāśrama Sanskrit Series, no. 102.

Bṛhadāraṇyakopaniṣad. See Eighteen Principal Upaniṣads.

The Buddhacarita, or Acts of the Buddha. (1972). Pt. 1, Sanskrit Text. Reprint Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass. Edited by E. H. Johnston. Originally published Calcutta: Panjab University Oriental Publications Series, no. 31, 1935.

Chandogapariśiṣṭa. See Gobhilasmṛti.

Chāndogyopaniṣad. See Eighteen Principal Upaniṣads.

The Devībhāgavatapurāṇam. (1986). Delhi: Nag Publishers.

Dhātupāṭha. See Aṣṭādhyāyī of Pāṇini.

Divyāvadāna. (1959). Darbhanga: Mithila Institute. Edited by P. L. Vaidya. Buddhist Sanskrit Texts, no. 20.

Eighteen Principal Upaniṣads. (1958). Vol. 1. Poona: Vaidika Saṃśodhana Maṇḍala. Edited by V. P. Limaye and R. D. Vadekar.

The Garuḍamahāpurāṇam (Garuḍapurāṇa). (1984). Delhi: Nag Publishers.

Gheraṇḍasaṃhitā. (1978). Lonavla (Lonavala): Kaivalyadhama S. M. Y. M. Samiti. Edited by S. Digambarji and M. L. Gharote.

The Gilgit Manuscript of the Saṅghabhedavastu, Being the 17th and Last Section of the Vinaya of the Mūlasarvāśtivādin. (1977). Pt. 1. Roma: Istituto italiano per il Medio ed Estremo Oriente. Edited by Raniero Gnoli with the assistance of T. Venkatacharya. Serie Orientale Roma, vol. 49.

Gobhilasmṛti. (1905). Published in Aṅgirahprabhṛtibaudhāyanāntānāṃ Saptaviṃśatisaṅkhyāmitānāṃ Smṛtīnāṃ Samuccayaḥ. Poona: Ānandāśrama Press. Ānandāśramasaṃskṛtagranthāvaliḥ, vol. 48, pp. 47–71.

Das Gopatha Brāhmaṇa. (1919). Leiden: E. J. Brill. Edited by Dieuke Gaastra.

Harivaṃśa. See Mahābhārata: Critical Edition.

Haṭhayogapradīpikā of Svātmārāma. (1972). Madras: Adyar Library and Research Centre. With the commentary Jyotsnā of Brahmānanda and English translation. Reprint 2000.

Īśāvāsyopaniṣad (Īśopaniṣad). (1905). 2nd ed. Poona: Ānandāśrama Press. With the commentaries (bhāṣyas) of Śaṅkara et al. Edited by Rajaram Sastri Bodas. Ānandāśrama Sanskrit Series, no. 5.

Jaiminīya Brāhmaṇa of the Sāmaveda. (1954). Nagpur: International Academy of Indian Culture. Edited by Raghu Vira and Lokesh Chandra. Sarasvati-Vihara Series, vol. 31.

Kāśikā of Vāmana and Jayāditya. (1969–1970). 2 vols. Hyderabad: Sanskrit Academy, Osmania University. Edited by Aryendra Sharma and Sri Khanderao Deshpande. Sanskrit Academy Series, nos. 17 and 20.

Kāṭhakopaniṣat (Kaṭhopaniṣad). (1935). 7th ed. Poona: Ānandāśrama Press. With the commentary (bhāṣya) of Śaṅkara and two subcommentaries (ṭīkās). Edited by Vaijnath Rajwade. Ānandāśrama Sanskrit Series, no. 7.

Kathāsaritsāgara of Somadevabhaṭṭa. (1889). Bombay: Nirṇayasāgar Press. Edited by Paṇḍit Durgāprasād and Kāśīnāth Pāṇḍuraṅg Parab. Reprint Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass, 2008. Edited by Jagadīśalāla Śāstrī.

Kaṭhopaniṣad. See Eighteen Principal Upaniṣads.

Kātyāyana Śrautasūtra. (1933–1937). Benares: Chowkhamba. With the Devayājñikapaddhati. Edited by Vidyādhara Śarmā. Chowkhamba Sanskrit Series, vol. 72, fasc. 415, 434, 447–449, 456.

Kauṣītaki-brāhmaṇa-upanishad. (1861). Calcutta: Asiatic Society of Bengal. Edited by E. B. Cowell. Bibliotheca Indica, no. 39. Reprint Varanasi: Chowkhamba Sanskrit Series Office, 1968.

Kauṭilīya Arthaśāstra. (1960–1965). 3 vols. Bombay: University of Bombay. Edited by R. P. Kangle. University of Bombay Studies Sanskrit, Prakrit, and Pali, nos. 1–3.

Kāvyaprakāśa. (1941). Bombay: Karnatak Publishing House. Edited by S. S. Sukthankar.

Kumārasambhava of Kālidāsa. (1886). Bombay: Nirṇayasāgar Press. With the commentary (the Sañjīvinī) of Mallinātha (1–8 sargas) and of Sītārāma (8–17 sargas). Edited by Nārāyaṇa Bhaṭṭa Parvaṇīkara and Kāśīnāth Pāṇḍuraṅg Parab.

Kuvalayānanda of Appayya Dīkṣita. (1955). Bombay: Nirṇayasāgar Press.

Laṅkāvatārasūtra. See Saddharmalaṅkāvatārasūtra.

Lāṭyāyana Śrauta Sūtra. (1998). 3 vols. New Delhi: Indira Gandhi National Centre and Motilal Banarsidass. Critically edited and translated by H. G. Ranade.

Liṅgapurāṇam. (2015). Göttingen Register of Electronic Texts in Indian Languages (GRETIL). Archive of E-Texts in Unicode (UTF-8). http://gretil.sub.uni-goettingen.de/gretil/1_sanskr/3_purana/lip_1_pu.htm.

Madhyamavyāyoga of Bhāsa. See Bhāsanāṭakacakram.

Mahābhārata. (1929–1933). 6 vols. Poona: Chitrashala Press. With the commentary of Nīlakaṇṭha.

Mahābhārata: Critical Edition. (1933–1970). 24 vols. Poona: Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute. With Harivaṃśa (1969–1971). Critically edited by V. S. Sukthankar et al.

Mahābhāratatātparyanirṇaya. See Śrīmahābhāratatātparyanirṇaya.

Mahābhāṣya. See The Vyākaraṇa-Mahābhāṣya of Patañjali.

Mānava-Śrauta-Sūtra. (1900). St. Petersburg: L'Académie Impériale des Sciences. Edited by Friedrich Knauer.

Maṇimañjarī of Śrīnārāyaṇapaṇḍitācārya. (1912). Bombay: Nirṇayasāgar Press. Edited by T. R. Krishnacharya.

Manusmṛti. (1946). 10th ed. Bombay: Nirṇayasāgar Press. With the commentary Manvarthamuktāvali of Kullūka. Edited by N. R. Acharya.

Manu-Smṛti. (1972–1982). 5 vols. Bombay: Bharatiya Vidya Bhavan. With nine commentaries by Medhātithi, Sarvajñanārāyaṇa, Kullūka, Rāghavānanda, Nandana, Rāmacandra, Maṇirāma, Govindarāja, and Bhāruci. Edited by Jayantakrishna Harikrishna Dave.

Matsyapurāṇam. (1907). Poona: Ānandāśrama Press. Edited by Hari Narayana Apte. Ānandāśrama Sanskrit Series, no. 54.

Medinīkośa of Śrī Medinīkara. (1940). Varanasi: Chowkhamba Sanskrit Sansthan. Edited by Jagannātha Śāstrī Hoshing. Kashi Sanskrit Series, no. 41. Reprint 2007.

The Meghadūta of Kālidāsa. (1969). 7th ed. Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass. With the commentary (Sañjīvinī) of Mallinātha. Edited with introduction, English translation, and critical notes by M. R. Kale.

Mīmāṃsādarśana (Mīmāṃsāsūtra) of Jaimini. (1932). Pt. 4. Poona: Ānandāśrama Press. With the bhāṣya of Śabara and the Ṭupṭikā of Kumārilabhaṭṭa. Edited by Subbāśāstri. Ānandāśrama Sanskrit Series, no. 97.

Muṇḍakopaniṣad. See Eighteen Principal Upaniṣads.

Nānārthamañjarī. (1954). Poona: Deccan College. Edited by K. V. Krishnamoorthy Sharma. Sources of Indo-Aryan Lexicography 9.

Nāradapurāṇam. (2015). Göttingen Register of Electronic Texts in Indian Languages (GRETIL). Archive of E-Texts in Unicode (UTF-8). http://gretil.sub.uni-goettingen.de/gretil/1_sanskr/3_purana/nardp1_u.htm.

The Nāradasmṛti: Critical Edition and Translation. (2003). Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass. Edited and translated by Richard W. Lariviere.

Natyashastra of Bharatamuni. (1971). Varanasi: Banaras Hindu University. With the commentary (Abhinavabharati) of Abhinava Guptacharya. Edited with introduction and commentaries Madhusudani and Balakreeda by Madhusudan Shastri.

The Nighaṇṭu and the Nirukta. (1967). Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass. Edited and translated by Lakshman Sarup.

Nṛsiṃhapūrvottaratāpanīyopaniṣat (Nṛsiṃhapūrvatāpanī Upaniṣad). (1929). 2nd ed. Poona: Ānandāśrama Press. With the bhāṣya of Śaṅkarācārya and the dīpikā of Vidyāraṇya. Ānandāśrama Sanskrit Series, no. 30.

Nyāyamañjarī of Jayantabhaṭṭa. (1983). Vol. 2. Mysore: Oriental Research Institute. With Ṭippaṇī—Nyāyasaurabha by the editor. Edited by K. S. Varadacharya. University of Mysore Oriental Research Institute Series, no. 139.

Padmapurāṇam. (1893–1894). 4 vols. Poona: Ānandāśrama Press. Edited by Viśvanātha Nārāyaṇa Maṇḍalik. Ānandāśrama Sanskrit Series, no. 131.

Padmapurāṇam (Śrīpadmamahāpurāṇam). (1984–1985). 3 vols. Delhi: Nag Publishers. Edited by Cārudeva Śāstrī. Reprinted with new introduction. Originally published by Śrīveṅkateśvara–Sṭīm Mudraṇayantrālaya (Veṅkaṭeśvara Steam Press), 1927.

Pañcaviṃśabrāhmaṇa. See Tāṇḍya Mahābrāhmaṇa.

The Pañchatantraka of Vishṇuśarman. (1896). Bombay: Nirṇayasāgar Press. Edited by Kāśīnāth Pāṇḍuraṅg Parab.

Praśnopaniṣad. See Eighteen Principal Upaniṣads.

Raghuvaṃśa of Kālidāsa. (1948). Bombay: Nirṇayasāgar Press. With the commentary Sañjīvinī of Mallinātha; extracts from the commentaries of Vallabhadeva, Hemādri, Dinkara Misra Charitavardhan, Sumativyaya (Raghuvaṃśasāra); critical and explanatory notes, various readings, and indexes. With an introduction by H. D. Velankar.

Rājanighaṇṭu of Naraharipaṇḍita. (1933). 2nd ed. Calcutta: Siddheśvarayantra. Edited by Āśubodha Vidyābhūṣaṇa and Nityabodha Vidyāratna.

Rāmāyaṇamañjarī of Kṣemendra. (1903). Bombay: Nirṇayasāgar Press. Edited by Bhavadatta Śāstrī and Kāśīnāth Pāṇḍuraṅg Parab. Kāvyamālā Series, vol. 83.

Rāmcaritmānas of Tulsīdās. See Śrīrāmacaritamānasa of Tulsīdāsa.

Ṛgveda-Samhitā. (1933). 5 vols. Poona: Vaidic Samshodhan Mandal. With the commentary of Sāyaṇāchārya.

Rig Veda. (1994). Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press. A metrically restored text with an introduction and notes. Edited by Barend A. van Nooten and Gary B. Holland. Harvard Oriental Series, vol. 50.

Ṛtusaṃhāra of Kālidāsa. (1897). Mumbai: Gopal Nārāyaṇ Company Booksellers.

Saddharmalaṅkāvatārasūtra. (1963). Darbhanga: Mithila Institute. Edited by P. L. Vaidya. Buddhist Sanskrit Texts, no. 3.

The Sāhityadarpaṇa of Viśvanātha. (1923). 2nd ed. Bombay: Nirṇayasāgar Press. Edited by P. V. Kane.

Saṅghabhedavastu. See The Gilgit Manuscript of the Saṅghabhedavastu.

The Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra. (1888–1889). 4 vols. Calcutta: Asiatic Society of Bengal. Edited by Alfred Hillebrandt. Bibliotheca Indica, no. 99.

Śāradātilakam of Śrī Lakṣmaṇa Deśikendra. (1997). Vol. 1. Varanasi: Sampurnanand Sanskrit University. With the commentary Padārthādarśa by Śrī Rāghava Bhaṭṭa. Edited by Karuṇāpati Tripāthī. Yogatantra-Granthamālā, vol. 27.

Śatakatrayam of Bhartṛhari. See Bhartṛhari's Nītiśataka and Vairāgyaśataka.

Śatapatha Brāhmaṇam. (1940). 5 vols. Bombay: Laxmi Venkateshwar Steam Press. With the commentary of Vedarthaprakash.

The Saundarananda of Aśvaghoṣa. (1928–1932). 2 vols. Lahore: Oxford University Press. Edited and translated by E. H. Johnston. Panjab University Oriental Publications, no. 14. Reprint in 1 vol. Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass, 1975.

The Siddhānta Kaumudī of Bhaṭṭoji Dīkṣita. (1906). 2 vols. Allahabad: Pāṇini Office, Bhuvaneshwari Ashram. Edited and translated into English by the late Śrīśa Chandra Vasu. Reprint Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass, 1966.

The Śiśupālavadha of Māgha. (1902). 3rd ed. Bombay: Nirṇayasāgar Press. With the commentary (Sarvāṅkaṣā) of Mallinātha. Edited by Durgāprasād and Śivadatta. Revised by Wāsudeva Laxmaṇ Śāstrī Paṇśīkar.

Śivapurāṇam. (1906). Bombay: Veṅkaṭeśvara Press.

Śrautakośa. (1958). 2 vols. Poona: Vaidika Saṃśodhana Maṇḍala. Encyclopedia of vedic ritual comprising the two complementary sections, namely, the Sanskrit section and the English section.

Srimad Bhagavad Gita Tatparya Nirnaya of Acharya Madhva. (2013). Sanskrit text input by H. K. Srinivasa Rao. Last modified August 26, 2013. https://srimadhvyasa.files.wordpress.com/2011/12/sanskrit-githatatparyanirnaya-26082013.pdf.

Śrīmahābhāratatātparyanirṇaya of Śrī Ānandatīrthabhagavatpāda (Madhva). (2009). Udupi: Tatvasaṃśodhanasaṃsat. Edited by Bannañje Govindācārya.

Śrīrāmacaritamānasa of Tulsīdāsa. (1958). Gorakhpur: Gita Press. With a commentary by Hanumānprasād Poddār.

Śrītantrāloka of Abhinavagupta. (2002). Vol. 5. Varanasi: Chowkhamba Vidyabhawan. With the commentary Viveka by Ācārya Śrī Jayaratha and Jñānavatī-Hindi commentary. Edited by Radheshyam Chaturvedi. Vidyabhawan Prachyavidya Granthamala 120.

Svapnavāsavadattam. See Bhāsanāṭakacakram.

Śvetāśvataropaniṣad. See Eighteen Principal Upaniṣads.

Taittirīyabrāhmaṇam. (1898). Poona: Ānandāśrama Press. Ānandāśrama Sanskrit Series, no. 37.

Taittirīyāraṇyakam. See Taittirīyabrāhmaṇam.

Taittirīya Saṃhitā. (1900–1908). 9 vols. Poona: Ānandāśrama Press. Edited by Kāśīnāth Śāstrī Āgāśe. Ānandāśrama Sanskrit Series, no. 42. Reprint 1961.

Taittirīyasaṃhitā of the Black Yajurveda. (1894–1898). 10 vols. Mysore: Government Oriental Library Series. With the commentary of Bhaṭṭabhāskaramiśra. Edited by A. Mahadeva Sastri and K. Rangacharya. Reprint Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass, 1986.

Taittirīyopaniṣad. See Eighteen Principal Upaniṣads.

Tāṇḍya Mahābrāhmaṇa (= Pañcaviṃśabrāhmaṇa). (1870–1874). 2 vols. Calcutta: Asiatic Society of Bengal. Edited by Ānandachandra Vedāntavāgīśa. Bibliotheca Indica, no. 62.

Tantrāloka. See Śrītantrāloka.

The Trikāṇḍaśesha of Purushottamadeva. (1889). Bombay: Nirṇayasāgar Press. Edited by Durgāprasād, Kāśīnāth Pāṇḍuraṅg Parab, and Śivadatta. Abhidhāna-Sangraha, or a Collection of Sanskrit Ancient Lexicons Series, no. 2.

Uṇādisūtra. See Siddhānta Kaumudī.

Upaniṣatsaṃgraha. (1970). Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass. Edited by Jagadīśa Śāstri.

Uttararāmacaritam of Bhavabhūti. (1922). Bombay: Nirṇayasāgar Press. Edited by Shripad Krishna Belvalkar. Published by arrangement with Harvard University Press. Orginally Rama's Later History, or Uttara-Rama-Charita. Part 2: The Text, with Indexes, Glossaries, etc. Harvard Oriental Series, vol. 22.

The Vaijayantī of Yādavaprakāśa. (1893). Madras: Madras Sanskrit and Vernacular Text Publication Society. Edited by Gustav Oppert.

The Vājasaneyi-Sanhitā in the Mādhyandina and the Kāṇva-Śākha. Pt. 1 in The White Yajurveda. Berlin: F. Dümmler. With the commentary of Mahīdhara. Edited by Albrecht Weber.

Vāmanapurāṇa. (1967). Varanasi: All-India Kashiraj Trust. Edited by Anand Swarup Gupta.

Varāhapurāṇam. (1973). 2 vols. Calcutta: Gurumandal Press. Gurumandal Series, no. 19.

Vasiṣṭha Dharmasūtra. (1883). Bombay: Government Central Book Depot. Bombay Sanskrit Series, no. 23.

Vāyupurāṇam. (1905). Poona: Ānandāśrama Press. Ānandāśrama Sanskrit Series, no. 49.

Viṣṇudharmottarapurāṇa. (1912). Vol. 3. Bombay: Veṅkateśvara Steam Press. Edited by Kṣemarāja Śrīkṛṣṇadāsa.

Viṣṇupurāṇa. (1972). Calcutta: n. p. With the commentary of Śrīdhara. Edited by Sītārāmadāson Kāranātha.

Viṣṇusmṛti. (1964). 2 vols. Madras: Adyar Library and Research Centre. With the commentary Keśavavaijayantī of Nandapaṇḍita. Edited by V. Krishnamacharya. Adyar Library Series, vol. 93.

Viśvākoṣa. See Viśvaprakāśa.

Viśvaprakāśa of Śrī Maheśvara. (1911). Benares: Chowkhamba Sanskrit Book Depot. Edited by Śrī Śīlaskandha Sthavira and Pt. Ratna Gopāla Bhaṭṭa. Chowkhamba Sanskrit Series, no. 37.

The Vyākaraṇa-Mahābhāṣya of Patañjali. (1962). 3 vols. 3rd ed. Poona: Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute. Edited by F. Kielhorn.

Yājñavalkyasmṛti of Yogīśvara Yājñavalkya. (1949). 5th ed. Bombay: Nirṇayasāgar Press. With the commentary Mitākṣarā of Vijñāneśvara. Edited by Narayan Ram Acharya.

SECONDARY SOURCES

Adhikari, N. S. (1920–1921). "Lanka of Ravana." JBBRAS 25.3, pp. 498–503.

Agrawal, Jagannath. (1975). "The Authenticity of the Uttarakanda of Valmiki's Ramayana." Vishveshvaranand Indological Journal 13.2, pp. 1–5.

Aklujkar, Vidyut. (2000). "Crying Dogs and Laughing Trees in Rāma's Kingdom: Self-reflexivity in Ānanda Rāmāyaṇa." In Questioning Ramayanas: A South Asian Tradition. Edited by Paula Richman. New Delhi: Oxford University Press, pp. 83–103; 370–74.

Antoine, Robert. (1975). Rama and the Bards: Epic Memory in the Ramayana. Calcutta: Writers Workshop.

Apte, V. S. (1957–1959). The Practical Sanskrit-English Dictionary. 3 vols. Poona: Prasad Prakashan.

Barnett, Lionel D. (1914). Antiquities of India: An Account on the History and Culture of Ancient Hindustan. New York: Putnam. Reprint Calcutta: Punthi Pustak, 1964.

Belvalkar, Shripad Krishna. (1915). An Account of the Different Existing Systems of Sanskrit Grammar. Poona: S. K. Belvalkar.

Benoît, Philippe, trans. (1999). See under Translations of the Uttarakāṇḍa.

Bhandarkar, D. R. (1937). "Daṇḍakāraṇya." In Jhā Commemoration Volume. Edited by Shripad Krishna Belvalkar, Surendra Nath Dasgupta, and Gañgānātha Jhā. Poona: Oriental Book Agency, pp. 47–57.

Bhat, G. K. (1965). Bhavabhūti's Uttara-rāma-carita. Surat: Popular Publishing House.

Bhate, Saroja, ed. and trans. (2000). Subhāṣitaśatakam: A Collection of Subhāṣita's [sic] with Translation in Marathi and English. Pt. 1. Publication of the Centre for Advanced Study in Sanskrit, Class G, No. 2. Pune: University of Pune.

Bhatt, B. N. (1976). "Estimating the Traditions of the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa by the Presence or Absence of the Syllables of Gāyatrī in Them." JOIB 26.2, pp. 145–61.

Bhatt, G. H., ed. (1960). Introduction to The Bālakāṇḍa: The First Book of the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa, The National Epic of India. Baroda: Oriental Institute, pp. xiii–xxviii.

Bhattacharyya, N. N. (1991). The Geographical Dictionary: Ancient and Early Medieval India. New Delhi: Munshiram Manoharlal.

Biardieu, M. (1999). "Notice." In Le Rāmāyaṇa de Vālmīki. Canto 7: Jusqu'à la fin des temps. Edited by Madeleine Biardeau and Marie-Claude Porcher. Translated by Phillipe Benoît. Paris: Gallimard, pp. 1678–1708.

Bloomfield, Maurice. (1920). "The Dohada or Craving of Pregnant Women: A Motif of Hindu Fiction." JAOS 40, pp. 1–24.

Bodewitz, H. W. (1973). Jaiminīya Brāhmaṇa, I, 1–65. Translation and commentary with a study of the Agnihotra and Prāṇāgnihotra. Orientalia Rheno-traiectina, vol. 17. Leiden: E. J. Brill.

Böhtlingk, Otto, and Rudolph Roth. (1855–1875). Sanskrit-Wörterbuch. 7 vols. St. Petersburg: Kaiserlichen Akademie der Wissenschaften. Reprint in 7 vols. Osnabrück/Wiesbaden, 1966.

Brockington, John L. (1984). Righteous Rāma: The Evolution of an Epic. Delhi: Oxford University Press.
———. (1998). The Sanskrit Epics. Leiden: E. J. Brill.
Brockington, J. L. (John L.), and Mary Brockington. (2006). Rāma the Steadfast: An Early Form of the Rāmāyaṇa. London: Penguin Classics.
Brodbeck, Simon Pearse. (2009). The Mahābhārata Patriline: Gender, Culture, and the Royal Hereditary. Surrey, U.K.: Ashgate Publishing.
———. (2011a). "Solar and Lunar Lines in the Mahābhārata." Religions of South Asia 5.1.5/2, pp. 127–52.
———. (2011b). Who's Who in Ancient India? The Solar and Lunar Dynasties in the Harivaṃśa. Last modified September 13, 2011. http://blogs.cardiff.ac.uk/historyofgenealogy/wp-content/uploads/sites/128/2013/08/Bigdoc.pdf.
Bronner, Yigal. (2009). "Change in Disguise: The Early Discourse on Vyājastuti." JAOS 129.2, pp. 179–98.
Brown, W. Norman. (1927). "Change of Sex as a Hindu Story Motif." JAOS 47, pp. 3–24.
———. (1940). "The Basis for the Hindu Act of Truth." Review of Religions 5, pp. 36–45.
———. (1968). "The Metaphysics of the Truth Act (satyakriyā)." In Mélanges de'Indianisme à la Mémoire de Louis Renou. Paris: E. de Boccard, pp. 171–77.
———. (1972). "Duty as Truth in Ancient India." Proceedings of the American Philosophical Society 116.3, pp. 252–68.
Bulcke, Camille. (1960). "The Rāmāyaṇa: Its History and Character." PO 25, pp. 36–66.
———. (1971). Rām-kathā: Utpatti aur Vikās. Rev. ed. Allahabad: Allahabad University.
Burnell, A. C. (1875). On the Aindra School of Sanskrit Grammarians: Their Place in the Sanskrit and Subordinate Literature. Mangalore: Basel Mission Book and Tract Depository.
Chatterjee, Asim Kumar. (1972–1973). "A Note on the Uttarakāṇḍa of the Rāmāyaṇa." JOIB 22, pp. 304–15.
Chaudhuri, S. B. (1951). "Laṅkā." IHQ 27, pp. 119–28.
Citrāv, M. M. Siddheśvar Śāstrī. (1964). Prācina Caritrakośa. Poona: Bhāratīya Caritrakośa Maṇḍal.
Dallapiccola, Anna L. (2002). Dictionary of Hindu Lore and Legend. New York: Thames and Hudson.
Dante Alighieri. (1966–1967). La Commedia secondo l'antica vulgata. Edited by Giorgio Petrocchi. 4 vols. Milan: Mondadori. Reprint Florence: Le Lettere, 1994.
Das, Nobin Chandra. (1971). A Note on the Ancient Geography of Asia: Compiled from Vālmīki-Rāmāyaṇa. Reprint Varanasi: Bharat-Bharati. Originally published 1896.
Dasgupta, Rana. (2014). Capital: The Eruption of Delhi. New York: Penguin Press.
Dave, K. N. (1985). Birds in Sanskrit Literature. Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass.
Dayal, Naina. (2009). "Tellers of Tales: Paurāṇikas, Sūtas, Kuśīlava, Vyāsa, and Vālmīki." Ph.D. dissertation. Jawaharlal Nehru University. http://hdl.handle.net/10603/17668.
———. (2011). "On the Premier Performances of the Ramayana of Valmiki." In Insights and Interventions: Essays in Honour of Uma Chakravarti. Edited by Kumkum Roy. Delhi: Primus Books, pp. 117–42.
DCS-The Digital Corpus of Sanskrit. See Hellwig (2010–2012).

De, S. C. (1976). Historicity of Rāmāyaṇa and the Indo-Aryan Society in India and Ceylon. Delhi: Ajanta Publications.

Deshpande, N. A., trans. (1988–1992). The Padma-Purāṇa. 10 vols. Ancient Indian Traditions and Mythologies Series, vols. 39–48. Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass.

Dey, Nundo Lal. (1927). The Geographical Dictionary of Ancient and Mediaeval India. 2nd ed. Calcutta Oriental Series, no. 21, E. 13. London: Luzac and Co.

Dikshitar, V. R. Ramachandra. (1933). "South India in the Rāmāyaṇa." Proceedings of the Seventh All India Oriental Conference, Baroda, December 1933, pp. 243–52.

———. (1944). War in Ancient India. Madras: Macmillan.

Divanji, P. C. (1963). Introduction to The Araṇyakāṇḍa: The Third Book of the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa, The National Epic of India. Edited by P. C. Divanji. Baroda: Oriental Institute Baroda, pp. ix–xxxii.

Doniger, Wendy. See O'Flaherty, Wendy Doniger.

Dutt, M. N., trans. (1894). See under Translations of the Uttarakāṇḍa.

Eck, Diana L. (1998). Darśan. 3rd ed. New York: Columbia University Press.

Emeneau, Murray B. (1953). "The Composite Bow in India." Proceedings of the American Philosophical Society 99, pp. 77–87.

———. (1962). "Barkcloth in India–Sanskrit valkala." JAOS 82.2, pp. 161–70.

———. (1969). "Sanskrit Syntactic Particles—kila, khalu, nūnam." Indo-Iranian Journal 11.4, pp. 241–68.

Emeneau, M. B., and K. Kushalappa Gowda. (1974). "The Etymology of the Name Sāyaṇa." JAOS 94.2, pp. 210–12.

Fitzgerald, Edward, trans. (1859). Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam, the Astronomer-Poet of Persia. London: Bernard Quaritch.

Freud, Sigmund. (1914). Die Traumdeutung. Leipzig: Franz Deuticke.

Geldner, Karl Friedrich, trans. (1951–1957). Der Rig-Veda. 3 vols. Harvard Oriental Series, vols. 33–35. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press.

Gerow, Edwin. (1971). A Glossary of Indian Figures of Speech. The Hague: Mouton.

Ghosh, Jogendra Chandra. (1929). "Rāvaṇa's Laṅkā Located in Central India." IHQ 5, pp. 355–56.

Glucklich, Ariel. (1988). "The Royal Scepter (Daṇḍa) as Legal Punishment and Sacred Symbol." History of Religions 28.2, pp. 97–122.

Gnoli, Raniero. (1968). The Aesthetic Experience According to Abhinavagupta. 2nd ed. Chowkhamba Sanskrit Studies, vol. 62. Varanasi: Chowkhamba Sanskrit Series Office.

Goldman, Robert P. (1971). "Myth as Literature in Ancient India: The Saga of Śukrācārya and the Demons (Matsyapurāṇa, 47)." Journal of South Asian Literature (formerly Mahfil) 7.3–4, pp. 45–62.

———. (1972). "Akṛtavraṇa vs. Śrīkṛṣṇa as Narrators of the Legend of the Bhārgava Rāma à propos: Some Observations of Dr. V. S. Sukthankar." ABORI 53, pp. 161–73.

———. (1976). "Vālmīki and the Bhṛgu Connection." JAOS 96.1, pp. 97–101.

———. (1977). Gods, Priests, and Warriors: The Bhṛgus of the Mahābhārata. New York: Columbia University Press.

———. (1978). "Fathers, Sons, and Gurus: Oedipal Conflict in the Sanskrit Epics." JIP 6.4, pp. 325–92.

———. (1980). "Rāmaḥ Sahalakṣmaṇaḥ: Psychological and Literary Aspects of the Composite Hero of Vālmīki's Rāmāyaṇa." JIP 8, pp. 11–51.

———. (1982). "Matricide, Renunciation, and Compensation in the Legends of Two Warrior-Heroes of the Sanskrit Epics." In the volume of the proceedings of the Stockholm Conference Seminar in Indological Studies. Indologica Taurinensia 10, pp. 117–31.

———. (1986). "A City of the Heart: Epic Mathurā and the Indian Imagination." JAOS 106.3, pp. 471–83.

———. (1989). "Tracking the Elusive Ṛkṣa: The Tradition of Bears as Rāma's Allies in Various Versions of the Rāmakathā." JAOS 109.4, pp. 545–52.

———. (1993). "Transsexualism, Gender, and Anxiety in Traditional India." JAOS 113.3, pp. 374–401.

———. (1995). "Gods in Hiding: The Mahābhārata's Virāṭa Parvan and the Divinity of the Indian Epic Hero." In Modern Evaluation of the Mahābhārata: Professor R. K. Sharma Felicitation Volume. Edited by Satya Pal Narang. New Delhi: Nag Publishers, pp. 73–100.

———. (1997). "Eṣa Dharmaḥ Sanātanaḥ: Situational Ethics in the Epic Age." In Relativism, Suffering and Beyond: Essays in Memory of Bimal K. Matilal. Edited by Purusottama Bilimoria and J. N. Mohanty. New Delhi: Oxford University Press, pp. 187–223.

———. (2000). "Rāvaṇa's Kitchen: A Testimony of Desire and the Other." In Questioning Ramayanas: A South Asian Tradition. Edited by Paula Richman. New Delhi: Oxford University Press, pp. 105–16; 374–76.

———. (2004). "Resisting Rāma: Dharmic Debates on Gender and Hierarchy and the Work of the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa." In Rāmāyaṇa Revisited. Edited by Mandakranta Bose. New York: Oxford University Press, pp. 19–46.

———. (2006). "How Fast Do Monkeys Fly? How Long Do Demons Sleep?" Rivista di Studi Sudasiatici, Rome, no. 1, pp. 185–207.

———. (2008). "The Spirit of the Age: Social Vision and Historical Perspective in the Mahābhārata and the Vālmīkirāmāyaṇa." In Śrutimahatī (Glory of Sanskrit Tradition): Ram Karan Sharma Felicitation Volume. Vol. 1. Edited by Radhavallabh Tripathi. New Delhi: Pratibha Prakashan, pp. 305–22.

———. (2015a). "Ādyantaḥ: The Uttarakāṇḍa's Challenges for its Authors and Readers." In Proceedings of the 15th World Sanskrit Conference. Vol. 5: The Churning of the Epics and Purāṇas at the 15th World Sanskrit Conference. Edited by Simon Brodbeck, Alfred Hiltebeitel, and Adam Bowles. New Delhi: Rashtriya Sanskrit Sansthan and D. K. Printworld, pp. 284–97.

———. (2015b). "Carried Away: Abduction, Abjection, and Anxiety in the Indian Epic Imagination." In Sanskrit Studies. Vol. 4. Edited by Upendra Rao. New Delhi: D. K. Printworld, pp. 72–92.

———. (2016). "On the upatva of upākhyānas: Is the Uttarakāṇḍa of the Rāmāyaṇa an upākhyāna of the Mahābhārata?" In Argument and Design: The Mahābhārata as Literature. Edited by Vishwa Adluri. Leiden: E. J. Brill.

Goldman, Robert P., ed. and trans. (1984). The Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki: An Epic of Ancient India. Vol. I, Bālakāṇḍa. Introduction by Robert P. Goldman. Annotation by Robert P. Goldman and Sally J. Sutherland. Princeton, N.J.: Princeton University Press.

Goldman, Robert P., and Sally J. Sutherland Goldman. (1994). "Vālmīki's Hanumān: Characterization and Occluded Divinity in the Rāmāyaṇa." Journal of Vaiṣṇava Studies 2.4, pp. 31–54.

Goldman, Robert P., and Sally J. Sutherland Goldman, eds. and trans. (1996). The Rāmā- yaṇa of Vālmīki: An Epic of Ancient India. Vol. V: Sundarakāṇḍa. Introduction and annotation by Robert P. Goldman and Sally J. Sutherland Goldman. Princeton, N. J.: Princeton University Press.

———. (2009). Introduction to The Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki: An Epic of Ancient India. Vol. VI: Yuddhakāṇḍa. Princeton, N.J.: Princeton University Press, pp. 1–118.

Goldman, Robert P., Sally J. Sutherland Goldman, and Barend van Nooten, trans. (2009). The Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki: An Epic of Ancient India. Vol. VI: Yuddhakāṇḍa. Annotation by Robert P. Goldman, Sally J. Sutherland Goldman, and Barend van Nooten. Edited with introduction by Robert P. Goldman and Sally J. Sutherland Goldman. Princeton, N.J.: Princeton University Press.

Goldman, Robert P., and J. L. Masson. (1969). "Who Knows Rāvaṇa?: A Narrative Difficulty in the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa." ABORI 50, pp. 95–100.

Goldman, Sally J. Sutherland (Sally J. Sutherland). (1999). "A Tale of Two Tales: The Episode of Hanumān's Childhood in the Critical Edition." Purāṇa 41.21, pp. 132–53; JOIB 48.1–4, pp. 51–57.

———. (2000a). "Anklets Away: The Symbolism of Jewelry and Ornamentation in Vālmīki's Rāmāyaṇa." In A Varied Optic: Contemporary Studies in the Ramayana. Edited by Mandakranta Bose. Vancouver: Institute of Asian Studies, University of British Columbia, pp. 125–53. Reissued as The Ramayana Culture: Text, Performance and Iconography. New Delhi: D. K. Printworld, 2003.

———. (2000b). "Speaking Gender: Vāc and the Vedic Construction of the Feminine." In Invented Identities: The Interplay of Gender, Religion, and Politics in India. Edited by Julia Leslie and Mary McGee. Delhi: Oxford University Press, pp. 57–83.

———. (2000c). "The Voice of Sītā in Vālmīki's Sundarakāṇḍa." In Questioning Ramayanas: A South Asian Tradition. Edited by Paula Richman. New Delhi: Oxford University Press, pp. 223–38; 390–95.

———. (2003). "Re-siting Sītā: Gender and Narrative in Vālmīki's Sundarakāṇḍa." Purāṇa 45.2, pp. 115–35.

———. (2004). "Gendered Narratives: Gender, Space, and Narrative Structures in Vālmīki's Bālakāṇḍa." In The Ramayana Revisited. Edited by Mandakranta Bose. New York: Oxford University Press, pp. 47–85.

———. (2009). "Sītā's War: Gender and Narrative in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of Vālmīki's Rāmāyaṇa. In Epic Undertakings: Papers of the 12th World Sanskrit Conference, vol. 2. Edited by Robert P. Goldman and Muneo Tokunaga. Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass, pp. 139–68.

———. (2010a). "Illusory Evidence: The Construction of Māyā in Vālmīki's Rāmāyaṇa." In Epic and Argument in Sanskrit Literary History: Essays in Honor of Robert P. Goldman. Edited by Sheldon Pollock. New Delhi: Manohar, pp. 209–33.

———. (2010b). "Women at the Margins: Vālmīki, Women, and Religious Anxiety." Paper presented at Ramayana: Retelling, Representation, and Reinterpretation in Asia Conference, Asian Civilisations Museum, Singapore, July 2010.

———. (2012). "Nikumbhilā's Grove: Rākṣasa Rites in Vālmīki's Rāmāyaṇa." In Battle, Bards and Brāhmins: Papers of the 13th World Sanskrit Conference, vol. 2. Edited by J. L. Brockington. Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass, pp. 255–75.

———. (2014). "Blessed Events: The Uttarakāṇḍa's Construction of Sītā's Pregnancy." In Looking Within, Looking Without: Exploring Households in the Subcontinent through Time. Edited by Kumkum Roy. New Delhi: Primus, pp. 71–99.

———. (2015a). "Critical Evidence: Vālmīki's Uttarakāṇḍa and the Critical Edition." In Proceedings of the 15th World Sanskrit Conference. Vol. 5: The Churning of the Epics and Purāṇas at the 15th World Sanskrit Conference. Edited by Simon Brodbeck, Alfred Hiltebeitel, and Adam Bowles. New Delhi: Rashtriya Sanskrit Sansthan and D. K. Printworld, pp. 298–324.

———. (2015b). "The Legend of King Nimi and the Uttarakāṇḍa of the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa." In Sanskrit Studies. Vol. 4. Edited by Upendra Rao. New Delhi: D. K. Printworld, pp. 111–44.

———. (2016). "Of Daddies and Demons: The Rāmopākhyāna and the Rakṣovaṃśa of the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa." In Argument and Design: The Mahābhārata as Literature. Edited by Vishwa Adluri. Leiden: E. J. Brill.

Goldstücker, Theodor. (1861). Pāṇini: His Place in Sanskrit Literature. London: N. Trübner and Co.

Gonda, Jan. (1975a). "Abbreviated and Inverted Nominal Compounds in Sanskrit." In Selected Studies: Indo-European Linguistics. Vol. 3: Sanskrit Grammatical and Philological Studies. Edited by Jan Gonda. Leiden: E. J. Brill, pp. 43–68. Originally published in Pratidānam. The Hague: Mouton, 1968. Edited by J. C. Heesterman, G. H. Schokker, and V. I. Subramoniam, pp. 221–46.

———. (1975b). Vedic Literature (Saṃhitās and Brāhmaṇas). A History of Indian Literature. Vol. I, fasc. 1: Veda and Upanishads. Wiesbaden: Otto Harrassowitz.

Gonzáles-Reimann, Luis. (2002). The Mahābhārata and the Yugas: India's Great Epic Poem and the Hindu System of World Ages. New York: Peter Lang.

Gorresio, Gaspare, ed. (1843–1867). See under Texts of the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa.

Gorresio, Gaspare, trans. (1870). See under Translations of the Uttarakāṇḍa.

Grierson, George A. (1912). "Paiśācī, Piśācas, and 'Modern Piśāca.'" Zeitschrift der deutschen morgenländischen Gesellschaft 66, pp. 49–86.

———. (1926). "On the Adbhuta-Ramayana." Bulletin of the School of Oriental Studies 4.1, pp. 11–27.

Guruge, Ananda. (1960). The Society of the Rāmāyaṇa. Maharagama, Ceylon: Saman Press. Second edition, New Delhi: Abhinav Publications, 1991.

Hara, Minoru. (1974). "A Note on the Rākṣasa Form of Marriage." JAOS 94.3, pp. 296–306.

———. (1986). "The Holding of the Hair (Kesa-grahana)." Acta Orientalia 47, pp. 67–92.

Harilal, Rai Bahadur. (1937). "The Situation of Rāvaṇa's Laṅkā." In Jhā Commemoration Volume. Edited by Shripad Krishna Belvalkar, Surendra Nath Dasgupta, and Gaṅgānātha Jhā. Poona: Oriental Book Agency, pp. 151–61.

Heesterman, J. C. (1957). The Ancient Indian Royal Consecration: The Rājasūya Described According to the Yajus Texts and Annoted [sic]. Disputationes Rheno-Trajectinae, 2. The Hague: Mouton.

Hellwig, Oliver. (2010–2012). DCS-The Digital Corpus of Sanskrit. Heidelberg. http://kjc-fs-cluster.kjc.uni-heidelberg.de/dcs.

L'Hernault, Françoise. (1978). L'iconographie de Subrahmaṇya au Tamilnad. Publications de l'institut français d'indologie, no. 59. Pondichéry: Institut français d'indologie.

Hertel, Johannes. (1912). The Panchatantra-Text of Purnabhadra: Critical Introduction and List of Variants. Harvard Oriental Series, vol. 12. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press.

Hiltebeitel, Alf. (2001). Rethinking the Mahābhārata: A Reader's Guide to the Education of the Dharma King. Chicago: University of Chicago Press.

Hiltebeitel, Alf, and Barbara D. Miller, eds. (1998). Hair: Its Power and Meaning in Asian Cultures. Albany: State University of New York Press.

Hobson-Jobson. See Yule and Burnell (1903).

Hopkins, Edward Washburn. (1915). Epic Mythology. Grundriss der Indo-Arischen Philologie und Altertumskunde, Vol. 3, No. 1B. Strassburg: Karl J. Trübner. Reprint Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass, 1974.

———. (1932). "The Oath in the Hindu Epic." JAOS 52.4, pp. 316–33.

Hora, Sunder Lal. (1952). "Fish in the Rāmāyaṇa." JAS 18.2, pp. 63–69.

Indian Express. (2009). "After Narmada Estuary, More Dolphins Seen on South Gujarat Coast near Tithal." Vadodara edition, November 18. http://archive.indianexpress.com/news/after-narmada-estuary-more-dolphins-seen-on-south-gujarat-coast-near-tithal/543037/1.

Ingalls, Daniel H. H. (1965). An Anthology of Sanskrit Court Poetry: Vidyākara's Subhāṣitaratnakoṣa. Harvard Oriental Series, vol. 44. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press.

Ingalls, Daniel H. H., Jeffrey Moussaieff Masson (J. L. Masson), and M. V. Patwardhan, trans. (1990). The Dhvanyāloka of Ānandavardhana with the Locana of Abhinavagupta. Edited with an introduction by Daniel H. H. Ingalls. Harvard Oriental Series, vol. 49. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press.

Insler, Stanley. (1989). "The Shattered Head Split and the Epic Tale of Śakuntalā." Bulletin d'études Indiennes 7–8, pp. 97–139.

Iyer, T. Paramasiva. (1940). Rāmāyaṇa and Laṅkā. Bangalore: Bangalore Press.

Jacobi, Hermann. (1893). Das Rāmāyaṇa: Geschichte und Inhalt, nebst Concordanz der gedruckten Recensionen. Bonn: Friedrich Cohen.

Jamison, Stephanie W. (1996). Sacrificed Wife/Sacrificer's Wife: Women, Ritual, and Hospitality in Ancient India. New York: Oxford University Press.

Jhala, G. C. (1966). Introduction to The Sundarakāṇḍa: The Fifth Book of the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa, The National Epic of India. Edited by G. C. Jhala. Baroda: Oriental Institute Baroda, pp. ix–xxxv.

John, Daniel. (1940). "Rāvaṇa's Laṅkā." ABORI 21.3–4, pp. 270–79.

Kane, Pandurang V. (1962–1975). History of Dharmaśāstra. 8 vols. Poona: Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute. Vol. 1, Pt. 1 (1968); Vol. 1, Pt. 2, 2nd ed. (1975); Vol. 2, Pt. 1, 2nd ed. (1974); Vol. 2, Pt. 2, 2nd ed. (1974); Vol. 3, 2nd ed. (1973); Vol. 4, 2nd ed. (1973); Vol. 5, Pt. 1, 2nd ed. (1974); Vol. 5, Pt. 2 (1962).

———. (1971). History of Sanskrit Poetics. 4th ed. Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass.

Kanjilal, D. K. (1992). "The Genuineness of the Uttarakāṇḍa of the Rāmāyaṇa" JORM 56–62 (1986–1992), pp. 318–25.

Keislar, Allan. (1998). "Searching for the Bhuśuṇḍi-rāmāyaṇa: One Text or Many?: The Ādi-rāmāyaṇa, the Bhuśuṇḍi-rāmāyaṇa, and the Rāmāyaṇa-mahā-mālā." Ph.D. dissertation. University of California, Berkeley.

Keith, Arthur Berriedale. (1915). "The Date of the Ramayana." JRAS 47.2, pp. 318–28.

———. (1925). The Religion and Philosophy of the Veda and Upanishads. Harvard Oriental Series, vols. 31, 32. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press.

Kibe, M. V. (1914). "Ravana's Lanka Discovered." Indian Review 15, pp. 617–23.

———. (1928). "Rāvaṇa's Laṅkā Located in Central India." IHQ 4, pp. 694–702.

———. (1936). "Further Light on Rāvaṇa's Laṅkā Located in Central India from Vālmīki's Rāmāyaṇa." ABORI 17.4, pp. 371–84.
———. (1939). "Inhabitants of the Country around Rāvaṇa's Laṅkā in Amarakaṇṭaka." In A Volume of Eastern and Indian Studies: Presented to Professor F. W. Thomas. Edited by S. M. Katre and P. K. Gode. New Indian Antiquary, extra series, 1. Bombay: Karnatak Publishing House, pp. 144–45.
———. (1941). "Cultural Descendants of Rāvaṇa, the Ruler of Laṅkā." In A Volume of Studies in Indology, Presented to Prof. P. V. Kane on his 61st Birthday. Edited by S. M. Katre and P. K. Gode. Poona: Oriental Book Agency, pp. 264–66.
———. (1947). Location of Laṅkā. Poona: Manohar Granthamala.
———. (1960). "Laṅkā as Described in Vālmīki's Rāmāyaṇa." In Professor P. K. Gode: Commemoration Volume. Edited by H. L. Hariyappa and Madhukar Mangesh Patkar. Poona: Oriental Book Agency, pp. 93–107.
Kinsley, David R. (1986). Hindu Goddesses: Visions of the Divine Feminine in the Hindu Religious Tradition. Berkeley and Los Angeles: University of California Press.
Kipling, Rudyard. (1907). Just So Stories. New York: Doubleday, Page, and Company.
Kishwar, Madhu. (2000). "Yes to Sita, No to Ram: The Continuing Hold of Sita on Popular Imagination in India." In Questioning Ramayanas: A South Asian Tradition. Edited by Paula Richman. New Delhi: Oxford University Press, pp. 285–308; 400–401. Originally published in Manushi 98 (1997), pp. 20–31.
Koskikallio, Petteri. (1993). "Jaiminībhārata and aśvamedha." In Proceedings of the Eighth World Sanskrit Conference, Vienna 1990. Wiener Zeitschrift für die Kunde Südasiens 36 (Supplementband), pp. 111–19.
Krishnamoorthy, K. (1968). "Traditional Indian Aesthetics in Theory and Practice." In Indian Aesthetics and Art Activity: Proceedings of a Seminar. Simla: Indian Institute of Advanced Study, pp. 42–54.
Kulkarni, V. M. (1959). "The Origin and Development of the Rāma-story in Jaina Literature." JOIB 9, pp. 189–204; 284–304.
———. (1990). The Story of Rāma in Jain Literature: As Presented by the Śvetāmbara and Digambara Poets in the Prakrit, Sanskrit, and Apabhraṃśa Languages. Saraswati Oriental Series, no. 3. Ahmedabad: Saraswati Pustak Bhandar.
Kulke, Hermann, and Dietmar Rothermund. (1986). A History of India. London: Croom Helm.
Lal, Vinay. (2000). "Nakedness, Nonviolence, and Brahmacharya: Gandhi's Experiments in Celibate Sexuality." Journal of the History of Sexuality 9.1–2, pp. 105–36.
Law, Bimala Churn. (1932). Geography of Early Buddhism. Delhi: Bharatiya Publishing House.
———. (1944a). Mountains of India. Publication no. 5. Calcutta: Calcutta Geographical Society.
———. (1944b). Rivers of India. Publication no. 6. Calcutta: Calcutta Geographical Society.
———. (1954). Historical Geography of Ancient India. Paris: Société Asiatique de Paris.
Lefeber, Rosalind, trans. (1994). The Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki: An Epic of Ancient India. Vol. IV: Kiṣkindhākāṇḍa. Edited by Robert P. Goldman. Princeton, N.J.: Princeton University Press.
Leslie, Julia. (1998). "A Bird Bereaved: The Identity and Significance of Vālmīki's Krauñca." JIP 26.5, pp. 455–87.

Lingat, Robert. (1973). The Classical Law of India. Translated by J. Duncan M. Derrett. Berkeley and Los Angeles: University of California Press. Originally published as Les sources du droit dans le système traditionnel de l'Inde. The Hague: Mouton, 1967.

Lutgendorf, Philip. (1990). "Ramayan: The Video." The Drama Review 34.2, pp. 127–76.

———. (2007). Hanuman's Tale: The Messages of a Divine Monkey. New York: Oxford University Press.

Mahadevan, Thennilapuram P. (2008). "On the Southern Recension of the Mahābhārata, Brahman Migrations and Brāhmī Paleography." Electronic Journal of Vedic Studies 15.2. http://www.ejvs.laurasianacademy.com/SouthernRec.pdf.

Malalasekera, G. P. (1974). Dictionary of Pāli Proper Names. 2 vols. London: Pali Text Society. Reprint Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass, 2007.

Mani, Vettam. (1975). Purāṇic Index. Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass.

Mankad, D. R. (1965). Introduction to The Kiṣkindhākāṇḍa: The Fourth Book of the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa, the National Epic of India. Edited by D. R. Mankad. Baroda: Oriental Institute Baroda, pp. ix–lxiii.

Masson, J. L. (1968). "Who Killed Cock Krauñca? Abhinavagupta's Reflections on the Origin of the Aesthetic Experience." JOIB 18.1–2, pp. 207–24.

Mayrhofer, Manfred. (1956–1980). Kurzgefasstes etymologisches Wörterbuch des Altindischen. 4 vols. Heidelberg: C. Winter.

Mehta, C. N. (1941). Sundara Kāṇḍam or The Flight of Hanuman to Lanka via Sunda Islands. Nadiad: Universal Steam Press.

Michelson, Truman. (1904). "Linguistic Archaisms of the Rāmāyaṇa." JAOS 25, pp. 89–145.

Mirashi, V. V. (1974–1975). "Location of Rāvaṇa's Laṅkā." JOIB 24, pp. 357–68.

Mishra, Dwarka Prasad. (1985). The Search for Laṅkā. Delhi: Agam Kala Prakashan.

Monier-Williams, Monier. (1899). A Sanskrit-English Dictionary. Oxford: Oxford University Press. Reprint 1964.

Nadkarni, Durgaprasad S. (1957). "On the Identity of Laṅkā." Journal of the University of Bombay 26.1, pp. 7–13.

Narasimha Moorty, C. Lakshmi. (1995). "A Note on Passages 9 and 13 of Appendix I of the Uttarakāṇḍa." In Studies in Jaina Art and Iconography and Allied Subjects in Honour of Dr. U. P. Shah. Edited by R. T. Vyas and Umakant Premanand Shah. Vadodara: Oriental Institute, pp. 211–16.

———. (2002). "Another Look at the Uttarakāṇḍa of Rāmāyaṇa and Cantos 14 and 15 of the Raghuvaṃśam." Sri Venkateswara University Oriental Journal 45, pp. 61–77.

Oberlies, Thomas. (2003). A Grammar of Epic Sanskrit. Indian Philology and South Asian Studies 5. Berlin: Walter de Gruyter.

O'Flaherty, Wendy Doniger (Wendy Doniger). (1975). Hindu Myths. Middlesex, England: Penguin Books.

———. (1976). The Origins of Evil in Hindu Mythology. Berkeley and Los Angeles: University of California Press.

Olivelle, Patrick. (1998). The Early Upaniṣads: Annotated Text and Translation. New York: Oxford University Press.

———, ed. (2015). A Sanskrit Dictionary of Law and Statecraft. Delhi: Primus Books, 2015.

Oppert, Gustav. (1893). On the Original Inhabitants of Bharatavarsa or India. Leipzig: Otto Harrassowitz.

Pagani, Brigitte. (1999). Le Rāmāyaṇa de Vālmīki. Canto 6: La guerre. Edited by Madeleine Biardeau. Paris: Gallimard.

Pandey, M. S. (1962). "Rāma's Wanderings and the Location of Laṅkā." JBORS 62, pp. 65–72.

Pandey, Rajbali. (1969). Hindu Saṃskāras: Socio-Religious Study of the Hindu Sacraments. 2nd rev. ed. Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass.

Parameswaran, Mangalam R. (2012). Rāmāyaṇa: A Condensed Version of Valmiki's Epic. [Winnipeg, Manitoba]: Larkuma.

———. (n.d.). "Appendix: Uttara-Kāṇḍa, the Pretender Kāṇḍa." Unpublished manuscript. Microsoft Word file.

Pargiter. F. E. (1894). "The Geography of Rāma's Exile." JRAS, pp. 231–64.

Patel, Gautam. (1994). "Sītātyāga, Whether Kālidāsa Wrote It First." In Pandit N. R. Bhatt Felicitation Volume. Edited by P. S. Filliozat, S. P. Narang, and C. P. Bhatta. Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass, pp. 99–106.

Penzer, N. M., ed. (1927). The Ocean of Story: Being C. H. Tawney's Translation of Somadeva's Kathā Sarit Sāgara, or Ocean of Streams of Story; Now Edited with Introduction, Fresh Explanatory Notes, and Terminal Essay. Vol. 7. London: C. J. Sawyer.

Peterson, Prof. (1891). "Pāṇini, Poet and Grammarian: With Some Remarks on the Age of Sanskrit Classical Poetry." JRAS, pp. 311–36.

Pollock, Sheldon. (1984a). "Ātmānaṃ mānuṣaṃ manye: Dharmākūṭam on the Divinity of Rāma." JOIB 33, pp. 505–28.

———. (1984b). "The Rāmāyaṇa Text and the Critical Edition." In The Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki: An Epic of Ancient India. Vol. I: Bālakāṇḍa. Introduction by Robert P. Goldman. Annotation by Robert P. Goldman and Sally J. Sutherland. Princeton, N.J.: Princeton University Press, pp. 82–93.

———. (1993). "Rāmāyaṇa and Political Imagination in India." JAS 52.2, pp. 261–97.

———. (2012). "From Rasa Seen to Rasa Heard." In Aux abords de la clairière. Edited by Caterina Guenzi and Sylvia d'Intino. Collections érudites de l'École Pratique des Hautes Études Centre. Paris: Brepols, pp. 189–207.

Pollock, Sheldon, trans. (1986). The Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki: An Epic of Ancient India. Vol. II: Ayodhyākāṇḍa. Edited by Robert P. Goldman. Introduction and annotation by Sheldon Pollock. Princeton, N.J.: Princeton University Press.

———. (1991). The Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki: An Epic of Ancient India. Vol. III: Araṇyakāṇḍa. Edited by Robert P. Goldman. Introduction and annotation by Sheldon Pollock. Princeton, N.J.: Princeton University Press.

Prakash, Om. (1987). Economy and Food in Ancient India. 2 vols. Delhi: Bharatiya Vidya Prakashan.

Pulsalker (Pulsalkar), A. D. (1966). "Location of Laṅkā." JOIB 15.3–4, pp. 335–40.

Raghavan, V. (1941–1942). "Uḍāli's Commentary on the Rāmāyaṇa: The Date and Identification of the Author and the Discovery of his Commentary." Annals of Oriental Research 6.2, University of Madras, pp. 1–8.

———. (1973). The Greater Ramayana. Varanasi: All-India Kashiraj Trust.

———. (1975). The Number of Rasas. 3rd rev. ed. Adyar Library Series, vol. 23. Madras: Adyar Library and Research Centre.

Rai, Ganga Sagar. (1991). "Kāṇḍa Structure of Rāmāyaṇa and Authenticity of Uttarakāṇḍa." Purāṇa 33.2, pp. 103–46.

Ramadas (Ramdas), G. (1925). "Aboriginal Names in the Ramayana." JBORS 11.1, pp. 41–53.

———. (1928). "Rāvaṇa's Laṅkā." IHQ 4, pp. 339–46.

———. (1929). "Rāvaṇa and His Tribes." IHQ 5, pp. 281–99.

Ramaswamy (Ramaswami) Sastri, K. S. (1938). "The Aryan Colonies of Kiṣkindhā and Laṅkā." Indian Culture 5.2, pp. 193–97.

———. (1944). Studies in Ramayana. Kirti Mandir Lecture Series, no. 9. Baroda: Baroda State Department of Education.

Ranganayakamma, Muppala. (2004). Ramayana, the Poisonous Tree: Stories, Essays, and Foot-Notes. Translated by B. R. Bapuji et al. Hyderabad: Sweet Home Publications.

Rau, Wilhelm. (1964). "Versuch einer deutschen Übersetzung der Śvetāśvatara-Upaniṣad." Asiatische Studien 17, pp. 25–46.

Renou, Louis. (1939). "Sur certains emplois d'a(n)˚ priv. en sanskrit, et notamment dans le Ṛgveda." Bulletin of the School of Oriental Studies 10.1, pp. 1–18.

———. (1954). Vocabulaire du rituel védique. Paris: Librairie C. Klincksieck.

Richman, Paula. (1991a). "E. V. Ramasami's Reading of the Rāmāyaṇa." In Many Rāmāyaṇas: The Diversity of a Narrative Tradition in South Asia. Edited by Paula Richman. Berkeley and Los Angeles: University of California Press, pp. 175–201.

Richman, Paula, ed. (1991b). Many Rāmāyaṇas: The Diversity of a Narrative Tradition in South Asia. Berkeley and Los Angeles: University of California Press.

———. (2000). Questioning Ramayanas: A South Asian Tradition. New Delhi: Oxford University Press.

Roussel, Alfred, trans. (1903). See under Translations of the Uttarakāṇḍa.

Roy, Shasanka Bhushan. (1982). Mohenjodaro and the Lanka of Ravana: A New Hypothesis. New Delhi: Institute of Chronology.

Sagar, Ramanand, dir. (1987–1988). Ramayan: A TV Serial. DVD. Produced by Sagar Art Enterprises. India: Doordarshan.

———. (1992). Ramayana: A TV Serial. Transcription by Girish Bakhshi. Edited by Tomio Mizokami. Osaka: Osaka University Foreign Studies.

Sanderson, Alexis. (2006). "The Lākulas: New Evidence of a System Intermediate between Pāñcārthika Pāśupatism and Āgamic Śaivism." Ramalinga Reddy Memorial Lectures, 1997. Indian Philosophical Annual 24, pp. 143–217.

Sankalia, Hasmukh Dhirajlala. (1976). "Archeology and the Rāmāyaṇa, or a Hypercritical Study of the Rāmāyaṇa." In Prof. K.A.S. Iyer Felicitation Volume. Lucknow: Akhila Bharatiya Sanskrit Parishad, pp. 147–58, Ṛtam 2–6.

———. (1980–1981). "The Rāmāyaṇa Age." Indologica Taurinensia 8–9, pp. 365–71.

Sarma, C. R. (1980). "Ramayana in Telugu Literature and Folk-Lore." In The Ramayana Tradition in Asia: Papers Presented at the International Seminar on the Ramayana Tradition in Asia, New Delhi, December 1975. Edited by V. Raghavan. New Delhi: Sahitya Akademi, pp. 215–25. Reprint 1989.

Śāstrī, M. M. Siddheśvar Citrāv. See Citrāv, M. M. Siddheśvar Śāstrī.

Satyanarayana, Viswanadha. (1992). Srimad Ramayana Kalpavrushamu. Vijayawada: Viswanadha Publications.

Seely, Clinton, trans. (2004). The Slaying of Meghanada: A Ramayana from Colonial Bengal. New York: Oxford University Press.

Shah, U. P. (1966). Preface to The Sundarakāṇḍa: The Fifth Book of the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa,

The National Epic of India. Edited by G. C. Jhala. Baroda: Oriental Institute Baroda, p. vii.

———. (1975). Introduction to The Uttarakāṇḍa: The Seventh Book of the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa, The National Epic of India. Edited by U. P. Shah. Baroda: Oriental Institute, pp. 5–54.

———. (1976). "The Sālakaṭaṅkaṭas and Laṅkā." JAOS 96.1, pp. 109–13.

Sharma, B. N. Krishnamurti. (1996). Dvaita Philosophy as Expounded by Śrī Madhvācārya. Madras University Philosophical Series, no. 53. [Madras]: Radhakrishnan Institute for Advanced Study in Philosophy, University of Madras.

Sharma, Ramashraya. (1971). A Socio-Political Study of the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa. Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass.

Sharma, Urmila, and S. K. Sharma. (2009). Indian Political Thought. Delhi: Atlantic Publishers and Distributors.

Shastri, Hari Prasad, trans. (1959). See under Translations of the Uttarakāṇḍa.

Shukla, R. K. (2003). The Geography of the Rāmāyaṇa. Delhi: Koshal Book Depot.

Shulman, David. (2000). "Bhavabhūti on Cruelty and Compassion." In Questioning Ramayanas: A South Asian Tradition. Edited by Paula Richman. New Delhi: Oxford University Press, pp. 49–82; 361–66.

Sircar, Dineschandra. (1979). Problems of the Rāmāyaṇa. Andhra Pradesh Government Museum Series 19. Hyderabad: Government of Andhra Pradesh.

Smith, Frederick M. (1991). "Indra's Curse, Varuṇa's Noose, and the Suppression of the Woman in the Vedic Śrauta Ritual." In Roles and Rituals for Hindu Women. Edited by Julia Leslie. Rutherford, N.J.: Fairleigh Dickinson University Press, pp. 17–45.

Smith, W. L. (1988). Rāmāyaṇa Traditions in Eastern India: Assam, Bengal, Orissa. Stockholm: Department of Indology, Stockholm University.

Söhnen[-Thieme], Renate. (1978). "Die Sage des Rāmāyaṇa: Beobachtungen zur 'Inhaltsangabe' in Buch I, Kap. I des Rāmāyaṇa von Vālmīki." Studien zur Indologie und Iranistik 4, pp. 54–78.

Srinivasa Sastri, V. S. (1961). Lectures on the Ramayana. Rev. ed. Madras: Madras Samskrit Academy.

Stutley, Margaret. (1969). "The Aśvamedha or Indian Horse Sacrifice." Folklore 80.4, pp. 253–61.

Sukthankar, V. S. (1933). "Prolegomena." In Mahābhārata: Critical Edition. Vol. 1: The Ādiparvan: Being the First Book of the Mahābhārata, the Great Epic of India. Critically edited by Vishnu S. Sukthankar. Poona: Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, pp. i–cx.

———. (1944). "The Bhṛgus and the Bhārata: A Text-Historical Study." ABORI 18, pp. 1–76.

———. (1957). On the Meaning of the Mahābhārata. Bombay: Asiatic Society of Bombay.

Sutherland, Sally J. (Sally J. Sutherland Goldman). (1979). "Śukrācārya the Demons' Priest: Aspects of Character Development in Sanskrit Mythological Literature." Ph.D. dissertation. University of California, Berkeley.

———. (1989). "Sītā and Draupadī: Aggressive Behavior and Female Role-Models in the Sanskrit Epics." JAOS 109.1, pp. 63–79.

———. (1991). "The Bad Seed: Senior Wives and Elder Sons." In Bridging Worlds: Studies on Women in South Asia. Edited by S. J. Sutherland. Berkeley: Centers for South and Southeast Asia Studies, University of California, Berkeley, pp. 24–52.

———. (1992). "Seduction, Counter Seduction, and Sexual Role Models: Bedroom Politics and the Indian Epics." JIP 20.2, pp. 243–51.

———. (1994). "Suttee, Sati, and Sahagamana: An Epic Misunderstanding?" Economic and Political Weekly 29.26, pp. 1595–1605.

Talboys-Wheeler, J. (1869). The History of India From the Earliest Ages. Vol. 2: The Rāmāyana and the Brahmanic Period. London: N. Trübner and Co.

Thapar, Romila. (1978). Exile and the Kingdom: Some Thoughts on the Rāmāyaṇa. Bangalore: Mythic Society.

———. (2002). Early India: From the Origins to AD 1300. Berkeley and Los Angeles: University of California Press.

———. (2013). The Past Before Us: Historical Traditions of Early North India. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press.

Tokunaga, Muneo. (1993). "Shift of Caesura in the Triṣṭubh of the Rāmāyaṇa." Journal of Indian and Buddhist Studies 42.1, pp. 546–540.

Tubb, Gary. (2006). "If You Don't Mind: bhadraṃ te in the Sanskrit Epics." Paper presented at the annual meeting of the American Oriental Society, Seattle, Washington, March.

Tully, Mark. (1991). "The Rewriting of the Ramayan." In No Full Stops in India. London: Penguin Books, pp. 127–52. Volume also published as The Defeat of a Congressman and Other Parables of Modern India. New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1992.

Vader, V. H. (1926). "Situation of Rāvaṇa's Lamka [sic] on the Equator." Quarterly Journal of the Mythic Society 17.1, pp. 17–22.

Vaidya, C. V. (1906). The Riddle of the Rāmāyaṇa. Rev. ed. Delhi: Meharchand Lachhmandas, 1972.

Vaidya, P. L. (1962). Introduction to The Ayodhyākāṇḍa: The Second Book of the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa, The National Epic of India. Edited by P. L. Vaidya. Baroda: Oriental Institute Baroda, pp. vii–xxviii.

_____. (1971). Introduction to The Yuddhakāṇḍa: The Sixth Book of the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa, The National Epic of India. Edited by P. L. Vaidya. Baroda: Oriental Institute Baroda, pp. xiii–xxxii.

van Buitenen, J.A.B. (1959). "Akṣara." JAOS 79.3, pp. 176–87.

_____. (1972). "On the Structure of the Sabhāparvan of the Mahābhārata." In India Maior: Congratulatory Volume Presented to J. Gonda. Edited by J. Ensink and P. Gaeffke. Leiden: E. J. Brill, pp. 68–84.

van Buitenen, J.A.B., ed. and trans. (1973). The Mahābhārata. Vol. 1: The Book of the Beginning. Chicago: University of Chicago Press.

_____. (1975). The Mahābhārata. Vol. 2: The Book of the Assembly Hall. Chicago: University of Chicago Press.

_____. (1978). The Mahābhārata. Vol. 3: The Book of the Forest. Chicago: University of Chicago Press.

van Daalen, L. A. (1980). Vālmīki's Sanskrit. Leiden: E. J. Brill.

van der Veer, Peter. (1988). Gods on Earth: The Management of Religious Experience and Identity in a North Indian Pilgrimage Centre. London and Atlantic Highlands, N.J.: Athlone Press.

van Nooten and Holland (1994). See Rig Veda (1994) under Sanskrit Texts.

Vekerdi, J. (1964). "On the Uttara-Kāṇḍa of the Rāmāyaṇa." Acta Orientalia 17.2, pp. 187–95.

Vyas, S. N. (1949). "Treatment of Abducted Women in the Rāmāyaṇa Age." PO 14.1–4, pp. 85–88.

———. (1967). India in the Rāmāyaṇa Age. Delhi: Atma Ram and Sons.

Weber, Albrecht. (1870). Über das Rāmāyaṇa. Berlin: Abhandlungen der Königlichen Akademie der Wissenschaften.

Whaling, Frank. (1980). The Rise of the Religious Significance of Rama. New Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass.

Whitaker, Jarrod L. (2000). "Divine Weapons and Tejas in the Two Indian Epics." Indo-Iranian Journal 43.2, pp. 87–113.

_____. (2002). "How the Gods Kill: The Nārāyaṇa Astra Episode, the Death of Rāvaṇa, and the Principles of Tejas in the Indian Epics." JIP 30.4, pp. 403–30.

Whitney, William Dwight. (1885). The Roots, Verb-Forms, and Primary Derivatives of the Sanskrit Language: A Supplement to His Sanskrit Grammar. Leipzig: Breitkopf and Härtel.

_____. (1889). A Sanskrit Grammar: Including Both the Classical Language, and the Older Dialects, of Veda and Brahmana. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press. Reprint 1967.

Wurm, Alois. (1976). Character-Portrayals in the Ramayana of Valmiki. Delhi: Ajanta Publications.

Yardi, M. R. (1989). "A Statistical Study of Rāmāyaṇa Sundarakāṇḍa, Yuddhakāṇḍa and Uttarakāṇḍa." ABORI 70, pp. 17–35.

_____. (1990). "A Statistical Study of the Rāmāyaṇa: Bāla, Ayodhyā, Āraṇya, and Kiṣkindhā Kāṇḍas." ABORI 71, pp. 155–83.

_____. (1994). The Rāmāyaṇa, Its Origin and Growth: A Statistical Study. Bhandarkar Oriental Series 26. Poona: Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute.

Yule, Henry, and A. C. Burnell. (1903). Hobson-Jobson: A Glossary of Colloquial Anglo-Indian Words and Phrases, and of Kindred Terms, Etymological, Historical, Geographical, and Discursive. New ed. Edited by William Crooke. London: J. Murray. Reprint Delhi: Munshiram Manoharlal, 1968.

Index

a fortiori. See poetic figures: kāvyārthāpatti abandonment: of Bharata and Śatrughna, 345, 894–95; of child by Sālakaṭaṅkaṭā, 45–46, 48, 233, 476; of child or female, 45n49; of earthly existence, 11, 13n3, 174; of human bodies, 171, 184, 440, 837, 1227–28, 1246, 1253–54, 1261, 1265–66, 1268, 1274–75; —by Mainda and Dvivida, 1244; of Lakṣmaṇa, 345–46, 894–95, 1223, 1225; of Laṅkā by rākṣasas, 44, 50, 230, 246, 252, 476, 548–49, 552; of life breaths, 132, 182, 441, 1270, 1273; of Rāma by Sītā, 902; of Śatrughna, 345, 437, 894–95, 1239; of Sītā by Rāma (see Sītātyāga); of vulturehood, 1402. See also banishment abductions: of Draupadī by Jayadratha, 71; as form of marriage, 665, 683, 943; of Kumbhīnasī by Madhu, 48, 287–88, 680–82, 943; of Mandodarī, 554; Manu on, 32n106; Rāma's response to Sītā's, 56, 71, 162, 855, 1174; rape vs., 33n109, 139, 154; of Sītā, 21, 17, 21, 27n85, 34, 40, 56, 90–91, 34, 154, 157–59, 160n12, 326, 336, 534, 665, 823, 855, 889, 1172, 1246, 1309, 1317–18, 1382; —Bharata not aware of, 159; treatment of Sītā after, 83n1; —women after, 104, 154, 220; of Vedavatī by Rāvaṇa, 606–7; of women by Rāvaṇa, 6, 27, 32, 53, 284, 668, 681, 1355
Abhijñānaśākuntalam, 446, 454, 616, 720, 999, 1135. See also Kālidāsa Abhinavagupta, 60–63
abhūtopamā. See under poetic figures
Adbhutarāmāyaṇa, 70, 93
Adhyātmarāmāyaṇa: Agni and Sītā in, 90–91; in BrahmāṇḍP, 90; devotionalism and, 70; illusory Sītā (māyāsītā) in, 84n5; influence of, 65, 90, 186; Rāmānandi tradition and, 93; ādikavi (first poet), 61–62, 64n38, 75, 78, 80, 89, 202, 1139–40, 1148, 1280 ādikāvya (first poem), 60, 61n32, 64n38, 78
Aditi: Aṃśa and Bhaga as sons of, 493; Diti and, 253; Māruta as son of, 322, 796; as mother of the gods, 253, 542, 1214; Rāma as son of, 431; Sūrya Mārtāṇḍa as son of, 80; Viṣṇu as son of, 1214, 1317
Āditya (sun god), 313, 770, 952, 1066, 1290, 1312, 1380; Sugrīva as son of, 1272, 1307. See also Sūrya
Āditya Āryamān, 493
Ādityahṛdaya, 1176, 1284, 1278
Ādityas (class of divinities), 293, 297, 298, 301, 420, 700, 701, 705, 718, 727, 1214, 1289, 1304, 1363; Aṃśa or Bhaga, 493; as matronymic, 493, 708 adjutant stork. See kaṅka adultery, 744
Agastya, 447, 448, 449, 453, 456, 746, 468, 469, 470, 530, 556, 601, 609, 746, 747, 748, 774, 783, 787, 814, 927, 1038, 1040, 1043, 1044, 1045, 1051, 1053, 1057, 1063, 1064, 1067, 1068, 1069, 1156, 1247, 1367, 1372, 1381, 1383; in Araṇyakāṇḍa, 446; ashram of, 9; —Rāma arrives at, 446; —Rāma spends night at, 396–97; —Rāma visits (see Agastya: Rāma's visit with); birth of, 44n39, 213, 355, 924–27, 1042, 1052; —Lava and Kuśa's birth tied to, 143; as brahmanic voice of kāṇḍa, 154; departs, 130, 1366; drinks ocean, 550; framing and, 43, 154; on Hanumān, 21, 50, 318–26; on Indrajit, 42n32; on King Daṇḍa, 151–54, 392–97, 1053–67; on King Śveta, 387–92, 1048–53; on Kubera's lineage, 42, 44, 227–31; as Maitrāvaruṇi, 925–26; as narrator, 12, 148, 220, 446; —in ashram, 148; —in court, 131; in PadmaP, 124–25, 149; parentage of, 143, 925; as pot-born sage, 44, 142, 213, 227, 355, 387, 388, 392, 393, 396, 397, 456, 924–27, 1035, 1036, 1052, 1067, 1068, 1309, 1313, 1372, 1376; prakṣipta sargas and, 211, 1304, 1305, 1311, 1313, 1318, 1365; prominence of, 446; Rāma dwells in heart of, 388, 1036; Rāma given bow by, 149; —celestial ornament by, 9, 149–50, 388, 1037–42; —garland by, 1052; —gift by, 1037–43, 1057; Rāma granted leave by, 397; —haunted by revelations about Rāvaṇa from, 146; —reassured about Sītā's sexual purity by, 699; —reminded by, that he killed Vālin, 318; —reminded by, that Meghanāda is Indrajit, 556; Rāma told history of forest where Śveta lived by, 392–96; —of Hanumān by, 21,

Agastya (cont.)
148, 50, 318–26; —of Kubera by, 42; —of ornament by, 16–18, 67, 388–92, 1043–53; —of rākṣasas by, 17, 30, 42, 40, 50, 227–318; —of Rāvaṇa by, 30, 148, 227–318; Rāma told story of King Daṇḍa by, 9, 151–54, 392–96, 446; —of King Kṣupa by, 1039–42; —of King Śveta by, 9, 148–51, 388–92, 446; at Rāma's aśvamedha, 419; —court, 41, 225; —questions answered by, 5; Rāma's visit with, 9, 105, 148–55, 387–97, 1036; —previously, 148–50; —as transitional point, 154; Rāma taught by, 1247–48; —tells narrative of birth of, 139; —told to perform ablutions by, 396; —welcomed by, 387–88; on rākṣasas' history and lineage, 17, 42, 44, 50; on Rāvaṇa and rākṣasas, 17, 227–318, 456, 457, 546, 699, 746; on Rāvaṇa not being a serious challenge, 225; on Rāvaṇa's history, 30, 50, 227–318; —lineage, 146; Śambūka pays respects to, 108; as southerner, 225, 446, 764, 783; Śveta and, 150–51, 391–92; —gives jewel to, 151, 392; Varuṇa and, 143, 229, 925–26; as Vasiṣṭha's twin, 142–43 āgneya (astra). See Agni: divine weapon or weapon-spell (astra) of āgneya (cloud), 1295, 1348
Agni, 291, 303, 306, 321, 323, 520, 633, 735, 736, 743, 748, 749, 792, 796, 800, 813, 816, 863, 993, 1114, 1118, 1123, 1380; in AdhyāR, 90–91; as Anala, 1326, 1373; as bearer or eater of oblations, 225, 336; divine weapon or weapon-spell (astra) of, 264, 582, 1249, 1346; Ganges gives birth to child of, 233, 476; gods worship Viṣṇu with, 402, 440; as or having golden seed, 306, 748–49; Indrajit worships, 303; Lava born as portion of, 972; as leader of Maruts, 180; as leader of or at head of gods, 337, 402, 440; offerings given to, 668, 736; —in agnihotra rites, 523, 1246; as purifier, 91, 246, 303, 317, 318, 325; resides in sacrificial fire pit, 749; Sītā's innocence affirmed by, 864, 877, 906, 1153; —in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 14, 83, 336; Skanda as son of, 476; Suprabha as son of, 1156; as Vaiśvānara, 322; as witness, 632, 773, 782; —for Arjuna–Rāvaṇa nonaggression pact, 314; —for Rāvaṇa–Nivātakavacas alliance, 281; —to wedding ceremony, 554n17; wrathful, 291; Yama attended by, 275 agnihotra: fire, 439, 668, 805–6, 1246, 1252–53; rite, 25, 51, 247, 523, 1020, 1086, 1124, 1246; sacrifice (see under sacrifices); vessel, 324, 438, 805–6, 1246 agniparīkṣā. See fire ordeal agniṣṭoma. See under sacrifices Agrawal, Jagannath, 116–17 agriculture (anṛta), 384, 1020–24
Ahalyā: in Bālakāṇḍa, 15n11, 154n179, 614, 737–38, 740, 742, 744, 745; culpability of, 744–45; —for being unfaithful, 304–5, 742–43; etymology of name, 738; Gautama curses, 305, 742, 743; —propitiated by, 744; gods lose hope of winning, 740; Rāma's treatment of, 15; rape of, 33n109, 304, 695, 740, 1060; tale of, 12, 303–5; as willing adulteress, 744
Aindra grammar, 801–2, 813
Airāvata, 301, 790, 792; Airāvaṇa as variant of, 1299; Hanumān mistakes for fruit, 22, 321
aiśvararūpa of Kṛṣṇa, 93
Akampana: identity of, 484; killing of, 226, 451; minister of Rāvaṇa, 294, 1293; Sumālin and Ketumatī's son, 236
Aklujkar, Vidyut, 109–10
Akṣa, 785
akṣa beads, 1279, 1351
akṣauhiṇī (traditional Indian army), 288, 327, 684, 825 alaṃkāras. See poetic figures allies: kings and Rāma as, 6, 11, 158–60, 822, 831; monkeys (vānaras) and Rāma as, 6, 23, 184, 518, 751, 849; rākṣasas and Rāma as, 6, 23, 518; Rāvaṇa and the Nivātakavacas as, 281; Sugrīva and Rāma as, 22; supernatural beings and Rāma as, 158; Vibhīṣaṇa and Rāma as, 6, 22 alliteration (anuprāsa), 473, 486, 511–12, 748, 775, 789, 794, 795, 848, 1036, 1060, 1095, 1274
alliterative epithets: of Lakṣmaṇa, 858, 870, 1029; of Rāvaṇa, 450. See also echoing: of names in epithets; etymological epithets alms: daughter as, 228, 460; giving of, 1050–51; searching for, 1323, 1391. See also donations; gifts
Amarakośa, 480; on añjana, 479, 763; on anṛta, 1021; on candrahāsa, 597; on doṣajña, 789; on jña, 1124; on kumuda, 1348; on prābhṛta, 690; on pratihāra, 448; on ṣaḍguṇas, 1387; on śambhu, 806; on vaitaraṇi, 634; on vākyam, 1239; on vāśitā, 780
Amarāvatī, 230, 235, 255, 272, 313–14, 549, 559, 748, 1198
amṛta. See nectar of immortality

Aṃśa, 239, 493
aṃśāvatāras (partial incarnations), 177 amulets: Vālmīki affixes to boys, 370, 974–75; —prepares, for Lava and Kuśa, 370, 971; ward off malignant spirits, 370, 971; women ask for, 370, 972, 974
Analā (daughter of Mālyavān and Sundarī), 48, 236, 288, 681–82; mother of Kumbhīnasī, 362, 682, 943
Anala (god of fire). See Agni
Anala (minister of Vibhīṣaṇa), 236, 486, 818; son of Mālin and Vasudā, 236
Ānandarāmāyaṇa, 186; dog and brahman in, 1386, 1392; Śambūka in, 109, 113
Ānandavardhana, 60–63
Anañga. See Kāma
Ananta. See Śeṣa
Anaraṇya, 619, 621; as Ayodhyā's king or guardian, 28, 272, 619; as Ikṣvāku dynast, 28, 272; Rāvaṇa cursed by, 28, 31, 623; —fights, 272–73, 620, 622; —kills, 28, 272–73; satya-kriyā (truth act) of, 28 ancestors (pitṛs): ashrams as place of refuge for, 487; departed, 616, 630, 659, 699, 793, 814–18, 1011, 1186, 1279, 1300, 1304, 1318, 1358; Lavaṇa disregards, of Śatrughna and of Rāma, 374, 983–84; of Rāma, 28, 368, 425, 658, 946; of Rāvaṇa, 24; Rāvaṇa cannot lift earring of Bali's, 1336; of Śatrughna and Rāma cannot kill Lavaṇa, 378, 1000; of Sītā, 40–41n27; of Viśvāmitra, 600; Yama as king of, 274–75, 628–29
Andhaka (asura), 238, 491, 511
Andhaka (clan), 13n3
Añgada (brother of Candraketu), 10, 428; Lakṣmaṇa accompanies, 429; Lakṣmaṇa's son, 10, 428, 775; Rāma and (see under Añgadīya); in western country, 428, 1199
Añgada (vānara): at Rāma's court, 328; Sugrīva consecrates, 808, 1241; asTārā's son, 813; Vālin's son, 328, 451, 452, 828, 832
Añgadīya: Bharata in, 1199; city ruled by Añgada, 10, 428; Lakṣmaṇa in, 429; Rāma consecrates Añgada in, 167, 428, 1198; —establishes for Añgada, 10, 166, 428–29, 1197, 1219; in western country, 428 anger: of Arjuna, 310, 763; of Bhṛgu, 94, 853, 899; dangers of, 1322–23, 1390; destroys merit, 1322; destruction born from universal, 1076–77; as enemy, 1322; eyes red with, 640, 1063 (see also rage: red eyes as mark of); as fire, 645; gnashing of teeth in, 1356 (see also rage: clenching of fists or teeth in); of Indra, 304, 321, 640, 792; of Janaka at Rāma, 88; of Lavaṇa, 985; of Māndhātṛ at Lavaṇa, 372; of Mitrasaha Saudāsa, 368, 964, 968; of Pārvatī, 477; pounding of fists in, 986 (see also rage: clenching of fists or teeth in); of Pulastya, 42; —in Rāmopākhyāna, 126–27n67; of Rāma, 344, 855; —causes death, 1326, 1397–98; —is righteous, 161; —set aside, 133–34, 334, 340, 855, 876–77; —when Sītā enters earth, 10, 130, 422, 1169, 1172, 1174; of Rāvaṇa, 559; Rāvaṇa bites in, 1316, 1379; as reason to attack, 568, 576, 650; of religious groups, 101; rolling of eyes in, 1356; of sages at Hanumān, 325, 807; of Sarvārthasiddha, 1324, 1392; Śatrughna sheds tears in, 982; signs of, grinding or gnashing of teeth as, 374, 627, 986, 1300, 1356; Śiva born from, 486, 1380; specific sounds as expressions of, 491, 679; Uśanas Kāvya curses Daṇḍa with, 152, 394–95, 1061–63; —Yayāti with, 358, 933; of Vālmīki at Rāma, 87, 1134; of Vasiṣṭha at Mitrasaha Saudāsa, 369; —at Nimi, 141–42, 352, 917–18; of Vāyu, 321–22, 795; —at Indra, 6, 321; Vedavatī slays Rāvaṇa with, 608–9; of Vibhīṣaṇa at Rāvaṇa, 288; of vulture and owl, 1325; of Yayāti at Yadu, 144, 359; —borne patiently, 356. See also rage
Añgiras: Gārgya as son of, 425–26; name of a sage, 352, 916; Nimi and, 352, 916
Añgirasa (sage), 610, 1323
Añgirasas (family of sages), 325
Anila (minister), 236, 486
anila (wind), 241, 502–3, 772, 808; stands motionless, 314
Anila (wind god), 322, 795, 1311, 1373; Hanumān as son of, 828. See also Vāyu animals, 1325, 1395; aquatic, 1212; celestial or heavenly (or not), 182–84, 441, 1270; draft, 1121; forests bereft of, 292, 1063; gods in forms of, 610–11, 614; habitats of, 1212; hair of, 1369; Ila slaughters, 404–5, 1092; kauleya as kenning for domestic, 1393; Lavaṇa eats, 34; masculine become feminine, 1093; rākṣasas as predators of, 55; as rākṣasas' mounts, 239, 288, 719; Rāma followed by, 182, 1256, 1274; Rāvaṇa ignores, 596–97; as surrogates for human gestation, 43; who think of Rāma will dwell in Santāna, 182, 441, 1270; in Vālmīki's ashram, 998; vāśitā as term for female, 760. See also names of individual animals

Aniruddha: as emanation (vyūha) of Viṣṇu, 176, 991; Śatrughna as, 991, 1229
Añjana (elephant), 234, 307, 310, 479, 754, 763 Añjanā (vānara): Hanumān's mother, 319, 324–25; Kesarin's wife, 319 annular structure (ring structure), 60, 67, 118 anṛta. See agriculture antaḥpuram (women's quarters; inner apartments), 322, 794, 885–86, 1222; in Ayodhyā, 56, 439, 1123, 1252, 1260–61; Indrajit spends childhood in, 25, 556–67; inhabitants of, 1123; as locus of exotic and erotic, 40; Rāma in, 332, 815; of Rāvaṇa, 32, 527, 563, 699, 885–86; —explored by Hanumān, 318, 785; —Sītā in captivity in, 268, 683
Antaka. See Kāla
antelopes (kṛṣṇasāra/sāraṅga/raṅku): blackbucks as, 1126–27; skin of, 266, 286, 599
Antoine, Robert, 36n2, 78n19, 116 anuprāsa. See alliteration; poetic figures Aparājitā, 1268
apavāda. See rumors
apes (ṛkṣa), 133, 751, 831, 1185, 1242; Jāmbavān as king of, 328, 832; Rāma and, 334, 424; —gives gifts to, 328, 827; return to Ayodhyā, 437–39, 1245; —birthplaces, 182, 441, 1240, 1271–72, 1274–75; —Kiṣkindhā, 328; Ṛkṣarajas as lord of, 1306; take leave of Rāma, 329–30, 837–38
Appendix Passages: prakṣipta sargas as, 5, 76, 210–12, 217, 1285–329; Shah's identification of, 4, 5, 212–16; textual support of, 7–8n14, 10n17, 15, 209–16, 908–38, 998–1007, 1033–44, 1172–81, 1330–42; translations of, 76, 217–18, 348–60, 386–88, 421–24, 1285–329. See also prakṣipta (interpolated) passages apsarases, 396, 468, 716, 750, 1046, 1240, 1259, 1291, 1292, 1340; cannot have husbands, 695–96; dancing of, 249, 297, 468, 531, 646, 848; daughters of, 42, 45n49, 127, 227, 256; foremost among, 290, 353, 354, 614, 921, 923, 1291; gods and, 236; hair of, 1047; Kumbhakarṇa devours, 251; Lakṣmaṇa escorted to heaven by, 11, 434; in lists of (semi)divine beings, 181, 306, 375, 407, 420, 440, 547, 646, 1165, 1166; Rambhā (see Rambhā); Śatrughna honored by, 993; singing of, 290, 389, 689, 834, 848; Tilottamā, 614; Urvaśī (see Urvaśī); Viṣṇu lauded by, 240, 440, 500 aquatic animals. See animals: aquatic; crocodiles; dolphins Arajā, 152–54, 395–96, 1058–65; comparison of graphic rape of, 154; complicit, 153; Daṇḍa infatuated by, 152; —rapes, 33n109, 152, 393–95, 695, 740, 1057; Daṇḍa's kingdom destroyed for rape of, 395; meaning of name, 152n169, 1058; must live in desolate place and practice meditation, 1064; older than Devayānī, 1058; in PadmaP, 1053; stupidity makes culpable, 1064; Uśanas Kāvya curses, 152–53, 395–96; Uśanas Kāvya's daughter, 33n109, 152, 396, 1058
Araṇyakāṇḍa, 153, 200n7, 203n23, 534, 946, 1174; Akampana in, 484; crit. ed. or Divanji and, 202; Mārīca in, 567; number of sargas of, 1149; Pollock on rākṣasas in, 37–38; Purūravas in, 619; rākṣasa excesses in, 40; Rāma comes to ashram of Agastya in, 148n150, 149, 446; Rāma's emotions in, 1172; Rāvaṇa's character in, 34; Śabarī in, 15n11; Surabhi's parentage in, 658; Śūrpaṇakhā's mutilation in, 85n27, 672; Śveta story's connection to, 150–51; Virādha's rākṣasa nature in, 123n47; word bhāṣitam in, 78; word kṣaṇadācara in, 489 arghya (guest-offering), 275, 313, 343, 368, 378, 430, 449–50, 687
Ariṣṭanemin (sage), 410
arjuna (tree): white murdah tree (Terminalia arjuna), 844, 1288
Arjuna Kārtavīrya, 33, 305–15, 749–74; as Haihaya king, 28, 306, 310, 312, 756; Kṛtavīrya's son, 756; Māhiṣmatī as capital city of, 28, 306; Narmadā dammed by, 29, 308, 757; patronymic of, 756; polymelia of, 29; Pulastya and, 314, 773; Rāvaṇa and, 28–30, 305–15, 749–74; —captured by, 312–15; —fights with, 310–13, 765–69; —humiliated by, 30, 313–15; —makes nonaggression pact with, 314, 774; —released by, 314–15; sports with women in Narmadā, 308; thousand-armed, 29, 755–56, 774
Arjuna Pāṇḍava, 986; aśvamedha of Yudhiṣṭhira and, 161; in Bhagavadgītā, 93; in heaven in earthly body, 1227; in MBh, 161, 550, 654; pāśupata divine weapon-spell (astra) of, 955; relieves earth of demonic burden, 911; as Vāsavi, 781 armlets (kuṇḍala/valaya), 310, 827, 1037, 1290, 1302 army, traditional. See akṣauhiṇī arrows: of Anaraṇya, 272; of Arjuna, 310; bāṇa as featherless, 506; crescent-headed, 283, 1293; heron-fletched, 1293; of Indra, 299; In-drajit given, 287, 296–97, 301, 721; iron, 1294; of Kāma, 268, 290, 354, 394, 407, 462, 689, 691, 1059, 1100; of Kumbhakarṇa, 298; of Mālin, 242, 509; of Māndhātṛ, 372; of Marutta, 270; of Mitrasaha Saudāsa, 368; of Mṛtyu, 278; as nataparvan ("having depressed joints"), 987; as primordial body of Viṣṇu, 376, 991, 993; produce flesh-eating beasts, according to Cg, 639; Rāma as fond of, according to Cs, 868; of Rāma given to Śatrughna, 365; —not used on Rāvaṇa, 954–55; Rāma threatens ocean with, 1172; of Rāvaṇa, 276–78, 282–83, 285, 299–300, 643; —charged with the divine weapon-spell of Paśupati, 277, 639; śara as, 749; of Śatrughna, 374–77, 953–54, 986–92; of Sāvitra, 295, 710; of Śiva, 477, 639; of sons of Varuṇa, 282; as straight-going ones (ajihmagati), 1344; of Sumālin, 295; thunderbolt-headed, 241; of Viṣṇu, 242–44, 504–6, 510, 513; —powered by Agni's energy, 993; —vs. Śiva's, 957

arthaśāstra, 57, 695

Arthaśāstra of Kauṭilya, 480, 1027, 1120

Āryamān Āditya. See Āditya Āryamān

asceticism (tapas): in Ānandarāmāyaṇa, 109; bears fruit, 772; benefits of, —foretelling future or omniscience, 267, 893, 1224–25; —freedom from sin, 1152; —heaven or Brahmaloka, 105, 1031, 1380; —immortality, 303; —lordship, 128; —status of a lokapāla, 44; —supranormal powers, 887 (see also powers of in this entry; ascetics: powers of); —Viṣṇu as husband, 267; —worldly success, 1300; as brahmanical ideal, 967; fearsome or fierce, 26, 53, 360, 580; of five fires, 249, 530; Gautama perfect in, 304–5; of goddesses, 599; as greatest happiness, 400, 1080; Kālagautama burns Brahmadatta with, 1329; killing of person engaged in improper, 1085; Pāṇini acquires Śivasūtras through, 812; period of Vibhīṣaṇa's, 531; powers of, 31, 267; —destroyed by curses, 31, 268, 606; —by hostility to Rāma, 1070; —by women, 458; regret for neglecting, 263; resides in Viṣṇu's thigh, 1300; of Śambūka advanced or difficult, 105, 386, 1030–31; —done to obtain heaven, 105, 1031; —in RaghuVa, 107; —Rāma's violent response to, 106, 109–10, 115, 343; —in UttaRāC, 108; Sanatkumāra on, 1380; sexuality and, 43; Sītā's garments suitable for, 1167; Śiva practices in a cave, 1352; —won over by Kubera's, 259, 564; untimely, of Śambūka, 147; —of śūdras, 13n5, 15n11, 109; Vālmīki obtains insight through, 343, 887–88; —stakes fruits of, 1161; varṇa and yuga restrictions on, 105, 109, 383–84, 1017, 1025–26; Vasiṣṭha foresees events though, 1224–25; of Viṣṇu, 1219; Viśravas as storehouse of or endowed with, 128, 229, 256, 459–60; as wealth or treasure, 237, 356, 360, 412, 414, 929, 940, 1072, 1318; of women, 31, 266–67, 889; of young women, 267, 600

ascetics: Agastya, 150, 1044, 1068, 1156; —as leader of, 268, 606; Ātreyī, 107, 110; Bharata, 599, 946; Bhṛgu, 352, 853, 916; Brahmā, 1328; brahman, 383, 1017 (see also asceticism: varṇa and yuga restrictions on); Budha, 136, 1099; choose not to deplete accumulated powers, 31; cities should be avoided by, 415, 1135; Cyavana, 360–63; Durvāsas, 346, 433–34, 1221; failure to feed, 391, 1050–51; foremost among, 346; frame history of rākṣasas, 41; grove of, 341; Hanumān as, 812; Indrajit as, 286, 675; insignia of, 266, 599, 675; Janaka as, 356; in Janasthāna, 153; Kāla in guise of, 11, 172, 429, 1202, 1224; —not really, 431, 1208; kennings for, 459; kings' deference to, 898; kshatriya, 383, 1017–19; Kubera as, 44, 463, 564; Kumbhakarṇa as, 249; Lavaṇa oppresses, 362; Maya as, 256; mistreat guests, 149–50; Nimi as, 353; phenapas a type of, 659; powers of, 31, 33, 448, 469, 534, 606, 887, 919, 1099; practices of, 464, 530–32, 659, 1030–32, 1034 (see also asceticism); Pulastya, 42–43, 227–29, 458, Rāma gives donation to, 425; Rāvaṇa as, 26, 53, 55, 249–50, 580; Rāvaṇa and his brothers as, 6, 128, 249–52, 529–30; Rāvaṇa in guise of, 975; Rāvaṇa vs. Viṣṇu as, 268; rules proper to, 149; Śabarī, 15, 15n11; Śambūka as śūdra, 9, 15, 83n1, 86, 104–5, 145, 147, 162, 384–86, 1030–31; Sanatkumāra, 1310, 1380; Sarvārthasiddha, 1323; seats fit for, 360, 940; Sītā desires life as, 18; —desires to see, 339; —in guise of, 20, 420; Śiva, 1093; śūdra, 384, 1025–26 (see also Śambūka); —killed by Daśaratha, 106; Sukeśa's sons as, 49, 234; Sumālin as, 25; Śveta, 150–51, 391, 1046; Śveta's ashram devoid of, 150, 389, 398; Śveta's limits as an, 1050; Tṛṇabindu, 42, 228; Uśanas Kāvya, 286; Vaiśravaṇa, 229; vaiśya, 384, 1025; Vālmīki, 344, 419, 1136, 1148; in Vālmīki's ashram, 155; Vasiṣṭha, 346, 353, 1224–25; Vedavatī, 16, 31, 266–67, 599; Vedavatī adopts insignia of, 266, 599;

ascetics (cont.)
Vibhīṣaṇa as, 249, 530; Viśravas, 44; vows of, 530, 1161; Vṛtra, 129, 400; women near Vālmīki's ashram as, 20, 343, 889–90, 974–75; in Yamunā region, 8, 360–63; Yavakrīta, 446
ashrams: of Agastya, 1366; —gods visit, 387–88; —Nārada relates tale of Ṛkṣarajas in, 1305; —Rāma visits, 9, 21, 105, 148–55, 387–97, 1036; —Rāma visits in Araṇyakāṇḍa, 148–49, 446; —Rāma visits, as transitional point in kāṇḍa, 154; of Budha, 408–11, 1101, 1112; of Cyavana, 371–73; dwellers in require no wealth, 415; of Durvāsas, 433, 1221; of Gautama, Ahalyā cursed in, 304, 742–43, 1063; —Indra rapes Ahalyā in, 304, 740; —Nimi founds city of Vaijayanta near, 351, 915; by Gomatī River, 339, 347, 872; of Jamadagni, 756; of Kubera, 229–30, 463; Lakṣmaṇa and Sumantra stay at, 339, 347, 872; of Mitrasaha Saudāsa, 368–69, 964, 970; of Pulastya, 459; Rāma refers to his city as, 1068; Rāma's sons battle guardians of sacrificial horse while living in, 164; Rāvaṇa and his brothers in, 249, 530; of Ṛṣyaśṛṅga, 92, 92n36; of Śambūka, 111–12; Sītā desires to visit, 333, 871; —and Rāma in, 341, 879; of Śveta, 150–51, 389–92; of Tṛṇabindu, 42, 227–28, 458, 460; of Uśanas Kāvya, 152; —Arajā in, 153, 394, 396, 1058; —Arajā must meditate in, 1064; —Daṇḍa rapes Arajā in, 394; —Daṇḍa visits, 152, 394; —Devayānī goes to, 932; —devoid of sacrifices, 1063–64; —inhabitants ordered to abandon, 153, 395, 1063; —toxicity of, 1064; —Uśanas away from, 932; of Vālmīki, 44; —ascetic women of, 343–44, 370, 972, 974; —belongs to Rāghavas, 368; —boys from, 7, 20; —located on Ganges, 337; —located on Tamasā River, 866; —parrots learn Rāmāyaṇa in, 94; —Śatrughna avoids, 998; —Śatrughna does not see Rāma's sons in, 1001; —Śatrughna hears of Sītā's sons in, 367, 975–76; —Śatrughna hears Rāmāyaṇa in, 1001–6; —Śatrughna journeys to, 367, 962–63, 999; —Śatrughna stops at, 8, 145–46, 215, 378–80, 999; —Śatrughna's soldiers hear Rāmāyaṇa in, 379–80, 998; —Sītā abandoned near or taken to, 19, 86, 154–55, 338–44, 347, 419, 878, 891, 905; —Sītā gives birth in, 67, 220; —Sītā goes to, knowing Rāma's intention, 1169; of Vasiṣṭha, 345–46, 898, 1224–25; of Viśravas, 527, 543; Yayāti retires to, 359
asi. See swords
Aśmanagara, 281, 1285, 1331
Aśoka (minister of Rāma and Daśaratha), 1326, 1398
aśoka grove (aśokavana): of Rāma, 7, 18, 131, 137, 140, 142, 146, 331–32, 844; of Rāvaṇa, 29n93, 133, 143, 334, 785, 847
Aśoka Maurya, 123
aśoka tree, 264, 276, 311, 843, 1182; identification of, 583, 688; red flowers of, 637 Aṣṭādhyāyī, 811–12. See also Pāṇini astra (divine weapon-spell), 276, 305, 454, 492, 638, 748, 1325, 1335–36; of Agni (āgneya), 264, 582, 1249, 1346; Bharata annihilates gandharvas with, 10, 427; of Brahmā, 535, 803, 1346; Hanumān invulnerable to, 22; Indrajit given, 287; of Kāla, 427, 1192; Kubera uses, 264; meaning of term, 582, 638, 1346; of Paśupati, 277, 639, 955; Rāma as master of all, 1325; Rāvaṇa uses, 264, 276–77; of Rudra (raudra), 1294, 1346; saṃvarta, 427, 1192; —as Kāla's, 166, 427, 1192–93; of Varuṇa (vāruṇa), 264, 582; as weapon, 583; of Yama, 277 asuras, 39n18, 46n54, 49, 234, 281, 287, 321, 328, 344, 365, 375, 400, 401, 404, 407, 426, 492, 501, 515, 543, 655, 657, 703, 899, 900, 953, 1079, 1081, 1092, 1163, 1169, 1191, 1194, 1297, 1310, 1312, 1325, 1338; Andhaka, 491; Bali as king of, 723, 768–69, 1333; daityas and dānavas as synonymous with, 589; daughters of, 666; gods and, 646, 654; as gods' enemies, 94; —half-brothers, 55; Hiraṇyakaśipu as king of, 513, 646, 1381; Kālakeyas, 550; Kārtasvara, 646; Madhu as, 362, 681, 943; Madhu and Kaiṭabha, 474, 1212; Maya (architect), 477, 550, 639; māyā (magical illusion) of, 657, 727; Prahlāda, 492; Rādheya, 492–93; rākṣasas called, 488; Śambara, 646; Śambhu, 646, 647; Śiva will not kill, 237; Uśanas Kāvya as purohita of, 153, 676, 931, 1056; Virocana, 646; —as king of, 214; Viṣṇu destroys, 513; Vṛtra, 646, 702, 790, 819, 821, 1079, 1080, 1084; —as foremost among, 401, 496
Aśvaghoṣa, 68, 70, 79n21
aśvamedhas (horse sacrifices), 677, 1082, 1091, 1115, 1117; called hayamedha, 903, 1079, 1086, 1091, 1115, 1129, 1130; —vājimedha, 122, 850, 1092, 1183–84; compared to hearing Rāmāyaṇa, 1282; —to rājasūya, 161, 168; contestation in, 164, 164–65n24; as crest jewel of sacrifices, 1113; Cs on, 1182–83; of

Daśaratha in Bālakāṇḍa, 60, 118, 121, 121n37, 138n115, 164–65n24, 168, 677, 1078; —narrative of Rāma's life begins with, 118–19; —no mention of territorial expansion in, 160, 164, 677; —as rite of purification, 121n37, 164–65n24, 168; difficulty of, 1114; of gods, to Viṣṇu, 403; horse in, 161–62, 164–65, 413, 1126–27; of Ila, 9, 130–39, 136–37, 156, 410–11, 677, 1113–14; —manhood regained from, 137, 411; —offered to Śiva, 411, 1112–14; of Indra, 128–29, 164, 164–65n24; —in Mahābhārata, 122–23; —in Uttarakāṇḍa, 136, 399–404, 646, 677; —in Uttarakāṇḍa, narrated by Lakṣmaṇa, 399, 404; —in Uttarakāṇḍa, as purification or expiation for brahmahatyā, 399, 403, 1078, 1088; —to Viṣṇu, 402, 1086; of Indrajit, 286, 676; Lakṣmaṇa narrates story of Indra's to Rāma, 136, 399, 404; —persuades Rāma to perform, 16, 399, 404; of Mitrasaha Saudāsa, 368; in PadmaP, 119n33, 124–25, 164n23, 1184; of Rāma, 9–10, 16, 20, 60, 96, 118–56, 412–14, 677, 1118, 1130, 1078, 1118; —Agastya at, 419; —in Bālakāṇḍa, 60, 118, 121; —brahmans perform, 412, 1119; —commences, 413; —commentators on, 1117–18, 1280–82, 1175; —concludes, 1182; —conclusion of, marks end of need for avatāra, 1175; —conclusion of, marks end of Rāma's state of consecration, 1180; —duration of one year for, 414, 1132; —duration of thousands of years for, 10, 424, 849, 1183–84, 1187; —as expiation, 126, 130, 137, 156; —family reintegration marked by, 154; —as frame for entire epic, 118; —future events marked by, 1280–82; —golden image as wife in, 137, 155, 413, 424, 1123; —on Gomatī's banks, 872; —horse released for or wanders in, 413, 1129; —Ila/Ilā story told at, reason for, 136–37; —as key point in narrative, 118, 154; —Lakṣmaṇa accompanies horse in, 413, 1127–28; —Lava and Kuśa recite Rāmāyaṇa during, 40n26, 118, 414–15; —in MBh, 70n16, 119–20; —military or political components absent from, 168; —in Naimiṣa forest, 413; —in PadmaP, 164n23; —performed one hundred times, 1078; —as purification, 118; —Rāma gives order for and invites guests to, 412; —in region associated with MBh, 1120; —Śatrughna at, 1125; —separation from Sītā before, 1183–84; —Sītā and, 20, 96, 118, 417; —Sītā enters the earth during or at end of, 421, 424, 1183; —Sītā's vow of fidelity at, 118, 138, 420–21; —to Śiva, 1117–18; —in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 677, 1078; as rite of expiation, 121, 123, 125–26, 130, 136, 139, 156, 677; —for brahmahatyā, 123–25, 156, 164n23, 399, 1078, 1113; —Hiltebeitel on, 120–21n36; —van Buitenen on, 122–23; as rite of purification, 121n37, 164–65n24, 168; as rite to restore manhood, 137; role of, in Rāmāyaṇa, 118–56, 168; to Śiva, 1112–14; in TaiS, 123; territorial expansion in, 160–61; Vālmīki's role in Rāma's, 96; yajāmāna in, 1172–73; of Yudhiṣṭhira, 119–22, 161

Āśvamedhikaparvan, 119, 121–23, 160–61, 168

Aśvapati (daitya), 493

Aśvapati (father of Sāvitrī), 50n77

Aśvapati (Yudhājit): attacks gandharvas' country, 10, 425–28; Rāma's maternal uncle, 10, 166, 425, 820, 1188; sends Gārgya to Rāma as messenger, 10, 166, 425–26

Aśvins, 291, 415, 420, 493, 692, 693, 705, 716, 815, 1138, 1165, 1166, 1245, 1304, 1363

atirātra sacrifice. See under sacrifices

Atri: advises Rāma on punishment of brahmans, 1323, 1392; Durvāsas as son of, 433, 1220; name of a sage, 447; Nimi asks to perform sacrifice, 141, 352, 916; one of seven great seers, 225 auspicious omens. See under omens auspicious signs. See under signs austerities. See asceticism avatāras, 1210; Baladeva as Śeṣa, 171–72; Bharata as Pāñcajanya conch, 176, 177n28, 1229; Brahmā tells gods to become, 813; Brahmaloka and, 902, 1271; Buddha, 13; co- or composite, Bharata, Lakṣmaṇa, and Śatrughna with Rāma, 59, 991; —Kṛṣṇa with Balarāma, 170–71, 501; —Rāma and Kṛṣṇa, 170; —Rāma, 172, 174–81; —Rāma with Lakṣmaṇa, 173–74; commentators on end of, 175–86; duration of, 170; end of Kṛṣṇa's, 13n3, 75, 171–72, 180, 911, 1244; —Lakṣmaṇa's, 173–74; —Rāma's, 11, 13, 59, 75, 172–85, 902, 1216, 1218; Kṛṣṇa (see under Kṛṣṇa); Lakṣmaṇa as Śeṣa, 174–77, 908, 1228–29; limits of, 957; maryādāpuruṣottama as reference to Rāma, 100n63; narasiṃha, 244, 513, 1289, 1336–37, 1381; narrative closure provided by end of, 75; Pāṇḍavas as partial (aṃśāvatāras), 177; Rāma as Viṣṇu, 3, 11–13, 75, 94, 103, 169–74, 220, 422, 1176–77, 1218, 1232; —Bhṛgu's curse as cause of, 94, 853, 899–902, 1169;

avatāras (cont.)
—hinted at, 705; —purpose of, to preserve boundaries, 957; —purpose of, to save world from Rāvaṇa, 5, 178, 220, 1209, 1213–15, 1263; —Rāma's weariness with, 1179; —uniqueness of, 13, 173; —yuga of, 1016; Rāma Jāmadagnya (Bhārgava Rāma, Paraśurāma), 13, 1016; Śatrughna as Sudarśana discus, 176, 177n28, 1229; Sītā as, 851; —of Lakṣmī, 211, 1182; —of Vedavatī, 16–17, 601; vāmana, 723, 768–79, 901, 1214, 1287, 1334; varāha, 1174, 1207, 1212, 1373; Vedavatī, 31, 61, 267, 601, 608; of Viṣṇu, gods consulted about, 1176; —in human form, 744, 1215, 1218, 1260; —simultaneous, 991; —ten placed in respective yugas, 1016; —as unique god-man, 55
Ayodhyā, 19, 98, 100, 101, 112, 946, 978, 998, 1009, 1139, 1190, 1196, 1199, 1230, 1231, 1278, 1280, 1395, 1399; Anaraṇya as guardian or king of, 28, 272, 619; Aśvapati Yudhājit sends messenger to, 166; audience hall in, 148; Bharata as guardian or king of, 363, 435, 946; Bharata returns to, 427, 429, 1199; —in Ayodhyākāṇḍa, 1191; Bharata, Lakṣmaṇa, and Śatrughna return to, 327, 827; Ck on, 894, 1268–69; commentators agree on dharmic quality of, 1200; —argue over interregnum in, 1279–80; —argue over monkeys in, 829–31, 842; —argue over rāmarājya in, 842; complainants hard to find in, 221; coronation of Rāma in, 92–93; court or classes of, 39–40; Cr on, 866; Cs on, 881; Ct on, 849, 866–67; Durvāsas on Rāma's rule in, 346; Gārgya approaches, 1188; inhabitants of, accuse or cause banishment of Sītā, 83, 134, 902, 1153; —follow Rāma for mahāprasthāna, 182, 1234, 1235, 1236; kings recruited by Bharata wait in, 158–59, 823; Kosalan state and, 160; Lakṣmaṇa returns to, 94, 347, 428–29, 891, 905; Māndhātṛ as ruler of, 371, 1292, 1294, 1343, 1345; modern city of, 1257; monkeys depart from, 837; no living beings in, 1256; parrot reborn as washerman of, 95; preparations for aśvamedha in, 1128; in RaghuVa, 1153, 1279; rākṣasas, monkeys, and apes feel like natives of, 837; Rāma does not let Śatrughna remain in, 381, 947; —does not consecrate sons in, 903–4; —has no contact with during exile, 157–59; —leaves for mahāprasthāna from, 11, 115, 1257, 1258; —as lord of, 1171, 1280; —as protector of, 378; Rāma returns to, 9, 397–98; —from Agastya's ashram, 397, 1072; —for coronation in PadmaP, 124; —in Puṣpaka in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 838; —after sacrifice, 424; —after Śambūka's death, 9, 148, 397, 1072; —after Śatrughātin's send off, 1237; —with Sītā, 134, 337; —after Sītā returns to earth, 424; Rāma as ruler of, 902; Rāma's procession to Gopratāra tīrtha from, 177; Rasik Sādhus of, 185; Rāvaṇa comes to, 272; Ṛṣabha as new king of, 1278–79; sages depart from, 130; —led by Agastya arrive at, 41; Sāketa as heavenly name of, 903, 1153, 1226, 1227, 1249; Śatrughna returns to, after twelve years, 8, 145, 146, 165, 215, 378–80, 962–63; —for mahāprasthāna, 437, 1252; —for Rāma's aśvamedha, 1125, 1128–29; —with small contingent, 997; Śatrughna spends only a week in, 963; —told of events in, 436–37, 1234; —wants Bharata to stay in, while he kills Lavaṇa, 946–47; —wants to return to, 80, 380–81; in Uttarakāṇḍa, main action occurs in, 40; Vālmīki's ashram resembles, 866; Vasiṣṭha linked to royal family of, 141
Ayodhyākāṇḍa, 3, 17, 18, 133, 1281; Bharata's return to Nandigrāma in, 159; —wife not in, 698; Daśaratha in, 106, 128, 133; Gaya in, 619; Gomatī River in, 872; halahalā in, 1158; Kaikeyī gives amulet to Rāma in, 971; Kausalyā's linen garment in, 1238; list of seers in, 1015; mātāmaha in, 47; navavarṣāṇi pañca ca in, 892; number of sargas in, 1149; Sītā's lineage in, 40–41n27; Surabhi the wish-fulfilling cow in, 658; tālāvacara in, 1120; Vaidya as editor of crit. ed. of, 200–203; widows in, 602; word bhāṣitam in, 78
āyudha. See weapons
Āyurveda, 480

Bāhli: Ila departs, 411, 1116; kingdom ruled by Ila, 404, 410–11, 1092, 1116
Bāhlikas, 404
bahusuvarṇaka. See under sacrifices
Baladeva. See Balarāma
Bālakāṇḍa, 3, 12, 45, 78, 117, 175, 199, 203, 204, 216; accretions to or composite nature of, 72–73, 75; Ahalyā in, 15n11, 115, 614, 737–38, 740–45, 1063; Antoine on Viśvāmitra episode in, 116; aśvamedhas in, 60, 118, 160 (see also aśvamedhas: of Daśaratha in Bālakāṇḍa; aśvamedhas: of Rāma in Bālakāṇḍa); avatāra of Viṣṇu as Rāma in, 169–70, 991; Bharata and Lakṣmaṇa given wives in, 1249–50; Bulcke on, 114–16; Cg on Vālmīki in, 1148; churning of the ocean in, 659; Ck on extent of, 1149; commentators on incarnation in, 174–75, 185; crit. ed. principles laid out in, 200; critical editor of, 199; curse of Niṣāda in, 849, 901–2; excising of, 63; framing narrative of Rāmāyaṇa in, 60, 160; genealogies in, 41–42n27; incarnations of gods as monkeys in, 813, 991, 1240, 1271–77; as integral to structure of Rāmāyaṇa, 117–18, 121; as late or spurious, 63, 74, 102–3, 114; phalaśruti of, 66n4; portrayal of Rāma in, 14–15; recitation of Rāmāyaṇa in, 1001, 1136–37, 1139–40; saṃkṣiptarāmāyaṇa of, 66–67; securing of heirs in, 58; sexual anxieties expressed in, 156; Śiva and Dakṣa's sacrifice in, 113; Skanda in, 476, 788, 1092; specifies length of Rāmāyaṇa, 67; tantrīlayasamanvitam in, 1138; theology of, 169–70; Triśaṅku in, 1032, 1227; upodghāta of, 60, 67, 95, 849; Uttarakāṇḍa's relation to, 72–73, 114, 118; Viṣṇu's incarnation as sons of Daśaratha in, 991, 1228

Balarāma (Baladeva; Rāma): as Baladeva, 1298; birth or death of, 170–72, 174; as incarnation of Śeṣa, 171–72; Kṛṣṇa's brother, 4, 170–71, 1245; ploughshare as weapon of, 501

Bali: called Vairocana, 256, 646, 1288–89, 1334; as cirajīvin, 23n63, 537, 804; cosmic form of, 1287, 1333; identity of, 1056–57; Indra's encounter with, 294, 300, 312–13, 723, 766, 769; Nārāyaṇa's encounter with, 312, 768, 1317; Vajrajvālā as granddaughter of, 156; Virocana's son, 646; Rāvaṇa's encounter with, 1287–89

banishment: equated to execution, 434, 436; of Lakṣmaṇa by Rāma, 173–74, 434, 1125; —caused by Durvāsas, 894; of Sītā by Rāma, 57, 82, 88n23, 104, 108, 1280 (see also Sītātyāga); —commentators on, 219, 849, 858; —discomfort of tradition with, 89–94, 102; —duration of rule of Rāma after, 849; —Lakṣmaṇa finds painful, 85, 344, 892; —order given for, 84; —responses to, 86, 99, 104. See also abandonment barhin. See birds: peacocks

barkcloth garments, 324, 363, 416, 946

battle: in aśvamedha, 161–62; of Bharata and gandharvas, 10, 166, 427, 1192–93; Bhṛgu's wife revives asuras slain in, 1169; Brahmā helps Rāvaṇa with, 652, 1297; Brahmā pleased with Indrajit's feats in, 302, 732; of dānavas and gods, 1288; fog of, 657, 714–15; Garuḍa struck in, 511; gods accompany Viṣṇu in, 500; gods watch, 1991; Hanumān in, 318, 324, 802; heavens for those slain in, 1310, 1315; of Indra and Vṛtra, 1079; Indra cursed to be captured in, 304; of Indrajit and Indra, 300–301, 310, 726; of Indrajit and Jayanta, 296–97, 712–15; Indrajit conjures up darkness in, 297, 299, 713, 721; —enters after worshipping Agni, 303, 735; —invisible or invulnerable in, 226, 287, 301, 452, 456, 728; —slain in, 705; —slaughters enemies in, 227, —superior to Rāvaṇa in, 456; Kumbhakarṇa enters, 298, 717–18; Lakṣmī as goddess of, 1374; of Māndhātṛ and Lavaṇa, 372, 980; of Māṇibhadra and Dhūmrākṣa, 262–63, 576–67; Marutta dissuaded from, 270, 613, 1114; māyā conceals movements in, 678; monkeys in, 184, 591, 1268; Nārada advises Rāvaṇa on, 273–74, 625–27; —fond of watching, 627, 1315; nocturnal, 714; of Prahasta and Arjuna Kārtavīrya, 310, 764; Puṣpaka won in, 330; ocean burial for casualties of, 507–8; outcome of uncertain, 613; of rākṣasas and gods, 236–44, 294–301, 705–15, 717; —and Viṣṇu, 50, 241–42; —and yakṣas, 260–62, 496, 568–74; rākṣasas equal to Mṛtyu in, 236, 486; —revel in, 487; of Rāma and Indrajit, 226; —and Kumbhakarṇa, 226, 451; —and Rāvaṇa, 161n12, 220; Rāma's allies prepare for, 159–60, 326–27; of Rāma's sons and guardians of sacrificial horse, 164; of Rāvaṇa and Anaraṇya, 272–73, 620–24; —and Arjuna Kārtavīrya, 28–30, 311–12, 769; —and Indra, 296–300, 716–17; —and the Kālakeyas, 281; —and Kubera, 262–64, 574–84, 1293–95; —and Māndhātṛ; —and moon, 1296; —and nāgas, 280, 654; —and Nivātakavacas, 32, 280–81; —and Vālin, 315, 777–78; —and Varuṇa's sons, 282–83, 659–64; —and Vidujjihva, 27, 285, 657, 670–72; —and Viṣṇu, 211, 294, 704–5, 1300, 1311, 1315; —and Yama plus Mṛtyu, 277–80, 640–52, 1288; —and Yama's warriors, 276–77, 635–40; Rāvaṇa challenges others to, 269, 271, 598, 610–13, 1290, 1314; —dies in, 15, 133, 158, 226, 326, 334; —invincible in, 261, 655; —seeks men for, 1314; Rāvaṇa's intoxication in or proclivity for, 672, 760; of Rāvaṇa's ministers and Arjuna Kārtavīrya's, 310, 762–63, 765; Rāvaṇa vows to kill gods in, 299–300, 722; —Madhu

battle (cont.)
in, 288; —world guardians in, 274; Rāvaṇa withdraws from, 301–2, 728–29; river as metaphor for, 720; sacrifices give immunity in, 303, 736–37; of Śatrughna and Lavaṇa, 8, 165, 363, 373–77, 949, 987–92; —witnessed by Vālmīki, 379, 1000–1001; seers not interested in Rāvaṇa's role in, 41; of Śiva and Sukeśa's sons, 491; —and Yama, 511; of Sumālin and Sāvitra, 295–96, 709–11; in Uttarakāṇḍa compared to Yuddhakāṇḍa, 76–77; of Viṣṇu and dānavas, 1288, 1310; —and Madhu and Kaiṭabha, 365, 954; —and Mālyavān, 244–46; Viṣṇu prepares for, 500; —retreats in, 511; —urges Rāvaṇa to challenge Bali to, 1287; —vows to kill rākṣasas in, 490; women cannot engage in, 605; of Yadus in MBh, 171 bears: ṛkṣas as, 751, 1185 benedictory rites (svastyayana), 260, 567
Benoît, Philippe: on Agastya, 446; on creation myth, 954; on demons, 494, 523; on dharma, 493–94, 504; follows Cr, 572; —Ct, 631, 1046, 1088, 1102, 1203; —Gorresio, 608, 615, 628; —Roussel, 479, 497, 499, 536, 578, 586, 592, 615, 657, 663–64, 673, 675, 690, 692, 694, 736, 742, 795–96, 811, 816–17, 862, 893, 897, 938, 940–41, 943, 954, 962, 966–67, 979, 984, 997, 1003, 1019, 1021, 1061, 1068, 1079, 1096, 1099, 1111–12, 1147, 1154, 1156, 1161, 1186, 1198, 1216, 1226, 1258; on gopati, 592; on Manu, 471; on Nandīśvara, 589; Pagani compared to, 221; prakṣipta passages omitted by, 1330; on Pratardana, 821, 847; on Rāma's allies, 159; on Rāvaṇa, 596, 604; on sacrifices, 677; on upāyas, 540; on vegetarianism, 967; on Yama, 630
Bhadra (courtier of Rāma), 18, 131–32, 333–34, 852
Bhādrapada (lunar month), 578
Bhaga: as Āditya, 493, 496; as brother of Indra Vāsava, 239; as divinity of lunar asterism, 483, 493; as god of marriage, 236, 483; Pūṣan and, 1298, 1301, 1353, 1358–59
Bhagavadgītā, 169, 187n1, 494, 530, 616, 1206, 1213, 1251, 1390; Kṛṣṇa in, 93
Bhāgavatapurāṇa, 59, 478, 486, 523, 616, 751, 849, 1097, 1264; Indra in, 766, 1085; Kṛṣṇa or Balarāma in, 172, 1245; Mārkaṇḍeya in, 511; Nṛga in, 140n121, 908 Bhāgīrathī, 339–40. See also Ganges bhakti, 109, 584–85, 1233; dveṣa-, 1070; of Hanumān toward Rāma, 329, 833; inclusivist nature of, 182, 184–85; Lord ensures salvation in, 181–82; of Śatrughna toward Rāma, 437, 1239; of seven seers, 900; in worship of Rāma, 63, 70, 102, 110, 181–82, 185. See also devotion
Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, 199–200
Bharadvāja: father of Devavarṇinī, 52, 229; father of Yavakrīta, 446; gives Devavarṇinī as wife of Viśravas, 44, 126, 229; one of seven seers, 225; at Rāma's aśvamedha, 419
Bharata (brother of Rāma), 87, 102n66, 115, 170; administers kingdom, 157, 363, 946; as ascetic during Rāma's exile, 363, 599, 946; Ayodhyā entrusted to Lakṣmaṇa and, 385, 1029; in Ayodhyākāṇḍa, 1191; Bhṛgu's curse on, 902; Ck assigns Ayodhyā to, 894; commentators argue about, 842; describes ideal kingdom after Rāma's accession, 6, 130, 146, 331, 842; Durvāsas's prophecy about, 345, 894, 895, 897; founds capitals for sons, 166; gandharvas attacked by, 10, 15, 58, 166, 425–28, 1190–92, 1193; battle with, for seven nights, 427, 1091; as Garuḍa, 175, 179, 1228, 1262, 1276; Ila/Ilā story told to, 406, 408, 410; Kārāpatha subjugated by, 10, 58, 428–29, 167, 1197; Lava and Kuśa given gold by, 416, 1150; Lavaṇa and, 146, 363, 945; as Pradyumna, 991, 1229; Pratardana and, 159, 326; prepares for aśvamedha, 413, 416, 1128–29; Rāma aided by, 158–59, 326–27, 819, 821, 823, 825; —asks Bhadra about, 333; —calls, 335, 859; —consecrates as king of Ayodhyā, 435; —followed to heaven by, 439, 1236, 1260–61; Rāma, Lakṣmaṇa, and, 10, 429, 1200; —discuss sacrifice, 16; on Rāma's rājasūya, 9, 16, 162–63, 168, 398–99, 677, 1077; rejects kingship after Rāma exiles Lakṣmaṇa, 435, 1230; returns to Ayodhyā, 427, 429, 1199; —with Lakṣmaṇa and Śatrughna, 327, 826–27, 829; —from Takṣaśīlā and Puṣkarāvatī, 427, 429; Śatrughna hears of, 436–37, 1236; at Śatrughna's consecration, 365, 381, 951; as Viṣṇu, 181, 1266–68, 1278; as Viṣṇu's conch (Pāñcajanya), 175–77, 1228–29, 1279; wives of, 439, 608, 1123, 1249–50, 1250, 1252
Bhārata (Yudhiṣṭhira), 120–21
Bhārata War, 13n3, 995
Bhāravi, 69
Bhārgava, 419, 1169, 1237; Arajā as daughter of, 394, 1065; Cyavana as, 8, 165, 360–61, 371, 419, 446, 977, 1138, 1156 (see also Cya-vana); Devayānī as daughter of, 357; Rāma Jāmadagnya as, 13, 23n63, 756, 1016 (see also Rāma Jāmadagnya); Ṛcīka as, 1127; Uśanas Kāvya as, 144, 153, 357–58, 394, 396, 676, 931, 933, 1056–58, 1065, 1138 (see also Uśanas Kāvya); Vālmīki as, 415, 1138, 1148, 1280 (see also Vālmīki)

Bhārgava Rāma. See Rāma Jāmadagnya
Bhāsakarṇa: field marshal of Rāvaṇa, 485; son of Sumālin and Ketumatī, 236 bhāṣitam, 77–78
Bhatt, G. H, 199–200, 203, 206n35, 207n37, 511, 546, 902; establishes principles for crit. ed., 200–201, 218; cautions against higher criticism, 200, 212
Bhaṭṭi, 69–70
Bhaṭṭikāvya, 69–70
Bhava (Śiva): defeats Rāvaṇa, 265–66; gives boons, 233, 477; mentioned in inserted passage, 1380. See also Śiva
Bhavabhūti: critical of Rāma, 88–89; happy ending to Rāma story by, 89; on karuṇa, 61; on Śambūka episode, 107–9, 164; on Sītā's abandonment, 91–92
Bhayā (Kāla's sister), 45, 232
Bhīṣma, 119–20, 140
Bhogavatī, 280, 653
Bhṛgu, 325, 916, 1323; curses Viṣṇu, 94, 851, 853, 899–902, 1169; Cyavana as son of, 410; Nimi and, 352, 355
Bhṛgus: Cyavana as best of, 371; lineage of, 325; Vālmīki in family of, 901–2, 1148, 1280
Biardeau, Madeleine, 38n6, 114n5, 126n61, 166n29, 174n19; as editor of Gallimard edition, 221; on structure of Uttarakāṇḍa, 117 birds, 307, 317, 331, 389–90, 392, 407, 733, 735, 753, 757, 779–80, 1044–45, 1050, 1195, 1254, 1063, 1064, 1099, 1306, 1325; adjutant stork (kaṅka), 720; cakravākas, 29, 306–7, 332, 846, 1045; —identification of, 751; carrion, 426, 639, 1191 (see also vultures); cātaka, 845; circling of, 525–26; crow (kāka/vāyasa; Corvus splendens), acquires boon from Indra, 270–71, 615–16; —as consumer of offerings, 616; —immortality of, 271, 616; —as inauspicious, 498–99, 615–16; —maxim of the eyeball of, 1226; —Yama becomes, 269–70; Cs on, 908; dātyūhas, 845; descendants of Vinatā, 589; as egg-born, 945, 1401; Garuḍa as lord of, 179, 245, 512 (see also Garuḍa); garuḍa as synonym for, 511; great, as semidivine creatures, 181, 250, 265, 440, 589, 1166, 1286, 1297, 1333, 1395–96; —that worship Viṣṇu, 181, 440; haṃsas (see haṃsas); herons (see kaṅka in this entry); kaṅka, 720, 1293; kapota (doves), 498; kāraṇḍas, 306, 751; kāraṇḍavas, 846, 1045; kokilas (koel), 331, 1325, 1395; krauñca (sarus/sārasa crane), 61, 95n47, 901; Laṅkā inaccessible to, 235, 482; male, become female, 405; nātyūhas, 845; owls (see owl); parrots (śuka), 94–95; pass through Mount Krauñca, 242, 509; patraratha as kenning for, 509, 617; peacocks (mayūra/barhin), acquire eyes on tail, 270, 614–15; —crying of, 20, 342, 886; —dance during rains, 614; —Indra becomes, 269–70; —term ka as a word for, 856; pigeons (pārāvata), 1195; as rākṣasas' mounts, 239; rāvaṇa as pre-Aryan word for, 596; sārikās (mynah; Acridotheres tristis), 498; —as type of crow, 498; sarus cranes (sārasa; Grus antigone), 61, 306, 845, 751; semidivine, 589; taking any form at will, 584; vultures (see vultures); waterfowl (jalakukkuṭa), 306, 309, 751, 758; waterfowl (śakuna), 757–58 births: abduction blamed on deed in previous, 284; of Agastya from a pot, 44n39, 142–43, 355–56, 925–27; —and Vasiṣṭha, 139, 142–43, 355, 925–26; of Ananta (Śeṣa) as Lakṣmaṇa, 174–77, 908, 1228–29; of apes, 441, 1271; attendants during, 370, 972, 974; of Brahmā from brahmāṇḍa, 1210–11; chamber, 972, 974; of cows from Rohiṇī, 658; of daityas, 253, 542; death inevitable for those who take, 616; of demon Aśvapati as Hārdikya, 493; of Devayānī's sons in MBh, 931; of Droṇa from a pot, 456; of Duryodhana, 525; of gods, 253, 542; of Hanumān from Añjanā, 6, 21, 75, 319, 788; of horses from Gandharvī, 658; human, 1215; of Ikṣvāku's sons, 393, 1005; impurity associated with, 370, 974–75; of Indrajit (Meghanāda), 6, 42n32, 257, 556, 676; of Janaka from Nimi's body, 256; of Kaikasī's sons, 6, 8, 25, 47, 51, 127, 247–48, 485, 1240; Kāla in a previous, 1208; of King Kṣupa from a sneeze, 1040–41; of Kṛṣṇa, 59, 119, 170; —and Balarāma, 170–72; of Kubera Vaiśravaṇa, 50; of Kumbhakarṇa, 248, 1240; labor pains during, 842; lack female agency, 43, 353, 920; of Lakṣmaṇa, 1277–78; Lakṣmī takes, 601, 609, 1182; —as Sītā, 1229; of Lava and Kuśa, 8, 58, 67, 69, 115, 117, 143, 145–47, 220, 370, 971–76, 1151; —commentators on order of, 973–74; —Lakṣmaṇa informed of,

births (cont.)
370; —Rāma unaware of, 9; —Sītā may take her own life after, 880; Lord's human, 169–70; of Madhu and Kaiṭabha from earwax, 431, 474, 954, 1211, 1328, 1400–1401; of Māyavān and Dundubhi, 256, 553; of monkeys, 182, 441, 1240, 1271; of Nara and Nārāyaṇa, 911; of Nimi, 355–56; as ocean of misery, 1176; of Pāñcajanya as Bharata, 175–77, 1228–29, 1279; of Pāṇḍavas, 59; of Prajāpati, 470; of Pūru from Śarmiṣṭhā, 357, 931; of Purūravas from Ilā, 137, 409–10, 1109–10; of rākṣasas or rākṣasas by, 39, 232–36, 451, 478, 1240; of Rāma and brothers from pāyasa, 170; —in earlier volumes, 12, 170; —foretold, 1224; —previous, 1225; —Vaiṣṇava, 1176–77 (see also of Viṣṇu as Rāma in this entry); —Vālmīki narrates, 216, 423, 1149–50; of Rāvaṇa, 25–26, 47, 53, 127–28, 247–48, 525–26, 1240; —Agastya narrates, 227; —compared to Kubera's, 42; —as Hiraṇyakaśipu in a previous, 1381; —inauspicious omens at, 26, 248, 525–26; —name of Daśagrīva given at, 595; —as noble, 273, 554; reaping rewards of previous, 351, 381, 669, 1010, 1310; rites of, 370, 971–76; of Ṛkṣarajas from teardrop, 1305; of Śambūka as śūdra, 386, 1032; of Saramā, 256, 1324, 1393; Saramā's previous, 1324, 1394–95; of Śarmiṣṭhā's sons in MBh, 931; by or of Sītā, 206–7, 370, 607, 609–10, 863, 971–76, 1151, 1174, 1313, 1318; of Skanda, 233, 476, 788, 1082, 1293, 1334; —place of, 264, 586; of sons, as sign of perfect kingdom, 130, 331, 842; splendid, 183, 441, 1272; of Sudarśana as Śatrughna, 176, 177n28, 1229; śūdra, 1026; of Sugrīva, 1307, 1366–70; of Sukeśa, 233, 476; Supreme Being takes, 1214, 1218; of Surabhi from Krodhavaśā, 658; of Śūrpaṇakhā, 249, 1240; true form of Viṣṇu without, 1176; of twins, 973; of Vaiśravaṇa Kubera, 50, 229; of Vālin, 1307, 1366–70; —and Sugrīva, 211; of Vasiṣṭha from a pot, 44n39, 142–43, 148n149, 355–56, 919–20, 925–27; of Vedavatī as Sītā, 16–17, 31, 206–7, 268, 605–7; —from vedic speech, 267, 601; Vedavatī's transitional, 607; of Vibhīṣaṇa, 250, 1240; of Vidyutkeśa, 232; of Viṣṇu as Aditi's son, 1214, 1317; —Bhārgava Rāma, 1016; —Kṛṣṇa, 140n122, 349, 911; —Rāma, 59, 176, 220, 246, 899, 902, 1215, 1218, 1229; Viṣṇu cursed by Bhṛgu to take, 851, 899–902; of Viśravas, 23, 126, 229, 461; of Vṛtra from āhavanīya fire, 1085; of Vyāsa, 1109–10; of Yadu from Devayānī, 357, 931. See also avatāras; rebirth black antelopes. See antelopes; kṛṣṇasāra blackbucks. See antelopes; kṛṣṇasāra blood. See under omens: inauspicious boars (varāha), 719, 945; as avatāra of Viṣṇu, 1174, 1207, 1212, 1373; as rākṣasas' mounts, 239, 298, 496, 685; Rāvaṇa in form of, 582 bodily signs. See under signs bodily transformation. See gender: transformation; transformations: bodily boons, passim; Brahmā as granter of, 234, 375; to crow from Dharma, 270–71, 615–16; to daughter of Tṛṇabindu, 42; to dog from Rāma, 1323–24; to haṃsa from Varuṇa, 271, 617; to Hanumān, 6, 21–22, 30, 70n16, 323–24, 800–806, 809, 1243; Hara as granter of, 308, 405, 756, 994, 1094–95; to Ilā, denied, 136–37, 405, 1115–16; —from Rudra, 406, 1096–97, 1105; —from Umā, 405–6, 477, 1095–97, 1105, 1109–10; to Indrajit from Brahmā, 674; —from Paśupati, 287, 678, 724, 731–32, 736–37; to Jāmbavān from Brahmā, 1245; Kubera as granter of, 324, 802; to Kubera to be lokapāla, 44, 126–27, 230, 464–66; to Kumbhakarṇa, 6, 251–52, 537–38, 717; to lizard from Vaiśravaṇa Kubera, 271, 617–18; to Madhu from Rudra, 361–62, 942; to Mālin, Mālyavān, and Sumālin, 49–50, 234, 236–38, 486–87; to Māndhātṛ from Rudra, 1294–95, 1347; to Mārkaṇḍeya, 511; to Mitrasaha Saudāsa from Vasiṣṭha, 369; to Mount Sumeru, 319, 788; to Nimi from gods, 344; to Nivātakavaca daityas, 280, 654–56; to peacock from Indra, 270, 614–15; to rākṣasa women from Umā, 233; to Rāma from gods, 105–6, 109, 215, 386–87, 1033–34; to Rāvaṇa, 6, 26, 252, 254, 262, 271, 293, 300, 529, 559, 573–74, 723, 1175, 1208; —after head-severing, 250; —of mutable form, 534; —of near invincibility, 24, 54–55, 169, 173, 250, 269, 294, 532–33, 591, 596–98, 606, 609, 625, 650–52, 701–2, 704, 747; —mantra from Brahmā as, 1299, 1302–3, 1350, 1354–55; —Marutta ridicules, 269–70, 612–13; —Nārada tells Brahmā about, 1381; —protects from Arjuna, 312, 767; —protects from Yama, 279–80, 645; —Rāma asks about, 41, 226–27, 456; —from Śiva, 596; to Rudra from Viṣṇu, 1118; Śambūka does austerities for, 386, 1031; to Śatrughna from gods, 377; Sītā requests from Rāma, 870; to Sukeśa, 48, 233–

34, 238, 478, 480, 488, 490; to Vaiśravaṇa Kubera (see also to Kubera to be lokapāla this entry); to Vibhīṣaṇa, 6, 250–52, 535–37, 1242; Viṣṇu as granter of, 1219; to Yavakrīta, 446; to Yayāti from Uśanas Kāvya, 935–36 bows, 270, 272; of Aṅgada and Candraketu, 1196; bejeweled and made by Viśvakarman, 149; brows of Rambhā compared to, 290; composite (see horn bows; śārṅga bow); as crocodiles in river of blood, 1192; of Indra, 272, 299; of Indrajit, 287; of Janaka, 89; of Mālin, 242–43, 509, 509–10; of Māndhātṛ, 1294; of Marutta, 270; of rākṣasas, 241, 506; of Rāma, 225, 385, 438, 868, 1250; —given by Agastya, 149; of Rāvaṇa, 277–78, 639, 644, 1294, 1296, 1346; of Śatrughna, 366–67, 377, 992; sound of, 506; as unit of measurement (dhanuḥ), 787; of Varuṇa's sons, 283, 662; of Viṣṇu, 1299
brāhma (cloud), 1295, 1348
Brahmā (god): Ahalyā given to Gautama by, 304; alliance brokered by, 281; assembly hall of, 1195, 1269, 1305, 1381; aśvamedha and, 123, 1113; Bharata, Lakṣmaṇa, or Śatrughna as forms of, 894, 1227–28; boons of inviolable, 293, 591, 606, 650, 701, 809; —as source of Rāvaṇa's power, 54, 262; born from golden egg, 470; —Viṣṇu's grace, 486; —Viṣṇu's lotus, 179, 232, 470, 515, 1208, 1212, 1310, 1328, 1400; —waters, 232, 573; brahmans and, 234, 481; Ck as devotee of, 178, 181, 601–3, 1086, 1166, 1251; Ck on Hiraṇyagarbha as pure form of, 1206, 1219, 1266; —Rāma as, 601, 1206, 1250, 1251; —role of, 175; —virtues of, 1270–71; —Viṣṇu as subordinate form of, 1218; creates Ahalyā as perfect woman, 303; —Gāyatrīmantra, 187; —Kṣupa through a sneeze, 1040–41; —people as identical, 303; —rākṣasas and yakṣas, 45, 232; —waters, 232; as creator, 1210–11; —in vedas and purāṇas, 470; as eldest of beings, 1213; explains Śatrughna's arrow, 375–76; —Śveta's hunger and thirst, 150, 391; greatness of, 957; haṃsa as vehicle of, 655; Hanumān granted boons by, 22, 323–24, 801, 803, 805, 1243; —to become as, 813; Hara and Hari summoned by cry of, 1328; Indra and Virocana taught by, 305, 646; Indra reminded of Ahalyā's rape by, 304; —worships, 1307; Indra's release and, 302–3, 731; Indrajit denied immortality by, 733; —granted powers by, 302–3, 732–37; Jāmbavān and, 1243, 1245; Kāla as messenger of, 11, 172, 173, 429–32; Kṣupa made king by, 1040; Kubera and, 25, 465; —granted boons by, 44, 126n67, 230, 464, 465; —made world guardian by, 44, 126, 230; Kubera's garden created by, 332, 846; Kumbhakarṇa cursed by, 717; Kumbhakarṇa granted boon by, 251–52, 257; —of sleep, 251, 538; as life force of world, 1201–2; Madhu and Kaiṭabha try to kill, 474, 1328; Mainda and Dvivida granted immunity by, 1245; Mālyavān, Sumālin, and Mālin granted boons by, 48–49, 234, 237; Māndhātṛ wields weapon of, 1294, 1346; Manu goes to abode of, 1055; Nalakūbara's curse and, 864; Nārāyaṇa praised by, 900; Nṛga and Vasiṣṭha as equal to, 918; offspring as viewed by, 471; pitāmaha and prapitāmaha as epithets of, 989; as Prajāpati, 1212; as primordial puruṣa, 1037; Pulastya as son of, 25, 42, 42n34, 126, 227, 314, 457; Puṣpaka built by, 584–85; —protected by, 276, 636; rākṣasas and yakṣas instructed by, 471–73; Rāma agrees to requests of, 172, 432, 1219; Rāma as, 601; Rāma asked by, to listen to Rāmāyaṇa, 423, 1175–76; —to return to Brahmaloka, 1260; —to return to essential form, 440; —to return to heaven, 431, 440, 1217, 1259, 1263; —to take back Sītā, 864; —to take back Sītā, in Rāmopākhyāna, 86; —in Brahmaloka through agency of, 1257; —called Viṣṇu by, 440; —calmed by, 216, 422–23, 1172; —consoled by, 216; —greeted at Sarayū River by, 178–81, 440; —reminded by, of true nature, 155, 216, 422–23, 431, 440, 1175–76; —reminded by, that human life span is completed, 431; —sent messeger by, 173; Rāma's followers granted heavens by, 182–84, 440–41, 1268–73; Rāma welcomed back by, 1259–60; Rāmāyaṇa accepted or commissioned by, 192, 1178, 1277–78, 1281; —composed by Vālmīki through grace of, 1178, 1277, 1281–82; —heard from goddess by, 1178; —recited by, 1281; —worshiped by, 11, 183, 192, 441, 1277, 1282; on Rāmāyaṇa as describing future, 119, 216, 422–23; —as enduring forever, 23; Rāvaṇa as great-grandson of, 5, 55; —denied immortality by, 532; —given protective mantra by, 1297–99; —granted boons by, 54, 173, 250, 529, 534, 536, 547, 573–74, 1303; —protected from Yama by, 279–80, 652; Rāvaṇa's attack on the moon stopped by, 296–97; —battle with Nivātakavacas stopped by, 281; —life span preordained by, 596–98; regards suffering of others as own, 796; Ṛkṣarajas and, 1305–8; as Rudra, 677, 771, 1113, 1118, 1201; as Śambhu, 806; Sandhyā as daughter of, 475; Sarasvatī as consort of, 601; Sītā's chastity affirmed by, 864; soothes gods' fears, 376, 991; Śrī and Umā as daughters of, 1157; Sukeśa granted boons by, 234; Śveta and, 150–51, 391; in trimūrti, 799; Uttarakāṇḍa restrictions set by, 1179; Vaiśravaṇa Kubera and (see Kubera and this entry); Vālin meditates on, 776, 781; Vasiṣṭha as son of, 142, 352, 916; —asks for a second body from, 142, 353; —told to enter semen of Mitra and Varuṇa by, 142, 353, 920; Vāyu and, 22, 321, 323, 794; —worships, 323, 797–98; Vibhīṣaṇa granted boons by, 250–51, 535, 1242; Viṣṇu not truly known by, 1380; in Viṣṇu's heart, 1300; as Viṣṇu's son, 1208; Viśravas as descendant of or equal to, 25–26, 247–48; weapon-spell (brahmāstra) of, 535, 803, 1346; as wholly dependent on Viṣṇu, 1381; wind as form of, 953; world of (see Brahmaloka)

Brahmā (god) (cont.)
Brahmadatta (king), 1329, 1401
brahmahatyā: aśvamedha as expiation for (see under aśvamedhas); —of Indra in Uttarakāṇḍa, 399, 403, 1078, 1088; —in PadmaP, 124–25, 164; of Indra, 9, 123, 129, 136, 402–3, 924, 1079, 1083, 1085–88; personification of (Brahmahatyā), 403, 1085, 1089; Rāma accused by brahman of, 147; Rāma's slaying of Rāvaṇa as, 155, 1012; in TaiS, 123, 1078; in Uttarakāṇḍa, 119–30; —not explicit, 126, 128–29; as worst cardinal sin, 1079
Brahmaism. See Kataka: Brahmaite theology of Brahmaloka, 1091, 1179, 1269, 1271; Brahmā departs for, 234; commentators on who reaches, 183–84, 1251–52, 1268–69; —on monkeys in, 1271–72; enlightened beings attain, 601; as foremost in three worlds, 1050; as four- or fivefold, 184, 1270–71; as highest heaven, 913, 1177, 1251; hunger and thirst absent in, 391; Ila attains, 411, 1116; locus of ascension of Rāma, 66–67, 150, 178, 182, 346, 894–95, 902–3, 1223, 1235, 1251–52, 1256, 1257, 1260–62, 1265, 1269–70; Manu ascends to, 393; nature of, 1268; as pleasing to Rudra, 1113–14; Rāma capable of giving as benefit, 1038; Santāna or Sāntānikas as just next to, 184–85, 441, 1257, 1269–71; śapatha as road to, 1232; Śveta attains, 391; as unsuitable for mortal bodies, 1245–46
brahmamedha. See under sacrifices Brahman, 1071, 1278; ākāśa as, 179, 1262–63; as akṣara, 1263; divine power of, 1036; epithet "expounder of," 396, 409; as highest state, 438, 1036, 1071, 1247; knowledge of doctrine of, 183, 409, 535, 803, 1069, 1091, 1109, 1206, 1208, 1261, 1268, 1271, 1341; pure light as, 608; Rāma as form of, 179, 180, 440, 1036, 1069, 1070, 1071, 1261; as sound, 1269; world of, 1269 brahmanical social order. See classes; varṇa (traditional social class) brahmanic voice. See voice: brahmanical brahmans: Agastya as foremost of, 390–92, 1049, 1051; Arjuna Kārtavīrya showered with flowers by, 313, 769; as ascetics in some yugas, 383–84, 1017; aśvamedha transcends sin of killing, 1078, 1113; Benoît on diet of, 967; born from Mitra and Varuṇa's semen, 142, 355; Brahmā and, 234, 481; Brahmahatyā possesses killers of, 403; Budha as, 1102; children of restored to life, 105–6; cow of, 349, 909; dangers of kings disregarding duty toward, 141, 156; in distant lands, 1156–57; dog beaten by a, 5, 1322; dogs cannot enter houses of, 1320, 1386; dvija, 1102; as experts, 1141–43; future of Daśaratha's lineage foretold by, 345, 893–94; Hanumān granted immunity from, 324, 803, 806; hell for crimes against, 580, 1324, 1393–94; hymn the sun, 396, 1066; immunity of, 1323, 1392; Kālagautama as name of a, 1401; killing of (see brahmahatyā); kings' accepting gifts from, 149–50, 1037, 1039–40, 1188; —negligence leads to offenses against, 145; kings not normally sons of, 1114; kings' offenses against, 7, 139–30, 140, 144, 211, 413, 1129; kshatriyas equal to, 383, 1017–18; —inferior to, 383, 1016–19, 1040; Kubera as, 126–27, 463; lower varṇas serve, 1023; Madhu devoted to, 361; maxim of, 722; meat offered to, 369, 967, 969; monkey society and, 1370; moon as king of, 1297, 1350; naigama as, 952, 1014, 1122, 1385, 1392; Nalakūbara as, 291, 694; Nārada as foremost of, 274–75, 632; Nimi neglects a, 141; Nimi's body preserved by, 355, 928; Nṛga adheres to command of, 351, 914; —cursed by, 7, 213, 349–51, 910–11, 913; —gives cows to, 140, 348, 909; —neglects, 140–41, 349; —reverential toward, 348; Pulastya as foremost of, 313–14, 771; rākṣasa in form of, 369, 968;

Rāma aids, 745; —blamed for death of son of, 104–5, 146–47, 1012; —dismisses, 424, 1181; —followed on mahāprasthāna by, 439; —goes to forest for sake of a, 744; —invites, 383, 412; —worships, 816; Rāmāyaṇa recited by, 1281–82; —Lava and Kuśa in dwellings of, 414–15; Rāmāyaṇa worshiped by, 1277; Rāvaṇa as, 123–28, 256, 146, 554–55, 773; —assaults, 27; —in guise of, 975; rebirth as, 1381; Saṃvarta as, 1114; Śāradā MBh brought south by, 204; Śatrughna consecrated by, 364–65; Śatrughna's army camps with, 959; Sītā to give oath in presence of a, 154; Śiva and, 411, 1299; Sugrīva consecrated by, 1370; transgressions against, 145, 147, 154–55, 1090; Uśanas Kāvya as foremost of, 286, 934; Vasiṣṭha as foremost of, 352, 917–18, 948, 969; vedas take the form of, 439; Vibhīṣaṇa, rākṣasas, and women wait upon, 1125; village or quarter of, 1322, 1389; Viṣṇu holds breath like, 241, 503; —incarnates to save, 55, 169; —propitious to, 94, 1299, 1354; Viśravas has virtues of, 44; as voice of morality, 151; Vṛtra as, 123, 1079, 1085; woman's response to Rāma's treatment of Sītā, 99; on Yamunā's banks, 360–61; Yayāti disdains daughter of, 144

brahmāstra. See astra: of Brahmā

Bṛhaspati, 313, 425, 815, 817, 1188, 1325; as guru of gods, 812, 1056–57; Kuśadhvaja as son of, 31, 267, 600–601; parents of, as earth and sky, 1206–7; Saṃvarta as brother of, 269, 1114; Vedavatī as granddaughter of, 31, 267

broadswords (ṛṣṭi), 241, 1300, 1357

Brockington, J. L., 5n11, 24n69, 36n2, 37nn5–6, 106n80, 109n93, 114nn1–2, 115n11, 117n21, 121nn36–37, 199n3, 66n3, 74, 212n52, 536, 908, 991, 998–99; on atimuktaka, 844; on crit. ed. of MBh, 199n3; on kahlāra and indīvara, 688; on Mahābhārata–Rāmāyaṇa relationship, 70n16, 72n34; on nīpa or kadamba, 843–44; on raktacandana, 843; on śleṣmātaka, 539; on tagara, 689; on social attitudes in Rāmāyaṇa, 106; textual reconstruction by, 63, 102; on uśīra, 610; on Uttarakāṇḍa, 63, 76, 78; —as response to audience's curiosity, 54, 56, 219, 843; —tag verses in, 468

Brockington, Mary, 63, 72n34, 74n3, 102

Buddha, 59n21, 112, 1236; as avatāra, 13

Buddhacarita, 79n2. See also Aśvaghoṣa

Budha: aśvamedha performed by, 137, 410–11; austerities of, 136, 407, 1099; dishonesty of, 1106, 1108; Ilā seduced by, 136, 407–8, 1100; Ilā's retinue transformed by, 407–8, 1102, 1103; Ila's/Ilā's stay with, 137, 409, 1105, 1108–11; as planet Mercury, 1104, 1124; Purūravas's father, 354, 409–10, 923, 1110; social class of, 1102, 1105, 1107; Soma's son, 408, 409, 1099, 1104, 1111

buffalo, 306

Bulcke, Camille, 66n3, 109n93, 788; on Uttarakāṇḍa's structure, 114–15, 119, 148

Caitra (lunar month), 152, 394, 404, 689, 1057, 1092, 1105

Caitraratha garden, 332, 846

cakra: as ornament, 1336; as weapon (see discus)

cakravākas. See under birds cakravartin: Rāma as, 58, 161, 165, 167, 823; Yudhiṣṭhira as, 160–61, 168. See also universal ruler camels (uṣṭra), 239, 288, 298, 496, 685

Candra (moon god): Brahmā stops attack on, 1296–97, 1350; Budha as son of, 408, 1099, 1104; desires world's welfare, 1297; distance from earth, 1296; as king of brahmans, 1350; as form of Viṣṇu, 1311, 1380; Rāhu given, 320; —torments or swallows, 320, 512; rākṣasas boast of being, 237, 487; Rāvaṇa frozen by, 1296, 1350; —goes to world of, 1290, 1340; —wounds, 1296, 1350; Rohiṇī as wife of, 525

Candrahāsa (Rāvaṇa's sword), 596–97

Candrakāntā, 10, 167, 428, 1197, 1199

Candraketu: as aśvamedha guard, 164n23; Bharata as rear-guard for, 429, 1199; city established for, 10, 166, 428; commentarial discussion of, as malla, 1198; as king of Candrakāntā, 167, 428

cannibalism: curse of, 369; of Kumbhakarṇa, 248, 251, 537, 877; of Lavaṇa, 372–73, 945, 986; of Mitrasaha (Kalmāṣapāda), 369, 969–70; of rākṣasas or rākṣasīs, 34–35n116, 35; of Rāvaṇa, 27, 34–35, 270, 527; of Rāvaṇa's ministers, 310; Sītā threatened with, 34–35n116; of Vasiṣṭha averted, 369; Vasiṣṭha tricked into, 145n140, 369, 967–70; of Vidyujjihva, 657–58

Capital: The Eruption of Delhi by Rana Dasgupta, 103–4 capture: of Bali by Indra, 300, 313, 723, 769–69; —by Viṣṇu, 312, 768, 1287, 1317, 1336; of Hanumān by Indrajit, 318, 785; of Indra by Indrajit, 311–12, 725–31, 740, 745–46, 769; Indra cursed to suffer, 33, 304, 740; of Rāvaṇa, 300; —by Arjuna Kārtavīrya, 312–13, 767–68; —by Vālin, 30, 316–17, 777–82; of Sītā by Rāvaṇa, 16–17, 34, 39, 96, 98; of Vālin attempted by Rāvaṇa, 316, 782 carrion birds. See under birds cātaka. See under birds cats: biḍāla, 498–99; mārjāraka, 242, 507 cats-eye-beryl (vaidūrya), 584. See also vaidūrya cattle, 1253–54, 1288, 1393; crossing, 1258; keeping, 1023; lord of, 592, 724; as rākṣasas' mounts, 239, 288, 298, 496, 685; release of, 1279; Śiva as lord of, 265, 300, 405, 592, 724, 1093. See also cows caturbhāga (one-fourth part [of Viṣṇu]), 174–77, 1041, 1228–29 celestial ornament: Agastya gives to Rāma, 9, 149–50, 388, 1037–42; Agastya on history of, 388–92, 1043–53; Śveta gives to Agastya, 392, 1052–53; Viśvakarman fashions, 149, 388

Cg. See Govindarāja
Chāndogyopaniṣad, 664, 1206, 1268, 1270–71 chariots, passim; Anaraṇya falls from, 272; as akṣauhiṇī division, 157, 272, 366, 684, 958, 961; of Brahmā, 234; Brahmā accompanied by flying, 440; flying, 440, 1280; of gods, 239; of Indra, 297, 300, 642, 715, 725; —abandoned, 301; of Indrajit, 287, 300, 452, 711, 736; —moves through sky or at will, 287, 296, 660, 678, 711; of Jayanta, 296; Lakṣmaṇa takes Sītā to Ganges in, 337, 869–70, 873, 886, 905, 962; —travels to Rāma's palace in, 335, 859; Lava and Kuśa each given a thousand, 436; of Mālin, 243, 510; of Māndhātṛ, 1292, 1294, 1345; as metaphor for control of senses, 1322, 1390; Puṣpaka as moving at will or flying, 264, 584, 587, 716, 1029; of rākṣasas, 241, 287, 298, 496, 497, 685; —destroyed, 506; rathya as road suitable for, 1134; of Rāvaṇa, 260, 288, 296–300, 640–41, 717; —women cry in, 666; Rāvaṇa sees divine, 1291–92, 1340–41; of Śatrughna, 378, 380–81, 437, 998, 125; of Saumitri, 335; souls mount at death, 183, 441, 1273; of Sumālin, 295, 509, 710; of Sūrya, 320, 1339; of Varuṇa's sons, 282–83, 660–62; of Viṣṇu, 509; vivaram as "excellent," 1168, 1174; of Yama, 277–78, 643; —disappears, 280; women's thighs like poles of, 666 chastity: of Ahalyā, 739; of Sītā, 83, 84n5, 98, 864, 1153–55, 1383. See also purity Chatterjee, Asim Kumar, 74, 106, 114n5 chāyāsītā or māyāsītā ("illusory Sītā"), 84n5, 90, 1246 childbirth. See births
Chowdary, Tripuraneni Ramaswamy. See Ramaswamy Chowdary, Tripuraneni chronology: of ancient Indian literary texts, 65, 68; commentators on, 218, 829–30; of Kṛṣṇa's departure from earth, 13n3; of Ila story, 1105; of Rāma's reign (see Rāmarājya: duration of); of Uttarakāṇḍa, 74, 93; of Uttarakāṇḍa narrative, 130, 328, 331, 348, 367, 370, 424, 426, 429, 431, 829–31, 842, 849–50, 902, 909, 959, 961–62, 976, 995, 999, 1182–84, 1187, 1191, 1199, 1215, 1251–52
churning of ocean, 654 cirajīvins, 23, 536–37, 804, 1242, 1244–45
Ck. See Kataka classes: of ancestors, 815; Kālakeyas as asura, 550; Kṛṣṇa's vibhūtis as foremost of each, 187n1; mallas as wrestler, 1198; nāgas as semidivine serpent, 1170; Nivātakavacas as daitya, 654; pacādi as, of verbal roots, 1252; phenapas as ascetic, 659; plural marks, 1196; of semidivine birds, 589; of semidivine or supernatural beings, 700, 818, 1103, 1189, 1348; of vānaras, 1370; Viśvedevas as vedic, 701; yoni as, 1030. See also varṇa (traditional social class); varṇāśramadharma clothing. See garments
Cm. See Maheśvaratīrtha commentators: *Adhyā*R's influence on, 186; agreements of, 463, 504, 516, 597, 600, 674, 708, 747, 780, 799, 838, 875, 880, 883, 901, 936, 947, 956, 960, 962, 984, 995, 1002, 1018, 1074, 1211; on Bhṛgu's curse, 901–2; on birth order of Sītā's twins, 973; on Budha's mendacity, 1106; on chronology, 59, 551, 829–31, 849–50, 1010–11, 1184, 1187, 1199, 1215; on class and caste, 183, 895–96, 1019–26; contradictions noted by, 55; disagreements of, 446, 471–72, 528, 560, 615–16, 621, 631, 649–50, 665, 689, 719, 732, 738, 740, 742–43, 767–68, 770, 782, 803, 806, 838–39, 841, 891, 894, 919–21, 925, 928–29, 939–40, 950, 965, 975–76, 978, 984, 996, 1073, 1080–81, 1106–7, 1161, 1191, 1201, 1205, 1247; on Gāyatrī- mantra, 187–98; on gender transformation, 137; on Hanumān remaining behind, 1243; on historicity of epic, 159; on history of Laṅkan war, 159; on Ila/Ilā, 1109–10; on interpolated passages, 4, 76, 210–17; on Kāla as son of Rāma, 1206–19; on Kāla's words, 1221–22; on Kumbhakarṇa, 717–18; on Lavaṇa being attacked, 960; on names of Sītā's twins, 972; philosophical and sectarian positions of, 178, 183–86, 1112–14, 1208; on rākṣasas' genealogy, 682; on Rāma being criticized, 906; on Rāma's abandonment of his relatives, 894–95; —abandonment or treatment of Sītā, 89, 96; —acceptance of gift from Agastya, 1037–40; —acting, 470; —addressing Lakṣmaṇa with vocatives, 907; —allaying of Sītā's concerns, 852; —allies being left behind, 177–78; —arrows, 954–55; —ascension and those left behind, 902–3, 1242–45; —brothers' accompanying him on mahāprasthāna, 1260–61; —brothers being dismissed before entering residence, 869; —desire to perform sacrifices, 1074; —food not being eaten by Vālmīki, 1133–34; —gaining Laṅkā only to give to Vibhīṣaṇa, 786; —going to Brahmaloka as puzzling, 902–3; —happiness, 837–38; —holding a staff, 1172–73; —inability to avert fate, 891–92; —inquiries about extent and author of poem, 1147; —knowing truthfulness of Agastya's story, 746–47; —lovemaking's duration, 849; —monogamy, 1182–83; —moving to Vālmīki's hut, 1180; —moving with sons to more convenient location, 1180; —omniscience, 470; —questions for Agastya, 1053; —reabsorption with Viṣṇu, 180–81; —reasons for not using infallible arrow, 945–46; —recognition of twins as his sons, 1151; —reference to own purification, 1068; —regaining Lakṣmaṇa, 786; —return to heaven, 178–85; —sacrifices, 1180, 1183–84; —smile, 1091; —strategy for Śatrughna, 956; —suffering, 891; —taking on form of Viṣṇu, 1213–14; —three reasons for Hanumān to remain alive, 1243; —transformations, 180; —true nature being Viṣṇu, 1175–76; —warning his brothers not to thwart his intention, 862; —words to Kāla, 1205–6; on Rāmāyaṇa's extent, 1149; as receptive and interpretive community, 185; on residual forms of Rāma and brothers, 179; on Śambūka being killed, 10; silence of, 509, 542, 552, 576, 677–78, 684, 746, 785, 794, 798, 854, 873, 939, 1046, 1062, 1156; on Sītā's entering of earth, consonant with wishes of Rāma, 1169; southern recension followed by, 206; struggle to interpret passages, 475, 495, 497, 579, 585, 588–89, 619–20, 769, 876, 926, 946–47, 978–79, 1017–18, 1044, 1061, 1066, 1077, 1109–10, 1201–2, 1239–40; tensions among, 183–86, 1112–14, 1208; theological debates of, 171–86, 180, 991, 1036, 1112–14, 1175, 1206–19, 1227–28, 1259–78; Uttarakāṇḍa accepted by, 74; —vs. other books for, 218–221; on Vālmīki's ashram, 866; —Bhārgava affiliation, 1148; Vaiṣṇava saṃpradāyas and, 177–78, 1227–29; on Viṣṇu's weapon, 957 composite bow. See horn bows; śārṅga bow composite incarnations. See avatāras: co- or composite conch (śaṅkha): of Viṣṇu, 176–77, 237, 241–44, 246, 500–501, 504–7, 510, 1226, 1229, 1276, 1279, 1317, 1364; of Viṣṇu named Pāñcajanya, 241, 1229; —Bharata as, 175–77, 1228–29, 1279

conch shells, 315, 321, 794, 1286, 1300 conquest: Arjuna Kārtavīrya's, of Rāvaṇa, 310–13, 761–69; Bharata's, of Gāndhāra, 10, 15, 166, 427–28, 1191–93; Biardeau on, 166n29; Daśaratha's aśvamedha without, 160; Ila's, of entire earth, 404; of Indrajit, 452–53; Lakṣmaṇa's, of Kārāpatha, 10, 15–16, 166–67, 428–29, 1199–96; Laṅkan war not one of, 161n12, 162, 165; Lava and Kuśa get kingdoms without, 167n33; Lavaṇa's, of Māndhātṛ, 371, 980; Māndhātṛ's, of kings, 371, 978; Māndhātṛ won't stop, 979; pra+√āp as sexual, 1060–61; in rājasūya rite, 9, 399, 1076–77; Rāma extends control through brothers', 58; Rāma's aśvamedha without, 16, 164, 412–14; Rāvaṇa's career of, 6, 27, 30–31, 54–55, 211; Rāvaṇa's, of Anaraṇya, 272–73, 619–625; —of earthly kings, 271, 618–19; —of great serpents, 280, 654; —of Indra and the gods, 293–302, 700–729; —of Kālakeyas, 281, 285, 657–58; —of Kubera, 613, 260–64, 567–86; —of Marutta, 269–71, 610–18; —request for weapon for universal, 597; —of three worlds and gods, 274, 732; —of Varuṇa's forces, 281–83, 660–64; —of Yama, 631–52, 275–80, 633–52; Śatrughna's, of Lavaṇa, 10, 165–66, 374–77, 982–93; Sukeśa's sons', of gods and seers, 237, 486–89; Vālin's, of Arjuna Kārtavīrya, 315–17, 777–82; Viṣṇu's, of conquest (cont.)

Mālyavān, 244–46, 515–18; —of the sons of Sukeśa and the rākṣasas, 240–44, 496–517; Yudhiṣṭhira's, of vast territory in MBh, 160–62
consecration, erotic, 922 consecration, ritual: dīkṣā as, 1035; of golden image of Sītā, 413, 1123–24; of Indrajit, 682; of Marutta, 270, 610; of Nimi, 352, 355–56, 917, 927–28, 930; of Rāma, 80, 1172; of royal umbrella, 438, 1246; of Sarvārthasiddha, 1323; of stallion for aśvamedha, 161, 164, 1127–28; of Viśravas, 25 consecration, royal: of Aṅgada and Candraketu, 167, 428, 1197–99; of Bharata, 1279; Bharata refuses, 435, 1230; Bharata dissuades Rāma from, 16, 677; events after Rāma's, 6, 75, 1280; —Brockington on curiosity about, 117; of Lava and Kuśa, 435–36, 903–4, 1231–34, 1279–80; of monkey Aṅgada, 832, 1241; of monkey kings, 1370; of obedient son only, 144; of older brothers first, 948–51; of Pūru, 359; of Rāma, 57, 815–16, 829–31, 849; —delayed or thwarted, 56, 220; —inaugurates utopian era, 3, 66, 130, 220–21, 842–43; —planned, 9, 16, 1074; —sages attend, 445; —shares in, 12; —Sītā shares in delayed, 17; Rāmakathā versions ending with Rāma's, 17, 65, 69–70, 93; of Rāvaṇa, 25, 549; of Ṛkṣarajas, 1308, 1371; of Śatrughna, 165, 364–65, 948–52; of Skanda, 952, 977; of Subāhu and Śatrughātin, 437; of Sugrīva, 1370; of Suratha, 391; of Śveta, 390, 1049; of Takṣa and Puṣkara, 436–37, 1190, 1238; of Vasu, son of Nṛga, 213, 350, 913; of Vibhīṣaṇa, 162, 786, 1190; of Yudhiṣṭhira, 161; Uttarakāṇḍa begins after Rāma's, 15, 130; Yadu's descendants denied, 937 corpses, 1047, 1052, 1192; of brahman boy, 104, 385, 1009; embalming of, 1028; Mithi churned from Nimi's, 356, 929; preservation of (in oil), 355, 385, 928, 1028; of Śveta, 150, 389, 1052; Śveta eats own, 9, 150, 389–90, 1047–48 cosmic eras (kalpas), 1209, 1244 cosmic eras (yugas): Agastya as ascetic in Tretā, 150, 389, 1042–43; agriculture or crops in various, 1020–21; avatāras distributed among, 1016, 1043; brahmans and kshatriyas equal in Tretā, 383, 1019; brahmans dominant in Kṛta, 383, 1017, 1040; classes eligible for asceticism in Dvāpara and Kali, 384, 1025–26; —in Kṛta, 383, 1017; —in Tretā, 8, 15n11, 105, 384–86, 1019; cow as trope for, 1020; Daṇḍa in Kṛta, 151, 392, 1066; dharmaśāstra from Tretā, 383, 1019; Dvāpara as third of, 1025; at end of, 703, 813, 989; —Yama or Mṛtyu's role, 641, 813; fire at end of, as object of comparison, 240, 262, 310, 375, 376, 576, 988, 1299, 1355; —called Saṃvarta, 1192; —Śiva as, 1297; Hanumān describes, 1020; humans in Kṛta vs.Tretā, 1021–22; Jāmbavān, Mainda, and Dvivida to remain until Kali, 1243–44; knowledge of Brahman in Tretā, 1020; Kosala in Tretā, 160; Kṛta and Tretā compared, 383; Kṛta first and perfect, 383, 1016, 457, 1019; Madhu in Kṛta, 361; mahāprasthāna prohibited in Kali, 1247; of Manu, 1381; Nara and Nārāyaṇa in Kṛta, 911; ocean floods land at end of, 813; Pulastya in Kṛta, 227; Rāma in Tretā, 609, 1016, 1026, 1042–43, 1312; —reign of, recreates Kṛta, 3; Rāvaṇa questions Sanatkumāra in Kṛta, 1309; repeat, 1043; sacrifice begins in Tretā, 1020; Śveta in Tretā, 1043; term as metonym for king, 1388; Tretā, 383, 1016–18; unrighteousness varies by, 384, 1020, 1024; Vedavatī in Kṛta, 16, 269; —reborn as Sītā in Tretā, 17; world destroyed at end of each, 641, 813. See also yugas counter-normative behavior: of rākṣasa women, 46, 50–51; of Śambūka, 147 cows, 1324, 1293; crossing (Gopratāra), 441, 1258, 1273; flag (gopatidhvaja), 1093; as gift, 450, 771, 1301; given for reciting Rāmāyaṇa, 1277; Nṛga gives to brahmans, 140, 348–49, 909; Rāma gives to sages, 449–50; Rāvaṇa sees benefits enjoyed by givers of, 633; Rohiṇi gives birth to, 658; Śabalā, 140, 349, 909–11; sacrifice of (gomedha), 287, 677; in similes, 80, 311, 765–66; Surabhi, 281, 658; Viṣṇu incarnates to save, 169; wish-granting, 1274. See also cattle cows, elephant. See under elephants
Cr. See Śivasahāya
creation: of ādikāvya, 61n32, 89n31, 60–62; beginningless, 692; Brahmā assigned task of, 431, 1212; commentators on what exists prior to, 1207–8; of crit. ed. of epics, 199n3, 200; diverse, 774; of human race, 738; of kingdoms for sons of Bharata and Lakṣmaṇa, 220; Madhu, Kaiṭabha, and rākṣasas exist prior to, 954; Madhu and Kaiṭabha intent on obstructing, 365, 954, 990, 1211; as mode of action, 1206; of phenomenal universe, 172; of poetry, 60–62; —by Vālmīki, 60–62, 1139, 1148; primordial ocean trope and, 1175, 1207; Rāma as author of all, 1213–14; —gives purāṇic account of, 1327–28; Rāvaṇa's ancestry goes back to, 6, 45, 44; tejas and, 1213; of trees, 1401; Vaiṣṇava account of, 431, 1209–16; of varṇas in Puruṣasūkta, 1019; Viṣṇu as agent of, 1311; Viṣṇu's līlā causes, 1374; wind god (Vāyu) as breath of, 799; as Yama's activity, 631 creation stories: Brahmā born from golden egg (hiraṇyagarbha) in, 470, 1210; —from lotus growing from navel of Viṣṇu in, 515; origin of yakṣas and rākṣasas in, 232, 471–73; Prajāpati and waters, 232, 470; Rāvaṇa seeks to replicate, of churning of the ocean, 628; vedic and purāṇic, 470; versions of, confused, 470, 954 creative illusion. See māyā creative power. See māyā critical editions, passim; manuscripts and, 63, 200, 204–5; of MBh, 199–200; principles of, for MBh, 199–200; —for Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa, 201–5, 206n35, 207; of Uttarakāṇḍa, appendix and prakṣipta passages in, 4, 7n14, 8n15, 10n17, 209–16; —difficulty of final sarga of, 178; —emendations and higher criticism in, 216–18; —length of, 36; —Malayalam manuscripts and, 204–5, 208–9; —northern and southern readings in, 206–7; —Shah as editor of, 4; —uncertain readings in, 207–8; of Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa, Bhatt as original editor of, 200; —Brockingtons' translation of, 102; —conclusion of, 11; —dates of, 199; —M4 in, 202–3; —Parameswaran's translation of, 63, 102; —southern recension and, 202; —Sukthankar's influence on, 200; —this translation of, 199; —use of wavy line in, 201–3 crocodiles (grāha/makara/nakra), 241, 308, 310, 502, 753; as rākṣasas' mounts, 239, 298, 685; in rivers of blood metaphor, 298, 720, 757, 1192 crown. See diadem crows. See under birds

Cs. See Satyatīrtha
Ct. See Nāgeśabhaṭṭa
cudgels (musala), 255, 262, 311–12, 569, 576, 635, 713, 769, 1338
curses (śāpa): by Anaraṇya of Rāvaṇa, 28, 31, 273, 623; to become a woman, 563; —a rākṣasa, 39, 123n47; by Bharadvāja of Raibhya, 446; by Bhṛgu of Viṣṇu, 94, 94n45, 851, 853, 899, 900–902, 1169; —made true by Rāma, 853; by brahmans of Nṛga, 7, 140, 213, 349–50, 910–913; by Brahmā of Kumbhakarṇa, 35, 251, 538–39, 717–18; as common epic and purāṇic motif, 28n89; of a dog, 1394–95; Durvāsas threatens, 11, 432, 1220; as explanation, 34–35; by Gautama of Ahalyā, 33n109, 737–45, 1063; by Gautama of Indra, 304–5, 614, 737–45; girls fearful of Pulastya's, 227; gods delighted by Nalakūbara's, 293, 699; Janaka threatens, 88–89; by Kālagautama of Brahmadatta, 1329, 1401–2; by Kaśyapa of Diti, 523; by Kubera of Rāvaṇa in Rāmopākhyāna, 584; Lakṣmī born as Vedavatī due to, 601, 606; Maya unaware of, 128, 256, 554; by Mitra of Urvaśī, 354, 923–25; motifs of, heads shattering due to, 34n111, 698–99; —death freeing one from, 107; —for seeing or being seen, 459; —suffering from, 93–94; by Nalakūbara of Rāvaṇa, 33, 292–93, 696–99; by Nandi of Rāvaṇa, 28, 265, 590–91; Nimi and Vasiṣṭha's mutual, 7, 141, 141n126, 352–53, 919; Nimi does not tolerate Vasiṣṭha's, 144; of Nṛga to end at birth of Kṛṣṇa, 140n122, 349, 910–11; by parrot of Sītā in PadmaP, 94–95; by Pārvatī of Ila, 1106, 1109–11; Rāma explains apparent boon as, 1324; —liberates Śambūka from, 1033; by sages of Hanumān, 22, 325, 787, 807–9; by Śaktin of Kalmāṣapāda, 969; by Saudāsa of Vasiṣṭha, 968; Sītā's chastity protected by, 33n10, 864; by seers of Hanumān, 319, 325; by Śiva of Ila, 477, 563, 1105–6, 1114, 1117–18; by Surabhi of Dilīpa, 658; Tṛṇabindu recognizes Pulastya's, 228; unfailing, 787; by Uśanas Kāvya of Arajā, 152–53; —of Daṇḍa, 33n109–34, 34, 152, 395, 1061–66; —of Daṇḍa's realm, 153, 286, 395, 674, 1062–66; —of Yayāti, 7, 9, 144, 358, 933–35; by Vālmīki of Niṣāda, 61, 849; —of Rāma, 94; by Varuṇa of Urvaśī, 142; by Vasiṣṭha of Nimi, 141–43, 352, 929–30; —of Saudāsa, 145n140, 369, 969–70; by Vasiṣṭha's sons of Triśaṅku, 1032, 1227; by Vedavatī, 268, 598, 606; on Virādha, 123n47; by Viśravas of his children, 26, 35, 39n17, 51, 128, 247, 547, 554, 578; —of Kaikasī, 127, 128n73, 247, 547; —of Rāvaṇa, 263, 578; water's ritual role in, 292, 698, 968; women cheered by Nalakūbara's, 699n1; by women of Rāvaṇa, 6, 24–25, 32, 284–85, 293; Yayāti tolerates Uśanas's, 144, 359, 937–38. See also satyakriyā

Cyavana: Aśvins and, 1138; identity of, 446, 977, 1237; Lavaṇa and, 8, 165, 371; penance of, 682; Rāma and, 8, 165, 225, 360; Sītā's oath witnessed by, 419

daggers (karṣaṇa), 763 daityas: Diti gives birth to, 253, 542; Hiraṇyakaśipu as lord of, 1381; Indra as slayer of, 401; Indra recovers Lakṣmī from, 1173; Kaiṭabha and Madhu, 376; Kārtasvara, 646; in lists of powerful beings, 180–81, 250, 265, 440, 625, 647, 782, 1267, 1304, 1310, 1314, 1364; Madhu, 680–81; Maya, 127–28, 255–56; Nivātakavacas as class of, 280, 654; Puloman, 297, 714–15; Rāvaṇa abducts daughters of, 32, 284, 666; —aided by, 289, 297–98, 706; —called, 717; —challenges, 1314; —cry of, as heard by, 594; —slays, 281, 285; Śambhu as king of, 267, 602, 646; Śarmiṣṭhā, 143–44, 357; as synonym for asuras, 589, 899, 1081; Uśanas Kāvya as purohita of, 899; Vidyujjihva as Kālakeya, 657; Viṣṇu as slayer of, 253, 273, 401, 625, 1380
daiva. See fate
ḍamarus. See drums dānavas: Bali as lord of, 1286–87; Bali describes slaying of, 1287–88, 1335, 1380; gods and, 132, 282, 294, 334, 645, 655, 703, 1301, 1304; Kālakeyas, 657; Kārtasvara, 646; in lists of powerful beings, 180–81, 250, 265, 278, 306, 320, 421, 440, 596, 625, 706, 782, 1267, 1297, 1310, 1314, 1364; Madhu and Kaiṭabha as, 474, 1328, 1400–1401; Naraka, 646; as rākṣasa clan of Kabandha, 38; Rāvaṇa abducts daughters of, 32, 236, 284, 287, 666; —aided by, 300, 724; Śatrughna's arrow terrifies, 375, 988; as synonym for asuras, 589; take form at will (kāmarūpins), 1288, 1335; Uśanas Kāvya as purohita of, 1056; Vidyujjihva as, 27, 255, 550; Viṣṇu as slayer of, 492. See also daityas dancing: of apsarases, 249, 297, 468, 1046; of courtly women, 131, 332; of gods, 1302, 1304; of heavenly women, 1292; of kinnaras, 1291; of malevolent spirits, 240; of mortals, 273; of Nārada, 1317; of Nārāyaṇa, 1301; of Rāmabhaktas, 609; of Rāvaṇa, 29, 308; of young women, 458
Daṇḍa (king), 9, 33n109, 56; Agastya tells Rāma about, 148, 151–55, 393–96, 446, 1055; Arajā raped by, 33n109, 152, 393–95, 695, 740, 1057; destroyed in seven nights along with kingdom, 152, 395, 1063, 1065; narrative rationale for telling Rāma story of, 154; in PadmaP, 119n33; sins of, 152, 394–95, 1060, 1062
Daṇḍa (son of Sumālin and Ketumatī), 236, 485
Daṇḍaka forest, 9, 27n85, 40, 85, 108, 153, 286, 344, 396, 484–85, 674, 1064, 1066
Daṇḍin (gatekeeper of Sūrya), 1290
Dantavakra (courtier of Rāma), 132n94, 333
Danu: name of a demon, 1288; name of Kabandha, 38
Danu (mother of dānavas), 589 darts (prāsa/śalya/senā), 262, 276, 295, 297, 340, 636–37, 640, 709, 713, 763, 765, 767, 875; verbal, 1304
Daśagrīva. See Rāvaṇa
Daśaratha: aśvamedha of (see under aśvamedhas); in cakravartin lineage, 160n6; Cr on knowledge of, 898; death of, 3n2; Durvāsas foretells future to, 7, 94, 346, 894, 898; Durvāsas questioned by, 346, 899, 1224–25; Durvāsas's prophecies to not shared, 895; expands kingdom, 160; Lakṣmaṇa as son of, 1408; lineage of, 903; ministers of, 1326, 1398; putrakāmeṣṭi of, 169; Rāma as son of, 173, 1215–16, 1312, 1409; —compared to, 131, 133; Rāma Jāmadagnya and, 721; Śatrughna as son of, 373, 1409; Sītā as daughter-in-law of, 344; sons of, as portions of Viṣṇu, 175, 991, 1215, 1228; Sumantra and, 895–96; Vālmīki as greatest friend of, 341, 867, 878, 889; —as recipient of compassion of, 878–79; widows of, 424, 953; wives of, 1408, 1410
Dasaratha Jātaka, 68n12
Dāśarathi. See under Rāma daśāvatāra. See avatāras: of Viṣṇu Dasgupta, Rana, 103–4 dates, 54, 114, 119; of Ānandarāmāyaṇa, 109; of BhāgP, 172; debates over, 68; of manuscripts, 203–5, 207; of marginalia, 212, 214; of publication of crit. ed., 212; pūjā ritual helps with, 753; of rakṣābandhana, 976; relative, 77, 218n68; —of sacrificial implements, 964; —of Uttarakāṇḍa and Paumacariya, 68; of Śukranītiśāstra, 1138; of Uḍāli by Bhatt, 202n17; of Uttarakāṇḍa, 74; —terminus ante quem, 69
dātyūhas, 845
Death (god of), 669, 1326, 1397–98; equal to, 486; as manifestation of Viṣṇu, 1320, 1352; in Rāma's court as ascetic, 172. See also Kāla; Mṛtyu; Vaivasvata; Yama deer, 265, 312, 593, 621, 707–8, 945, 964, 1044;

Jarā mistakes Kṛṣṇa for, 171; Lavaṇa consumes, 363; skin, 450; spotted, 1127 deformity: Ahalyā's name means "free from," 738; of Hanumān's jaw, 792; of Kubera's body, 522; of Nandin's body, 588, 592; of rākṣasīs (rākṣasa women), 39–40. See also polymelia destiny. See fate
Devakī, 170, 172
Devavarṇinī: Bharadvāja's daughter, 44, 52, 229; Viśravas's wife, 126, 229
Devavatī (gandharvī), 48, 233–34, 479, 1403
Devayānī: affront to, 144; Arajā older than, 1058; arboreal analogy of, 932–33; in MatsyP and MBh, 143n134, 213, 931, 932, 934; story of reflects tension, 144; Uśanas Kāvya's daughter, 7, 153; Uśanas Kāvya (Śukrācārya) asked for help by, 143–44, 357–58; Yadu as son of, 143, 357; Yayāti curses son of, 359; Yayāti's co-wife, 143, 213; —lack of love for, 7, 143–44, 153–54, 213–14, 356–58, 931–34
Devībhāgavatapurāṇa, 1135 devotion, 548; Budha asks Ilā for, 408, 1104; of Ck to Brahmā, 178, 181, 601–3, 1086, 1166, 1251; of Cr, 888, 890, 1032–33; to followers of Rāma, 440, 1268; of Ilā to Śiva, 411; listening to Rāmāyaṇa with, 1282, 1314; literature of, 107; Mt. Kālañjara as site for, 1392–93; to Rāma, 59, 70, 182, 436, 439, 441, 1233–34, 1268; —of monkeys and rākṣasas, 328–29, 831; —of Sītā, 17, 21, 23, 882, 886; Rāmāyaṇa versions focused on, 91, 93, 1383; Śambūka story in literature of, 109; in Uttarakāṇḍa, 211, 857; in Vaiṣṇava tradition, 60, 89; to Viṣṇu, 182, 441, 1270, 1315. See also bhakti devotions: of Agastya, 387, 1035; of Śatrughna, 1006–7 dhanurveda (military arts), 157 Dharaṇī, 421, 1170. See also Mādhavī dharma: as cosmic and social order, 5, 105, 106, 110, 146, 169, 171, 535, 1019, 1025; cow as metaphor for, 1020; as duty, code of behavior, or custom, 28, 162, 167, 494, 561, 579–80, 682, 694, 696, 850, 856, 888, 938, 1023, 1026, 1054, 1202, 1225, 1232; etymology of, 1321, 1388; as judicial process, 1385; as metonym for king, 1388; as quality, 483; as righteousness, 3, 9, 15n11, 56–57, 66, 99, 122, 151, 463, 466, 528, 535, 579, 603, 612, 695, 793, 833, 884, 888, 890, 892–93, 915, 934–35, 942, 955, 1022, 1066, 1069, 1074–77, 1079, 1108–9, 1117, 1119, 1185, 1201–2, 1224–25, 1238, 1247, 1321, 1323, 1342, 1392; as term for Nārāyaṇa, 535; Yama and, 270, 479
Dharmapāla (minister of Rāma), 1326, 1398 dharmarāja: in MBh, 168; Rāma as, 58, 161; Yama as, 611, 629, 635; Yudhiṣṭhira as, 160 dharmaśāstra: interpreters of, 1319, 1385; law texts, 540, 1385; Manu and others as authors of, 1019; Rāmāyaṇa as, 57; virtuous conduct in, 1144
Dhaumya (seer), 225, 447
Dhṛṣṭi (minister of Rāma), 1328, 1398
Dhūmaketu (minister of Rāvaṇa), 294, 646
Dhūmrākṣa: bathes in Narmadā, 307; fights army of Arjuna Kārtavīrya, 309–11; —Māndhātṛ, 1293; —yakṣas, 262; identity of, 452–53, 485; minister of Rāvaṇa, 260, 1293; son of Sumālin and Ketumatī, 236
Dhvanyāloka of Ānandavardhana, 62
Dhvanyālokalocana of Abhinavagupta, 62n33 diadem (crown): of handsome man (Rudra), 1285, 1331; of Mālin, 243, 510; of Mālyavān, 244; of Māṇibhadra (Pārśvamauli), 262–63, 577; Rāma gives as gifts, 827; of Rāvaṇa, 585, 1336; of Ṛkṣarajas, 1308; of Vāyu, 323, 797–98
diggajas (guardian elephants), 470, 753–54; Añjana, 310, 479, 754, 763; Kumuda, 1295–96, 1348–49; leader of, 753. See also Añjana; Mahāpadma; Padma; Vāmana digvijaya, 30, 774. See also conquest dīkṣā: of Agastya, 387, 1035; of golden image, 413, 1123–24; of Nimi, 352, 355, 917, 927–28; of Rāma, 95, 1180 discus (cakra), 176–77, 237–40, 243–44, 246, 294, 489, 500–501, 505, 510, 512, 572, 703, 899, 954, 1228–29, 1276, 1279, 1289, 1310, 1315, 1317, 1328, 1353, 1364 diseases: doṣas as cause of, 480; Hanumān free from, 324; Hiraṇyakaśipu immune to, 1336; mahodara (enlarged belly), 794; Mathurā free from, 377, 995; Sukeśa's sons likened to, 49; unknown during Rāma's reign, 13, 130, 331, 424, 842, 1185; wind as cause of, 799. See also illnesses disembodiment: anaṅga refers to, 1058; becoming as the wind as euphemism for, 928; of Nimi, 355–56, 918–19, 930; vaideha refers to, 929; of Vasiṣṭha, 356, 918–19, 930; of voices, 842, 1153, 1328, 1401
Diti (mother of daityas), 253, 542
Divanji, P. C., 202 divine missile. See astra divine weapon-spells. See astra dogs (sārameya), 242, 506, 633; defiling, 611, 1320; kaula sect leader reborn as, 1324, 1393; kauleya as, 1393; Rāma told of attack on, 1322; as Saramā's descendants, 1320–22, 1324, 1387; Sarvārthasiddha disputes with, 5, 14n7, 57n11, 211, 1319–24, 1384; —in Ānandarāmāyaṇa, 1366 dohada (pregnancy longing), 7, 18, 131, 135, 333, 340, 851, 878 dolphins (śiṃśumāra/makara): Gangetic, 496; in Narmadā, 308; Pacific humpback, 757; as rākṣasas' mounts, 239, 496 donations: charitable, 268, 425, 606, 630, 1130–31, 1186, 1301, 1312, 1315, 1326, 1358; memorial, 1186; misappropriation of, 1324, 1393–94. See also alms; gifts donkeys (khara), 239, 288, 298, 496, 685 Doordarshan, 65, 100–101

doves. See birds: kapota
Draupadī: abducted, 71; departs for mahāprasthāna with husbands, 1247; Duryodhana exposes thigh to, 562; tears of rage of, 982; wife of Pāṇḍavas, 71, 177
Dravidian linguistic group, 37–38n6, 46n51–52, 206
Dravidian political movement, 97, 110, 112 drums: ḍamarus, Śivasūtras produced from, 811; dundubhis as war and celebratory, 273, 293, 527, 591, 623, 670, 699, 1046, 1138; jharjarīs, 1298, 1352; mṛdaṅgas, 1046–47; murajas, verses in shape of, 1143–44; paṇavas, Śiva plays, 1298, 1353
Dundubhi (younger son of Maya), 256, 553 dundubhis. See under drums
Durmukha (son of Mālyavān), 236, 484, 706, 852
Durvāsas: arrival of, 11, 432, 434, 1220; Atri's son, 1220; Budha or Ila and, 410, 1111; Ck on, 895; curse threatened by, 11, 432; Daśaratha questions, 346, 899, 1224–25; fast of, 433; foretells future, 7, 346, 894–96; Lakṣmaṇa learns of prophecy by, 94, 345–47, 1251–52; princes not told of prophecy by, 895; Sītā's oath witnessed by, 419; in Vasiṣṭha's ashram, 345, 898
Duṣyanta (king), 271, 619
Dutt, M. N.: follows commentaries, 462, 467, 472, 497, 512, 523, 547, 560, 577, 580, 608, 629, 631, 638, 657, 673, 712, 742, 862, 956, 1102, 1216, 1270; ignores terms, 795, 899, 1046, 1095, 1130, 1140, 1156, 1194, 1198, 1210; odd interpretations of, 663, 940, 972, 979, 984, 1021, 1041, 1072, 1088, 1090, 1124, 1231, 1252; on phenapa, 659; prakṣipta passages translated by, 1330, 1366; sargas omitted by, 799; Shastri follows (see under Shastri); Raghunathan follows (see under Raghunathan, N.)
Dvāpara Yuga. See Yuga, Dvāpara
Dvāraka, 13n3, 171, 937
dveṣabhakti. See bhakti: dveṣa- Dvivida: asura nature of, 1245; as cirajīvin, 1245; left behind, 177n27, 1243–45, 1272; as monkey lord, 326, 328, 828 dwarf incarnation. See avatāras: vāmana earrings: of rākṣasas slip off, 244, 514; Rāma gives as gifts, 827; of Rāvaṇa, 585, 589; Rāvaṇa unable to lift Bali's, 1336; of Sumālin, 246, 520; of Sumālin's charioteer, 242; of Sūrya, 1290; of Vāyu, 323, 797–98

echoing: of Ahalyā's curse, 742–43; effect of prabhaviṣṇu, 481, 490; of Hemā's name, 552; lakṣmaṇaṃ śubhalakṣaṇam as, 585; of Lavaṇa and Rāvaṇa, 146; malla used for, 1198; of metaphor and physical act, 541; of names in epithets, 595–96; of parā and mukha, 791; pramodanaṃ modakaram as, 1111–12; śatrughnaḥ śatrutāpanaḥ as, 961, 993; saumitriṃ mitravatsalam as, 907; sumantraṃ mantrasārathim as, 891; of Tṛṇabindu's names, 458; of yakṣāma and rakṣāma, 473. See also alliterative epithets; etymological epithets eclipses: as comparison, 336, 433, 861, 1061, 1223; Rāhu as demon of, 21, 320, 512, 790; solar, 21, 320, 790, 1282; parvan as, 790. See also Rāhu
Ekākṣipiṅgala ("Dusky in One Eye"), 259, 324, 556, 564, 802
Ekalavya, 110
elephant-foot yam (sūraṇa), 1067 elephants, 241, 242, 244, 258, 292, 306–7, 327, 507–8, 559, 754, 764, 768, 809, 945, 961, 1234, 1300, 1323, 1355, 1357; as Añjana's descendants, 234; as army division, 157, 241, 272, 436, 684–85, 825, 958; bull, 29, 234, 292, 308–12, 765–66; caught in mudhole, 663; in comparisons, 290, 524; conch sound's effect on, 241, 505; cows, 29, 234, 308–10, 765–66, 1277; —in heat, vāśitā as term for, 760; diggajas or guardian (see diggajas); of Indra, 22, 320, 321, 790–92 (see also Airāvata); ivory products from tusks of, 558; Lavaṇa eats, 363; nāga as term for, 506, 1170, 1347; ornamentation on, 320, 790–91; as rākṣasas' mounts, 239, 288, 298, 496, 685; riders of, 241, 503; in rut, 241, 504–5, 524, 761; sighing of, 869; sixty years old, 663; of Varuṇa, 763 (see also Añjana); of Virūpākṣa, 767; war, 366, 790, 958, 961 ellipsis, 538, 575, 668, 683, 694, 988, 1060, 1065, 1086, 1136, 1336, 1346

embalming, 1028. See also corpses: preservation of emendations, 216–18; appendix passages reinserted as, 105n79; avoidance of, 200–201n9; of awkward readings, 561, 695; of commentators, 714, 1215; to crit. ed., list of, 1411–12; crit. ed.'s concern with, 201–2; evidence lacking for, 488; minimal use of, 201; to reference in previous volume, 494; of text, 624, 678, 688, 907–8, 948–49, 951–52, 999, 1014, 1016, 1033, 1096, 1172, 1367, 1371, 1391; of transcription, 536, 1143; used to avoid problems, 1128 emeralds (vaidūrya), 332, 584, 617, 845. See also vaidūrya erotic sentiment (śṛṅgārarasa), 18, 33, 40, 131 erotic tone, 29, 690, 757 etymological epithets: lakṣmaṇaṃ lakṣmivardhanam, 871; lakṣmaṇaṃ śubhalakṣaṇam, 1385; śatrughno devaśatrughnaḥ, 986; śatrughnaḥ śatrutāpanaḥ, 993; saumitriṃ mitrāṇām, 870; sumitriṃ mitravatsalam, 907. See also alliterative epithets; echoing etymologists, 1143 etymology: of Ahalyā, 303, 738; of Ananta, 1373; of Añgadīya and Candrakāntā, 166; of dharma, 1388; of dvāpara, 1024; of Gāndhāra, 166, 1194; of jātavedas, 606; of Kuśa and Lava, 370, 973–74; of kuśīlava, 1146; of medinī, 1212, 1401; of Nārada, 1094–95; of Nārāyaṇa, 602–3, 1036–37; of Prajāpati, 1212; of Puṣkarāvatī, 166; of Rāmāyaṇa, 1277; of Rāvaṇa, 266, 595–96; of Sālakaṭañkaṭā, 46n51, 475; of Saṃyodhakaṇṭaka, 572; of sanātanaḥ, 607–8; of Saramā, 257, 556; of Saumitri, 174n19; of Sāvitra, 707; of Sītā, 269, 609; of Sūrasenā, 377, 994; of Takṣaśīlā, 166; of Vedavatī, 608; of yakṣas and rākṣasas, 45n44, 232, 471–73
EVR. See Ramasami Naicker, E. V. excarnation, 170, 185 expansion: of Gāyatrīmantra into Rāmāyaṇa, 67–68, 187–98; of Kiṣkindhākāṇḍa, 21n56; prakṣipta sargas as narrative, 76, 210–12; of RaghuVa into Uttarakāṇḍa, 69n15; territorial, 5, 10, 160–61, 165, 167 expiation: Arajā's, 1064; aśvamedha as (see under aśvamedhas); as concern of Uttarakāṇḍa, 114–56; Indra's, 1079; as morning ritual, 1006–7; Rāma's, 136, 138–39; sacrifice connects transgression and, 121; for transgression and brahmahatyā, 119–128. See also sins: aśvamedha as purification for eyes: Agastya's righteous, 397, 1069; blinking, 929; clouded with rage, 310; divine, 1000, 1381; drinking with, as metaphor, 416, 828–29, 1144; horses from Prajāpati's, 1126–27; Indra's thousand, 270, 614, 740, 1007; inimical, 397; king as, of the blind, 1326, 1398; Kubera's damaged, 259, 562–64; lotus-like, 29, 236, 245, 307, 314, 354, 406, 438, 486, 772, 824, 828, 874, 1046, 1312, 1374; lowered in modesty, 291, 420, 668, 694, 1167–68; Mṛtyu's destructive, 648; of Narasiṃha, 1336, 1381; Nimi dwells in, 355, 928–29; on peacock's tail, 270, 614–15; Prajāpati's swelling, 1127; red, as sign of anger, 244–45, 259, 265, 279, 288, 292, 310, 565, 589, 640, 684, 698, 1063, 1338; —beauty, 1286, 1331; —desire, 309, 688, 759; —ferocity, 1288; —weeping, 671; Ṛkṣarajas subjugates monkeys with, 1308, 1371; roll with anger, 1356; —exhaustion, 317; —terror, 243; of sacrificial horse, 1126; Śiva knocks out Bhaga's, 1298, 1353–54; Śiva's three, 1299; sun and moon as Viṣṇu's, 1301; tearful, 183, 273, 285, 292, 330, 336, 338–39, 341, 347, 379, 422, 434, 441, 626, 837, 869, 879, 1004, 1226, 1273, 1305; throbbing of, as omen, 338, 871; Viṣṇu has hero's, 1289; Viṣṇu's yellow, 1298, 1351, 1356; wide with amazement, 1313–14; —rage, 297, 713; wild with rage, 277, 279, 640 fasting, 397, 1067–68; Ck on, 1050; to death of dog, 1324, 1395; —monkeys, 1013; of Durvāsas, 433, 1221; prāyopaveśana as sitting and, 1013; of Sītā, 341, 879 fate: accepted without grief, 347; all-powerful, 434, 1225; Anaraṇya defeated by, 272; Bali's binding due to, 1287; Daśaratha's curiosity about, 899; EVR on śūdras', 110; of Hanumān, 23n62; Ikṣvāku foresees his son's, 1055; impersonal, 93; impossible to avert, 272, 344, 891, 914; of Indra, 33, 741; Kālagautama's meat-eating due to, 1401; kills warriors, 272, 622; Kubera's blinding fate (cont.)

due to, 562; Kumbhakarṇa awakens through, 685; of Lakṣmaṇa, 433–44; mortals prey to or unaware of, 273, 626; Nṛga accepts his, 351, 914; popular verse about, 1223; power of, 562, 580, 1288; prior actions impact, 897; Rāma concerned about rākṣasas', 864–65; —must submit to, 344–45, 891–92, 1302, 1362; —reflects on his own, 436, 1233; of Rāma's brothers, 177; of Rāvaṇa, 31, 580; separation of Rāma and Sītā caused by, 344; Sītā laments or questions, 19, 136; —must accept, 19, 85; Sītā's faith that virtuous have auspicious, 1163–64; Śveta's hideous, 150, 391–92; —end of, 1051–52; terrible, for inhospitable ascetics, 9; —neglectful kings, 7, 56; war drums sound through, 699; of wives of Ila's retainers, 1108; Yama apportions, 632; of Yayāti's sons, 144 fire ordeal (agniparīkṣā): discrepancies in versions of, 864; modern views of, 99–100; purity still doubted after, 1153; in Rāmcaritmānas, 90–91; in UttaRāC, 1153; in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 20, 83, 118n30, 877, 1163–64 fish (mīna), 310, 833; malla as species of, 1198; Matsyagandhā and Matsya born from, 43n38; in Narmadā, 307–8, 753, 757; rākṣasas compared to, 241, 503; as rākṣasas' mounts, 239, 496 five rivers. See Pañcanada flesh eating: by beasts, 277, 426, 1028, 1051, 1191; by inhospitable ascetics, 149; by Kālagautama, 1329; by Lavaṇa, 34n113, 981; by malignant spirits, 426, 639–40; by men, 1021; by rākṣasas, 34, 55, 145, 231, 315, 426, 774; by Śveta, 150, 390–91 frame. See under Uttarakāṇḍa

gadā. See maces
Gādhi (king), 271, 619
Gaja (vānara), 328, 813
Gālava (sage), 1295, 1347
Gallimard translation, 117, 221
Gandhamādana (vānara), 328, 828
Gāndhāra (region), 166, 427, 894, 1189, 1194 gandharvas, 1190, 1191, 1196; art of (gāndharva, i.e., music), 664, 1142, 1145; assemble with others, 278, 337, 375, 420, 440, 864, 1165–66, 1259, 1304; Bharata and Yudhājit (Aśvapati) slaughter, 15, 427, 1193; Brahmā Prajāpati petitioned by, 321–22, 375; country of, 10, 58, 220, 425–28 (see also Gāndhāra); future conquests of, 624–25; godlike, 119; Hopkins on rākṣasas vs., 38; listen to Rāmāyaṇa in heaven, 1277, 1314; praise given by, 79–80, 231, 240; on mountains, 306, 547; Nārada and, 274, 275, 627; pay homage, 404, 440; rākṣasas intermarry with, 48–50; Rāma can conquer, 344; —condones slaughter of, 167, 1197; Rāvaṇa abducts daughters of, 32, 284, 665–66, 1355; —harasses, 6, 258; —has immunity from, 596; —uses missile of, 1294; simile of, in Nandana garden, 257; sons of assemble, 437, 1240; take form at will, 1192; Vedavatī sought by, 267
Ganges: as best of rivers, 254, 1295; as Bhāgīrathī, 339–40; as destroyer of sins, 873; elephants play in, 1296, 1349; Gomatī as tributary of, 872; haṃsas in, 271; hearing Rāmāyaṇa equals visiting, 1282–83; heavenly (Ākāśagaṅgā), 1296; as Jāhnavī, 339, 341, 343, 367, 880; Lakṣmaṇa consoled after abandoning Sītā by, 94; —has boat to cross, 339, 874; —returns from, 347, 907; —takes Sītā to, 7, 220, 338, 874; —weeps near, 19, 339; as Mandākinī, 254, 290, 688; as Narmadā, 752; in PadmaP, parrot plunges into, 94–95; Pratiṣṭhāna at confluence of, 937; Rāma banishes Sītā to banks of, 7, 18, 84–85, 96, 220, 337–38; Rāma's kingdom located between Sarayū and, 161; Śatrughna encamps army on banks of, 959–60, 977, 994; simile of elephants in, 307, 308, 310, 754; —giving birth to Agni's child in, 233, 376; Sītā won't drown herself in, 341, 880–81; Sītā's pregnancy-longing to visit, 7, 18, 131, 333, 339; Śiva and descent of, 872; Vālmīki's ashram on far side of, 337, 338, 866.
Gārgya (seer), 10, 425–26 garments, 928, 938, 1361; Arjuna Kārtavīrya offers to Rāvaṇa, 314; of ascetics, 266, 599; barkcloth, 324, 363, 416, 946; conceal body of young woman, 753; of donor, 1292; as gifts, 317, 327, 338–39, 413–14, 425, 828, 848, 871, 873–74, 1052, 1125, 1128–29, 1188, 1277; of Lakṣmī, 1302, 1343; of Māndhātṛ, 1292; of rākṣasas disordered, 513; of Rāma, 1276; —for mahāprasthāna, 437–38, 1238, 1247; of Rāma's brothers, 336; of Rambhā, 290; of Rāvaṇa, 316, 754; of Ravi, 1290, 1339; of Śakra disordered, 303, 737; of Sītā, 420, 850, 1167; of Viṣṇu, 239, 500, 513, 1312, 1374 Garuḍa, 511, 517, 779, 908, 1170, 1304; amṛta stolen by, 510; Bharata as, 175, 179, 1262;

comparisons to, 239, 310, 312, 316, 320, 510, 1301; as quarter portion of Viṣṇu, 175–77, 1228–29; rākṣasas destroyed by, 50, 243, 245; as Vinatā's son, 589, 1276; at wind's sixth path, 1296; in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 158, 175n23, 176, 860, 1228. See also lord of birds; Suparṇa; Tārkṣya; Vainateya Garuḍapurāṇa, 213, 905, 1200, 1204, 1258 gaur (sṛmara/gavaya), 308, 497, 751; as rākṣasas' mounts, 239, 497
Gautama (sage): Ahalyā and, 303–5, 739, 742; Indra cursed by, 33n109, 304, 614, 737–38, 742; Nimi has, perform sacrifice, 141, 352; Nimi's city near ashram of, 351; Rāma and, 225, 283, 1015; self-restraint of, 304, 739
Gautama Buddha, 59n22. See also Buddha
Gavākṣa (vānara), 328, 813, 828
Gavaya (vānara), 328, 813–14
gavaya. See gaur
Gaya (king), 271, 619
Gāyatrīmantra, 754, 781, 1380; oṃ as root of, 1251; Rāmāyaṇa as expansion of, 67–68, 187–98, 445, 642, 838, 1036, 1279, 1282, 1373; —uses syllables of, 189; Sāvitrīmantra as alternate name of, 187, 439, 1250–51, 1311, 1373
gāyatrī meter, 187 gaze: compassionate of Lord, 182, 1256–57; destructive, 648; fecundating, 44; male, 44, 51, 563, 753; of Rāma on goddess, 1182 gender: critique of Rāmakathā, 86; dissonance in figure of speech, 556–57; feminine, in Ila/Ilā story, 405; identity in Ila story, 136, 405, 1101–2; inequities of, 98; Rāma and construction of, 104; relations, 84; Sītā's abandonment and, 96; transformation, during pregnancy, 409, 1109–10; —of Ila and troops, 405, 563, 1097, 1101–2, 115; —of Ila/Ilā alternates monthly, 406, 1097; —of masculine creatures, 405, 1093–94; —of Ṛkṣarajas, 1306, 1368; —of Śiva, 136, 405, 1093; Uttarakāṇḍa raises issue of, 101 genealogy: Kaikasī's children's, 51; Lavaṇa's, 145; rākṣasas', 6, 24n69, 26n81, 36, 37–38n6, 42, 44–50, 53, 71, 76, 127, 219, 231–35, 680–81, 943, 983; —female sexual transgressors in, 51–52; Rāma and Sītā's in Bālakāṇḍa, 40, 40–41n6; Rāvaṇa's, 6, 21, 24n69, 26n78, 36, 42, 52, 54, 126–28, 130, 155–56, 219, 943, 983; —Agastya narrates, 124; —in PadmaP, 124n53; in Râvaṇïes section, 6; Sampāti's, 589; of Vibhīṣaṇa, 25, 247; of Viśravas, 228–229. See also lineage gestation, fetal, 43, 943, 1109–10 gifts: from Agastya to Rāma, 1037, 1038, 1039, 1040, 1042, 1043, 1057; from brahman to kshatriya inappropriate, 1039–40. See also alms; donations Go (son of Varuṇa), 282, 660 Godāvarī River, 37n5, 937 goddesses: associated with Viṣṇu, 438, 1157; as Dakṣa's daughter, 479; of earth, Dharaṇī as, 421, 117; —Kṛṣṇa kills son of, 646; —Mādhavī as, 10, 20–21, 155, 216, 421, 1168–70; —Mahī as, 1250; —Rāma demands Sītā from, 21, 422, 1174; —Rāma swears to destroy, 422, 1172–77; —Sītā as, 117; —Vālmīki and, 84n6; —Vasudhā as, 422, 1173–74; of fortune, Śrī or Lakṣmī as, 233, 235, 483, 479, 1157, 1374; Gañgā, 476; Gāyatrī, 1251; great (Umā/Pārvatī), 405, 1095; Hrī, 235, 438, 483, 1250; Kīrti, 235, 483; Lakṣmī desired by Rāvaṇa, 1302–3; Padmā, 438, 1249–50; of rākṣasas called Nikumbhilā, 647; Sandhyā as, of twilight, 475; Sītā, 89, 90–91, 93, 100, 1172; —Cs on descent of, 1171–72; —as Mahākālī, 93; —in presence of Rāma, 1182–83; —as Śrī or Lakṣmī, 91, 607; Śiva becomes woman for, 136, 405; of sleep, 557; of speech, Sarasvatī as, 251, 538, 1301, 1359; —as Vāc, 601; —Vedavatī as incarnation of, 267, 601; Śrī, all wealth depends on, 1397; —on Rāma's left, 438; —Viṣṇu and, 1326, 1249–50; Tamasā, 61n32, 880 (see also Tamasā River); Umā (Pārvatī), as granter of boons, 406, 1096–97, 1105–6; —with husband's approval, 1096; —Kubera looks at, 259, 563; —Śiva as a woman makes love to, 405; —vision of, 405, 1096; Vīṇā (Lute), 1359
Gokarṇa, 249, 529–30
Goloka, 185, 1271
Gomatī River: Lakṣmaṇa and Sītā at, 339, 872; Lakṣmaṇa and Sumantra at, 347, 904–5; Rāma's aśvamedha at, 413, 1120, 1133
Gomukha (Jayanta's charioteer), 296, 712–13
Gopratāra (cow crossing), 11, 70n16, 177, 183, 441, 1258, 1273
Gorresio, Gaspare: Benoît follows, 628; Ct's influence on, 925; on Jayanta and Gomukha, 712; on pāśupata- and brahma- astras, 1346; prakṣipta passages in translation of, 1330; Raghunathan follows (see Raghunathan, N.); Roussel follows, 592, 675, 736, 742–43, 756–57, 811, 899, 940, 1019, 1030, 1096, 1106, 1216; on sāntānika, 1269

gosava. See under sacrifices gossip. See rumors
Govindarāja (Cg): agrees with Ct and Ck in Uttarakāṇḍa, 218; on ākāśa, 1262–63; alludes to chāyāsītā, 1246; on anṛta as agriculture, 1021–22; on ascetics accepting wives, 460; on aśvamedha, 1113, 1132; on Brahmaloka, 1268; on chronology, 470, 849; on etymology of Mādhavī, 1168; —of yakṣa, 471–72; on Gāyatrīmantra, 187–92, 445, 662, 1036; on golden image of Sītā, 1123; on guilt by association, 741–42; on Hanumān's color, 788; on historicity of epic, 159; on Ila/Ilā, 1096–98, 1109–10; on Jāmbavān, Mainda, and Dvivida, 1245; on Kalmāṣapāda, 970; on Laṅkā, 467; on māyā as Lakṣmī, 1264; on Mitra and Varuṇa, 921; on monkeys' return to divine fathers, 1272; on nairṛtapuṃgava, 544; on paternity of Vasiṣṭha and Agastya, 926–27; on Rāma and his brothers, 179–84, 1229, 1262, 1267; on Rāma recognizing his sons, 1151; on Rāmāyaṇa, original contents of, 1149; —recitation of, 1137; on Rāvaṇa's life span, 597–98; on Rāvaṇa's worship of Śiva liṅga, 755; on regifting, 1037; on riding snakes, 496; on Rudra and vedic sacrifice, 1118; on sacrificial horse, 1127; on Sāntānika worlds, 1271; on Śatrughna finding Sītā, 976; still read, 221; on Uttarakāṇḍa's opening phrase, 445; as Vaiṣṇava or Śrīvaiṣṇava commentator, 176, 1118; on Vālin's sandhyāvandana, 780; on Vālmīki, 963, 1138, 1148; on varṇas' duties, 1022–26; —relative status, 1018–20; on Vibhīṣaṇa as witness, 746; on Viṣṇu's return to Vaikuṇṭha, 1278; on Viṣṇu vs. Śiva, 957, 1113, 1118; on Vṛtra as a brahman, 1085
Grāmaṇī (gandharva), 48, 233, 478 grammar, 1003, 1144; Aindra, 801–2, 813; awkward, 478, 602, 644, 769, 802, 842, 846, 935, 944, 956–57, 961, 980, 994, 1171, 1236, 1274–75, 1335, 1344; Bhaṭṭikāvya and, 69; Ck's awkward, 907; commentators correct, 481, 668, 714, 741, 763, 766, 776, 787, 839, 953, 959, 983, 993, 1005, 1024, 1073, 1094, 1104, 1133, 1155, 1183, 1188, 1232, 1254; Cs criticizes Ct's, 1187, 1201; defective in Uttarakāṇḍa, 40, 77–79, 481, 692, 715, 761, 792, 802, 808, 834, 873, 889, 935, 937, 942, 974, 993, 1095, 1341; editions correct, 624, 701, 703, 707, 709, 722, 724, 741, 754, 760, 773, 778, 791–93, 797, 808, 834, 839, 956–57, 967, 974–75, 990, 1047, 1060, 1098, 1123, 1138, 1216–17, 1226, 1368–69, 1401; forced in translations, 680, 694, 717, 845, 1089; Hanumān masters, 22, 325, 801–2, 810–13; irregular, 654; lakṣaṇa as term for rules of, 1003; New, 812–13; Ninth (see Ninth Grammar); Pāṇini a dull student of, 813; systems or nine systems of, 812–13 grammarians: at aśvamedha of Rāma, 416, 1140–41; cleverness of Cs as, 679 gṛdhra. See vultures great serpents. See under serpents guardian elephants. See diggajas guest-offering. See arghya; madhuparka
Guha. See Skanda

Haihaya, Arjuna. See Arjuna Kārtavīrya
Haihayas, 760; Arjuna as lord of, 28, 306, 310, 311, 312, 313, 756 hair, 1047, 1307, 1338; adornment of, 690; bodily, loss of, 744, 1028; disordered, 633; —of Arjuna, 309, 759; —of Rambhā, 696–97; gender marked by, 1109; grey, 1067; of rākṣasas, 243; of Rāvaṇa at birth, 26, 248, 525; Rāvaṇa grabs Vedavatī's, 31, 268; seizing of (keśagrahaṇa), as sexual assault, 31, 604–5; serpents and scorpions as, 1288; Sukeśa as "having nice," 478; tuft of (śikhā/śikhaṇḍa), 286, 675–76, 1289, 1352; Vālin as "having abundant," 1307; Vāsava's seed falls on, 1307, 1369; Vedavatī cuts, 268, 605
halamukha. See ploughshare haṃsas, 29, 306–7, 389, 487, 611, 845–46, 1045, 1095; chariots yoked to, 389, 655, 1046, 1381; color of, 271, 617; identification of, 617, 751; Varuṇa becomes, 269, 271
Hanumān: Agastya tells Rāma of, 21–22, 50, 148, 220, 319–26, 446; Akampana killed by, 451, 484; Akṣa killed by, 785; Añjanā as mother of, 319, 788; appearance of, 319, 788; ashrams vandalized by, 324, 805–6; as author and grammarian, 325, 810–13; Bharata told of Rāma's trials by, 159, 823; Bhāsakarṇa killed by, 485; Brahmā revives, 323; brahmans offended by, 324–25, 805–6; capture of, 318, 785; character of, 21–24; childhood of, 6, 17, 21–22, 75, 219, 319–25, 782–809; as cirajīvin, 23–24, 537, 1244; created by gods, 325–26, 813; curses on, 22, 325, 787, 807, 809; —to forget his own power, 325, 807–10; Devāntaka killed by, 451; Dhūmrākṣa killed by, 454, 485; essential to finding Sītā, 318–19,

786; gentle nature of, 325, 807; gods grant boons to, 22, 323–24, 800–804; Goldman and Goldman on, 63; great task of, 320, 789; ignorant of own strength, 319, 325, 787, 809; immunity granted to, 323–24, 801–2; Indra breaks jaw of, 21–22, 321, 792; —gives garland to, 323, 800; Jāmbavān tells about boons, 1243; Kesarin as nominal father of, 319, 788; Laṅkā searched by, 40, 318; Laṅkā's guardian deity and, 318, 785; life span of, 23, 324, 329, 438, 1243–44; —is as long as Rāmāyaṇa is current, 23, 329; —Rāma ordains long, 803; at mahāprasthāna, 23, 438; as mahātman in childhood, 803; as Māruti, 321, 324–25, 809, 828; name of, 22, 323, 801; Nikumbha killed by, 452; in PadmaP duels with Śatrughna, 164; Praghasa killed by, 452, 485; Prahasta killed by, 451; qualities of, 318–19, 325, 784–86, 810; Rāhu attacked by, 21, 320–21, 790; Rāma aided by, 156; —delays reciprocating for aid of, 835; —gives gifts to, 328–29, 828–29, 836; —places on lap, 828; —survived by, 11, 23–24, 177, 1244–45, 1272; as Rāma's devotee, 22–23, 329, 1217; Rāma's life breaths given to, 835; —unique relationship with, 23; Rāma tells he must remain on earth, 438, 1243; Rāvaṇa's generals killed by, 785; in Rāvaṇa's inner apartments, 318, 563, 785; Rāvaṇa's ministers' sons killed by, 785; revived, 798–99; Siṃhikā killed by, 790; Sītā gives necklace to, 23, 836; —talks to, 318, 785; strength of, 318, 784, 809; stunned, not killed, 321, 798; Sugrīva and, 22, 325, 328, 808, 1307, 1370; in Sundarakāṇḍa, 3; Surasā tests, 53; takes form at will, 804; tries to eat Airāvata, 21, 321, 792; —sun, 319–21, 788–92; Triśiras killed by, 451; unable to live without Rāma, 833; in Uttarakāṇḍa, 22–24, 76, 78; Vālin and Rāvaṇa compared to, 318; Vālin not killed by, 319; Vāyu as father of, 22, 319–20, 788; —places on lap, 322, 796; vedas revealed to, 778; as Viṣṇu's superior, 785; Viśvakarman and, 324, 803–4; yugas described by, 1020

Hari. See Viṣṇu

Hara (minister of Vibhīṣaṇa), 236, 486

Hara (Śiva). See Śiva

Hari Nārāyaṇa, 491, 816, 1289, 1310, 1380

Haritanemin (Śiva), 1297, 1351

Harivaṃśa, 187n1; Cs on Ila/Ilā legend in, 1097; descendants of Yadu in, 937; Gāyatrīmantra in, 187; as Kṛṣṇacarita source, 4, 59, 75; Kṛṣṇa uproots arjuna trees in, 1334; Raghavan on, 70; santāna in, 1269; Uttarakāṇḍa in, 70n16

hatchets (kuliśa), 654

hayamedha. See under aśvamedhas

Hemā: apsaras, 127, 255–56; black antelope skin worn by (sic Svayaṃprabhā), 599; gone for fourteenth year, 551; Mandodarī's mother, 127, 256, 551; Maya and, 255, 552

Hemakūṭa (mountain), 1301 heroic posture. See vīrāsana heron. See birds: kaṅka; kaṅka heron-fletched arrows. See under arrows

Heti (rākṣasa), 45, 232 higher criticism: Bhatt on, 200; Shah's use of, 130, 139n120, 212, 998; Sukthankar on, 199n4

Himalayas, the, 235, 259, 306, 352, 1116, 1258, 1301, 1325, 1396; as boundary, 385, 1030, 1116; creatures of, 1103, 1355; Gokarṇa in, 529; Kubera's austerities in, 259; mountains in, 529, 562, 610; Rāvaṇa in, 266, 599; as standard of comparison, 306, 1325, 1396; Uśīrabīja in foothills of, 610; Vedavatī in, 266, 599

Hiraṇyakaśipu: Diti cursed to give birth to, 523; Bali's great-grandfather, 1336–37; Hiraṇyākṣa's twin, 973; as leader of asuras, 513, 1381; Rāvaṇa and Śiśupāla as rebirths of, 1381; Viṣṇu kills, 239, 513, 1336–37, 1381 horn bows (śārṅga), 241–42, 500–501, 507, 1378. See also śārṅga bow horses, 503, 662, 961–62, 1191; in aśvamedha (see under aśvamedhas); in cavalry divisions, 958; Cs on nāga as, 1347; Gandharvī gives birth to, 658; Indrajit strikes Indra's, 301, 725; as kāmaga, 660; kiṃpuruṣas and kinnaras with heads of, 1103; kṛṣṇasāra as, 1126–27; Mahodara strikes down, 282–83; oghas of, 825; omens involving, 241, 504, 982; as Prajāpati's eye, 1126–27; as rākṣasas' mounts, 239, 288, 298, 496, 635; Rāma given by vassals, 327, 826; —gives sons, 436; —puts Lakṣmaṇa in charge of, 413–14, 1128; —releases for aśvamedha, 412; of Rāvaṇa, 300; sacrificial, 161, 164, 677, 1126–28; —commentators on, 1126–27; —contestation over, 164; —piebald, 164, 413, 1126; of Sumālin, 242–43, 508–9; of Sūrya, 1289, 1339; Ucchaiḥśravas as, 1339; of Varuṇa's sons, 282–83, 661; Viṣṇu strikes down Sumālin's, horses (cont.)

Hopkins, Edward Washburn, 37–38n6, 38, 39n19, 46n54, 698, 1881

243; wild, symbolism of, 508–9, 1322, 1390; women mount with difficulty, 1989; Yama vanishes with his, 280, 642; yoked to Māndhātṛ's chariot, 1294, 1345; —Śatrughna's chariot, 378, 998; —Sītā's chariot, 338–39, 870–73; Yudhājit gives Rāma, 425, 1188 horse sacrifices (aśvamedha, hayamedha, vājimedha). See aśvamedhas
Hrī, 235, 438, 483, 1250
Hum (syllable), 238, 491, 758 human flesh. See cannibalism hundred-slayer (śataghnī), 283, 297, 713; as type of mace, 663

Ikṣvāku: Daṇḍa as son of, 151–52, 393, 1055; Manu's son, 151, 392; Nimi as son of, 141, 213, 351–52, 915–16; Sālakaṭaṅkaṭas as enemies of, 475; territory expanded, 166
Ikṣvākus (dynasty), 816, 819, 937, 978, 983, 984, 1197, 1198; Anaraṇya as king of, 28, 272–73, 622; Ayodhyā as city of, 831; Bhārgavas linked to, 1237; Daśaratha as king of, 1312; Gālava and, 1347; House of, 272, 273, 336, 623, 844, 927, 1185, 1243, 1329, 1402; Māndhātṛ as, 371; Mathurā and, 994; Rāma as delight of, 351, 353, 919; —king of, 393, 744, 828, 1039; Rāvaṇa slain by king of, 28, 35; Sāgara's ties with, 494; Śatrughna as delight of, 376, 380; —expands reach of, 8; Triśaṅku as king of, 1032, 1227; Vasiṣṭha as purohita of, 113, 141, 355, 448, 927, 1117; without protector, 382, 1084
Ila/Ilā: aśvamedha of, 9, 114, 136–37, 410–11, 677; —manhood restored after, 137, 411; attendants of, 407–8, 1103–4; Brahmaloka attained by, 411, 1116; Budha and (see under Budha); kingdom given up by, 137, 409, 1106–8; Lakṣmaṇa and Bharata marvel at, 406, 408; motifs in story of, 563, 1093, Pārvatī's boon to, 136, 477, 1096–97; Pratiṣṭhāna founded by, 411, 1116; pregnancy of, 1109–10; Purūravas as son of, 137, 409–10; Rāma narrates story of, 9, 136–37, 139, 404–11; Śaśabindu as son of, 409, 1111; transformation of, 406, 1097, 1101–2, 1105–6; variants of story of, 1097 illnesses: absence of, 130, 331, 424, 842, 1185; in comparisons, 49, 234, 480; three dreaded, 480. See also diseases illusion. See māyā illusory Sītā. See chāyāsītā or māyāsītā immortality: from asceticism, 303; Brahmā denies absolute, 303, 733–35; —to Rāvaṇa, 532–33, 536–37; Brahmā grants, to Mainda and Dvivida, 1245; —to Vibhīṣaṇa, 251, 536–37, 1242; of crows, 270–71, 616; of Hanumān, 23, 23n62, 24n67, 805; of Indrajit, 303, 733–36; of Jāmbavān, 1244–45; nectar of (see nectar of immortality); of Rāhu's head, 512; of Rāvaṇa, 1303, 1363; —no use against Vālin, 315; —requested from Brahmā, 250, 532–33, 536–37, 1243; Rāvaṇa wishes to churn ocean for nectar of, 274, 628; of Śiva, 1298; of Sukeśa, 233, 478; from valor, 303, 737
immortals: cirajīvins as, 23, 536–37, 804, 1242, 1244–45; —Hanumān and Vibhīṣaṇa as, 537; —legendary seven, 23, 537; —Mainda and Dvivida as, 1245; —Rāma's five companions as, 1244–45; gods as, 163, 236, 250, 301–3, 312, 319, 322, 324, 397–98, 533, 655, 726, 730, 737, 804, 816, 1007, 1076, 1076–77, 1310, 1335; in Kṛta Yuga all are, 383, 1016; sages as, 437, 1237 impregnation: of Daśaratha's wives, 44n39, 170; gaze as means of, 44, 51; of Kaikasī, 51, 485; oral, as motif, 170; of Satyavatī, 1109; of Tṛṇabindu's daughter, 42–43, 228, 459; by Viṣṇu of human women, 170. See also pregnancy impurity: of agriculture, 1021; heaven free from, 440; Kuśa and Lava make women free from, 370, 974–75; Sītā free from, 1177; as sūtaka (from childbirth), 974–75; as trirātram (from menses), 1090 inauspicious signs. See under signs inauspicious omens. See under omens
Indra (Śakra, Maghavān): as āditya, 493; Ahalyā and, 303–4, 737–42, 744; —raped by, 33, 154, 304, 614, 695, 741–42; Amarāvatī as city of (see Amarāvatī); arrows shot by, 299, 639; Asant as epithet of, 1173; aśvamedha of, in MBh, 122–23; aśvamedha of, in Uttarakāṇḍa, 136, 399–404, 646, 677; —is expiation for brahmahatyā, 9, 299, 399, 403, 1078, 1088, 1091; —is expiation for killing Vṛtra, 128–29, 164; —narrated by Lakṣmaṇa, 399, 404; —purifies, 399, 403, 1078; —to Viṣṇu, 402, 1086; Bhaga and Aṃśa as brothers of, 239; Brahmā negotiates release of, 302–3, 732–33; —on Rāvaṇa's invulnerability to, 281; —worshiped by, 1307; brahmahatyā of, 9, 123, 129, 164, 399, 401–3, 1079; —commentators on, 1083, 1085, 1087–88; —follows Indra, 402, 1085; —freed from or regains position after,

129, 164, 403–4, 1091; —from killing Viśvarūpa in TaiS, 1089; —personified, 403, 1089; captivity of, ends, 303; crow as son of, 712; Daṇḍa's realm destroyed by, 152, 395–96; despondent over capture, 303, 737; —over killing of Vṛtra, 123, 402; drought from absence of, 403; ejaculates on Ṛkṣarajas, 1307; eyes of, 270, 614, 740, 1007; as Gautama, 745; Gautama curses, 33, 304, 741–42; as god of monsoon, 130, 331, 377, 614, 842; gods given orders about Rāvaṇa by, 293, 300; —rallied in battle by, 296; Hanumān and, 6, 21–22, 321–23; Indrajit attacks, binds, or captures, 42, 297, 301, 725–29; —feared by, 728; of infallible semen, 1369; invisible, 728; Jayanta as son of, 712; Kāla afflicts, 274, 630; in Kubera's ashram, 230; Kuśa as portion of, 972; Lakṣmaṇa escorted to heaven by, 11, 174, 434; magical spell of, 727; magnanimous (maghavān), 232, 475; Māndhātṛ and, 371–72, 978; in MBh, transgressions of, 122; Nandana is garden of, 559; as object of comparison, passim; Paulomī as wife of, 551; as peacock, 269; peacock granted boons by, 269, 614–15; Prajāpati teaches about ātman, 646; as prisoner in Laṅkā, 302–3, 731; Rāhu chides, 320; —protected by, 21, 320–21; rākṣasas annihilated by, 300; Rāma aided by, 158; —as equal of, 1091; —asks how, defeats Rāvaṇa, 226; —asks, for brahman's child's life, 387; —praised by, 386; Rāvaṇa battles with, 298–300; —devours servants of, 251; —feared by, 239, 293, 700; —objects to offerings to, 287, 679; —protected from, by boon, 723; —vows to kill, 288, 299, 722; sacrifices of, 122, 305; sandhyā ritual of, 780; Śatrughna praised by, 377; Sītā returned to Rāma by, 337; Śiva immobilizes hand of, 1298; Sukeśa's sons and, 236–37; "of tawny steeds," 511; vajra of, 129, 401, 503; —destroys mountains, 510, 710–11; Vālin and, 317, 1307; Vasiṣṭha as priest for, 141, 352; Vāyu angry at, 321; Viṣṇu as brother of, 511, 692, 1317; Viṣṇu gives promise to, about Rāvaṇa, 294, 705; —about Sukeśa, 239; —about Vṛtra, 129, 400–401; Viṣṇu's energy given to, 129, 401; Viṣṇu tells, to kill demons, 646, 699–700; —won't fight Rāvaṇa for, 293–94, 704; —worshiped by, 180, 440; Viśvakarman told to build Laṅkā by, 235; Vṛtra as enemy of, 496, 646, 702; —distresses with austerities, 129, 230, 400; —killed by, 129, 401–2; warriors slain in battle as guests of, 1292; without delusion, 299; as world guardian, 126, 464; as yajamāna, 1088

Indrajit (Rāvaṇi, Meghanāda), 158, 454, 456–57, 678, 694, 712–13, 715, 717, 725–26, 729–31, 733, 735–37; Agastya on, 42n32; Agni and, 303; ascetic garb of, 286, 675–76; battles Rāma's forces in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 678; boons, powers, or weapons given to, 287, 582, 678, 724; —by Brahmā, 303, 809, 735–37; brahmāstra of, 785; chariot of, 287, 678; as child, hidden, 257, 556–57; darkness conjured by, 299, 714, 721; as foe of gods, 226, 296–302, 452–53; at forefront of army, 288, 684–65; Hanumān captured by, 318, 785; illusory powers of, 453, 582; Indra fights with or is captured by, 297, 300–301, 746; as "Indrajit," 302, 556, 733; Indra released by, 303, 735; invisibility of (see under invisibility); Jayanta fights with or pierces, 296–97, 713; killing of, 158, 445, 452–53; —by Lakṣmaṇa, 445, 452, 705, 712, 907, 945, 956; —by Rāma, 41, 226, 452–53; —sages on, 41, 226, 455; Madhu and, 288, 682; Mandodarī gives birth to, 6, 257, 676; māyā of, 300–301, 582, 713, 724–27, 731–32; as Meghanāda, 257, 556; Meghanādavadhakāvya on, 556; Puloman saves Jayanta from, 297; rākṣasas returned to battle by, 296; Rāma asks history of, 40, 226, 457; —praised for killing of, 226; Rāvaṇa calmed by, 301, 729; as Rāvaṇa's son, 703–4, 732–33; as "Rāvaṇi," 556; sacrifices of, 286–87, 676–77; —criticized by Rāvaṇa, 287, 679; —interrupted, 956, 613; —Madhu abducts Kumbhīnasī during, 288, 682; —in Nikumbhilā's woodland, 286, 674; —powers gained by, 4; —vaiṣṇava, 287, 677, 745; sages' disinterest in Rāvaṇa compared to, 41, 457; tāmasī power of, 287, 582, 678, 724; Uśanas Kāvya as guru of, 286, 676; in Uttarakāṇḍa, 42; as warrior, 452

Indraprastha (city), 162

Indus River, 10, 166, 1189, 1197. See also Sindhu River inner apartments. See antaḥpuram insects, 502, 1377; Rāvaṇa treated like, 1316, 1379 instruments. See musical instruments intermarriages. See marriages invisibility, 829; of Ahalyā, 304, 742, 1063; of Daṇḍa's realm, 152, 395, 1063; of gods, 610; of Hara, 1115; of Indrajit, 300–301, 453, 582, invisibility (cont.)

678, 724–26, 728; of Lakṣmaṇa, 1227; of Nṛga as a lizard, 349; Rāma followed by beings with, 1256; of Rāvaṇa, 582–83; of Sāketa, 1249; of Sītā, 90, 1123, 1175, 1246; of Viṣṇu to all beings, 365, 953
invulnerability: Brahmā gives to Hanumān, 22, 324, 801, 803, 806; —to Mainda and Dvivida, 1245; —to Rāvaṇa, 55, 532–33, 547, 650–51, 731; demons believe they possess, 702; Hanumān granted by various gods, 323–24, 801–4, 806; of Hiraṇyakaśipu to many, 1381; of Mārkaṇḍeya, 511; Rāma inquires about Indrajit's, 227; Rāvaṇa's request for, 250, 532, 536; —to foes, 456; —to gods and other supernatural beings, 273, 598, 625, 651, 701; Śiva's lance confers on Lavaṇa, 362 iron weapons: arrows, 1294; clubs (parigha), 261, 569; cudgels (musala), 276, 638; cudgels (tomara), 261–62, 283, 297–98, 310, 663, 713, 1286, 1293, 1344

Jābāli (seer), 383, 412, 419, 1015–16 jackals (śivas/śṛgālas): before Bharata's army, 426; omens involving, 26, 284, 525; she, 498
Jacobi, Hermann, 63n37, 74, 115–16; on Râvaṇeïs, 6, 24, 36n2, 128, 202 Jāhnavī River, 339, 341, 343, 367, 880. See also Ganges jalakukkuṭa. See birds: waterfowl
Jamadagni (seer), 171n6, 225, 756
Jāmbavān: in BhāgP story of Syamantaka gem, 1244–45; as Brahmā's son, 1243; Cm and Ct on time of death of, 1244; at consecration of Rāma, 828; divine nature not regained by, 1272; Hanumān reminded of strength and boons by, 809, 1243; Hanumān's childhood narrated by, 21n56; immortal, 1243–45; as king of apes (ṛkṣas), 832; longevity of, due to Brahmā, 1245; Rāma denies heaven to, 177n29; —instructs Sugrīva about, 328; Rāma's story narrated by in PadmaP, 125n60
Jambumālin (minister of Rāvaṇa), 294 jāmbūnada gold, 308, 755
Jambū River, 755
Janaka: angry about daughter's treatment in UttaRāC, 88, 1133–34; birth of as Mithi, 356, 929; Kuśadhvaja's brother, 601; names of, 356, 866–67, 929; Nimi as dynast of lineage of, 141; Rāma honors and dismisses, 819; returns to Mithilā, 82; Sītā born in House of, for sake of Rāma, 131; —found by, 16, 1174; Sītā's adoptive father, 343–44, 422, 1312; —lineage recited by, 41; Vālmīki's friendship with, 88, 1133–34; Vedavatī reborn as daughter of, 607–8, 610.
Jānakī. See Sītā
Janārdana, 238, 239, 899, 1310
Janasthāna, 153, 396, 475, 1066
Jarā, 171
javelins (śakti), 241, 245, 261–62, 276, 278, 283, 298, 643, 719, 802–3, 942, 1192, 1300, 1357; of Indra, 517; of Mālyavān, 245, 516–17; of Māndhātṛ, 1294, 1345; Maya gives to Rāvaṇa, 256, 555; as Skanda's weapon, 245, 516; tomara as, 1344
Jayadratha, 71
Jayanta (minister of Rāma), 1326, 1398
Jayanta (son of Indra): disappearance of, terrifies gods, 714–15; in epics, 712; Gomukha as charioteer of, 296, 712–13; Indra defeats, 746; Indrajit battles with, 47, 296–97, 712–14, 746; as Indra's son, 47, 296, 712; Puloman rescues, 297, 305, 715, 745; as Śacī's son, 296–97, 713–15 jewels: Agastya gives Rāma Śveta's celestial, 149–51, 388, 1042; Kaustubha (see Kaustubha); Nṛga's burrow adorned with, 915; pools' interiors ornamented with, 845; Rāma given by kings, 327, 826; —gives as gifts, 414, 848, 1131; —gives Lava and Kuśa, 436; Rāvaṇa sees donors of, 633–34; seers ornamented by, 1258; Sītā adorned with, 332, 850; Sītā's underground throne adorned with, 421, 1179; Sūrya ornamented with, 1290; Syamantaka, story of, 1244–45; Takṣaśīlā and Puṣkarāvatī filled with, 427, 1194; Yudhājit Kekaya gives to Rāma, 425, 1188. See also armlet; diadem; earrings; necklaces; ornaments; rings Jhala, G. C., 200n7, 205, 209; on wavy line, 203, 207–8 jharjarīs. See drums

Kabandha (rākṣasa), 34, 38–39; as Danu, 38
kabutar-baz, 1195
Kacchapa (treasure), 577
Kaikasī, 6, 50–53; identity of, 485, 681; offspring of, 46–47, 247–48; Rāvaṇa chided by, 248, 529; Sumālin and Ketumatī's daughter, 236; Sumālin orders, to ask Viśravas to marry, 25, 246–47, 522–24; Viśravas curses, 127, 247, 547

Kaikeyī: as anāryā, "non-āryan," 52n86; auspicious rites performed by, 952–53; Daśaratha's infatuation with, 131n93, 133; gives birth to Bharata, 170, 176, 1229; heaven attained by, 424, 1185; Kaikasī compared to, 53; Mantharā and, 39–40; maternal family of, 47; matronymic epithet not used for Bharata, 1029; —used for Bharata, 163, 399, 1077, 1193; as one of Rāma's mothers, 1123, 1186; Rāma asks Bhadra about, 333, 853; represents uncontrolled feminine, 52; Śatrughna salutes, 367; Sītā compared to, 133; —blesses, 19n43, 850, 882; Yudhājit as brother of, 820, 1188
Kailāsa, Mount, 208, 257, 281, 320, 547, 549, 557, 572, 658, 1300; Puṣpaka on summit of, 330, 838; Rāvaṇa departs from, 264, 586; —encounters Śiva on, 31, 33, 264–65, 755; —fights Kubera on, 260; —flies over, 27; —flies over to reach world of Indra, 293, 700; —goes to, 289, 610; —rapes Rambhā on, 76n7, 289–90, 687; Sītā goes to, 1182; as Śiva and Pārvatī's abode, 589, 1380; Viśravas tells Kubera to found city on, 254
Kaiṭabha: Hari (Viṣṇu) as enemy of, 1381; Madhu and, as asuras, 232, 474; —born from earwax, 1328, 1400; —created by Brahmā, 431, 1210–12; —as great dānava, 1288, 1334; —slain by Mṛtyu, 278; —slain by Viṣṇu, 365, 376, 954, 1328, 1380
kāka. See birds: crow
Kākutstha. See Rāma
Kāla, 240, 387, 497, 630, 645, 647, 982, 1218–19, 1336; as afflicter of three worlds, 274, 630; in ascetic guise, 11, 172, 429; bad omens brought about by, 240; Bhayā as sister of, 45, 232; as comparison, 226, 311, 453, 498; —fire of, 283; —rod of, 261, 291, 295, 710; —wheel of (wheel of time), 243, 512; as death or god of death, 11, 172, 982, 1013, 1034; as destroyer (of all), 1217, 1219, 1220; explains to Rāma how he was creator, 430–31, 1209–16; gods frightened by rage of, 277; Hanumān's feats surpass those of, 318, 786; leads to Vaivasvata, 147; as manifestation of king, 1321; —of Viṣṇu, 1287, 1289, 1297, 1298, 1311, 1334, 1380; as messenger of Brahmā meets with Rāma, 10–11, 172, 429–33, 1201, 1202, 1204, 1216, 1217, 1219, 1220; —in accordance with heart's desire of Rāma, 432, 1218–19; —without interruption under death threat from Rāma, 11, 173, 430, 1204, 1221–24; —in private, 11, 430, 1203–5; nooses of, 279, 427, 641, 1193; as (personification of) time, 11, 172, 631, 982, 1192, 1201, 1206, 1216, 1217, 1297; Rāma agrees to Kāla's request from Brahmā, 172, 432, 1218–19, 1223, 1235; —banishes Lakṣmaṇa due to promise to, 173; —dismisses, 430; —recalls words of, 434, 1221–22, 1223; as Rāma's son in previous existence, 431, 1206–9; Rāma told by, that avatāra or lifespan as human over, 11, 172, 431; —of Brahmā's words, 430–31; Rāma understands implications of words of, 433, 1222; Rāvaṇa defeats in battle, 274–80; rod of, 261, 277, 279, 291, 295, 632, 641, 649, 651, 710, 1193 (see also Yama: rod or staff of); as Rudra, 1201, 1217; saṃvartāstra (saṃvarta) as weapon of, 166, 283, 427, 1192, 1193; secret information to be disclosed only to Rāma by, 1202. See also Death; Kāla; Mṛtyu; Vaivasvata; Yama Kālagautama (brahman), 1329
Kālaka (dānava), 255, 550, 646
Kālakārmuka (son of Sumālin), 236, 485
Kālakeyas, 550, 658; Aśmanagara protected by, 281, 657; Rāvaṇa kills, 285, 657, 671
Kālanemi (demon), 492, 1288
Kālañjara, Mount, 1323, 1392–93
Kālidāsa, 88–89, 119; omission of episode by, 164; Śambūka episode in, 107–9, 1033; Śatrughna's visit to ashram of Vālmīki in, 998; —Shah on, 998; Sītā's abandonment in, 83, 87; Uttarakāṇḍa used by, 68–69, 117; —Agrawal on, 116–17; Vālmīki given credit by, 79n21. See also Abhijñānaśākuntalam; Raghuvaṃśa
Kāliya (courtier of Rāma), 132n94, 333
Kali Yuga. See Yuga, Kali
Kālmāṣapāda. See Mitrasaha Saudāsa
kalpa. See cosmic eras (kalpas)
Kāma (Kandarpa, Madana, Anaṅga), 237, 239, 290, 394, 407, 462, 486, 491–92, 689, 783, 1058–59, 1100, 1369; as Anaṅga, 394, 486, 1058; as Kandarpa, 268, 354, 1307; as Madana, 309, 759
Kamalā. See Lakṣmī
kāmarūpins (taking on form at will): dānavas, 1288, 1335; gandharvas, 1192; Hanumān, 804; Khara, 674; Puṣpaka, 584; rākṣasas, 286, 454, 534, 674, 966; Rāvaṇa, 526–27, 534, 582, 674; Śūrpaṇakhā, 670; vānaras (monkeys), 328, 437, 534, 816, 1308, 1370
Kaṃsa (brother of Devakī), 13, 172

Kaṃsa (dānava), 1288
Kāñcana (brahman), 437, 977, 1237
Kandarpa. See under Kāma kaṅka (adjutant storks or herons), 298, 720. See also under birds
Kaṇva (seer), 225, 446
Kapila (sage), 491, 1289, 1304 kapota. See under birds kāraṇḍas. See under birds kāraṇḍavas. See under birds
Kārāpatha (region), 10, 58, 167, 428, 1197–98
Kardama (Prajāpati): aśvamedha proposed by, 410–11, 1113, 1117–18; Ila's father, 136; son of, as epithet for Ila, 404, 405, 410 karma (doctrine of): abducted women question, 284, 669; Aklujkar on maturation of in Śambūka episode, 109; belief that as sow, will reap, 581, 633; as collectivity of actions, 1148, 1396; Kumbhīnasī's abduction attributed to Rāvaṇa's, 288; Sītā blames her fate on, 19; as unavoidable fate, 345, 897; Yama distributes rewards and punishments for, 632 karṣaṇa. See daggers
Kārtasvara (asura), 278, 646
Kārtavīrya, Arjuna. See Arjuna Kārtavīrya
Kārttika (lunar month), 830
Kārttikeya. See Skanda karuṇarasa, 61n32, 62
Kārupatha (region), 1197–98. See also Kārāpatha
Karva (treasure), 577
Kāśī: Pratardana as king of, 326, 359, 821; Pūru as king of, 359; Purūravas as king of, 354
Kaśyapa (brahman and seer): hears of brahman's son's death, 383; in lists of great seers, 225; Rāma advised by on punishment of brahmans, 383, 1323; at Rāma's aśvamedha, 412; in Rāma's audience hall during dog's story, 1319; Sītā's truth act witnessed by, 419
Kāśyapa (courtier of Rāma), 132n94, 333, 1015
Kaśyapa (Prajāpati): Aditi as wife of, 253; Ādityas as sons of, 493, 1214; Diti as wife of, 253; —cursed by, 523; gods and daityas as sons of, 253, 542; Kālaka as son of, 550; Kālakā as wife of, 550; Naraka and Kālaka as sons of, 646; Surabhi as wife of, 658; Upendra as son of, 901, 1214
Kataka (Ck): on Ahalyā's curse, 742; on Arajā's rape, 1064; on aśvamedha, 1078, 1113–14; on Ayodhyā's salvific quality, 1200; on Brahmahṛdaya/Ādityahṛdaya, 1247–48; Brahmaite theology of, 181, 186, 218–19, 602–3, 677, 953, 1118, 1127, 1166, 1176, 1227, 1233, 1245, 1250, 1257; on Brahmaloka's divisions, 184, 1269–71; —nature and inhabitants, 1267–68; on chronology after Rāma's consecration, 829–31, 842, 849; —of period between recovery and abandonment of Sītā, 1384; on dead bodies, 1028; as devotee of Brahmā, 178, 181, 218–19, 587, 601, 603, 677, 748, 771, 774, 953, 990, 1069, 1086, 1117–18, 1166, 1176, 1178, 1201, 1218, 1232–33, 1246, 1250–51, 1257, 1266–69; on devotion of Rāma's followers, 1256–57, 1268; on divine identities of Rāma and his brothers, 175–76, 1228–29, 1261, 1279; on divine monkeys, 778, 1271–72; emends text, 1215; esoteric explanation of abandonment by, 894–95; on eyes' excellence, 928; on fasting, 1050; on fate (daiva) as karma, 897; on Gāyatrīmantra as wife of Hiraṇyagarbha, 1251; on gods' criticism of Sītā's abandonment, 906; grammar of, unclear, 907; on grammatical and actual gender, 1093–94; on Hanumān as "ninth grammarian," 811–12; —remaining on earth, 1243; on Hrī as Mahī Devī, wife of Śatrughna, 1250; on Ila/Ilā, 1107, 1109–10; on irregular scansion, 800; on Kāla, 1206, 1219–19; —and Viṣṇu's primordial relation, 1207; on killing Lavaṇa vs. killing Rāvaṇa, 1000; —vs. killing Indrajit, 956; on kingless world's sorry state, 1087; on king's responsibilities to taxed subjects, 1027; on kṛṣṇasāra, 1127; on Lakṣmaṇa's trustworthiness, 897; on Lava and Kuśa avoiding city at night, 1135; on life spans of Vibhīṣaṇa, Hanumān, Jāmbavān, and Dvivida, 1244–45, 1272; on Mādhavī as wife of Mādhava, 1168; on Madhu and Kaiṭabha, 954; on maireya, 847; on Māndhātṛ's vow, 978–79; on menstrual taboo, 1090; on Mitra and Varuṇa's identity, 920–21; —joint paternity of Agastya, 925–26; on Mitrasaha Saudāsa's innocence, 967; on morning hygienic and ritual activities, 1006–7; memory lapse possible for, 600–601; on musical terminology, 1136–37, 1140; on night-blooming lotuses, 688; on Nimi as one of bodily winds, 928–29; on Nṛga, Nimi, and Yayāti, 938; on oṃ, 1251; on omens, 1191; philological judgments of, 549, 555–56, 586, 612, 715, 768; prakṣipta passages ignored by, 1384; on rājasūya rite, 1074; on Rāma as incarnate power of Brahmā/Brahman; on Rāma's aśvamedha, 1132, 1183; —brothers' role in extension of realm, 861; —devotees' ascent to Brahmaloka, 183, 1251–52; —forgetting his divine nature, 1175–76; —grief for Sītā, 906, 1173; —ineligibility for brahmamedha, 1246; —laughter, 1217; —non-use of Viṣṇu's arrow, 954–55; —perceived impropriety, 857; —primordial form, 1260; —suffering, 857, 906–7, 1175; on Rāma/Viṣṇu as Hiraṇyagarbha's son, 1216; on Rāmāyaṇa's beginning, 1251–52; —extent, 1149; —historical accuracy, 1003–4; —vocal and instrumental performance, 1002–3; —yuga as Tretā, 1026; on Raudraśakti as servant of Rāma, 1250; on Rāvaṇa and Vālin's fraternal affection, 782; on Rāvaṇa's mastery of Sāmaveda, 755; —weight, 782; —worship of Śiva liṅga, 755; on regifting, 1037; on revisionist history of Laṅkan war, 159, 821; on revival of brahman child, 1034; on royal succession, 1111; on Sāntānika worlds, 1269–71; on Śatrughna as Bhūmanārāyaṇa, 1250; —hearing Lava and Kuśa from a distance, 1001; —meeting with exiled Sītā, 976; —slow deployment of, 960–61; on Sītā's residence in Vālmīki's ashram, 976; on Śiva and vedic sacrifice, 1117–18; on Śiva's gender transformation, 1093; on social class and Sumantra, 895–96; on tears of rage, 982; theological issues the main concern of, 218–19; unusual interpretations of, 867–68; Uttarakāṇḍa comments of, like other commentators', 218; on Vālin's sandhyā rituals, 780; on Vālmīki as a Bhārgava, 1148; —seeing Lavaṇa's death with divine eye, 1000; on Vālmīki's truthfulness, 1160; —omniscience, 1177; on Varuṇa's love for Urvaśī vs. Mitra's, 922; varāhāvatāra story included in Madhu and Kaiṭabha's by, 1212; on vaṣaṭ, 1251; on Vasiṣṭha's cannibalism, 967; on Vedavatī as incarnation, 608; on virtuous women as basis of righteousness, 892–93; on Viṣṇu's arrow as the god's primordial form, 991; —divine energy (tejas), 10, 1265; on Vṛtra as a brahman, 1085; on Yama, and Brahmā's boon, 652; on Yama's three activities, 631; on Yayāti's ability to transfer old age, 935–36; on yogic death, 1055

Kathāsaritsāgara, 813

Kaula tantric sect, 211, 1323–24, 1392

kauleya: as "belonging to a house," 1393. See also dogs

Kausalyā: in Ayodhyākāṇḍa, austerities of, 1238; —ingests pāyasa infused with tejas of Viṣṇu, 170; —Rāma given amulet by, 971; —threatens to enter Daśaratha's funeral pyre, 602; Daśaratha's wife, 882, 952, 953; increaser joy of, as epithet for Rāma, 815, 822, 1320; Lava questioned by, in UttaRāC, 1136; Rāma's mother, 1123; Śatrughna salutes, 367;

Kauśika (seer), 225, 445

Kaustubha (jewel), 1361

Kauṭilya. See Arthaśāstra of Kauṭilya

Kavaṣa (seer), 225, 447

kāvya. See poetry

Kāvyaprakāśa, 1101

kāvyārthāpatti. See under poetic figures

Kedāra, Mount, 562

Kekaya: Bharata's journey to, 426, 1191–92; Yudhājit as king of, 166, 427, 819–21, 1188. See also Yudhājit kennings: acala for mountains, 499, 1157; aditeḥ suta for god, 796; ajihmaga for arrow, 1344; ambuja for conch, 507; barhin for peacock, 615; bhūmideva for brahmans, 909; daṇḍadhara for king, 1053; dharaṇīdhara for mountain, 547; divaukas for god, 482, 641–42; eṣośramāṇi for āśrama according to Cr, 807; ghanagarbha for lightning, 476; gopatidhvaja for Śiva, 1093; govisarga for dawn, 1279; hara for Kāla, 1220; havyavāhana for fire, 823–24; kānanaukas for monkey, 829; kauleya for dog, 1393; khecara for birds, 1191; kṣaṇadācara for rākṣasa, 489, 707; nairṛta for rākṣasa, 1143; naktaṃcara for rākṣasa, 502, 514; nīlakaṇṭha for Śiva, 487–88; niśācara for rākṣasa, passim; pakṣin for bird, 1191; patraratha for bird, 617; rasālaya for ocean, 628; saptadvīpasamudrāntā for earth, 1343; śarīraja for fetus, 459; svargastha for god, 531; tapodhana for ascetic, 459; vanaukas for monkey, 829, 1119; vārija for conch, 507; varuṇālaya for ocean, 921, 943; vasuretas for fire, 748–49; vibudha for gods, 490, 928, 992, 1134, 1372; viṣṇuratha for Garuḍa, 509; vṛṣabhadhvaja for Śiva, 1093 keśagrahaṇa. See hair: seizing of Kesarin (father of Hanumān), 319, 325, 788

Ketumatī (gandharvī), 50, 236, 484–85

khaḍga. See swords

Khara: Akampana as sole survivor of forces of, 484; in Araṇyakāṇḍa role of, 27n85; Daṇḍaka forest as outpost of, 153, 674; in Daṇḍaka forest per Rāvaṇa's command, 286, 673, 674; extremely powerful, 673; Kālakārmuka as warrior in forces of, 485; Rāvaṇa as relative of, 549, 673; —commands Śūrpaṇakhā to stay with, 285–86, 673; as Rāvaṇa's minister, 706; takes form at will (kāmarūpin), 674 kiṃpuruṣas: accompany other beings, 532, 750, 1291; Ilā's female attendants become, 408, 1103, 1104. See also kinnaras kinnaras: Ilā's female attendants become, 408, 1104; sport in mountains, 306, 547, 688, 1103; as standard of comparison, 815. See also kiṃpuruṣas

Khara (cont.)
Kishwar, Madhu, 99–100
Kiṣkindhā, 783, 1308, 1370; as cave, 1371; location of, 37n5; Rāvaṇa goes to city of, 30, 315; —stays in, 782–83; unassailable, 328; Vālin protects, 315; —returns to, with Rāvaṇa, 317–18, 781
Kiṣkindhākāṇḍa, 3, 20n7, 204, 205n30, 207n37; Hanumān's childhood in, 21, 801; —relationship with Sugrīva in, 22, 809; Mālyavān mountain known to, 499; Mankad as critical editor of, 200n7, 202; Māyāvin known to, 553; monkey Tāra in, 775; number of sargas in, 37, 1149; Rāma kills Vālin in, 15n12, 831–32; Rāma–Sugrīva alliance in, 773, 782; Sugrīva described in, 1370; Uttarakāṇḍa compared to, 36–37; Vālin–Sugrīva feud in, 782; word bhāṣitam in, 78
Kosala: Northern, 1233; —Kuśa as ruler of, 11, 167, 435–36, 1231, 1234; Rāma establishes ideal kingdom in, 58; Sālakaṭaṅkaṭas kill hermits in, 475; Southern, 1233; —Lava as ruler of, 11, 1231, 1234
Kosalan state, 8, 160, 165–66, 861; rulers of, represented as cakravartins by Vālmīki, 160
Kratu (brahman), 410, 1112 krauñca (sarus/sārasa crane). See under birds
Krauñca, Mount: birds pass through, 242, 509; pierced by Skanda, 1293, 1344
Krauñcavana, 359, 937
Kṛṣṇa: abandons earthly body, 13n3; aiśvararūpa revealed to Arjuna in BhagGī by, 93; Aja ("unborn one") as epithet of, 486; ascension of, 181; aśvamedha horse from eye of, 1127; as avatāra of Viṣṇu, 13, 59, 169, 170–73, 1244–45; avatāra's end, 13n3, 171–72, 180, 911, 1244; —as narrative closure, 75; Balarāma as co-avatāra with, 170–71, 501; Biardeau on death of, 174n19; childhood of, 1334; earth relieved of demonic kings by, 911; Gokula as heavenly abode of, 185; Gopati as epithet of, 592; Govinda as epithet of, 516; Jāmbavān, Dvivida, and Mainda live until avatāra of, 1244–45; karma engaged in by, in MBh, 1074; Kaustubha jewel of, 1361; Lakṣmī as Rukmiṇī during lifetime of, 607; Mount Govardhana lifted by, 1373; Naraka killed by, 646; Prāgjyotiṣa killed by, 646; as Prajāpati according to Ck, 1127; Śiśupāla killed by, 1381; story of (Kṛṣṇacarita), 4, 75, 117, 185; tridhāman as epithet of, in MBh, 799–800; trikakud as epithet of, in MBh, 799; Uttarakāṇḍa reference to, 140n122; as Vaiṣṇava hero in modernity, 103; Vāsudeva, in Nṛga story, 140n121; vasuretas as epithet of, in MBh, 749; vibhūtis of, 187n1; Yudhiṣṭhira emotionally supported by, 120, 125
Kṛṣṇacarita, 4, 75, 117, 185
kṛṣṇasāra, 1126–27
Kṛṣṇāvatāra. See Kṛṣṇa: as avatāra of Viṣṇu Kṛṣṇification, 185
kṛtānta (destiny or fate), 351, 436, 914, 1233. See also fate
Kṛtānta (lord of departed spirits), 1288
Kṛta Yuga. See Yuga, Kṛta kṣetra (field), 502, 995, 1104; wife as, 43
kshatriyas: as ascetics in Tretā Yuga, 109, 384, 1017–19; as brahmans' equals in Kṛta and Tretā Yugas, 383; as brahmans' superiors in Tretā, 1017; Budha as, 1102; code of, 144, 149–50, 244, 351, 359, 381, 383, 493–94, 515, 665, 937–38, 1037, 1039–40, 1054, 1064, 1182, 1225; gifts should not be accepted by, 150, 1037, 1039–40, 1188; as gotra, 975; kings as, 747; —vs. non-kshatriya kings, 747; lower varṇas serve, 1019, 1023; mallas as degraded, 1198; oaths for, 867–68; power of, 1017–18; rākṣasa form of marriage appropriate for, 66; Rāma asks Śambūka if he is one, 386, 1031; —indignant that none had defeated Rāvaṇa, 748; at Rāma's consecration, 816, 1318; Rāvaṇa oppresses, 266, 598; respond to challenge of Rāvaṇa, 598; Sītā's oath witnessed by, 419, 1156; as Yadu descendants who aren't lunar dynasty kings, 937
Kṣupa (king), 1040–41
Kubera Vaiśravaṇa (lord or bestower of wealth): abode of, 290; Agastya tells Rāma lineage of, 42, 44, 227–31; austerities of, 229; boon to Hanūman by, 324; —to lizard by, 271; Brahmā grants boons to, 230, 464–65; deities of treasuries of, 263–64, 577; divine splendor of, 522; Ekākṣipiṅgala ("Dusky in

One Eye") as epithet of, 259, 562–63; —since eye burned by Pārvatī, 259, 562–63; guhyakas wait upon, 817–18; as leader of sons of chaos (nairṛtas), 253, 544, 568; lineage of, 42–43, 126–27; —in MBh, 126–27n67; as lizard, 269; as lokapāla, 44, 126n67, 230, 464–65; as lord of rākṣasas, 41n28, 231; —of wealth, 230, 464–65; ministers of, 263, 578; Nalakūbara's father, 291; Prahasta asks, to leave Laṅkā, 253–54; Puṣpaka given to, 230, 465; —given to Rāma by, 330; —seized by Rāvaṇa from, 264; Rāvaṇa attacked with divine weapon by, 264; —compared to, 52–53, 248, 529; —fights or defeats, 262–64; —as half brother of, 41n28, 126–27n67, 128; —sent messenger by, 258–60; —vows to kill, 259, 565–66; Śiva propitiated by, 259–60, 562; Viśravas and Devavarṇinī's son, 25, 44, 52, 229; Viśravas gives Laṅkā to, 230–31; —tells to leave Laṅkā and found city on Kailāsa, 254–55; vow of, 562, 564
kuliśa. See hatchets
Kulkarni, V. M., 68
Kumāra. See Skanda
Kumbha (rākṣasa), 451–52
Kumbhakarṇa: apsarases devoured by, 251; austerities of, 249; cannibalism of, 658; chooses sleep as boon, 251–52; —according to Cr and Ct, 538–39; gods beg Brahmā not to grant boon to, 251; —fight, 298; killing of, 226, 451, 455; man-eater, 537; Rāma fights, in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 717; —praised for killing of, 226, 451; Sarasvatī becomes speech of, 251; seers devoured by, 248, 527; sleep of, 257, 557–58, 682–83, 685, 717–18; as Vajrajvālā's husband, 256; as Viśravas and Kaikasī's son, 6, 25, 51, 248
Kumbhīnasī (the elder), 236, 681–82
Kumbhīnasī (the younger), 48; begs Rāvaṇa not to kill Madhu, 289; identity of, 288, 362, 681–82, 943; as Lavaṇa's mother, 362, 945, 983; Madhu abducts, 287–88, 680; as Madhu's wife, 362; as Viśvāvasu and Analā's daughter, 288, 362
Kumuda (elephant), 1295, 1348
Kumuda (vānara), 328, 828
Kunda (treasure), 577
Kurukṣetra (region), 1182–83
Kuśa (courtier of Rāma), 132n94, 333
Kuśa (son of Rāma): birth of, 8, 69, 117, 145, 370, 973; —thematically tied to birth of Agastya and Vasiṣṭha, 143; Lava and, as portions of Indra and Agni, 972; in PadmaP, 164n23, 1233, 1280; in RaghuVa, 1279; Rāma as father of, 58, 972, 1137; —hears singing of, 154, 416–17; —installs in Kosala, 11, 58, 167n33, 435–36, 1231, 1233–34; —offers gold to, 416, 1146, 1150; —orders to sing, 423–24; —questions about poem, 417, 1147–50; —recognizes, as his son, 10, 138, 420, 1165; —recognizes, as Sītā's son, 10, 138, 417, 420, 1151; —rewards for singing, 416; Rāma's anxiety over paternity of, 143; Rāma unaware of existence of, 1076; Rāmāyaṇa sung by, 9–10, 40n26, 60, 67, 118, 119n31, 138, 416–17, 998–99, 1001–2, 1004–5, 1136–37, 1147, 1151; takes leave of Rāma, 1150; Vālmīki makes amulet for, 370, 972; —names, 370. See also kuśīlava; Lava Kuśadhvaja: identity of, 600–601, 608; Vedavatī's father, 31, 267 kuśa grass, 306, 308, 438, 449, 749, 757, 847, 1124, 1248; identification of, 972; Vālmīki makes amulet of, 370 Kuśāvatī, 167n33, 436, 1233 kuśīlavas, 972, 1136, 1146, 1150–51, 1165, 1180, 1231, 1233–35
Kūṭa (asura), 1288, 1334
Kutsa (brahman), 1323

ladles, sacrificial, 324, 805–6
Lake Mānasa. See Mānasa, Lake
Lakṣmaṇa (Saumitri): acts on Rāma's behalf, 450; Agastya's ashram visited by, 148; —tale of Indra astonishes, 746; alliterative epithets of, 858, 870–71, 907, 1029, 1385–86; Aṅgada accompanied to Aṅgadīya by, 429, 1199; —and Candraketu as sons of, 10, 428; at Aṅgada and Candraketu's consecration, 428, 1198; as another life breath of Rāma, 175, 860, 1075; ascetic's arrival announced by, 429; on aśvamedha being for Viṣṇu, 1113; Atikāya slain by, 451; attempts to prevent Durvāsas's entry, 11, 432–33; banishment by Rāma of, 11, 433–36, 1223, 1225; —equivalent to execution, 434, 1225; —grief of Rāma after, 435; —prophesied, 94, 345; —reported to Śatrughna, 436, 1125; Benoît on, 452; Bharata aided in subjugation of Kārāpatha by, 10, 15, 58, 429; Biardeau on, 174; camps by Gomatī, 347, 904–5; —with Sītā and Sumantra, 339, 872, —with Sumantra, 346–47; cheerfulness falsely assumed by, 19, 339, 872; commentators on epithets of, 907; —on firmness of,

Lakṣmaṇa (Saumitri) (cont.)
872; —on happiness of, 872; —on hesitation of, in telling Indra's aśvamedha story, 1082; —on Indrajit being slain by, 452–53; —on Indrajit strategy of, compared to Rāma's for Lavaṇa, 956; —on Rāvaṇa's lance striking, 555; —on suggestion by, that Rāma enter the next world, 1202; —on theology of incarnation of, 174–177, 179; —on Vālmīki housing, 866; —on Vasiṣṭha foreseeing separation of Rāma and, 1224–25; criticized, 893; dog petitioner found by, 4–5, 211, 1319, 1396; —questioned by, 1319; doorkeeper glorifies, 335, 858; Durvāsas foretells abandonment of, 94, 346, 893–904, 1224; esoteric explanation about Sītā and, 894–95; as foil for Rāma, 135; Ganges crossed by Sītā and, 340, 874; grieves for suffering of Rāma, 344; Indrajit's sacrifice interrupted by, 451, 956; —slaying by, 452–53, 705, 736; Indra takes to heaven, 174, 434, 1227–28; as Kākutstha, 951; Kāla's arrival announced by, 429; —meeting interrupted by, 11; in Lañkan war, only human besides Rāma, 157; learned in all the śāstras, 931; leaves Ayodhyā, 11, 434; meditates on Rāma, 173; as nāga incarnation, 1262; narrates aśvamedha of Indra or Indra–Vṛtra battle to Rāma, 128–30, 136, 399–404; —Indra's commission of brahmahatyā, 136; obedience of, 135, 335, 338, 875; as Pāñcarātra vyūha Saṃkarṣaṇa, 991, 1229; as portion of Viṣṇu's energy (tejas), 170; in RaghuVa makes sons lords of Kārāpatha, 1197; Rāma asks what townsfolk are saying about, 333, 853; —attended upon by, after consecration, 816; Rāma, Bharata, and, rule and perform sacrifices, 10; Rāma cannot bear grief of, 867; —consoled by, 7, 135, 139, 347–48; —convinced to perform aśvamedha by, 164, 399–400; —discusses sacrifice with Bharata and, 16; —excludes from killing Lavaṇa, 945; —forbids to exterminate rākṣasas in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 167; —grieves over banishment of, 435; —pacified by in Araṇyakāṇḍa, 1172; —posts at door, 11, 430, 1204–5; —praises as kinsman, 348; —recovers, through Hanumān, 318, 786; —sends for first, 335; —sends to find petitioners, 4–5, 211, 1319, 1396; Rāma tells to abandon Sītā, 7, 18, 85, 135, 336–38, 866; —to admit Kāla, 429; —to arrange for Śatrughna's consecration, 365, 1125; —of aśvamedha plan, 412–13; —of criticism of him and Sītā, 336; —to find kingdoms for sons, 10, 15, 58, 166–67, 220, 428; —Ila story to, 404–11; —Nṛga, Nimi, and Yayāti stories to, 7, 99, 139–40, 348–59; —to preserve body of dead child, 385, 1251–52; —of rājasūya plan, 398; —to summon brahmans to aśvamedha, 412; —of Vālmīki's curse in PadmaP, 94, 901–2; Rāma told by, about aśvamedha, 9, 399–404; —that men who break promises go to hell, 433–34, 1223–24; —about Sītā's abandonment, 19, 340, 347; —to slay him without misgiving, 433–34, 1223–24; Rāma uses both singular and plural for, 868; —vows to follow to next world, 435; Rāvaṇa given lance that struck down, 256, 555; receives message from Sītā for Rāma, 85, 341–42, 881–82; —in RaghuVa, 87; returns to Ayodhyā bearing gifts from kings, 327, 826; —dejected, 347–48; —to Viṣṇu, 174–75, 435, 1228–29; sacrifices performed by, 10, 429, 1200–1201; sacrificial horse guarded by, 164, 413–14, 1127–29; sages wish to felicitate for slaying of Indrajit, 445; Śatrughna accompanied on return to Madhurā by, 381; —gives reverence to, 367; self-sacrifice for family by, 11, 173, 432; separation from Rāma cannot be endured by, 1226; as Śeṣa incarnation, 174–76, 179, 902, 908, 1229; —not suggested in Vālmīki, 174; singled out among brothers, 863; Sītā absolves of blame, 19–20, 341; —instructed by, to hold Rāma in her heart, 341, 879; —instructs to testify to her pregnancy, 884–85; Sītā's banishment criticized by, 85, 135–36, 344, 876–77, 892–93; —instructions followed by, 881; —request that he look above her feet refused by, 884–85; Sītā taken out of kingdom and abandoned by, 7, 338–42, 878, 880, 1161; Sītā told by, that she is being taken to visit sages, 338; —she has been banished, 19, 340–41; sons of and royal lineages established by Rāma, 903; Śrī as wife of, 1249, 1250; Sumantra consoles, 94, 345; —tells, of prophecy of Durvāsas, 7, 345–47, 893–904; —told to prepare carriage for Sītā by, 338, 869, 1223; theology of incarnation of, 174–77, 179; travels to Rāma's palace in chariot, 335, 859; trustworthy, 897; understands grief of Rāma and Sītā is not real, 904; urges Rāma to keep his word, 433–34, 1223; —to perform aśvamedha, 9, 16, 164, 399, 404; Ūrmila as wife of, 820, 1250; in UttaRāC, 880; Uttarakāṇḍa should not be heard by, 1179; Vasiṣṭha urges execution of, 434; Vibhīṣaṇa consecrated by, 1190; Virūpākṣa slain by, 451; watches until Sītā enters Vālmīki's ashram, 885, 891; Yudhājit departs with, 819; —depended on by Rāma and, 819–20; weeps and wishes for death when abandoning Sītā, 19, 340, 875; —when Rāma banishes, 434, 1226; yogic death experienced by, 11, 115, 174, 434–35, 1226–27

Lakṣmī, 422, 479, 691, 1250, 1306, 1375; accompanies in battle, 1374; enters belly of Viṣṇu, 1328; as Kamalā, 1182; as Māyā, 1363–64; Padmā as epithet of, 1397; as Ramā, 1397; Rāvaṇa desires, 1302–3, 1361; as Sītā, 607–8, 1313, 1318; as Śrī, 1249; takes birth for destruction of Rāvaṇa, 601; vanishes before Indra, 422, 1173; Viṣṇu's wife, 176, 1229

lances (śūla), 641; black iron, 245, 517; Hanumān invulnerable to Kubera's, 802; of Lavaṇa, 362, 943, 960, 978, 980–81, 984–85, 992–93; —given by Madhu, 362; —Rāma on evading, 366, 956–57; —returns to Śiva, 377, 992; Lavaṇa fails to retrieve, 374–75; —kills Māndhātṛ with, 371–72, 980; —reduces enemies to ashes with, 366; of Madhu, 145, 361–62, 365, 942; Nandīśvara holds, 265; of Paulastya, 1294; of Śiva, 361–62, 365, 942, 1297–98, 1352

lāṅgala. See ploughshare

Laṅkā: abducted women brought to, 285; Benoît on Agastya's knowledge of, 446; Bharata ignorant of events at, 159, 821; —marshals kings to assault, 6, 158, 165; Brahmā and gods come to, 30; Ceylon (Sri Lanka) identified as, 37n5; commentators on inhabitants of, 497; Cs's skewed recollection of, 1153; defenses of, 683; dimensions of, 25, 548; divinities abandon, 497; EVR on Sītā's ordeal in, 98; gods reveal to Rāma his true nature after war in, 59; Hanumān assaults citadel of, 318, 785; —assaults female guardian divinity of, 785; —reduces to ashes, 318; —searches for Sītā in, 40; history of rākṣasas in, 6, 252, 544; Indra brought as captive to, 302; inhabitants of, despondent, 240, 497; infant Indrajit stupefies, with roar, 257, 556; Kubera cedes, to Rāvaṇa, 254, 548; —repopulates with rākṣasas, 44, 231, 235, 467, 545; —sends messenger to, 258–60; —settles in, 231, 252, 468–69, 519, 544; Mālyavān flees to, 245; monkeys give lives in, 184; on Mount Trikūṭa's peak, 49, 235, 238, 466–67, 482, 487, 543; Nikumbhilā grove near, 674; ocean-shrouded, 231, 468; Pollock on humanlike rākṣasas of, 39; rākṣasas flee back to, 242; —march from, to world of gods, 239; Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa as only humans in war at, 157; Rāma acquires Puṣpaka in, 330; —asks Agastya about, 44, 231, 468; —conquers through strength of Hanumān, 318; —counsels Vibhīṣaṇa about rule of, 23, 329, 438; —departs from, in PadmaP, 124; —gives back Puṣpaka after return from, 6; Rāma's allies from war at, 23; —subjects recall Sītā's being carried off to, 133, 334; Ranganayakamma on Rāma's doubts about Sītā in, 98; Rāvaṇa as lord of, 252; —enters deserted, 254–55, 466; —resolves to seize, 253, 543; —seizes from Kubera, 6, 260–64; —sends Prahasta to demand, 253–54; —takes over rule of, 254–55, 548; scholarly debates on location of, 37; siege and war at, described in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 158; Sītā born in, 606–7; —carried off to. 856, 1173, 1318; —given back to Rāma in, by Indra, 337; —in spring, 1384; Sītā's innocence proven in, 1163; —proven through fire ordeal (agniparīkṣā) in, 1153–54; Sītā suspect for having dwelt in, 1152; social class in, 39; Sumālin and rākṣasas flee from, 50, 246, 252, 467, 540; Sumālin urges Rāvaṇa to take, 252, 540; Sundara- and Yuddhakāṇḍas set mostly in, 36; Sundarakāṇḍa on Hanumān's jump to and from, 12, 779; —adventures in, 3; Vibhīṣaṇa consecrated king of, 1190; —given, 161n12; —practices righteousness in, 288; Viṣṇu drives rākṣasas out of, 50, 467, 469; —Sumālin and rākṣasas out of, 26, 230; Viśravas counsels Kubera to leave, 254; —gives to Kubera, 44, 126, 230–31; —repopulates with rākṣasas, 467; Viśvakarman builds, 49, 230; —describes to Kubera, 235; Vyas on rākṣasas or rākṣasa clans of, 38; war at, not war of conquest, 161; —Rāma does not engage in warfare after, 165 lapis lazuli (vaidūrya), 230, 255, 257, 261, 264, 329, 552, 558, 572–73, 584, 836, 845, 1285. See also vaidūrya

Lava: in Ānandarāmāyaṇa, 109; birth of, 8, 69, 117, 145, 370, 973; —thematically tied to Agastya and Vasiṣṭha's birth, 143; Kuśa and, as portions of Indra and Agni, 972; in PadmaP, 164n23, 1233, 1280; Rāma as father of, 58, 972, 1137; —hears singing of, 154, 416–17; —installs in northern kingdom, 11, 58,

Lava (cont.)
167n33, 435–36, 1231, 1233–34; —offers gold to, 416, 1146, 1150; —orders to sing, 423–24; —questions about poem, 417, 1147–50; —recognizes, as his son, 10, 138, 420, 1165; —recognizes, as Sītā's son, 10, 138, 417, 420, 1151; —rewards for singing, 416; Rāma's anxiety over paternity of, 143; Rāma unaware of existence of, 1076; Rāmāyaṇa sung by, 9–10, 40n26, 60, 67, 118, 119n31, 138, 416–17, 998–99, 1001–2, 1004–5, 1136–37, 1147, 1151; takes leave of Rāma, 1150; in UttaRāC, 164n23, 1136; Vālmīki makes amulet for, 370, 972; —names, 370. See also kuśīlava

Lavaṇa: Bharata offers to kill, 146; commentators on killing of, 956; —power of, 954–55, 1000; diet of, 362–63, 944–45; disparages Rāma, 373; disrupts ideal kingship of Rāma, 145–46; as evidence of Rama's transgression, 145; feats of, 371–72; identified as rākṣasa, 945; lance of, 362, 366, 371–72, 377, 943, 956–57, 960, 978, 980–81, 992–93, 984–85; as Madhu and Kumbhīnasī's son, 362, 983; as man-eater, 34n113, 362–63, 372–73, 986; narrative of, 145–46, 148, 165, 219, 362–81; palace of, 378, 995–96; Rāma orders Śatrughna to kill, 363–64, 945; —proposes strategy to defeat, 366–67, 956, 960; sages ask Rāma for protection from, 8, 362; Śatrughna fights, 374–76; —kills, 8, 58, 69, 377–80

Lav-Kuś-kāṇḍa, 99. See also Rāmcaritmānas

leaf huts, 1103; boys spend night in, 1135; of Rāma and Sītā, 90; of Śatrughna, 370, 975–76; Sītā gives birth in, 976; of Vālmīki, 976, 1133, 1180; Vālmīki has constructed, 414, 1133 league (yojana): definition of, 1257; krośa as one quarter of, 1188; as unit of measurement for Ayodhyā to Sarayū River distance, 439, 1257, 1260; —for Brahmā's assembly hall, 1305, 1367; —for dust-free zone around lake, 153, 396, 1064; —for a lake, 389, 1044, 1064; —for Laṅkā, 235, 254, 482, 548; —for floral plantings around Nṛga's burrows, 351; —for forest tract where Agastya wandered, 389, 1044; —for Hanumān's flight toward sun or over ocean, 318, 320; —for Kumbhakarṇa's bed chamber, 257, 557; —for Rāvaṇa's penetration of host of gods, 300 —for Śuka and Sāraṇa's flight, 309; —for Uśanas's dust storm, 152, 395; —for Vālin's flight with captive Rāvaṇa, 781; —for Vṛtra's body, 400, 1079; —for wind's paths, 1295–96, 1348–49

lectio difficilior, 200, 206n35 length of reign. See Rāmarājya: duration of leopards (dvīpin), 242, 507, 130, 1357

libidinal excesses, 40

life breaths, 484, 504, 512, 516, 671, 694, 767, 835, 884, 1060, 1243, 1350–51, 1378; abandoning, 122, 182, 441, 1268; —while thinking of Rāma leads to Brahmaloka, 441, 1270; Anaraṇya's, ebbing, 272–73, 622–23; brothers as, 175n23, 335, 860; —equal to, of Rāma, 1075; Garuḍa as second, outside Rāma, 1228; of Hanumān lasting as long as Rāma's tale, 329, 833–34; Indrajit's released, 453; inner, 22; Lakṣmaṇa as second, outside Rāma, 175n23, 1075; swearing by, 868, 876; Vāyu unblocks, 798–99; videha and, 829; Viṣṇu swallows rākṣasas', 506

lineages: Agastya on Kubera's, 42, 44; —on rākṣasas', 42, 44; —on Rāvaṇa's, 227; Anaraṇya belongs to Ikṣvāku, 622; Biardeau on Śatrughna as last of, 117; brahmanical, 975; Cs on Ila's, 1107–8; —spares from taint Rāma and Sītā's, 863; Cyavana belongs to Bhārgava, 446; daityas from Diti's, 589; dānavas from Danu's, 589; Daśaratha asks Durvāsas about, 346, 899; Devayānī belongs to Bhārgavas', 357; of famous monarchs, 619; Gālava associated with Ikṣvāku, 1347; Haihayas from Yadu, 760; hell for destroyer of, 364; of Ikṣvākus, 11, 978, 983–84; —Sītā promises continuation of, 19, 341, 880–81; Indrajit increases pride of, 302, 730; of Kekeya, 819; Kubera's, 42–43, 227–29, 578; —conduct befits his, 258, 263, 559–60; kula as, 1393; Lakṣmaṇa must decide between his destruction and that of, 173, 432; Lavaṇa as last of his, 993; Manu as increaser of royal, 392, 1053–54; Maya recognizes Rāvaṇa's, 128, 256, 554; Nimi from dynast Janaka's, 141, 355–56, 915, 929; Paulastya will continue, 228; Paurava, 931; of Pulastya, 44; rājasūya leads to destruction of royal, 163, 399; rākṣasas', 45, 46, 47, 49, 52, 53, 488, 682; —as different, 46; —not all from Paulastya, 231; —in Rāmopākhyāna, 119; of Rāma, 71, 79n21, 819, 837, 863, 903; —and Sītā, in Bālakāṇḍa, 40–41n27; —will establish hundreds of, 58; Rāvaṇa as defiler of, 259, 565; Rāvaṇa's, 21, 36, 42, 44, 50, 52, 54, 457, 560, 578; —is brahmanical or from Brahmā, 128, 256, 554–55; —Rāma haunted by, 146; —is spared, 373, 983; of Sālakaṭaṅkaṭā, 246, 518; santāna as, 1269; of Sītā, 610, 863; Vālmīki as member of Bhṛgu, 901–2, 1148, 1280; Vasiṣṭha as purohita of Ikṣvāku, 448; Vedavatī reborn in Sītā's, 865; of Viśravas, 553; —identified with father, 126; —Paulastya born in Prajāpati's, 247; of Yadu, 359, 931, 936–37 liṅgabheda (gender discrepancy), 77, 80, 479, 505–6, 665, 669, 801, 967, 974, 981, 996, 1030, 1345 lions (siṃha), 242–43, 306, 311–12, 316, 318, 668, 707–8, 768, 777, 788, 809, 945, 1300, 1357; Bharata's army preceded by, 426; as king of beasts, 241, 504, 768; among kings, Nṛga as, 349, 430, 910; —Rāma as, 414, 1130, 1155, 1319; Lavaṇa consumes, 363; as rākṣasas' mounts, 239, 496; Rāma has shoulders like, 874; roar of, 241, 376, 992; śarabhas stronger than, 242, 507; among śarabhas, 1239, 1355; Viṣṇu as man- (see avatāras: narasiṃha) lion throne, 1046, 1170, 1302, 1362 lizards (kṛkala/kṛkalāsa): Kubera grants golden color to, 271, 617–18; —hides from Rāvaṇa as, 269, 617–18; Nṛga cursed to become, 7, 14, 213, 349, 910–11 locusts (śalabha), 241, 502

Lokanātha (Cl), 1099, 1168 lokapālas: Indra, 1040; Kubera Vaiśravaṇa, 230, 465, 694; —due to Brahmā's boon, 44, 126n67, 230, 464; Nalakūbara as son of, 291; Rāvaṇa vows to kill, 260, 566; Varuṇa, 354, 922; Yama, 1396; —Indra, and Varuṇa, 230, 1041, 1396
lokāpavāda. See rumors Lolā (mother of Madhu), 361 lord of birds, 179, 245, 512. See also Garuḍa Lüders, Heinrich, 199 lute (vīṇā), 1046; Sarasvatī's āyudha, 1359; Śiva plays, 1298, 1353 mace-duels, 30, 311–12, 765–67 maces (gadā), 244, 261, 262, 637, 764, 767; of Arjuna, 310–12, 764–66; hundred-slayers (śataghnī) as type of, 663; of Indrajit, 297; of Kubera, 263, 324; of Mahodara, 262, 282, 576; of Mālin, 243, 511–12; of Māṇibhadra, 262, 577; of Prahasta, 311; Rāma holding, 1276; of Rāvaṇa, 261–62, 264, 276, 311, 583, 765–76; of Sāvitra, 295–96, 710–11; of Viṣṇu, 239, 242, 244, 246, 500, 510, 1317, 1364

Madana. See Kāma
Madayantī (wife of Mitrasaha Saudāsa), 369
Mādhava (lunar month). See Vaiśākha
Mādhava Yogīndra. See Kataka
Mādhavī (goddess of the earth): Mādhava and, 1168; Rāma demands return of Sītā from, 216, 422; Sītā summons as witness, 10, 20, 155, 421, 1168, 1169. See also Dharaṇī; Vasudhā
Madhu (asura): as asura, 232, 474, 1212; born from earwax, 1328, 1400; Brahmā creates, 431, 1210–12; as dānava, 1288, 1334; Mṛtyu slays, 278; slayer of Kaiṭabha and, as epithet for Viṣṇu, 1380; Viṣṇu kills, 365, 376, 954, 1328
Madhu (city), 288–89, 364; woods of (see Madhuvana)
Madhu (father of Lavaṇa): as asura, 362, 681, 943, 1194; Kumbhīnasī abducted by, 287–89, 680; —begs Rāvaṇa not to kill, 288; Kumbhīnāsī's husband, 362, 943; Lavaṇa given lance by, 362; Lavaṇa's father, 362; Lolā's son, 361; Rāvaṇa's ally, 288; Śiva gives lance to, 361–62, 365
Madhumanta (city), 152, 393–94
Madhumatta (courtier of Rāma), 132n94, 333 madhuparka (guest-offering), 313, 771
Madhupura, 373
Madhupurī. See Madhu (city); Madhurā
Madhurā (Mathurā/Madhupurī): city of, founded, 994; —Rāma orders Śatrughna to return to, 381; —Rāma summons Śatrughna from, 11, 436–37; —Śatrughna founds and rules in, 146, 166, 215, 378; —Śatrughna obtains as boon, 377; —Śatrughna travels to, 145, 219, 367, 371; —Śūrasenā as new name of, 377; kingdom of, as client state of Kosala, 165; —Śatrughna conquers, 8, 10, 58, 377; —Śatrughna divides, 167n33, 437, 1237; —Subāhu rules, 437
Madhuvana: identification of, 944; Lavaṇa dwells in, 363, 372; Śatrughna ordered to travel to, 366, 959–60 Madhvācārya: BhagGītN author, 1213; MBhTN author, 174, 591, 791, 903, 1052, 1221, 1223, 1227; saṃpradāya of, 186. See also Mahābhāratātparyanirṇaya madness of Rāma, 115, 422, 1172, 1174
Māgha (lunar month), 830–31
Māgha (poet), 69
Maghavān. See Indra: magnanimous magical illusions. See māyā magical power (abhicāra): Cm, Ct on Agni's, 749; Indrajit's, 42n32, 678, 724 magical spells (vidyā), 301, 726–27

Mahābali. See Bali
Mahābhārata: abandonment of infants in, 45; abduction and sexual assault at emotional center of, 33n109; Abhinavagupta on rasa of, 62; Agastya and Vindhya mountain in, 764; agniparīkṣā in, 864, 1153; Arjuna Kārtavīrya in, 749, 756; aśvamedha of Rāma in, 70n16, 120–21; —of Yudhiṣṭhira in, 119–22; —Arjuna leads Yudhiṣṭhira's forces during, 161; Balarāma's death in, 174; Biardeau on Uttarakāṇḍa and, 166; births simultaneous with conception in, 1109; —via oral impregnation, 170; —without a mother, 4, 43; Brockington, J., on Rāmāyaṇa references in, 70; Brodbeck on patriliny and patrilocy of, 46; —on putrikā in, 521; childlessness as a key concern of, 58; Ck cites, 955; —on Arjuna's not using pāśupata in, 95; crit. ed. of influenced Rāmāyaṇa's, 199; Cs cites, 660, 936, 1023, 1097, 1110; dharmarāja of, known to Uttarakāṇḍa, 168; expansionist military campaigns in, 160–61; feminized Bhañgāśvana's mounting horse in, 1098; Goldman on Uttarakāṇḍa and, 70; gomedha and vaiṣṇava sacrifices in, 677; Gonzàlez-Reimann on avatāras and yugas in, 1016; on Hanumān living as long as Rāmāyaṇa is known, 70; Hanumān's description of yugas in, 1020; heroes' lives have closure in, 75; Ila/Ilā story in, 136; incarnations have complete biographies in, 59; Indra's brahmahatyā in, 122–23; —thousand eyes explained in, 614, 740; insert passage mentions theme of, 911; Jacobi on Uttarakāṇḍa predating, 115; Jayanta as son of Paulomī in, 712; Kalmāṣapāda (Mitrasaha Saudāsa) in, 969; Kṛṣṇacarita in vs. Rāmacarita, 4, 13; Kṛṣṇa's death in, 13, 171; Madhu and Kaiṭabha known to, 474; Mahadevan on manuscripts of, 204; mahāprasthāna as term in, 1247; Naimiṣa forest as tīrtha in, 1120; Namuci known to, 492; Nārada and Parvata as companions in, 912; Nimi tale not found in, 141; Nivātakavacas in, 654; northern recension of as editio simplicior, 201; Nṛga in, 140, 908; omens at Duryodhana's birth in, 525; as organic, living text, 63; Pārvatī intercedes with Śiva in, 477; Pulastya in, 42; Raghavan on references to Rāmāyaṇa in, 70; rājasūya described in, 677; Rāma's aśvamedha known to, 70n16, 120–21; —departure for heaven known to, 70; Rāmāyaṇa familiar to, 70; Rāmopākhyāna of, as source or condensed version of Rāmāyaṇa, 68–71; —begins with rākṣasas and Rāvaṇa, 71; on Rāvaṇa's and Kubera's fathers, 126–27; Ṛcīka in, 1127; sages or seers in, 445–48; sahagamana known to, 602; Śambūka known to, 70, 106, 119; śāntarasa as rasa of, 62; Sukthankar on manuscripts of, 204; Śvetadvīpa's location in, 1377; tears of rage in, 98; upākhyānas of, 71, 75; Vaidiśa in, 1237; van Buitenen on Uttarakāṇḍa and, 70; on Viṣṇu's impregnating women, 170; Viṣvaksena as name in, 1276; wavy lines in crit. ed. of, 210; women without suitors in, 50; Yayāti in, 143, 213–14, 931, 936; Yudhiṣṭhira's feelings of guilt and grief in, 120–22, 136; —rājasūya in, 161–62
Mahābhāratātparyanirṇaya, 174, 591, 791, 903, 1052, 1221, 1223, 1227; on Lava as Kuśa's yuvarāja, 1233; on rules for offering food, 1221; on Śambūka's goal, 1032; on Viṣṇu's vow to kill Rāvaṇa and Kumbhakarṇa, 591. See also Madhvācārya
Mahābhāṣya, 811–12, 1085, 1249
Mahādaṃṣṭra (minister of Rāvaṇa), 294
Mahādeva. See Śiva Mahādevan, T., 201n13, 204
mahākāvya, 60, 69
Mahāmālin (minister of Rāvaṇa), 294
Mahāmukha (minister of Rāvaṇa), 294
Mahāpadma (diggaja), 307, 753
Mahāpadma (treasure), 577
Mahāpārśva (minister of Rāvaṇa), 294, 309, 549, 754; Matta as alternate name of, 454, 484 mahāprasthāna (great departure, mahāprasthānika): kings permitted to undertake, 1245–46; of Pāṇḍavas, 177, 1246–47; of Rāma, 23, 59, 177, 435–41, 1228, 1230, 1234, 1240, 1246–48; —brahmans declare devotion to Rāma during, 439, 1253; —brothers accompany Rāma during, 1260–61; —Hanumān and Vibhīṣaṇa as witnesses to, 11, 23, 438; —in PadmaP, 1246; —Rāma agrees to, 432, 435–36, 1218; —Rāma divides attendees into two groups during, 1255; —Rāma followed by animals during, 1256, 1273–74; —Rāma followed by apes, monkeys, and rākṣasas during, 437–38, 1240–41; —Rāma followed by all during, 59, 182, 439; —Rāma followed by Bharata and women of antaḥpuram during, 439; —Rāma followed by devoted seers

during, 439, 1251–52; —Rāma followed by immobile objects during, 441, 1256–57, 1274; —Rāma followed by inhabitants of Ayodhyā during, 182, 436, 1234, 1235, 1236; —Rāma followed by insentient beings during, 1171; —Rāma followed by invisible beings during, 1256–57; —Rāma followed by ministers and sons during, 439, 1253–54; —Rāma followed by people of countryside during, 439, 1255; —Rāma followed by people out of happiness, during, 1255; —Rāma followed by Śatrughna during, 439, 1252; —Rāma followed by townspeople during, 1225; —Rāma gives orders for, 438; —Rāma greeted by Brahmā and gods during, 178; —Rāma goes from Ayodhyā to Gopratāra tīrtha on Sarayū for, 11, 115, 177, 441, 1257, 1258; —Rāma makes no unnecessary movements during, 438, 1249; —Rāma's bow and arrows take on human forms during, 438, 1250; —Rāma's silence during, 438, 1248–49; —Rāma takes up kuśa grass during, 438, 1248; —Sāketa as destination of, 1278; —Vyavasāya et al. accompany Rāma during, 438, 1250
Mahāsena. See Skanda
Maheśvara. See Śiva
Maheśvaratīrtha (Cm): on Budha's nurturance of Purūravas, 1111; Cs quotes and critiques, 660, 696, 830; —mentions, less often in Uttarakāṇḍa commentary, 218; Ct differs from, 781; Ct quoted by, 976, 1024, 1110, 1145, 1207, 1261; Ct, Ck, and/or Cg aligned with, 445, 462, 469, 472, 480, 495, 523, 577–78, 613, 617, 651–52, 656, 660, 674, 683, 687, 691, 702, 708, 715, 720, 726–27, 732, 738, 749, 754–55, 758, 762, 764, 773, 775, 780, 783–84, 786, 789, 799, 803, 806–7, 809, 811, 821, 825–27, 831, 833, 839, 841–42, 853, 859, 861–63, 887, 895, 898, 907, 913–14, 916, 950, 971, 978–79, 985, 994, 1024–25, 1030, 1047, 1063, 1065, 1071, 1098, 1111, 1129–30, 1137, 1151, 1159, 1166, 1189, 1197, 1204, 1209, 1222, 1224, 1231, 1244, 1250, 1263–64, 1271–72; Cv, Cs, and/or Cr aligned with, 689–91, 750–51, 952, 1065–66, 1127, 1151, 1203; Cv differs from, 829; does not comment on or is not quoted on, 218; Gāyatrīmantra mapped onto Rāmāyaṇa by, 187–98, 642; on Hemapura's location, 552; historicity of poem asserted by, 159; kalpabheda used as explanation by, 1183, 1189; on Kubera's kedāravrata, 562, 564; on māyā, 552; on Padmā's identity, 1249; prakṣipta animal episodes ignored by, 1384; on primordial rākṣasas as thirsty, 472; on Rāma creating his kingdom, 861; on Śatrughna's actions at time of Lava and Kuśa's birth, 976; —inquiring about singing of Rāmāyaṇa, 1005, 1016; on sin of taking back wife touched by another man, 857; on Sītā entering the earth per Rāma's wishes, 1169; unique readings and interpretations of, 656, 682, 738–39, 874, 888; on Viṣṇu's primordial state, 1208
Māhiṣmatī, 28, 306, 308, 313, 314, 749
Mahodara, 41; bathes in Narmadā, 307, 754; fights Arjuna Kārtavīrya, 309, 311; —Māndhātṛ, 1293; —Varuṇa's sons, 282–83; identity of, 451, 549, 661; killing of, 226; Rāvaṇa's minister, 252, 260–61, 294, 1293; Unmatta and Yuddhonmatta as alternate names of, 454, 484; yakṣas killed by, 262
Mainda: asura nature of, 1245; as cirajīvin, 1245; commentators on death of, 1244; gods create, 326, 813; as great monkey lord, 328, 828; remains on earth, 177n29, 1243–44, 1272; in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 484
maireya (wine), 332, 847
Maithila: Ikṣvākus and, 819; Janaka's lineage known as, 356, 929; Sītā born into lineage of, 610
Makara (treasure), 577
Malayalam manuscripts, 506, 646; as conservative, 204; influence of, 208–9, 1101; of MBh, 204; Shah's use of, 204–5; Vaidya on, 203
Mālin: fights gods, 239–43; offspring of, 50, 236; Sālakaṭaṅkaṭā's grandson, 518; Sukeśa and Devavatī's son, 48–49, 234; Vasudā's husband, 236; Viṣṇu beheads, 243
Malla (country), 167, 428, 1198
Mallas, 1198
Mallinātha, 88, 107, 616, 652, 1030, 1136
mālopamā. See under poetic figures
Mālyavān: fights gods, 239–43; —Viṣṇu, 244–45; identity of, 288, 479, 485, 681–82, 943; Laṅkā abandoned by, 246; offspring of, 48, 50, 236; Rāvaṇa's maternal uncle, 47; Sālakaṭaṅkaṭā's grandson, 518; Śiva refuses to kill, 488; Sukeśa and Devavatī's son, 48–49, 234, 238
Mālyavān, Mount, 499
Mānasa, Lake: flooding of, 256, 555–56; Indra enters lotus stalk in, 1085; Saramā born near, 256
Mandākinī River, 254, 290, 688. See also Ganges

Mandara, Mount, 235, 375, 988, 1285, 1301; Sālakaṭaṅkaṭā gives birth to Sukeśa on, 45, 233
Māṇḍavī, 608, 1249–50
Māndhātṛ: elliptical verses in episodes of, 978–79, 980, 1345, 1346; Lavaṇa slays, 372, 981; prepares to conquer world of gods, 371; Rāvaṇa battles, 1292–95; Yuvanāśva's son, 371, 1292
Mandodarī: Maya and Hemā's daughter, 127, 256; Meghanāda's (Indrajit's) mother, 25; lament of, 63n3; Rāvaṇa marries, 127, 255–56, 554; Rāvaṇa's wife, 696, 901 man-eating. See cannibalism manhood: aśvamedha restores, 137; —to Ila, 411; of brahman boy not reached, 382, 1010; of Ila/Ilā, 136–37, 405–6, 1095–97, 1109, 1111; —restoration of, cannot be asked for, 405, 1115–16; —denied, 406, 1095, 1115; of Rāma threatened, 137
Māṇibhadra (yakṣa): Māṇicāra as another name for, 262, 574–75; Pārśvamauli as epithet of, 263; Rāvaṇa fights, 262
Māṇicāra (Māṇicara). See Māṇibhadra
Maṇimatī, 280–81
Mankad, D. R., 37, 200n7, 201n10, 202–3 man-lion. See avatāras: narasiṃha
Manmatha. See Kāma
Mantharā, 39–40, 40n22, 52, 608
mantras: Ādityahṛdaya as, per Ck, 1176, 1247–48; as advice or counsel, 488, 492, 618, 1176; anger burns up, 1322; Brahmā gives Rāvaṇa protective, 1297–99, 1350; brahmans' suitability for, 1066; consisting of wind, 1269; as deliberation per Cg, Ct, 1176; Indrajit's rite with, to Agni, 303, 735–36; kavaca's connection with, 725; kuśa grass sanctified with, 370, 973; Nimi's body churned with, 356, 929; oṃ as root of Gāyatrī-, 1251; protective, 1062; rākṣasas know, 49; Rāmāyaṇa and Gāyatrī-, 68, 187–96, 1279, 1282–83; Rāvaṇa requests, 1297; —of Śiva, 1299; Rāvaṇa's unsurpassed, 308, 754; rudrākṣamālās used to count, 1351; Śatrughna's consecration with, 364, 948; Sāvitrī- (Gāyatrī-) as all protective, 1250–51; —follows Rāma on mahāprasthāna, 439, 1250; —Viṣṇu is, 1311; for son, 929; Sukeśa's sons as formidable as, 49, 234, 480; in svastyayana rite, 567; Urvaśī "consecrated" with, 922; Vālin intones vedic, 316–17, 778, 780–81; vaṣat uttered at end of, 793; Viṣṇu shown to be inner spirit of vedic divinities by, 1086; Viśravas recites, 43; as weapon-spell, 535. See also Gāyatrīmantra; saṃvarta (mantra); Sāvitrīmantra
Manu: Benoît on, 471; in Brahmaloka, 393; class duties prescribed by, 494, 1019, 1053; Ikṣvāku instructed to found royal lineages by, 392; Ikṣvāku's father, 151, 352, 392; lunar and solar dynasties' progenitor, 1053
Manusmṛti: on ascetic practices, 530–31; on brahmahatyā as foremost sin, 1079; on Gāyatrīmantra's excellence, 187; on heaven for those punished by king, 107; on rākṣasa form of marriage, 32, 665
Mārgaśīrṣa (lunar month), 830
Mārīca: Araṇyakāṇḍa role of, 567; bathes in Narmadā, 307; fights Arjuna, 311; —gods, 294; —yakṣas, 260–63; flees battle, 621; identity of, 567; as Rāvaṇa's minister, 252, 294
Mārkaṇḍeya, 419, 511; Rāma advised by, 383; as Rāmopākhyāna narrator in MBh, 71 marriages: by abduction, 665, 683; apsarases cannot have, 695–96; Bhaga as god of, 236, 483; of Bhayā to Heti, 45, 232; Cr on Arajā's, 1059; of Devavarṇinī to Viśravas, 52, 126; of Devavatī to Sukeśa, 48, 233–34; fathers' concerns about daughters', 25, 246, 256; Heti makes efforts for, 232; inter-, of gandharvas and rākṣasas, 48–50; —of vaiśya and śūdra varṇas, 1023; of Kaikasī, 6, 127, 247, 485, 522; of Kumbhakarṇa to Vajrajvālā, 256; of Kumbhīnasī to Madhu by abduction, 287–88, 683; maidens without, as a liability, 51, 246, 256, 552; of Mandodarī to Rāvaṇa, 6, 127–28, 256, 554–55; Narmadā gives daughters in, 49–50, 235–36, 235–36; parrot tells Sītā of, 95; patriarchal, 43; polygamous, 696; Pulastya arranges, for Viśravas to Devavarṇinī, 126, 229, 480, 462; rākṣasa or of rākṣasas, 6, 32n106, 665, 683; Rāma won't have another, 857, 1182; Rāvaṇa arranges, 45, 255–57, 549–50; Sandhyā negotiates, of Sālakaṭaṅkaṭā to Vidyutkeśa, 45, 232, 657; Sītā to Rāma, 66n4; —duration of time since, 849–50; Sumālin sends Kaikasī to arrange her own, 25, 247; of Śūrpaṇakhā, 45, 255–56, 549–50; Tṛṇabindu gives daughter to Pulastya in, 42–43, 195, 228, 461; Vedavatī's hand sought in, 31, 267, 602; of Vibhīṣaṇa to Saramā, 256–57
Mārtāṇḍa, 323, 801, 1339. See also Sūrya
Māruta, 322. See also Vāyu
Māruti. See Hanumān Maruts: Agni as leader of, 180; fight rākṣasas, 298, 705; —Rāvaṇa, 301; Indra accompanied in battle by, 293, 297; Sītā's truth act witnessed by, 420; Viṣṇu worshiped by, 180, 440

Marutta: commentators on Rāvaṇa and, 611, 612; Ila's aśvamedha performed by, 411, 1114; as king, 610; Rāvaṇa challenges to battle, 269, 611; —eats priests at sacrifice of, 35, 270; sacrifice to Śiva performed by, 269–71, 610, 1114; Saṃvarta discourages from battle, 270
Marxist critiques, 82, 98, 111–13
Mathurā. See Madhurā
matrilineal society, 46–48, 53
Matsyapurāṇa: Bhṛgu's curse in, 94, 853, 900, 1169; Nimi in, 142; Yayāti in, 143, 931
Matta (rākṣasa), 236, 484, 453–55
matted locks (jaṭā), 237, 266, 363, 405, 416, 599, 753, 946, 1298–99, 1352–53
Maudgalya (brahman), 383, 419, 1015
Mausalaparvan, 13n3, 171–72, 174
Maya (asura), 477, 550, 639
māyā (creative power, magical illusion): of asuras, 657, 727; city for Hemā built with, 255, 552; of dānava and asura lords, 492–93; of Indrajit, 300–301, 582, 713, 724–27, 731–32; of Indrajit's chariot, 287, 678; Indra, Rāvaṇa, and Indrajit as masters of, 726; Kāla produced by, 431, 1207–9; personified (Māyā), 440, 1207, 1209, 1263–64; of rākṣasas, 264, 576, 582; of Rāvaṇa, 281, 657; Vālmīki's use of term, 1209; of Viṣṇu, 180, 1210, 1260; as Viṣṇu's consort, 440, 1263–65
Maya (dānava): dānava lord, 255; golden city built by, 255, 552; Hemā and, 255, 551–52; Mandodarī given to Rāvaṇa by, 256, 554; Mandodarī's father, 256; Māyāvin's and Dundubhi's father, 256, 553; Rāvaṇa's encounters with, 127–28, 255–56 māyāsītā (illusory Sītā). See chāyāsītā or māyāsītā Māyāvin (elder son of Maya), 256, 553 mayūra. See birds: peacocks measurement: bhāra as unit of, 1282–83; dhanuḥ as unit of, 767; of Kumbhakarṇa, 226, 527; —residence of, 257, 557; of Laṅkā, 235, 254, 482, 548; of Rāvaṇa's travels into the heavens, 1295–96, 1347–49; yojana as unit of (see league)
medha. See sacrifices
Medinī, 431, 1212, 1328
Meghanāda. See Indrajit memorial donations. See under donations
Meru, Mount, 235, 375, 836, 988, 1046, 1285, 1299, 1301, 1314, 1328, 1357, 1381, 1400; Indra's world on top of, 700; Kumbhakarṇa's abode like cavern of, 257; made of gold, 1305; Mālyavān, Sumālin, and Mālin's austerities on, 234; Rāvaṇa on, 1289; Ṛkṣarajas on, 1306; three peaks of, 1305; Tṛṇabindu's ashram on slopes of, 42, 227 meteors: blazing, as omen, 297; —in comparisons, 245, 296, 311, 516–17, 710, 766; crashing to ground, as omen, 26, 248, 311, 526, 710, 766; —as sign of loss of merit, 261, 572. See also omens meters, 76–77, 1142, 1143, 1155, 1219; anuṣṭubh, 1048; aparavaktra, 731; ardhasamavṛtta, 730; defective, 918, 930, 1376; gathā, 1155; gāyatrī, 187; hypermetric, 192n17, 482, 514, 646, 797, 1280, 1371; hypometric, 187n2, 486, 549, 730, 1139; indravajrā, 915, 1048, 1139, 1372; indravaṃśa, 962, 1376; irregular, 1155; kāmadattā, 730; longer, 76, 78; mālatī, 730; mālinī, 936; mixed, 519, 730, 962, 1048, 1091; praharṣiṇī, 824; puṣpitāgrā (aupacchandasika), 730, 1014, 1091; rucirā, 549, 586; śloka (see ślokas); triṣṭubh, 77, 918; upajāti, 501, 513, 514, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 924, 934, 981, 985, 993, 997, 1031, 1057, 1150, 1373, 1374, 1399; upendravajrā, 774, 977, 1373, 1376; upodgatā (sic vaitālīya), 930; vaitālīya (viyoginī/sundarī), 731, 944, 1091; vaṃśasthavila, 456, 468, 478, 486, 514, 519, 529, 549, 756, 769, 773, 796, 797, 837, 886, 941, 962, 1139, 1201, 1372; vasantatilakā, 519, 1162
metonymy. See poetic figures: rūpaka metrical features: of Gāyatrīmantra, 187; of Uttarakāṇḍa, 74–81, 114n2, 115n11
Mithi, 356, 929. See also Janaka
Mitra: Agastya denies being son of, 355; identity of, 920–21; narrative of Urvaśī and, 141–43, 213, 353–54, 456; rājasūya sacrifice performed by, 162, 398; semen of, in pot, 456, 920, 924–27; Urvaśī solicited by, 354, 921–23; Varuṇa's position attained by, 398, 1075; Vasiṣṭha born in pot from semen of, 355
Mitrasaha Saudāsa, 145, 368–69, 968, 970; Kalmāṣapāda as epithet of, 968, 970 molestation. See rape; sexual aggression moths (śalabha/pataṃga), 30, 318, 502, 520, 1249, 1293 monkeys. See vānaras mountain, western. See western mountain mountains, Vindhya. See Vindhya mṛdaṅgas. See under drums

Mṛdu (demon), 1288, 1334
Mṛtyu (Death): as Kāla, meets with Rāma, 172; as manifestation of Viṣṇu, 1288, 1298, 1352; equal to, 236, 486; noose of, 240; Rāvaṇa defeats, 277–79, 640–42, 645, 650; Sumukha and Vimukha as sons of, 447; Viṣṇu's death cannot be caused by, 1336; as Yama's companion or messenger, 616, 640; —leads to Yama's abode, 284, 669. See also Death; Kāla; Vaivasvata; Yama mudgara. See war hammers Mukunda (treasure), 577
murajas. See under drums Murder of Sambuka, The, by Tripuraneni Ramaswamy Chowdary, 111–13 musala. See cudgels; iron weapons: cudgels music: gandharvas associated with, 1189; gāndharva as term for, 664, 1142, 1145; measures in, 1141–42; —laya as meaning, 1002; performance or playing of, 273, 626, 1003; —of Rāmāyaṇa, 60, 416, 1001, 1145; recitals, 283, 664; scales in, 1141; terms in, laya as, 1102, 1138; —pramāṇa as, 1136; —tāntrī and sthāṇa as, 1136; theory of, 1003; treatise on, Nāṭyaśāstra as, 1139. See also musical instruments musical instruments: cymbals, 1003, 1120; percussion (laya), 61, 380, 415–16, 1002, 1006, 1138, 1006, 1138, 1150 (see also drums); playing of, 297, 389, 458, 609, 626, 633, 716, 1259, 1291, 1341; Rāmāyaṇa singing accompanied by, 1002; stringed (tantrī), 380, 415–16, 1002, 1006, 1136, 1138, 1150; —frets of (sthānam), 1136; trumpets, 440, 688, 844, 1259; Viṣṇu as sound of all, 1299. See also music musicians, 1120; celestial, 664; tālāvacara as cymbalists, 1120 mynahs. See sārikas

nāgas. See serpents
Nāgeśabhaṭṭa (Nāgojibhaṭṭa; Ct): on abandoning righteous women, 893; on adharma's origin, 1020; on Agastya and Mitra, 925–27; on Agastya's view of Rāma as Supreme Being, 1069; —account of Rāvaṇa's lost libido, 699; AmaK quoted by, 789; anachronism avoided by, 619; on anṛta, 1021; on apsarases, 696; on Arajā's "sin" (rape), 1064; on arrow that Rāma gives Śatrughna, 954–95; on aśvamedha, 1113; —of Rāma, 1183; —to Śiva as inappropriate, 1113; on Ayodhyā's sanctity, 1200; on benefits of selfless worship, 536; on botanical identifications, 1067; on Brahmaloka, 903, 913, 1177; —eligibility for, 183; on brahmans' and kshatriyas' relative power, 1017–19; on brahman's dead child, 1010–11; on brahmans' virtues, 463; on Brahmā's relation to Rāmāyaṇa, 1178, 1277, 1281; —word as inviolate, 591, 650–52, 710, 723; on chronology of narrative, 830, 842, 849; Ck, Cg, and, 218; Ck quoted or paraphrased by, 175, 178, 462, 905–6, 976–77, 1014, 1183, 1207–8, 1228, 1247, 1261; Cm quoted by, 976, 1024, 1261; commentary of printed often, 221; on criticism of Sītā from Rāma et al., 884; Cs criticizes, 621, 696, 743, 800, 811–12, 921, 936, 955, 1108, 1130, 1158, 1177, 1187, 1195, 1200–1201, 1239–40, 1248, 1253; —mocks and quotes less often, 218; on diversity of creation, 774; on donation to one's chosen deity, 1037; Dutt follows, 577; on etymology of Nārāyaṇa, 602, 1036–37; —of Rāmāyaṇa, 1277; —of Rāvaṇa, 595; —of Vedavatī, 601; on Gāyatrīmantra as protectress, 1261; Gita Press follows, 787; on golden image of Sītā, 1123–24, 1183; on Hanumān's lifespan, 834, 1243; —qualities, 784, 810; on hearing Rāmāyaṇa, 1278; on heavenly ascension after battle, 571; on historicity of epic, 159; on Ila/Ilā's pregnancy and childbirth, 1109–10; on Indrajit's killing, 452; —stage of life (āśrama), 675–76; on Indra killing Vṛtra, 1085; on Kāla as Rāma's kinsman, 1207–8; on Kārāpatha's conquest, 167; —location, 1197–98; on kings' failure to punish miscreants or recognize unrighteousness, 853, 1013; —obligation to perform rājasūya, 1074; —suffering for subjects' sins, 1027; on kṛṣṇasāra, used of sacrificial horse, 1126; on Kṛta Yuga's deathlessness, 1016; on kshatriyas' accepting of gifts from brahmans, 1037, 1188; —duty to punish, 1054; on Kubera's divinity, 465; —eye, 563; on Kumbhakarṇa's sleep, 538; —sleeping chamber, 557–58; —wakefulness, 685, 717; on Lakṣmaṇa, 891, 1223, 1227; —epithets of, 907; on Lañkā being "filled," 467; on Lava and Kuśa's birth, 1160; —diet, 1146; on Lavaṇa's killing vs. Rāvaṇa's, 1000; Mahāsundarītantra quoted by, 609; on Māndhātṛ's kingship, 978–80; ManuSm quoted by, 470; maxims cited by, 458, 679, 991, 953; on Mitra's and Varuṇa's semen, 924–25; on Mitra becoming Varuṇa, 921; on Mitrasaha's cook,

967; on monkeys and veda, 778; on musical terminology, 1140; mythological reference rationalized by, 1056; on naigama, 1014–15; on naṭa and nartaka, 958; on Nikumbhilā grove, 674; on niyuta, 958; on omens, 1191; PadmaP cited or quoted by, 175, 1170, 1187, 1228; prakṣipta passages ignored by, 1384; on Pulastya, 457; purāṇas quoted by, 607, 1200; on Puṣpakavimāna's maker, 585; —presiding intelligence, 1029; on rākṣasas' generations, 518; —gratifying gods, 679; on Rāma and Sītā's lovemaking, 1187; on Rāma as Brahman and Viṣṇu, 1070; —being defamed, 1153; —being followed by even malefic beings, 1256; —being followed by objects, 182, 1256–57, 1274; —being weakened by grief, 1173; —as deserving poetic fame, 1178; —as form of innermost spirit, 1036; on Rāma's acting human, 1175–76; —angry, 1169; on Rāma's devotees' salvation, 184, 1071, 1268; —enemies' fate, 1070; —five companions, 1244–45; —greatness, 1038; —indignation toward Sītā, 855; —injunctions being like veda's, 949; —lifespan, 1187, 1199; —omniscience and dissimulation, 470, 1091; —recognition of his sons, 1151; —sons' long lives, 903; —strength, 1173–74; —true nature, 1176; —wishes to instruct his subjects, 853; on Rāmāyaṇa as site of every form of knowledge, 1141; —performance of, 1145; —with musical accompaniment, 1002–3, 1136–37; on Rāmāyaṇa's extent, 1149; —fame, 1277; —slight inferiority to vedas, 1278; on rasa's emotive power, 1004; on Rāvaṇa's acquisition of powers, 656; —heads, 526–27; —killing as a minor task, 450; —killing of his brother-in-law, 671; —killing of Vidyujjihva, 657; —sāman chanting, 755; —weight, 782; revisionist history of Laṅkan war by, 821–22; on rhetorical issues, 501, 512–13, 612, 697, 761, 763, 772, 797, 800, 840, 885, 911, 972, 1012, 1101, 1147, 1157; on Sālakaṭañkaṭā's rākṣasa nature, 475; Sāṃkhya alluded to by, 1214; on Santānaka and Brahmaloka, 184, 1270–71; on Śatrughna's consecration, 948–51; —hearing of Sītā's sons' birth, 975; —hearing Rāmāyaṇa, 1001; —strategy for Lavaṇa, 956; —troops being sent early, 959–61; on Sītā as cause of Rāvaṇa's destruction, 609; on Sītā's banishment being foreseen, 894; —more painful than Rāma's, 892; on Sītā's birthday, 609; —desire to enter her true home, 1167; —entering earth, 1169; —guilt or innocence, 1151–52, 1157; —oath as necessary, 1153, 1164; —smile, 851; on spirits that seize children, 971; on Sumantra divulging secrets to Lakṣmaṇa, 897; TaiS quoted by, 1078; on Tamasā rivers, 866; on temporary sentience, 1171; as textual critic, 586, 612, 728, 1243, 1384; theology of, 176, 178–81 (see also Vaiṣṇava perspective or theology of in this entry); on "three dreaded diseases," 480; on "three mantras," 480; on unrighteousness's cause, 1024; Upadiṣṭanyāyavatī quoted by, 1223; on uttara, 1178–79, 1280; on Uttarakāṇḍa's esoteric nature, 1179; Vaijayantī quoted by, 847; Vaiṣṇava perspective or theology of, 1210, 1213–19, 1228, 1260–76; on vajravedisamaprabhāḥ, 667; on Vālin's sandhyā rites, 780–81; on Vālmīki as Bhārgava, 1148, 1160, 1280; on Vālmīki's curse, 94, 901–2; —perfect truthfulness, 1160, 1178; —use of kuśa and lava, 972–74; on Vedavatī cutting her hair, 605; vedic texts cited or quoted by, 121, 470, 1250; on Vibhīṣaṇa's request for brahmāstra, 535; on Vidyujjihva's "licking" of rākṣasas, 657–58; on virtuosic poetry (citrakāvya), 1143–44; on Viṣṇu as spirit of aśvamedha, 1086; on Viṣṇu's acceptance of Bhṛgu's curse, 851, 901; —arrow vs. Śiva's lance, 957; —creation and destruction of world, 1209–12; —lack of antipathy to rākṣasas, 495; on Vṛtra, 1079; —brahmanhood of, 1085; on worship of a golden liṅga, 755; on √yakṣ, 472–73; on yakṣas and rākṣasas, 472; on Yama's three functions, 631; on Yayāti's transfer of old age, 935–36

Nāgojibhaṭṭa. See Nāgeśabhaṭṭa

Nahuṣa, son of. See Yayāti

Naicker, E. V. Ramasami. See Ramasami Naicker, E. V.

naigama, 912, 952, 1014, 1122, 1140, 1143, 1224, 1229, 1385

Naimiṣa (Naimiśa) forest, 9, 96, 413, 1120

nairṛtas (sons of chaos): Kubera as bull among, 253, 260, 544, 568; rākṣasas as, 496, 1143, 1380; Vaiśravaṇa as lord of, 44, 231

Nala (king of Niṣadhas), 71

Nala (vānara), 326, 328, 813, 828

Nalakūbara, 33–34; commentators on, 693, 694, 695, 697; Kubera Vaiśravaṇa's son, 291; Maṇigrīva and, as twins, 693; Rambhā and, 291–92, 690, 698; Rāvaṇa cursed by, 34, 293, 699, 864

Nalopākhyāna, 71
Nandana (garden/grove): Kubera revived in, 264; Kumbhakarṇa devours apsarases in, 251; location of, 300, 559, 723; Rāvaṇa destroys, 258
Nandi (Nandin, Nandīśvara): appearance of, 28n89, 588, 592; gopati or govṛṣendra in commentary on, 592, 658; as Nandīśvara, 28, 265, 588, 589; Rāvaṇa cursed by, 28, 265, 590, 591; —ignores injunction of, 265; —stopped on Kailāsa by, 28, 265, 588, 589
Nandigrāma, 159, 362, 821, 946, 1279
Nandiśvara. See Nandi
Nārada: Agastya told history of Ṛkṣarajas et al. by, 1305–9, 1318, 1381; on asceticism and varṇas, 105, 383–84, 1016–27; curiosity of, about Rāvaṇa's attack on Yama, 274–75, 631–32; —about Rāvaṇa in Śvetadvīpa, 1315; etymology of name of, 1095; as fond of conflict, 625, 627, 1315; as foremost of brahmans, 632; on mortals' pathetic state, 273–74; Nṛga warned by, 350, 912–13; Pāṇḍavas visited by, in MBh, 447; at Rāma's court, 383, 1015; Rāma's story told to Vālmīki by, 58, 60, 66, 416, 1145; Rāma told of śūdra ascetic by, 8, 105, 383–84; —to kill śūdra ascetic by, 1034–35; Rāvaṇa chided by, 273; —directed to Yama by, 274, 628; —questions, 1314; —told about Śvetadvīpa by, 1314–15, 1377, 1380; Rāvaṇa's humiliation amuses, 1317; tells gods and seers of his encounter with Rāvaṇa, 1314; —of Sanatkumāra's conversation with Rāvaṇa, 1314, 1381; travels between heaven and earth, 624; —faster than Rāvaṇa, 632; —perched on cloud, 273, 624; —to highest heaven, 275; —to Śvetadvīpa, 1315; Yama and, 275
Naraka (demon), 278, 294, 646 naramedha. See under sacrifices narasiṃhāvatāra. See avatāras: narasiṃha
Nārāyaṇa: Arjuna Kārtavīrya and Rāvaṇa compared to, 312, 768; commentators on name of, 602–3, 920, 1036–37; Nara and, 911, 1364; Rama as (second), 173, 246, 1036, 1229, 1312, 1317, 1326, 1396; —according to Cs, 535, 991; Śatrughna as earthly, 1250; Sukeśa's sons feared by, 239, 495; Śvetadvīpa for devotees of, 1315, 1378; Viṣṇu as, 602; —Bhṛgu propitiates, 900; —Indra begs, to kill Rāvaṇa, but is refused, 294, 704–5; —kills or promises to kill rākṣasas, 239–44, 492, 507, 518; —likened to mountain, 80, 241, 501–2; —Mālyavān reproaches, 244; —solely capable of killing rākṣasas, 246; —Vedavatī vows to wed, 267, 602, 603. See also Viṣṇu
Narmadā (gandharvī), 45, 49, 50, 51, 235
Narmadā River, 29, 76n8, 306–10, 752–54, 756–58, 762; Arjuna Kārtavīrya and, 29, 308; described, 29–30, 306–7 narratives: of Agastya, 124, 148, 153, 211, 220; —Agastya departs after, 130; —as frame, 154; —brahmanic voice provided by, 154; —in court, 131; —Indrajit peripheral to, 42n32; of Agastya's and Vasiṣṭha's births, 139, 142–43, 353–55; annular structure of, 60, 67, 117–19; assumption of guilt in, 126; aśvamedha as focus of, 9, 60, 118; —in PadmaP, 124–25; of aśvamedha of Indra, 9, 128–29; —of Rāma, 9, 154, 168; of Bālakāṇḍa, 12, 112; brahmahatyā in, 119–30, 155; chronology of (see chronology); Daṇḍa episode's place in, 151–53, 155; deviations in, 42; of earlier kāṇḍas, 40; frame of, in Bālakāṇḍa, 58, 60, 62, 118, 160; —in history of rākṣasas, 40–41, 52; —in Rāmāyaṇa, 58, 60, 62, 89n31, 118; —in Sundarakāṇḍa, 41n28; —in Uttarakāṇḍa, 41, 60; genealogical, 45, 48–53, 128; of history of rākṣasas, 35–53; incongruity of, commentators on, 1176; —Shah on, 211n45, 212, 998, 1033, 1172; inconsistency of, as flaw, 1169; integrity of, 115, 119; kila as marker of received, 542; of kings, Nimi, Nṛga, and Yayāti, 139, 141–43; of Kubera Vaiśravaṇa's birth as tangential, 50; Laṅkā war central, of Rāmāyaṇa, 157; Lavaṇa episode's place in, 145–46, 148; —as a frame, 146; masculine frame of, 41, 43–44, 48–50, 142; —disruption of female in, 44–45, 49–51; maternal family prioritized in, 48; prakṣipta sargas as expansion of, 76, 210–12; of rākṣasas, 42; Rāma's ascent to heaven in, 182; Rāmāyaṇa as, 3; of Rāvaṇa as independent, 6, 24, 55, 76, 115, 126, 128; —as rationale for aśvamedha, 128; Rāvaṇa's history explains features of main, 22; reconstruction of, 454, 484; rupture of, 50; Śambūka episode's place in, 146–48; secondary, of MBh, 71–72, 76; —of Rāmāyaṇa, 56, 76; —of Uttarakāṇḍa, 12; sexual aggression in, 16, 24, 27, 31–34, 50, 51, 153–55; —anxieties in, 142–44, 156; Sītā's abandonment's excision from, 92–94; —centrality to, 16; social constructions in, 53; structural logic of, 116–19, 130, 145, 153, 156; structure of, 36n2, 60, 63, 64n38, 67, 74–75; —of Uttarakāṇḍa, scholars on, 114–17; surrogacy motif in, 43; Śveta episode's place in, 150–51, 155; temporal shift in, 118–19; tension in, 139, 652; transgressive behavior in, 50–53, 133, 138, 139n116, 142–43, 147, 153, 155–56 (see also transgressions); transition in, 18; of Tṛṇabindu's daughter and Kaikasī as parallel, 52; types of, 219–21; of Uttarakāṇḍa, 3, 6, 70n16, 114–56; —of historical interest, 40; —as made of independent episodes, 112; —Rāvaṇa and rākṣasas in, 24, 36; wife/mother's role in, 43, 44

Nāṭyaśāstra, 69, 1139
nātyūhas. See under birds necklaces: Indra gives Vālin a golden, 1307; of Mālyavān, 245, 517; pearl, given to Hanumān, 23, 329, 836; —by Sītā in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 836, 1096; of rākṣasas fall off, 244, 514; of Rāvaṇa, 585; of Sūrya, 1290; Śveta's celestial ornament as, 1052 nectar, divine (sudhā), 291, 659, 691 nectar of immortality (amṛta): comparisons to, 130, 151, 163, 331–32, 385, 391, 397, 399, 402, 433, 502, 842, 847, 1027, 1077, 1087, 1221, 1308; drunk by gods, 1310, 1380; —by great serpents (nāgas), 242, 510; —by Mainda and Dvivida, 1245; from ocean of milk, 281; Rāhu steals , 512; rasa refers to, 628; Rāvaṇa vows to churn ocean for, 274; sudhā glossed as, by Cg, 691; Śveta's corpse tastes like, 391; Vālin would defeat Rāvaṇa despite, 315. See also immortality nidarśana. See under poetic figures
Nikumbha (minister of Rāvaṇa), 294, 451–52
Nikumbhilā grove, 286, 674, 679, 956
Nīla (treasure), 577
Nīla (vānara), 326, 328, 451, 484, 828
Nimi (king): consciousness of, in eyes of all, 355, 928–29; consecrated for sacrifice, 356, 927, 930; Gautama completes sacrifice of, 352; identity of, 351, 915; Mithi born from corpse of, 356, 929; Rāma narrates tale of, 7, 56, 139, 141–43, 213, 351–56; Vaijayanta established by, 351, 915; Vasiṣṭha asked to perform sacrifice by, 352; —curses and is cursed by, 7, 141, 141n126, 352–53, 919
Ninth Grammar, 811, 812–13
Niṣādas: boat of, 340, 874; Guha as chief of, 106, 874; Vālmīki curses, 849
Niśumbha (dānava), 492, 1288
Nivātakavacas: Arjuna Pāṇḍava's battle with, in MBh, 654; as daityas, 280, 654; Rāvaṇa's alliance with, 281, 655–56; —battle with, 32, 280–81 nooses (pāśa), 310, 762–63, 1327; —of Kāla, 240, 277, 279, 427, 640–41, 648, 1139, 1286, 1288; —of Varuṇa, 323, 1327; —of Viṣṇu, 1289, 1298 northern recension, 206, 208, 604; M3 and M6's affinity with, 205; Mankad on, of Kiṣkindhākāṇḍa, 202; of MBh considered editio simplicior, 201n13; Telugu manuscripts and, 205; Vaidya on M4's agreement with, 203
Nṛga (king): brahmans petition and curse, 349; burrow of, 350–51; Nārada and Parvata warn, 350, 912–13; Rāma narrates tale of, 7, 56, 139–41, 213, 348–51; Vasu consecrated as king by, 350–51; Vāsudeva will liberate, from curse, 349, 911; versions of tale of, 908; Vasu instructed about fate by, 351 oath of fidelity. See śapatha oṃ, 439, 575, 1055, 1206–7, 1247–48, 1251, 1298, 1311, 1352. See also Oṃkāra omens: auspicious, flesh-eating animals preceding army as, 1191; —fragrant and delightful breezes as, 1259; bodily, 338, 373, 1286; of disaster, 297, 497–99, 716, 760, 871–72, 982; of Duryodhana's birth, 525; for Indra–Indrajit battle are dire, 297; inauspicious, beasts or birds moving clockwise as, 26, 240, 248, 426, 498, 525–26, 1191; —body or eye throbbing as, 338, 871; —earth as if desolate as, 338, 871–72; —elements crashing down as, 498; —flesh-eating animals following army as, 1191; —horses emitting sparks or stumbling as, 241, 504, 982; —jackals emitting flames as, 26, 248, 525; —kapotas (doves) with red feet as, 489; —malevolent spirits dancing as, 240, 498; —meteors as, 26, 248, 297, 526; —mountains shaking as, 240, 498; —ocean breaching shore as, 240, 498; —raining down blood as, 240, 309, 497–98, 526, 760; —raining down bones as, 240, 248, 497–98; —Rāvaṇa perceives, 1286; —screeching as, 499, 760; —she-jackals howling as, 498; —Sītā sees, 338, 871–72; —sudden sound from cloud as, 248, 309, 526, 760; —sun as, 248, 526, 716; —thunder, as, 26, 240, 248; —two-footed cats as, 499; —wind blowing harshly as, 297, 760; of Rāvaṇa's birth, 26, 248, 525–26; in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 525. See also signs Oṃkāra, 410, 1112. See also oṃ

oral impregnation, 170
ornaments, passim; of abducted women, 287, 680; on Airāvata, 320, 790–91; celestial, 9, 149, 388, 1039–42, 1057; —Agastya receives from Śveta, 388–92, 1052; —as a necklace, 1052; —Rāma able to protect, 1037–38; —Viśvakarman makes and Agastya gives to Rāma, 149, 388, 1037–38; circlet (cakra) as, 1336; Cs on Rambhā's, 697; heavenly, of Lakṣmī, 1302, 1361; —Rāma gives as gifts, 827–29; —Rāma receives as gifts, 327; of Māndhātṛ, 1292; Rāma gives to Hanumān and Aṅgada, 828; Rambhā's broken, 292, 697; Sītā takes to give to wives of sages, 338–39, 873–74; Sītā's exquisite, 332, 850; śrī as an abundance of, 691; śṛṅgāra as, 790–91; of Vāyu, 323, 797–98; Yudhājit Kekaya gives to Rāma, 425 owl (ulūka): story of vulture and, in PadmaP, 119n33, 1395; —in prakṣipta sarga, 5, 14n7, 211–12, 1325–29; —commentators on, 1384, 1401; —as interpolated, 211–12, 1384; —Rāma as judge in, 5, 57n11, 1325; as rightful resident, 1327–28

Padmā: Bharata's wife, according to Cr, 1249; as epithet of Lakṣmī or Ramā, 1397; —of Śrī, 438, 1249–50; as lord of wealth's fortune, 1397; on Rāma's left or right side, 438, 1249–50
Padma (diggaja), 307, 754
Padma (treasure), 263–64, 577, 583
Padmapurāṇa: Agastya advises Rāma to perform aśvamedha in, 125; —consoles Rāma, in, 125; —gives jewel to Rāma in, 149–50; —at Rāma's court in, 124; —tells Rāma of his transgressions in, 125; —tells Rāvaṇa's narrative in, 124; Arajā story known to, 1053; aśvamedha in, 119n33, 124–25, 164n23; —fifty chapters on, in, 164n23; —includes episodes not found in Vālmīki, 124; —length of time Rāma performs not specified in, 1184; —makes explicit Rāma's sin of brahmahatyā, 124–25; —narrative's basic outline per Vālmīki, 124; Bāla- and Ayodhyākāṇḍas combined in, 1281; Bhṛgu's curses in, 853, 900–902, 1169; Ct believes Ck contradicts, 175, 1228; —on Rāma telling Lakṣmaṇa of Vālmīki's curse, 94; Daṇḍa story in, 1053; Lakṣmaṇa reverts to form as Śeṣa in, 174, 1227; —threatens gossipers in, 102n66; Lava as yuvarāja of Kuśa in, 1233–34; Nimi story in, 142; owl and vulture story in, 1395; Rāma and Sītā's lovemaking in, 1187; Rāma ascribes brahmahatyā to himself in, 124–25; Rāma's despair at killing Rāvaṇa in, 124–25; —length of rule in, 1184, 1187, 1199; Rāma tells Lakṣmaṇa of Vālmīki's curse in, 94; Śambūka story in, 106n83; Śatrughna's and Rāma's sons battle over sacrificial horse in, 164; Sītā and parrots story in, 94–95; Sītā's entering earth in, 1170; Śveta story in, 119n33, 1042; Uttarakāṇḍa events incorporated in, 119; —omitted in, 125; Viṣṇu's division for Rāmāvatāra in, 1229; washerman story in, 84
Pāka (asura), 152, 302, 371, 395, 402, 731 pakṣin (cloud), 1295, 1384
paṇavas. See under drums
Pañcajana (daitya), 813
Pāñcajanya (Viṣṇu's conch), 176–77, 241, 1229; —Bharata as essence of, 176, 1229
Pañcanada (land of the five rivers), 272, 621
Pāñcarātra theology. See under theology, Vaiṣṇava
Pāṇḍavas, 4, 62, 75, 120, 122, 447, 911; as aṃśāvatāras, 177; departure from earthly realm of, 59, 1246–47; Dhaumya as guru of, 447; Draupadī as wife of, 71; life story of, in MBh, 59; Yayāti as ancestor of, 931; Yudhiṣṭhira as, 71
Pāṇini: Cs on Ct not knowing sūtras of, 1187; grammatical forms of, provided by commentators, 624, 654; Hanumān studied works of, 811–12; Śiva graces, with new grammar, 813; sūtras of, cited, 518, 555, 629, 723, 728–29, 766, 784, 801, 840–41, 964, 974, 983, 1028–29, 1118, 1139–40, 1158, 1187, 1212, 1249
Parameswaran, M. R., 66n5, 67n9; "Pretender Kāṇḍa" of, 72, 102; on term uttara, 67n9; Uttarakāṇḍa athetized by, 63, 74n3, 102–3; —critiqued by, 72nn24–25, 77n14, 80–81n24, 102–3
Paraśurāma. See Rāma Jāmadagnya pārāvata. See birds: pigeons parigha. See iron weapons: clubs Parjanya: rains blood, 248, 526; rains brought at proper time by, 424, 842, 1185 parrots. See under birds
Pārśvamauli. See Māṇibhadra
Parvata: identity of, 912–13; Nārada often linked to, 1156; Nṛga warned by, 350; tells Rāvaṇa that Māndhātṛ will fight, 1291–92

Pārvatī (Umā), 477, 491, 556, 562, 593, 599, 1369; boons of, 233, 405–6, 477, 1095–97; as Brahmā's daughter, 1157; Ila cursed by, 1109–10; —propitiates, 136, 1105–6; Kubera's eye burnt by, 259, 563; Śiva as lord of, 238, 491, 594, 753, 1298; —becomes woman to please, 136; Sukeśa discovered by Śiva and, 48, 233, 238, 477; as Umā, 233, 238, 259, 562, 1095–96, 1157, 1207, 1386
pāśa. See nooses
Paśupati. See Śiva
Pātāla: man (Nārāyaṇa) enters, dancing, 1301; as one of seven lower worlds, 1167; Rāma demands that Sītā be returned from, 422, 1174; Rasātala and, as rākṣasas' residences, 540, 653; as underworld to which nāgas descend with Sītā, 241; —in which nāgas dwell, 421, 506, 1177; —to which rākṣasas flee, 50, 246, 467, 517–20; Viṣṇu said to be in, 1311, 1380
Pātālakhaṇḍa of Padmapurāṇa: aśvamedha of Rāma in, 124; Jāmbavān narrates in, 125n60; Lakṣmaṇa threatens gossipers in, 102n66; Rāma story in, 124–25; Rāvaṇa's genealogy in, 124n53; Sītā and parrots story in, 94–95; washerman story in, 84n6, 163n23. See also Padmapurāṇa Patañjali, 811–12. See also Mahābhāṣya paternity: anxieties about, 143, 156; Mitra and Varuṇa's of Agastya and Viśvāmitra, 355, 925–27; Rāma's of Lava and Kuśa, 138, 143 path of winds, 313, 477, 1295–96, 1347–49 patrilineal descent: of rākṣasas, 46n53, 50; Vālmīki understands Rāvaṇa's as brahmanic, 127; Viśravas identified by, 126
Paulastya (Rāvaṇa, Pulastya's grandson), 41n28, 126, 127, 256, 266, 554, 627, 1294, 1338
Paulastya (Viśravas, Pulastya's son), 42–43, 228–29, 247
Paulastyas, 246, 267, 518
Paulomī. See Śacī
Paumacariya of Vimalasūri, 68–69
Pauṣa (lunar month), 830
Pavana. See Vāyu
pāyasa (milk pudding), 44n39, 169–70, 175, 1228 peacocks. See under birds pearl necklaces. See under necklaces penances. See asceticism perfected beings (siddhas), 80, 231, 240, 278, 312, 320, 322, 500, 532, 594, 840, 1166, 1277, 1295, 1304, 1314 Periyar. See Ramasami Naicker, E. V. phāla. See ploughshare phalaśruti: of Uttarakāṇḍa, 11, 66n4, 191, 193, 1276, 1284; of Yuddhakāṇḍa, 3, 11, 66
Phālguna (lunar month), 483, 830–31, 842 philology: classical, of Sukthankar, 199–200; modern, 63, 102; in reconstruction of text, 102–3 piebald stallions. See horses pigeon-keeping (kabutar-baz), 1195
Piṅgala (courtier of Rāma), 132n94, 333
Piṅgala (gatekeeper of Sūrya), 1290 pitṛs. See ancestors plough: of Janaka, 422, 1174 ploughshare (halamukha/lāṅgala/phāla/sīra): Sītā's birth and, 268, 606–7, 609, 1174; as weapon, 244, 514; —of Viṣṇu, 240, 501 poetic figures: anuprāsa (alliteration), 473, 486, 511–12, 748, 775, 789, 794, 795, 848, 1036, 1060, 1095, 1274; kāvyārthāpatti (a fortiori), 1026; mālopamā, 502, 506, 510–11, 559, 1355; rūpaka (metaphor), 76, 80, 179, 489, 494, 501, 508–9, 514, 533, 541, 611, 692, 720, 751, 763, 772, 808, 813, 984, 1118–19, 1141, 1143, 1148, 1158, 1193, 1388; —samastarūpaka, 763; upalakṣaṇa (metonymy), 630, 737, 1272; —(synecdoche), 688, 786, 1014, 1038, 1199; upamā (simile), 453, 457, 468, 475, 476, 479, 493, 496, 499, 501–2, 503, 504, 509, 510–14, 516–17, 531, 556–57, 572, 585, 599, 629, 635, 637, 717, 750–51, 754, 757, 760, 761, 763–64, 767, 768, 769, 785, 794, 813, 972, 986–87, 1056–57, 1061, 1072, 1076, 1084–85, 1138, 1157–58, 1168, 1200–1201, 1355, 1359–60, 1365, 1374, 1375, 1390, 1400; —abhūtopamā, 1056–57; —difficult and deficient, 79–80, 468, 475, 476, 479, 499, 501–2, 503–6, 513–14, 556–57, 585, 599, 629, 692, 720, 750–51, 754, 763, 765–69, 785, 794, 1056, 1084–85, 1157–58, 1200–1201, 1355, 1359–60, 1365, 1375, 1390; —nidarśanā (v.l. nidarśana), 501–2, 510–11 poetry (kāvya), 1141, 1142; Brahmā hears poem from goddess of, 1178; citrajña, as knowing virtuosic, 1142, 1144; grief (śoka) transformed into, 62; kāvyavit, as knowledgeable in, 1142; Rāma's fame known through, 1178; rasa as critical component of, 60; Sanskrit, use of duckweed in, 1045; Uttarakāṇḍa as Vālmīki's latter, 1280–81 —compared to earlier kāṇḍas', 79; Vālmīki's creation of, 61–62, 1139, 1148; —karuṇarasa as central theme in, 89n31 political expedients, 545, 1387

Pollock, Sheldon: on Rāma's madness, 1172, 1174; on naigama, 952; on name Rāvaṇa, 596; on rākṣasas, 37–40; on translation methods, 216–17
polymelia, 29
pot-born. See births: of Agastya; births: of Droṇa; births: of Vasiṣṭha power of illusion. See māyā power of magical illusion. See māyā
Pracetas: Vālmīki as descendant of (Prācetasa), 192, 415, 419, 901–2, 1148, 1160, 1278, 1280; Varuṇa as, 1148
Prācetasa. See Pracetas: Vālmīki as descendant of; Vālmīki pradhāna (principal [realm of Brahmaloka]), 184 pradhānarasa (principal rasa), 61–62, 89n31; karuṇa as Rāmāyaṇa's, 62; śānta as MBh's, 62
Pradyumna: as emanation (vyūha) of Viṣṇu, 176, 991; Bharata as, 991, 1229
Praghasa (minister of Vibhīṣaṇa), 485–86, 818
Praghasa (Sumālin and Ketumatī's son), 236
praharaṇa, 684. See also swords
Prahasta, 41; bathes in Narmadā, 754; fights Arjuna Kārtavīrya's army, 310–12; —gods, 294; —Māndhātṛ, 1293; —yakṣas, 260, 262; flees battle, 621; identity of, 451, 484; killing of, 226; Rāvaṇa asked to leave moon's path by, 1296; Rāvaṇa sends, to ask about palace in Aśmanagara, 1285; —to ask Kubera to leave Laṅkā, 253–54; —to tell Sūrya of desire to fight, 1290; Rāvaṇa's minister, 252, 294; Sumālin and Ketumatī's son, 236
Praheti (rākṣasa), 45, 232, 474
Prahlāda (asura), 492, 646, 1336
Prajāpati. See Brahmā
Prajāpati, Kardama. See Kardama
Prajāpati, Kaśyapa. See Kaśyapa (Prajāpati)
prakṣipta (interpolated) passages, 4–5, 14n7, 56–57n11, 76, 209–12, 221–22, 283, 326, 360, 815, 938, 1285–402; Cs identifies, as words of Vālmīki, 1384
Pramodana (sage), 410, 1111
Pramucu (seer), 225, 447 prāsa. See darts
Pratardana (king), 158–59, 326, 821
Pratiṣṭhāna: Ila founds, 411, 1116; Purūravas rules in, 923–24; Pūru rules in, 359, 937 pregnancy: ascetic gaze as means of, 42–43; circumlocutions for, "auspicious glow," 7, 131, 333, 851; —ṛtukālātivartinī, 884; commentators on sexual relations being forbidden during, 95–96, 858, 866–67, 1159, 1164–65; —on Sītā's sustaining her body during, 880–81; —on term yamajātakau for Sītā's, 1160; dangers of, 458; desire, 7, 18, 131, 135, 333, 340, 851, 878; —Rāma grants or recognizes Sītā's, 18, 131, 135, 333, 851, 878; gauravam as, 890; Ilā's, 409, 1109–11; ingestion as means of, 170; late stage as simile for ailments, 794; as marker of sexual activity, 135, 137; of parrot who curses Sītā, 95; Pulastya curses young women to suffer, 227; Pulastya's gaze causes, 42; Rāma abandons Sītā during, 18, 99, 108, 134–35, 906; Sālakaṭaṅkaṭā's, 45, 233, 475; separation from husband during, 95; Sītā's, 7, 18, 95, 99, 131, 134, 137, 851, 858, 866–67, 878, 880, 884, 890, 906, 1160, 1164–65; —Kālidāsa aware of Uttarakāṇḍa account of, 69; —Lakṣmaṇa asked to verify, to Rāma, 884–85; Tṛṇabindu's daughter's, 42–43, 228, 459–60
"Pretender Kāṇḍa," 72, 102
priyaṅgu creeper (Aglaia odorata), 331, 688
Proṣṭhapada (lunar month), 263, 578
Pṛṣadgu (seer), 225, 447
Pulastya, 410; austerities practiced by, 42–43, 227; begs Arjuna Kārtavīrya for Rāvaṇa's release, 313–14, 459; Brahmā Prajāpati's son, 42, 227, 457; curse of, 42, 227, 459; lineage of, 25, 44, 126, 231; —in MBh, 126–27n67; Rāvaṇa's grandfather, 30, 1347; Rāvaṇa–Māndhātṛ battle stopped by Gālava and, 1295; Tṛṇabindu's daughter as wife of, 460; —given boon by, 42–43; Viśravas's father, 43, 533
Puloman (father of Sacī), 47, 297, 551, 714–15
purāṇas. See Bhāgavatapurāṇa; Devībhāgavatapurāṇa; Matsyapurāṇa; Padmapurāṇa; Viṣṇupurāṇa purity: initiatory (see dīkṣā); Sītā's sexual, 14, 34, 52, 57, 84n6, 134, 138, 142, 143, 155, 417, 877, 1152, 1153, 1155, 1161–62, 1177 purohita: of Arjuna Kārtavīrya, 313, 771; Kāñcana (Cyavana) as Śatrughna's, 378, 437, 977, 1237; of Nṛga, 360; purodhas as, 898, 912, 927, 951–52, 961, 968, 997, 1224, 1229, 1237, 1246; Uśanas Kāvya as asuras', 153, 676, 899–900, 931, 1056; —as Daṇḍa's, 33n109, 152–53, 393; Vasiṣṭha as Ikṣvākus', 92n36, 113, 345, 355, 365, 367, 378, 434–35, 437–38, 448, 898, 916, 927, 951–

52, 961, 1224, 1319; —as Kalmāṣapāda's, 368, 968
Pūru: Śarmiṣṭhā's son, 357, 931; Yayāti consecrates, 359; in Yayāti tale, 143–44, 357–59; —trades youth for old age, 358, 935–36
Purūravas: in Araṇyakāṇḍa, 619; as Budha's son, 354, 923, 1110–11; Ilā gives birth to, 137, 409–10, 923; Mitra curses Urvaśī to marry, 142, 354, 923; Pratiṣṭhāna inherited by, 411; Rāvaṇa defeats, 271, 619; succession of, 1111
Puruṣottama, 1241; Rāma as, 100, 504, 603, 1241; Viṣṇu as, 504, 515, 603, 702, 1289, 1399
Pūrvaphālguni (lunar month), 483, 493
Pūṣan: Ck and Ct link Mitra to, 920; Śiva as smasher of teeth of, 1298, 1353; Tvaṣṭṛ and, 12; Viṣṇu's two hands are Bhaga and, 1301, 1358–59
Puṣkala. See Puṣkara (Puṣkala; son of Bharata)
Puṣkara (pilgrimage site), 348, 909
Puṣkara (Puṣkala; son of Bharata), 10, 166, 427, 1194
Puṣkara (son of Varuṇa), 282, 660
Puṣkarāvatī (city), 10, 166, 427, 1194
Puṣpaka, 6–7; Brahmā gives, to Kubera Vaiśravaṇa, 44, 230–31; described, 264, 276, 584, 636, 1046; indestructible, 276, 635–36; Kubera orders, to return to Rāma, 330, 838–40; Rāma acquires, 6, 330, 838; —addressed by, 330; —dismisses, 331, 398; —exhorted not to be sad by, 840–41; —orders, to return to Kubera, 330, 836, 838; —returns to Ayodhyā in, 397–98; —summons, 105, 385; —surveys realm in, 105, 385–86; —travels to ashram of Agastya in, 387–88; Rāvaṇa descends from, 287, 306, 315; —seizes, from Kubera, 264, 584; —travels in, 269, 273, 275, 280, 282, 1285, 1289, 1315–16, 1399; rendered motionless, 27–28, 264–65, 587–88; takes form at will (kāmarūpin), 584; travels by own power, 389; Vibhīṣaṇa gives, to Rāma, 838; Viśvakarman or Brahmā fashions, 585
Puṣpotkaṭā (daughter of Sumālin), 236, 485, 682

Rādhā (asurī), 492
Rādheya (asura), 492
Rādheya (matronymic of Karṇa), 493 rage: of Anaraṇya, 272; of Arjuna Kārtavīrya, 312; of Bharata, 427; blazing sparks come forth from, 373; of brahmans at Nṛga, 350; choking with, 432, 1220; clenching of fists or teeth in, 259, 565, 986, 1356; of Devayānī at Yayāti, 357, 932; of Dhūmrākṣa, 262; of Durvāsas, 432; earrings shaking with, 589; eyes clouded with, 310; —wide with, 297, 713; —wild with, 640; of Garuḍa at rākṣasas, 243, 245; of Gautama, 304; of gods, 301; of Indra, 304, 639, 740; of Indrajit, 296, 300, 713, 724; of Jayanta, 196; of Lavaṇa, 374, 376, 985; of Madhu and Kaiṭabha, 1328; of Mālyavān at Viṣṇu, 244; of Māndhātṛ, 1293–94; of Mārīca, 262; of Marutta, 270; of Mitra at Urvaśī, 354, 922; of Mitrasaha Saudāsa, 368; of Nimi at Vasiṣṭha, 352; of Prahasta, 311–12; of Rāma (see anger: of Rāma; Rāma: rage of); of Rāvaṇa, 258, 261–62, 255, 265–66, 272, 276–77, 283, 288, 292, 298–99, 508, 559, 565, 568, 595, 622, 644, 768, 1296, 1316; —at Kubera, 249, 529; of Rāvaṇa's ministers, 304, 1293; red eyes as mark of, 244, 259, 265, 279, 288, 292, 310, 565, 589, 640, 684, 698, 1063, 1338; of Ṛkṣarajas, 1306; of Śatrughna at Lavaṇa, 373; of Sumālin, 295; tears of, 382, 982; —Śatrughna sheds; of Uśanas Kāvya at Daṇḍa or Daṇḍakas, 286, 395; —at Yayāti, 358; of Varuṇa's sons and grandsons, 282–83; of Vasiṣṭha at Mitrasaha Saudāsa, 369; —at Nimi, 352; of Vāyu at Indra, 321; of Vedavatī, 268, 605; Viṣṇu creates arrow because of, 365; of Yama, 277–78, 645. See also anger
Rāghava. See Rāma
Raghunathan, N.: Fitzgerald quoted by, 692; prakṣipta passages translated by, 130; translation of, aligned with Benoît's, 465, 469, 509–10, 526, 563, 686, 700, 763, 793, 803, 972, 1082, 173; —with Dutt's, 462, 467, 479, 505–6, 518, 623, 657, 673, 675, 704, 706, 1080, 1090, 1096–97, 1107, 1130, 1238, 1264, 1394; —with Gita Press, 504, 510, 550, 563, 581, 592, 636, 654, 661, 673, 692, 706, 721, 795–96, 862, 942, 958, 983, 1021–22, 1041, 1045, 1055, 1072, 1080, 1096, 1107, 1130, 1149, 1156, 1211, 235, 1238, 1388, 1394; —with Gorresio's, 550, 589, 614, 623, 663, 710, 720, 725, 764, 796, 1114, 1220, 1346, 1359, 1365, 1394–95; translation of, unique, following Cg or Cr, 446, 472, 474, 481, 487, 492, 499, 501, 510, 513, 532, 538, 540, 542, 547, 550, 553, 561–63, 565–67, 570, 573, 576, 580, 586, 593, 608, 613, 615–18, 621, 623, 631, 635–36, 641, 649, 653, 655, 660, 662, 684, 690, 703, 706, 733, 749, 757, 785, 812–14, 816, 828, 832, 855, 873, 890, 893, 943, 949–50, 967–68, 971, 979, 983, 986, 1010, 1041, 1043, 1050, 1064–65, 1068, 1079, 1088, 1090, 1102, 1120, 1124, 1127, 1136, 1141, 1186, 1193, 1197,

Raghunathan, N. (cont.)
1200, 1205, 1225, 1259, 1263, 1273, 1282–84, 1337, 1353–58, 1364–65, 1368–69, 1373–75, 1382, 1389, 1392, 1395, 1398–400
Raghus: delight of, Bharata and Lakṣmaṇa as, 407, 1100; —Bharata as middlemost, 363, 945–46; —Lakṣmaṇa as, 337, 338, 345, 347, 404, 405, 1120; —Rāma as, 85, 129, 225, 246, 330, 331, 332, 342, 363, 365, 366, 380, 383, 386, 387, 389, 390, 393, 397, 399, 404, 422, 424, 435, 437, 439, 483, 518, 834, 883, 951, 1007, 1040, 1047, 1078, 1175, 1179, 1230, 1258, 1279, 1336; —Rāma's brothers as, 861; —Śatrughna as, 365, 371, 376, 378, 380; distinguished decendant of, Rāma as, 90, 181, 235, 319, 325, 397, 430, 454, 518, 519, 824, 837, 924, 1047, 1071, 1182, 1267, 1282, 1326–27; —Śatrughna as, 335, 374, 377, 962, 977, 978, 997; as Rāma's lineage, 1007
Raghuvaṃśa: Bhadra as a spy in, 852; as ethical critique of Uttarakāṇḍa, 86–87; Kuśa restores Ayodhyā to glory in, 1279; Śambūka episode in, follows Vālmīki, 107, 109; Sītā's purity doubted in, 1153; Uttarakāṇḍa narrative incorporated by, 120. See also Kālidāsa
Rāhu: demon of eclipse, 21, 322, 512, 790, 861, 1061, 1223; Hanumān's encounter with, 21, 320–21, 790; —mauling of, 320; Hanumān thinks, is a mountain, 321, 791; as head only, 321, 791; nectar of immortality stolen by, 512; Siṃhikā's son, 320, 790; voice of, 321, 791–92
Raibhya (seer), 225, 446 rājasūya. See under sacrifices rājyābhiṣeka. See consecration, royal Rākā (daughter of Sumāli), 236, 485
rākṣasas, passim; Agastya tells Rāma about histories or lineage of, 17, 42, 44, 50, 227–318; —on lineage of, springing from Pulastya, 231; Arjuna drives off, 310; army of, Arjuna attacked by, 312; —Arjuna turns back, 313; —battles army of gods, 294–95, 298–300, 706, 708, 717, 719; ——Dūṣaṇa as chief of, 286; —fights at night, 299; —flees, 296; —Indrajit dismisses, 302; —Indrajit turns back, 296; —marches against Indra, 293; —marches against Madhu, 288; —Yama burns up, 278–79; at aśvamedha of Rāma, 412, 414, 1132; bathe in Narmadā, 307, 753; Benoît on, 494, 523; Bharata would have slain, 327; called asuras, 488; centrality of, to narrative, 42; commentators on, 494–95, 825, 864, 877; compared to storm clouds, 241, 244, 474, 501, 504, 514; Daṇḍakas as dwelling place of, 286; as depicted in different kāṇḍas, 39–40; dharma of, 494; etymology of, 232, 471–73; flee, 230, 242, 244–45, 252, 263, 278, 296, 311, 1301, 1316; as flesh eaters, 34–35, 231, 315, 774; genealogy of, 42, 44–50, 71, 76, 219, 231–35, 680–81; gods defeated by, 495; Heti and Praheti as original, 45, 232; history of, 6, 17, 36–37, 40–41, 44, 53, 220, 446; Hopkins on, 38; identification of, 37–38; Kaikasī's children cursed to become, 51, 127, 247; Khara as lord of, 286; kennings meaning "night-roaming" for, kṣaṇadācara, 489, 543, 549, 707, 1376; —naktaṃcara, 502, 510, 512; —rajanīcara, 483, 499, 758; —rātrīṃcara, 481; kings would have slain, 825; Kubera's messenger eaten by, 260; Kubera Vaiśravaṇa as lord of, 230; Kumbhakarṇa kills, 864, 877; Laṅkā abandoned by, 44, 50, 226, 246, 467; —as island fortress of, 36–37, 44, 49, 230–31, 235, 254–55, 467–69, 540, 543–45; Lavaṇa as foremost of, 376; libidinal excesses of, in Araṇyakāṇḍa, 40; lineages of, different, 46; —in Rāmopākhyāna, 119; liṅga carried by, 308, 755; Madhu and Kaiṭabha, 232, 474; Madhu (husband of Kumbhīnasī), 681; Mālyavān, Sumālin, and Mālin called, 49, 234; Māndhātṛ battles, 1293–94; as man eaters, 310; as matrilineal, 46–48; Mitrasaha kills, 368; moon's rays burn, 1296; at Mount Trikūṭa, 543; only a tenth part left standing, 299, 721; in Pātāla, 246, 467, 519–20, 653, 717; Pollock on, 37–40; power of illusion of, 582; as prabhaviṣṇu, "powerful," 481; Rāma falsely credited with killing of, 451; —praised for killing of, 226; Rāma's allies, 23; —concern about fate of dead, 864; —dismissal of, 328–30; —dismissal of, from aśvamedha, 424; —mahāprasthāna, included in, 437, 439–40; —refusal to let Lakṣmaṇa exterminate, 167; —rule of, 424, 1185–86; —slaughter of, 225; —victory over, 41; in Rasātala, 230, 245, 517–18, 540, 653; Rāvaṇa abducts daughters of, 32, 284, 287, 666; —deserted by, 1316; —has entourage of seven, 308; —honored by, 285; —as invulnerable to, 596; —as lord of, 226, 254–55; Rāvaṇa's ministers, 308, 754; —Arjuna Kārtavīrya attacked by, 312; return to Aśmanagara of, 1285; —to divine origin of, 441, 1274–75; Sālakaṭaṅkaṭā as mother of, 46, 475, 518; Sālakaṭaṅkaṭas as type of, 475;

set forth to battle, 497; Sharma on, 38–39, 46–47; Sītā's vow of fidelity observed by, 419; Śiva's relationship with, 491; take on any form at will (kāmarūpins), 286, 454, 534, 674, 966; —bodies of animals, 368; as terrestrial demons, 55; Thapar on, 47; travel anywhere at will, 412, 1119; Uśanas Kāvya and, 676; of Uttarakāṇḍa, 36–54; Vaidya on, 38; Vālmīki makes amulet to ward off, 370, 971; Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa's portrayal of, complex, 37–38, 45;Vidyujjihva eats, 657–58; Virādha's nature as, 123n47; Viṣṇu annihilates troops of, 50, 245; —battles troops of, 236–45; —drives from Laṅkā, 26; —fills ocean with corpses of, 507–8; —lacks reason to destroy, 495; —slays fleeing, 244, 515; —worshiped by, 440, 1267; Vyas on, 38; women (rākṣasīs), 39, 50, 497; —boon to, 233; —important in genealogy of, 48; —worship Nikumbhilā, 674; yakṣas battle with, 260–62; yātudhānas as a subclass of, 359, 936; Yayāti curses Yadu to father, 359, 936–37
rakṣovaṃśa. See genealogy: rākṣasas'; lineage: rākṣasas'
Ramā: as epithet of Lakṣmī, 1397
Rāma (Balarāma). See Balarāma
Rāma (Dāśarathi, Rāghava): abandonment of Bharata by, 345, 894–95; —of earthly body or existence by, 11, 1227–28, 1253, 1261, 1266; —of relatives by, commentators on, 345; —of Śatrughna by, 345, 894–95; —of Sītā by (see Sītātyāga); actions of, condemned, 135; —reflect character, 14, 83; —two significant, 57; as actor, 470, 1218, 1169, 1260; in AdhyāR, 93; adjudicates dispute of dog and brahman, 4–5, 1319–24; —of owl and vulture, 1325–29; Agastya and (see under Agastya); age of, 850; Agni restores Sītā to, in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 864; agniṣṭoma and atirātra performed by, 424, 1184; as akliṣṭakarmaṇaḥ, "tireless in action," 1028; ancestors gratified by, 425; Aṅgada et al. sent to Kārāpatha by, 167, 428, 1198–99; Aṅgadīya established for Aṅgada by, 10, 166, 428–29, 1197; anger of, 10n17, 344, 855, 1169; —set aside, 130, 133–34, 334, 340, 876–77; animals follow, 1256; arrow of, used (or not) to kill Rāvaṇa, 365, 945, 988; in aśoka grove, 331–32; aśvamedha of (see under aśvamedhas); Aśvapati as maternal uncle of, 10, 425; as auditor, to Agastya, 231, 318–19; —of Prakṣipta I, 1285, 1286, 1304, 1365–66; —of Prakṣipta II, 1305, 1306, 1309, 1312, 1313, 1314, 1317, 1318; —to sages for history of Lavaṇa, 361–62; —in Uttarakāṇḍa, 220; as avatāra (see under avatāras); Ayodhyā and (see under Ayodhyā); bards praise, 815–16; bathes in water as prescribed by brahmans, 1066; Benoît on assimilation of Lakṣmaṇa and, 452; Bhadra tells rumors to, 18, 131–32, 333–34; Bharata accompanies for a long way, 426, 1191; —administers kingdom of, 157; —assembles forces or kings to aid, 158–59, 821; —declares devotion to, 439; —dissuades, from performing rājasūya, 9, 16, 163, 398–99, 677; —makes preparations for aśvamedha of, 1128; —refuses to accept kingdom from, 435; —sent to conquer gandharvas by, 10, 15, 166; —summoned by, 335, 398; —tells, of extraordinary events, 331; —tells, of victory over gandharvas, 428; —unaware of adventures of, 821; —will follow, 437, 1236; Bhavabhūti on, 91–92, 109; Biardeau on Soma and, 174n19; bids farewell to vassals, 158; birth of, in Bālakāṇḍa, 170; —commentators on purpose of, 1218; —through own intention, 431, 1215–16; blames himself for death of brahman boy, 147; blessings (āśīrvādas) of, in Shastri's translation, 890; bodily transformation of, 1259–62, 1265–67; Brahmā and (see under Brahmā); Brahmadatta freed from curse by, 1329; brahmahatyā of, 119–30, 1012; —in PadmaP, 124–25; in Brahmaloka, 346, 902; as Brahman, 1069, 1070; brahman accuses, for death of son, 105, 381–82, 1013; brahmans declare devotion to, 439, 1253; —dismissed after sacrifice, 424, 1181–82; brahman's gift accepted improperly by, 1037, 1038–39; brahmans make offerings to, 939–40; as brahmiṣṭha, 1246; Brockington on purāṇas and, 76; brothers addressed by, 335–37; —asked about killing Lavaṇa, 363; —bound by oath to, 337, 1242; —dissent of, prophesied by, 862; —as "life breaths outside body of," 335 (see also life breaths); —pay homage to, 336; —summoned by, 335; —worried about, 861; as cakravartin, 58, 161, 165, 167, 823 (see also as universal ruler in this entry); Cg on residual forms of, 179; —returning to world from whence he came, 1218; —Śiva's smile reflecting killing of Rāvaṇa by, 597; —as Vāsudeva, 1213–14; —as Viṣṇu, 179, 1262; character of, in Uttarakāṇḍa, 13–16, 167–68; —constructed by

Rāma (Dāśarathi, Rāghava) (cont.)
Vālmīki, 161, 173; —contrasted to earlier kāṇḍas, 14, 54, 57, 65; —Srinivasa Sastri on, 96–97; cheerfulness of, 907; child revived without boon given to, 1034; choices of, 134; Ck on, Agastya instructing, 601; —bodily transformation of, 179, 1259–60; —as Brahmā, 601, 1036, 1218, 1250–51; —Brahmaloka attained by devotees vs. that of, 1257; —as Brahman, 1261–62; —as Hiraṇyagarbha's son, 1216; —monkeys remaining with, 831; —reminders of divine nature to, 1175; —return to previous existence of, 1218; —style of speaking of, 867–68; —suffering of, 906, 1175; —as universal ruler, 894; —as Vāsudeva, 176, 1229; commentators on (see under commentators); companions entertain, 131; compassionate nature of, 15–16, 109–10, 113, 163, 167–68, 182, 954, 1000, 1256–57, 1326, 1398; —absent or questioned, 57, 107–8; —in devotional discourse, 1032–33; —immobile objects follow because of, 1257; conch held by, 1276; consecrates Aṅgada and Candraketu, 167, 428–29, 1198; —Bharata's sons, Takṣa and Puṣkala, 426, 1190; —Lava and Kuśa, 435–36, 1280; —Śatrughna, 365, 952, 977; consecration of, as end of career, 65, 69–70, 92–93; —how he passes time after, 819–20; —in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 66; contradictions or criticism not allowed by, 337, 862–63, 865; Cr on, acting without impropriety, 864, 877, 882, 1153; —asking Agastya for Daṇḍa story, 1053; —completing sacrifice before departure for Sāketa, 1176–77; —as concerned about fate of dead rākṣasas, 864–65; —criticism of, to be avoided, 855–56, 863, 864, 892, 893; —crowd praising actions of, 1159; —duration of rule of, 1215; —gods recognizing intention of, 1165; —grief of, not being real, 904; —Hanumān and monkeys being created to serve, 813; —Hanumān being given life breaths by, 835; —infatuating all, 1267; —Mādhavī thinking of no one but, 1168; —no negative experiences for, 902; —no tension between Sītā and, 855–56; —not having agency for abandonment, 893; —not suffering, 865–66, 1173; —people's awareness of intention of Sītā and, 1172; —primordial body of Viṣṇu as body of, 991; —returning to Sāketa, 1218, 1266, 1278; —Śatrughna fearing separation from, 947; —scandal not being associated with, 865; —Sītā being sent away by, to prevent intercourse, 858, 866, 867, 1159, 1164–65; —Sītā in presence of, 1006; —Sītā's request to enter earth consonant with wishes of, 1168; —sparing Lakṣamaṇa grief, 867; Cs on, aśvamedha of, expiating brahmahatyā, 1113; —brothers and, as four emanations of Viṣṇu, 991; —compassionate nature of, 1398; —as conqueror of next world, 1202; —considering need to nourish mother and child, 878; —fondness for bow and arrows of, 868; —as God, 972; —as Hari, 1219–20; —Indrajit being slain by, 452, 453; —infallible arrow of, 992; —Kāla as grandson of, 1209; —Lakṣmaṇa's meditation on, 1227; —Lavaṇa's killing and, 945, 1000; —lust for feminine beauty of, 1153; —mahāprasthāna of, 1202, 1255; —monkeys staying with, 830; —no longer brooding, 912; —omniscience of, 853, 1082; —owl winning judgment from, 1401; —referring to city as ashram, 1068; —returning to original primordial being or world, 1218; —Śatrughna's instructions from, 1008; —Śatrughna's weapon from, 991; —sexual desire for Sītā of, 855; —shedding tears as acting, 1173; —Sītā and, not differentiated, 1375; —Sītā as always close to, 1123; —Sītā being asked to purify mind of, 1152; —Sītā's separation from, as instructive, 853; —sorrow (duḥkham) of, 1014; —speaking only to Bhadra, 852; —as supreme spirit, 903; —unrighteous act committed by, 893; —Vālmīki informing Lava and Kuśa that their father is, 1337; —as Vāsudeva, 991, 1229; —word "Brahman" meaning, 903; Ct on, accepting separation from Sītā, 1169; —accepting gift from Agastya, 1037; —as like an actor, 470, 1169, 1218, 1260; —aśvamedha of, 1175; —Brahmaloka as abode of, 178, 1251; —as Brahman, 1036; —as critical for Vaiṣṇava saṃpradāyas, 177–78; —devotees of, attaining heaven, 1257; —duration of marriage of Sītā and, 849–50; —gods' needs being attended to by, 1219; —Hanumān as unable to live without, 833; —insentient and immobile objects following, 182, 1256–57; —Lakṣmaṇa's sons and, 903; —Lavaṇa's killing and, 945; —lusting for feminine beauty of, 1153; —mahāprasthāna of, 1255; —monkeys remaining with, 830; —no greater being existing than, 1038; —Rāvaṇa's destruction by, 450, 609; —reminders of divine nature to, 1175; —returning to another world, 1218; —Śatrughna's desire to return being anticipated by, 947; —Sītā not going against wishes of, 1169; —Sītā's purity being doubted by, 1164; —sons of, 903; —suffering or grief of, 906, 1175; —transformations of, 1265; —true form attained by, 1257; —as true form of innermost spirit (antaryāmin), 1036; —Vālmīki's words' acceptance by, 1160; curse absolves, for abandonment of Sītā, 94, 853; Cyavana at assembly of, 225, 446; —at aśvamedha of, 419, 1156; —petitions, to protect from Lavaṇa, 8, 360; dancing of women in front of, 332; Daśaratha asks Durvāsas about life span of, 346; Daśaratha as parallel to, 131, 133; as Dāśarathi, 86, 120, 121, 122, 123, 386, 419, 448, 623, 993, 1016; Dasgupta on appeal of, 103–4; Delhi drivers fond of, 103; delights women, 847; despondency of (see grief of in this entry); devotees of go to Santāna, 182, 184; as dharma incarnate, 535; as dharmarāja, 161; dharmic rule of, 3, 7–9, 13–14, 15n11, 28, 56–57, 66, 83, 107, 161–62, 167, 169; discus held by, 1276; dismisses friends, 334, 857–58; —kings, 326; —Pratardana, 326; —Puṣpaka, 330–31, 398, 1072–73; —Sugrīva and monkeys, 328; —Vibhīṣaṇa and rākṣasas, 329; divine nature of, 1176; —play of, 91, 181, 1172, 1266; divinity, unaware of own, 173; dohada (pregnancy desire) of Sītā granted by, 135, 333, 851; duration of kingship of, 13, 59; —in PadmaP, 1183–84; duration of lovemaking with Sītā of, 849; Durvāsas demands to see, 432, 1220; —fed by a delighted, 433, 1221; —prophesies to, 94, 346; —welcomed by, 433; dveṣabhakti toward, 1070, 1071; earth (goddess) threatened by, 422, 1173–75, 1191; emotions of, 133–34, 1172, 1174 (see also grief of in this entry); enters residence with brothers, 869; EVR's critique of, 97–98; fear of censure of, 134–35, 340, 877, 1165; form of, is as he desires, 180; —essential Vaiṣṇava, 1261–62, 1263; friends of, 18, 333, 857; Gārgya approaches, 1188; —will not lie to, 426, 1189; garments of, 438, 946, 1238, 1276; Garuḍa mounted by, 1276; gives generous donations, 425, 1186; —to Aṅgada and Hanumān, 828; —gifts to Sugrīva and Vibhīṣaṇa, 328; —Hanumān pearl necklace, 329; —instructions about dead brahman boy, 105; —Śatrughna infallible arrow, 365; —townspeople permission to follow him, 1225; gods et al. gather during battle of Rāvaṇa and, 1000–1001; gods grant boons to, for beheading Śambūka, 105, 215, 387; —instruct, to visit Agastya's ashram, 387; —praise, 386; goes to Brahmaloka, 1269; grief of, 334, 422, 433, 857, 1222, 1172–73, 1181; grief of, at abandonment of Sītā, 83, 130, 134–36, 139, 337, 347–48, 865–66, 869, 877, 887, 906–7; —Lakṣmaṇa consoles, 347–48, 907–8; —not concealed, 83; grief of, at banishment of Lakṣmaṇa, 433, 435, 1222–24; —at Bhadra's words, 334, 857; —at death of brahman boy, 382–83, 1014; —not real, 904; —at rākṣasas' deaths, 864; —at Sītā's return to her mother, 10, 155, 216, 422, 424, 1172–75, 1181–82; —weakens, 1172–73; grief of others at separation from, 330, 363, 380–81, 837, 840, 1009; Hanumān and (see under Hanumān); head shaking of, 469; heaven, for all who look upon, 397, 1070; heavenly ascent of (see mahāprasthāna); hell for those who look with enmity on, 397, 1070–71; inflection of voice of, 911; influence on Indian sense of masculinity of, 104; inherent form of, 1261; Jāmbavān, Vibhīṣaṇa, et al. told to remain alive by, 438, 1242–44; Kaikeyī and, 1186; Kāla and (see under Kāla); Kālidāsa on, 87–88; on Kārāpatha conquest, 58, 428; Kausalyā gives amulet to, in Ayodhyākāṇḍa, 971; killing of Indrajit attributed to (see under Indrajit); —of rākṣasas attributed to, 226, 451, 452, 454, 484, 485, 518; —of Suptaghna attributed to, 484; as king, 225, 445; —ideal, 55–57; —merciful, 161; —newly established, 161; —with prosperous kingdom, 424–25; —universal (see as universal ruler in this entry); kings as allies of, 158–59, 327, 822–23; —devoted to, 424, 1185; —gathered for sake of, depart, 327; —give gifts or tribute to, 327–28, 826–27; —honored by, with gifts, 1128–29; —never got to see fight of Rāvaṇa and, 825; —praise, 327; Kumbhakarṇa and (see under Kumbhakarṇa); Kuśa and (see under Kuśa (son of Rāma)); Lakṣmaṇa and (see under Lakṣmaṇa), 433; Laṅkā campaign of, 158, 162; Lava (see under Lava); Lavaṇa and (see under Lavaṇa); leans on wooden staff, 422; leaves bodily form, 177, 1266; liberation for those who tell about, 1071; life span of, complete, 431, 1216; as lokaguru, 1275–76; madness of, 115, 422, 1172, 1174; mace held by, 1276; mahāprasthāna of (see mahāprasthāna); married life of, 131, 331–33, 849–50;

Rāma (Dāśarathi, Rāghava) (cont.)
as maryādāpuruṣottama, 100n63, 892, 957; as master of all astras (divine weapon-spells), 1325; —of military arts, 157; as meat eater, 332, 847; as mind-born, 1216; Māyā as consort of, 439, 1263–64; mental state of, 348, 906–907 (see also grief of in this entry); messengers of, 418, 1154; —sent to Vālmīki and Sītā, 418, 1152–53; ministers of, 132, 139, 348, 383, 439, 1007, 1015, 1324; ministers of, consulted, 434; —about owl and vulture, 1327; —about untimely death of child, 383; —described or named, 1326–27, 1398; —explain yugas to, 383–84; —follow, on mahāprasthāna, 439, 1253–54; —moved by virtues of, 439, 1254; —remain quiet, 434, 1224; —Sumantra as (see Sumantra); —tell about śūdra practicing austerities, 384; —were also Daśaratha's, 1326, 1398; miserableness of, prophesied, 345, 894; monkeys and (see under vānaras); monogamy of, 1183; in Naimiṣa forest, 413, 1128; Nārada and, 105, 383, 1034; as Nārāyaṇa, 173, 518, 603, 991, 1229, 1312, 1317; —kills demons, 518; narrative action not engaged in by, 3–4, 12; —assumption of guilt of, 145; —avoids directly implicating, in transgression, 143; —heard or told by, illustrative of kingship, 56; as narrator; of Agastya and Vasiṣṭha's birth story, 139; —of Ila/Ilā' story, 9, 130–39, 404–11; —of Nimi and Vasiṣṭha's story, 7, 139, 351–56; —of Nṛga's story, 7, 139, 348–51; —of Prakṣipta III, 1318; —of Yayāti's story, 7, 139, 143–44, 356–59; necessity of, to secure succession, 58; noble lineage of, 863; as omniscient, 90, 470, 853, 855, 904, 1082, 1176, 1179, 1265; as one of true vows, 434, 1172, 1224; ordinary people encountered by, 131; omniscience of, in Tulsīdās, 90; owl and vulture's dispute settled by (see under owl); in PadmaP, 94, 124–25, 149, 1187 (see also under Padmapurāṇa); as paramārthavit ("who grasped their essential meaning"), 912, 919; plays no direct role in conquests, 167; poetic fame of, deserved, 423, 1178; praised and waited upon, 815–16; Pratardana embraced by, 326, 821; as purifier of all, 397, 1069–70; as puruṣottama, 100n63, 504, 603, 1241; public opinion sought by, 853–54; purification of, 397, 1068; —to ascend to heaven, 156; —from human transgressions, 155; Puṣpaka and, 6, 105, 330, 385, 836, 838, 840–41, 1399 (see also Puṣpaka); rage of, 876–77 (see also anger of in this entry); —in other kāṇḍas, 1172; —at Sītā's departure to underworld, 422; rājasūya, desires to perform, 162, 168, 398, 1074; —problems with, 1076; Rāmarājya of (see Rāmarājya); Rāmāyaṇa as biography of, 3; Rāvaṇa and (see under Rāvaṇa); reaction of, to genocide of gandharvas, 15–16, 166, 1197; —to rumors, 134; redistributes gifts of kings to monkeys and rākṣasas, 6, 328, 827; refers to city as ashram, 1068; as refuge of all, 90, 163, 339, 440, 819–20, 838–39, 855, 882, 1076, 1053, 1263, 1320; requests that brahman boy be brought back to life, 105; retires to sacrificial hall, 423, 1180; return to heaven of (see mahāprasthāna); as revered by all, 1072; righteousness of, 12, 55, 66, 84, 89, 118, 134, 161, 165, 326, 338, 345, 346, 353, 408, 425, 429, 450, 848, 919, 1201–2, 1304, 1312, 1326; royal lineages established by, 346, 903; sacrifices performed by, aśvamedha (see under aśvamedhas); —agniṣṭoma and atirātra, 424, 1184; —with Bharata and Lakṣmaṇa, 10; —after separation from Sītā, 1183–84; —for thousands of years, 424, 1187; sage recites verses concerning, 999–1000; sages assembled by, 423, 1181; —at court of, 225; sages' fear banished by, 361; —praise of, 225–26; sages questioned by, about praise, 226, 457; sages' requests granted by, 360, 940–41; sages seek protection of, from Lavaṇa, 145–46, 360–63; sages' warm feelings toward, 939; as savior, able to save gods, 1037–38; Sāketa of, (see Sāketa); Śambūka and (see under Śambūka); Santāna of (see under Santānas); Śatrughna and (see under Śatrughna); seers hear Rāmāyaṇa in presence of, 1135; —praise, 941; —summoned by, 1179–80; sexuality or sexual desire of, 133, 855; Shah on, 1033, 1172; singers invited to royal dwelling by, in Bālakāṇḍa, 1139; Sītā and (see under Sītā); smile of, 1091; —reason for, 432, 822, 1217; sons as reflections of, 416, 1145; sons of (see Kuśa; Lava); sorrow of, 1013, 1014 (see also grief of in this entry); as source of happiness, 880; speech of, distinguished, 1240; suffering of, 344, 891, 906–7 (see also grief of in this entry); śūdra and (see Śambūka); Sugrīva and Vibhīṣaṇa take leave of, 330; Sugrīva embraced by, 836; —resolves to follow, 1241; Sugrīva's alliance with, in Kiṣkindhākāṇḍa, 773; as Supreme Being, 603, 1069, 1201, 1213–14, 1218, 1266; Śūrpaṇakhā confronts, 672; territorial expansion of, 5, 10, 160, 161n12, 165, 167; transgressions of, 136, 138, 148, 155–56; as trustworthy, 1076; as universal ruler, 58, 66, 160n6, 161, 162, 165, 167, 168, 823, 894, 1076, 1251 (see also as cakravartin in this entry); in UttaRāC (see Uttararāmacarita); in Uttarakāṇḍa (see Uttarakāṇḍa); as Vāsudeva, 161, 176, 991, 1213–14, 1229; —in Pāñcarātra tradition, 176, 991, 1229, 1380; Vasiṣṭha consoles, 898; vedic funeral for Rāvaṇa ordered by, 15; Vibhīṣaṇa and (see under Vibhīṣaṇa); as viditātmā ("celebrated"), 816, 1062; violation of precedence by, 948; virtues of, innumerable, 1178; as Viṣṇu, 3, 11, 12, 13, 75, 169–86, 211, 216, 220, 422, 431–32, 440–41, 607–9, 705, 744, 813, 553, 899–903, 991, 1016, 1069–70, 1168–69, 1176–77, 1206–7, 1213–14, 1216–19, 1228–29, 1251, 1259–63, 1265–67, 1270, 1275–76, 1284, 1312; Viṣṇu born or incarnates as, 58–59; —because of curse of Bhṛgu, 94, 853, 899–902, 1169; —through own volition, 1218; Viṣṇu hints at incarnation as, 705; —takes on form of, 431, 1213–14; Viṣṇu's blazing energy entered into by, 180, 440, 439, 440, 1265–66; Viṣṇu's other avatāras compared to, 13; vow of, to ascetic, 433–34, 1224; as vyūha Vāsudeva, 176–77, 991, 1229; warfare avoided by, after Laṅkā, 165; weapons of, take on human form, 438, 1250; white umbrella of, 1246; world regarded as empty by, 424; Yayāti provides moral for story of, 144; Yuddhakāṇḍa marks culmination of heroic deeds of, 66; Yudhājit and, 166, 425–26, 1189; Yudhiṣṭhira compared to, 71–72; yuga of, 1016

Rāmabhakti, 70

Rāma Jāmadagnya (Bhārgava Rāma; Paraśurāma): Arjuna Kārtavīrya slain by, 756; in Bālakāṇḍa, 721, 1016; as cirajīvin, 23, 537, 749, 804; Viṣṇu born as, 1016

Rāmakathā: consecration as narrative end of, 17, 92–93, 125n60; controversial episodes omitted in, 74; distribution of Daśaratha's pāyasa in, 169–70; mutability and adaptability of, 64n38; Rāma's sacrificial horse in, 164; Śambūka and Sītā in, 14n8, 83, 86, 89, 91; Uttarakāṇḍa omitted in, 65, 68, 72, 82; vernacular and Vaiṣṇava versions of, 185–86

Rāmānandi tradition, 93

Rāmarājya: Bālakāṇḍa's description of, 66–67, 1215; disputed by commentators, 3–4, 56n7; duration of, 3–4, 10, 12, 13, 14n7, 56, 59, 66–67, 160, 172, 220–21, 346, 424, 429, 431, 849–50, 902, 1183–85, 1187, 1199, 1215, 1251–52; —ideal conditions under, 3, 6, 13, 65, 104–5, 124, 130, 220–21, 331, 424, 841–43, 908, 1185; implications of, for Rāma's actions, 3–4, 12; in Indian political imagination, 55–56; transgressions during, 145; varṇāśrama system in, 106; Yuddhakāṇḍa's description of, 160, 221

Ramasami Naicker, E. V. (EVR; Periyar), 97–98, 110–11

Ramaswamy Chowdary, Tripuraneni, 111–12

Rāmāvatāra. See Rāma subentries under avatāras

Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, 3, 36; as ādikāvya, "first poem," 60, 61n32, 64n38, 78; Anañga in, 1058; benefits of hearing, 1276, 1282–83; —absorption into body of Viṣṇu, 1282; —freedom from sins, 1277; —long life and prosperity, 1277–78; benefits of reading, rejoicing in heaven, 1277–78; biological reproduction in, 43–44; Brahmā inspires, 1178, 1277, 1281–82; —worships, 183, 441, 1281; Brockington on tag verses in, 468; closing lines of, 1275; commentaries and commentators on, 218–21; —on recitation of, 999; crit. ed. of, 11, 63, 72, 102, 199–218; critical reception of, 62; date of, 63; duration of, 23, 1242; as earliest textual source of Rāma story, 68; etymology of name of, 1277; extent of, 417, 1147–50, 1281; final sargas of, 10–12; as first poem, 78–79; as Gāyatrīmantra's essence, 1282–83; —expansion, 187–98, 838, 1251, 1282; Hanumān's lifespan linked to, 23; kenning nīlakaṇṭha in, 488; Kosalan rulers as cakravartins in, 160; Kṛṣṇa alluded to in, 911; Lava and Kuśa sing, in Rāma's sacrificial assembly, 9–10, 115, 414–17, 999, 1136–46; —in Vālmīki's ashram, 379; —per Vālmīki's instructions, 415, 999; length of, 67–68; —of recitation of, 999, 1151; misogyny in, 53; monkeys of, 777; as most excellent of poems, 1281; as musical composition, 379, 1005; as narrative, of future events, 423, 1179, 1280–81; —focused on central hero, 3; Parameswaran on, 77n14; parental surrogacy in, 43; rākṣasas' complex portrayal in, 37; sahagamana in, 602; as Sanskrit composition, 1003; satī, "virtuous wife," in, 879; Śatrughna

Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki (cont.)
hears singing of, 379, 998, 1001–5; sea creatures in, 503; sexual transgression as theme in, 53, 133–34; Sītā as heroine of, 16; social and political critiques of, 82–113; story of, among greatest ever told, 63–64; svadharma in, 239, 494 (see also svadharma); as syncretic work, 75–81; synonyms in, 591; terrifying female figures in, 52; translations of, 221–22; tryambaka in, 955; two overlapping narratives of, 3; umeśa in, 1093; Uttarakāṇḍa as distasteful part of, 74–75; —as genuine part of, 66, 69–75, 93, 102–3; —has role in annular structure of, 118–19; —as integral part of, 17, 116–56; —as integral part of manuscript tradition of, 74; —as necessary for narrative structure of, 74–75; —as not an original part of, 65–73, 115–16; —references beyond, 68–69; —without, imagined, 54–63; Vaiṣṇava saṃpradāyas and, 178; Vālmīki's ashram's location in, 866; as vedas' equal, 1277–78; war of, compared to those in other epics, 157–65; yātudhāna in, 936; Yuddhakāṇḍa as longest book of, 157; yuga of, not identified, 1016; —Tretā as, 1016, 1042–43
Rāmāyaṇaśiromaṇi. See Śivasahāya
Rambhā: attempts to reason with Rāvaṇa, 291–92, 693–95; disheveled appearance of, 292, 697; as foremost of apsarases, 290; Nalakūbara's assignation with, 291, 690, 693; Rāvaṇa desires, 290–91, 691–92; —rapes, 33n109, 154, 292, 695–97, 740, 1060; story of, 33–34, 290–93; truth act of, 291, 694. See also Nalakūbara
Rāmcaritmānas of Tulsīdās, 65, 70, 90
Rāmlīlā, 97
Rāmopākhyāna of Mahābhārata: Jacobi on dating of, 115n11; Kubera's curse in, 584; rākṣasas' lineage in, 119; Rāma's aśvamedha not known to, 121; "Rāvaṇa" etymology in, 596; relative chronology and, 93; as source of Rāmāyaṇa, 68n12; Uttarakāṇḍa omitted in, 71–72; Uttarakāṇḍa's mention of agniparīkṣā influenced by, 864; —relationship to, 70–71n17, 93
Ranganayakamma, Muppala, 98–99, 111–13 rape: of Ahalyā, 33n109, 154, 304, 695, 740, 1060; —Ahalyā culpable for, 304–5, 742–43, 1064; —Indra culpable for, 304, 741–42; of Arajā by Daṇḍa, 9, 33n109, 152, 393–95, 695, 740, 1057, 1060–62, 1064; —compared to other rapes, 154; —graphic, 154; "brought to womanhood" as euphemism for, 604–5; √dhṛṣ as verbal root for, 698, 740; explicit descriptions of, in Uttarakāṇḍa, 33n109, 139n116, 154, 695; Indra as cause of, in myth of origin of, 741; by Rāvaṇa, 6, 31–34, 53–54; —compared to those by Indra and Daṇḍa, 154; —of daughters of kings, seers, et al., 32, 570; —of other men's wives, 284; —Nalakūbara's curse prevents additional, 34; —of Rambhā, 33–34, 154, 290–92, 694–96, 740, 864, 1060; —of Vedavatī, 31, 604–5; seizing hair as symbolic, 31, 604. See also sexual aggression; sexual intercourse rasas, 40, 60–63, 89n31
Rasātala, 467; rākṣasas retreat to, 230, 252, 517–18, 519–21; Rāvaṇa conquers cities of, 280–81; —proceeds to, 274, 628, 653, 1331, 1362; Śatrughna's arrow enters, 376; Sītā enters, after oath, 421, 1170; Sumālin abandons for Laṅkā, 246, 252, 540; Viṣṇu vows to follow rākṣasas to, 245, 516. See also Pātāla
Rasik Sādhus, 185
Rāṣṭravardhana, 1326, 1398
rats, 242, 497, 507
Raudreya, 225, 447
Rāvaṇa (Daśagrīva); abductions of, compared by kāṇḍa, 665; abducts chāyāsītā, 1246; —simulacrum of Sītā, 90–91; —Sītā, 133, 334, 336; —Sītā to court death at Rāma's hands, 1317; —womenfolk of kings et al., 284–85, 665–70; Agastya tells Rāma lineage and history of, 5, 30, 42, 50, 227–318, 457, 546; —presents as minor challenge, 225; Agni as witness for, 281, 314; alliances of, 30, 281, 655–56; —with Vālin, 30–31, 782; Anaraṇya curses, 28, 31, 273; —fights and is killed by, 28, 272–73; —prophesies that an Ikṣvāku king will kill, 273; Antoine on, 78, 115–16; on apsarases not having husbands, 696; appearance of, 26, 247–48, 525; —changes at will, 582; argues for deference to elders, 27, 253, 566; Arjuna Kārtavīrya and, 28–30, 305–15, 748; asceticism of, 6, 53, 249–50, 530; —Brahmā gratified by, 532; on austerities vs. offerings for gods, 679; in Ayodhyā, 272; Bali relates Viṣṇu's greatness to, 1287–89; bathes in Narmadā, 307; Bharata's preparations against, 159–60; birth of, 6, 25–26, 247–48; —to brahmarṣi father and rākṣasī mother, 26, 46; —evil omens attending, 26, 248; boons of, from Brahmā, 54, 173, 250–51, 532, 625, 650–51; —Pollock on, 532; —protect from Arjuna

Kārtavīrya, 767; —qualified, 536, 532; —Yama mindful of, 645; Brahmā asks, for Indra's release, 302; —congratulates, 302; —gives Śaiva mantra to, 1297–99; as brahman, 126–27; as brahmanical and rākṣasa, 123, 126–28; cannot lift Bali's circlet or earrings, 1336–37; —Mt. Kailāsa, 28, 265; celebrated in Rāvaṇalīlā, 97; challenges, 269; characterization of, 24–35; —complex in Vālmīki, 24; —determinative factors of, 25; —by kāṇḍa, 24, 32; conquers dānavas, 27; —Kubera, 27, —kings, 271; —second world, 664; —serpents and gandharvas, 624, 654 —Varuṇa's sons, 32, 282–83; —worlds of god and men, 54; counselors of, flee battle, 768; cursed by abducted women, 32, 284–85, 670; —by Anaraṇya, 28, 31, 273; —to die on account of a woman, 284; —by father, 25–27, 51, 247; —by Nalakūbara, 34, 293, 699; —by Nandi, 28, 265, 590, 591; —by Vedavatī, 268, 598, 606; curses drain, of energy and luster, 32, 285; as daitya, 717; dances, 29, 308; Daśagrīva as birth name of, 26; death of, accomplishes work of gods, 1317; —attributed to allies, 158, 326; —attributed to Rāma (see Rāma kills in this entry); —as central mission of Rāmāvatāra, 220; —completes Rāma's actions as human, 1175; —as form of religious suicide, 1375; —great effort required for, 379; —impossible for anyone but Viṣṇu, 220; —as minor task for Rāma, 225–26, 450; —as object of popular talk, 18; —as object of Viṣṇu's incarnation, 3, 58–59, 66, 450; decorum of, lacking because of father's curse, 578; depression of, 774; desire for sexual intercourse lost by, 34, 293; as devotee of Śiva, 1351; does not understand actions as sinful, 579–80; downfall of, due to lust for married woman, 3, 32; eats seers at Marutta's sacrifice, 270; elements moderate force for fear of, 752; encounters Bali in Aśmanagara, 1285–89; —Viṣṇu on an island, 1299–301; epithets of, —Kubera uses anachronistically, 575; —Paulastya, 41, 126, 450; —Rāvaṇa, 26, 266, 546, 595–96, 598; —Rāvaṇa, Mayrhofer on, 596; evil ways of, 23; EVR (E.V. Ramasami Naicker) on, 97; extremely long lived, 619; as father of Meghanāda (Indrajit), 257; funeral of, 123; genealogy of, 24, 38; —Kubera's precedes, 42; —in MBh's Ramopākhyāna, 71, 126–27; —in PadmaP, 124n53; —Thapar and Shukla on, 47; —in Uttarakāṇḍa, 42; gods batter with weapons, 310; —harassed by, 258; —take animal forms in fear of, 269; —turn their backs on, 579–80; Goldman and Masson on, 55; Hanumān compared to, 784; —converses with, 318, 785; —does feats for the destruction of, 324; —as mightier than, 318; heavenly gardens destroyed by, 258, 555; hell's denizens freed by, 276; as Hiraṇyakaśipu in previous birth, 1381; history of, as independent text for Jacobi, 115, 128; —in Uttarakāṇḍa, 6, 219; humiliation of, 27; —by Arjuna Kārtavīrya, 28–30; —by Śiva, 28; —by Vālin, 30–31; as imbecile, 579; immortality desired by, 532, 536; Indra checks, 300; —does sandhyā worship for destruction of, 780; —fears, 701; —fights with, 298–99; —nearly defeats, 729; Indrajit rebuked by, 287, 679; —surpasses, 41, 226, 456; —urges to desist from battle, 728; Indra's weapons useless against, 723; —world assaulted by, 293–302; Kālakeyas and Śūrpaṇakhā's husband killed by, 285; killings by, of brother and messenger threatened, 565; —of Kubera's messenger, 260; —of men, 315; killings by, of menfolk of abducted women, 32; —per rules for rākṣasa form of marriage, 32n106; in Kiṣkindhā to challenge Vālin, 315; —for a month, 318; kshatriyas oppressed by, 266; Kubera curses, 584, 588; —defeated by, 260–64; —envied by, 26, 248–49; —rebukes for evil behavior, 258–59, 263, 559–62; —rebukes to protect him, 562; Kumbhīnasī begs, 289; Lakṣmī born for destruction of, 601; —desired by, 1302; Laṅkā seized by, 6, 260–64; laughter of, 599; Lavaṇa as more powerful than, according to Ck, Cg, Ct, 954–55, 1000; —denied by Cs, 955; Lavaṇa had ignored destruction of the race of, 373, 983; lecherous nature of, 31, 36; less fearsome aspect of, 565; life span of, 597; like a defiling dog, 611; as lord of Laṅkā, 255; Madhu and, 289, 684, 687; Māndhātṛ's fight with, 1292–95; —stopped by Pulastya and Gālava, 1295; Māndhātṛ's friendship with, 1295; in Māhiṣmatī, 306; as man-eater, 34–35; marriage of, 127; —to Mandodarī, daughter of Maya, 255–56, 554; Marutta rebukes and mocks, 269, 612–13; Maya and, 554; moon injured by, 1296; Nandi blocked from killing, 591; —calls, a thief, 590; —confronts and prophesies about, 265; —curses, 28, 265, 590, 591; —Nandi's and Anaraṇya's curses enable Rāma's killing of, 28; Nandi's face mocked

Rāvaṇa (Daśagrīva) (cont.)
by, 265; Nārada chides for killing mere mortals, 273; —directs to Śvetadvīpa to seek worthy foes, 1214; Narmadā equated with Gaṅgā by, 752; Nivātakavacas fight, to a draw, 281; ocean churned by, 628; in PadmaP, 124; on paths of winds, 1289–96; —to Yama's world, 274, 628; polymelia of, 26, 28–29, 247–50, 526–27, 565, 593, 676; power of illusion used by, 582; —of invisibility of, 582–83; powers acquired from Nivātakavacas according to Ck, Ct, 656–57; —from regular teaching according to Cs, 656–57; Prahasta sent to demand Laṅkā by, 253–54; —urges to take up royal duties, 548; pre-Rāmāyaṇa career of, 6, 24–35, 247–318; Pulastya begs Arjuna Kārtavīrya for release of, 313–14; —for compassion for, 770; Puṣpaka delighted at killing of, 330; —seized by, 264; in Puṣpaka, stalls on Kailāsa, 264; rākṣasa ancestry of, only one eighth, 51–52; —clan of, scholars on, 38–39; as rākṣasa rather than asura, 126; rākṣasas of prior generation compared to, 231, 246, 518; Rāma asks Agastya about opposing, 305; —attributes killing of to Janaka's blazing energy, 819; —does not know or requests history of, 40–42, 226; —haunted by revelations about, 146; —kills, 133, 334, 983; —and Lakṣmaṇa kill, 945; Rāma's allies want to fight, 159, 327; Rāma's battle with, 644; —no earthly brahmans view, 986–87; Rāma's sense of guilt for killing of, in MBh and PadmaP, 124–25; —in Uttarakāṇḍa, 145, 148; Rāma told of his divinity after killing, 173; —said by, to have been beheaded by Prahasta, 484; —willing to pardon, 15; —wins Puṣpaka after killing, 330; —withholds divine arrow from killing of, 365; Rambhā's filiation with, 695, 290–92; rapes by or encounters of, 33–34, 154, 290–92, 695–97, 740, 1060; resolves to fight with Viṣṇu, 1316; roar of, 28, 266; sages' disinterest in, 41; sāmans chanted by, 755; Sanatkumāra tells, about Viṣṇu, 1310–11; —worshiped by, 1381; Sarasvatī vows to destroy, 608; Śatrughna's killing of Lavaṇa compared to that of, 374, 954–55; serpents subjugated by, 280; sexual assaults of, 32, 570 (see also rape); shameless, according to Cr, 774; sibling rivalry of, 26–27, 53; —provoked by his mother, 53, 248; sings, 29, 308, 755; as Śiśupāla, 1381; Sītā thrown into sea by, 606–7; Sītā's chastity preserved by, 1383; Śiva begged for boon by, 596–98; —confers epithet "Rāvaṇa" on, 266, 595–96, 598; —crushes arms with toe, 265–66; —grants leave to, 266; —grants remainder of life span, 596–97; —liṅga worshiped by, 308, 755; —not feared by, 596; —propitiated by, 594; sons and brothers of, 451; spies splendid beings in cave, 1301–2; Sumālin incites to aggression against Kubera, 252–53; —offers lordship of Laṅkā to, 253; as Sundarakāṇḍa's central figure, 3; Surabhi venerated by, 281; Śūrpaṇakhā ignored by, 673; —widowed by, 27, 285, 550 —sent to Daṇḍaka forest by, 285–86; Śūrpaṇakhā's marriage arranged by, 45, 255; Śvetadvīpa women seize and toss about, 1316–17; takes on form at will (kāmarūpin), 526–27, 534, 582, 674; told about Rāma, 1312–13; two "deaths" of, 608–9; Vālin captures and carries, in his armpit, 316–17; —gouged with nails by, 316; —like brother to, 317–18; —praised by, 317; Vālin's ministers doubt ability of, 776–77; Vālmīki curses Rāma for separating Mandodarī and, 901; Vedavatī assaulted by, 16, 266–69; —reborn as Sītā to destroy, 268–69, 606; Vibhīṣaṇa rebukes, 287; vicious nature of, 26, 36, 53; victory declared by, 271, 613; Vidyujjihva and, 27, 657–58, 671; violence in career of, 27; Viṣṇu accepts Bhṛgu's curse in order to destroy, 901; —appears in cosmic form to, 1303–4; —declines Indra's request to kill, 294; —desires to kill, 431; —tells that his death will be deferred, 1303; vows to conquer heaven and Indra, 288; —three worlds, 260; vows to kill gods, 299; —Kubera and other world guardians, 260, 274, 566; —Madhu, 288; weapons of, Candrahāsa sword, 596–98; —lance, 256, 555; —mace, 583; —pāśupatāstra, 639, 1294–95; —various, 637–38; —vāruṇāstra, 582; withdraws from battle, 301; women's defeat of, 1379–80; Yama and, 234–75; —humiliated by, 652; Yama's battle with, 277–79; —Brahmā stops, 279–80; Yama's warriors defeated by, 276; in Yama's world, sees torments, etc., 633; in Yuddhakāṇḍa, claims to behead Rāma, 484
Rāvaṇalīlā, 97
Rāvaṇavadha, 69–70
Rāvaṇi. See Indrajit
Râvaṇeïs, 6, 24, 115, 128
Ravi. See Sūrya

rebirth: of male parrot as washerman, 95; of Nimi and Vasiṣṭha, 141; Rāma's divine power frees people from, 1255; of Rāvaṇa, 1381; of sun, daily, 801; of Vedavatī, 16–17, 31, 609. See also births
red eyes. See under eyes
Ṛgveda: Bala and Vṛtra killed by Indra in, 790; Cs quotes, 786; Gaya as name in, 619; Gāyatrīmantra in, 187, 193, 1373; hotṛ invokes verses from, 917; Kavaśa as name in, 447; man (Nārāyaṇa) seen by Rāvaṇa compared to, 1300–1301, 1357, 1359–60; Mārtāṇḍa as epithet in, 801; Mitra in, 920; Puruṣasūkta in, 1019; Sāma, Yajur, and, 480; Urvaśī and Purūravas in, 923 rhetorical figures. See poetic figures Richman, Paula, 97–98, 110–11 rings, 1032, 1360; of kuśa grass, 1248; vedi as signet, 667 ring structure. See annular structure rivers. See Ganges; Godāvarī River; Gomatī River; Indus River; Jāhnavī River, Jambū River; Mandākinī River; Narmadā River; Pañcanada; Sarayū River; Sindhu River; Tamasā River; Vaitaraṇī River; Yamunā River Ṛkṣarajas: Agastya narrates story of, 1305–9, 1366; Brahmā establishes as king, 1308, 1371; —names sons of, 1308; as king of monkeys, 325, 808; regains simian form, 1307; as Vālin and Sugrīva's parent, 1309; as woman, 1306; —gives birth to two sons, 1307, 1369
ṛkṣas. See apes; bears rod: of brahmans, 803 (see also staff: of brahmans); of Kāla, 261, 277, 279, 280, 295, 632, 641, 648–51, 710; of punishment, daṇḍa as, 151, 392–93, 1053–54, 1065, 1392; of Yama, 141, 275, 280, 324, 350, 352, 397, 802, 1170–71, 1241 (see also staff: of Yama) Rohiṇī (daughter of Surabhi), 658
Rohiṇī (mother of Balarāma), 170, 172
Rohiṇī (nakṣatra), 525
Roussel, Alfred: Benoît follows, 462, 497, 499, 536, 578, 623, 673, 675, 692, 736, 742, 796, 811, 816–17, 897, 938, 940–41, 943, 954, 973, 984, 990, 1003, 1019, 1068, 1079–80, 1096, 1099, 1112, 1147, 1154, 1156, 1161, 1186, 1198, 1238, 1258; Gorresio influences (see under Gorresio, Gaspare); Shastri follows, 462, 464, 477, 497–99, 537, 542, 553, 568, 578–79, 592, 608, 623, 628, 636, 640, 652, 660, 673, 675, 690, 692, 694, 700, 716, 736, 742, 756, 796, 811, 816–17, 862, 893, 897, 938, 940–41, 943, 954, 962, 972–73, 954, 984, 990, 997, 999, 1003, 1019, 1061, 1068, 1079–80, 1087, 1096, 1099, 1112, 1142, 1147, 1154, 1156, 1161, 1186, 1191, 1193, 1198, 1210, 1217, 1223, 1226, 1238, 1249, 1258, 1365, 1382
ṛṣṭi. See broadswords
Ṛṣyaśṛṅga, 43n38, 92, 92n36
Rudra. See astra: of Rudra; Śiva
Rudras, 293, 297–98, 420, 700–701, 705, 707, 718, 1301, 1304, 1363; Sāvitra as listed among, 707 rumors (gossip, scandal): by city and country people, 134, 336, 862; Cr on, 95–96, 863, 1164–65; Cs on, 853, 1165; hells for those featured in, 134, 334, 865; Kālidāsa on, 87; Lakṣmaṇa complains about cruelty of, 345; —tells Sītā about, 340; Rāma fearful of, 86, 134, 340, 348, 419–20, 865, 876–77, 882–83, 906–7, 1159, 1162; —for neglecting duties, 156; —about Rāma, for abandoning Sītā, 83, 134, 892;—about sex with pregnant Sītā, 95–96, 1164–65; —for taking Sītā back, 94, 134, 344; Rāma presses Bhadra about, 131–32, 333–34; Rāma's reaction to, 14, 57, 134; —sexuality makes him vulnerable to, 95–96, 131; about Sītā, 7, 13, 52, 82, 86–87, 95, 134–35, 137, 156, 340, 348, 419–20, 862, 876–77, 906–7, 1153, 1159–60, 1162, 1164–65, 1167, 1171–72; —Bhadra tells Rāma of, 7, 18, 333–34; —Rāma devastated by, 134, 334; —Rāma tells brothers of, 336–37, 862–63; —not cause of abandonment, according to Ct, 901
rūpaka. See under poetic figures

Śabarī, 15n12
Sabhāparvan: word bhāṣitam in, 78n18; Yudhiṣṭhira's rājasūya in, 160, 677, 1077
Śacī, 47, 297, 332, 551, 712, 715, 847; Indra as lord of, 321, 705; as Paulomī, 232, 255, 297, 475, 551, 712, 715 sacred fires, 314, 349, 429, 909, 1200, 1304; Hanumān scatters, 324, 805; names of, 469; three (tretāgni), 22, 1200; —Sukeśa's sons compared to, 49, 234, 237, 240, 480, 489, 499, 523. See also sacrificial fires sacrifices: agnihotra, fire and vessel of, 438–39, 1246; —surrogate wife in, 1124; —in Tretā Yuga, 1020; —of Viśravas, 25, 51, 247, 523; agniṣṭoma, of Indrajit, 286–87, 677; —of Rāma, 424; atirātra, of Rāma, 424, 1184;

sacrifices (cont.)
bahusuvarṇaka, of Indrajit, 286–87, 677; brahmamedha, 1245–46, 1265; gomedha, of Indrajit, 286–87, 677; gosava, of Rāma, 424, 1184; māheśvara, of Indrajit, 286–87, 677; naramedha, of Yudhiṣṭhira in MBh, 120; Rāma, Bharata, and Lakṣmaṇa perform, 10; —discuss, 16; rājasūya, Bharata dissuades Rāma from performing, 9, 16, 163, 168, 398–99, 677, 1077–78; —divine status attained by, 1075; —of Indrajit, 286–87, 677; —of Yudhiṣṭhira in MBh, 160–62, 168, 1077; sarvamedha, in MBh, 120; vaiṣṇava, of Indrajit, 286–87, 677; —of Indra, 305, 745; vājapeya, of Rāma, 424, 1184, 1246; —umbrella of, 438, 1246 sacrificial fires, 272, 621, 1114, 1200; Agastya compared to, 231, 469; Viṣṇu's tejas takes form of, 1265; Viśravas compared to, 247, 522–23. See also sacred fires sacrificial implements, 145n140, 388, 806, 964 sacrificial ladles, 324, 805 sādhyas, 180, 293, 297, 420, 440, 1304; identification of, 700–701; perform sacrifices, 1010
Sagar, Ramanand, 65, 100–101
Sagara (king): sons of, 491
Sāgara (ocean divinity), 171, 494 sages (munis): Agastya, 5, 9, 12, 44, 75, 105, 108, 124, 149–51, 220, 227, 231–32, 318–19, 387–97, 446, 456, 470, 530, 764, 783, 787, 925, 1035–72, 1309, 1313, 1372, 1376; —as bull among, 1052; —as foremost of, 397, 456, 1072, 1304, 1309; —leads those who come to Rāma's court, 41, 148, 225; Aṇimāṇḍavya, 912; Ariṣṭanemin, 410; Atri, 141; Bharadvāja, 44, 52; Bharata, 1139; Bhṛgu, 94, 853, 900–901, 1169; Brahmā approached by, in fear of Śatrughna's arrow, 375; Bṛhadaśva, 71; Budha, 407–10, 1099–12; —as bull among, 407; —performs Ila's aśvamedha, 137; cursing of kings by, 142; Cyavana, 8, 360, 446, 977, 1138; depart Ayodhyā, 130; desire to hear Uttarakāṇḍa, 423; Devavarṇinī as daughter of, 52; Dhaumya, 447; diet of, 659; Dīrghatamas, 1156; diversion of, 458; Durvāsas, 7, 11, 94, 345–46, 410, 898, 903–4, 1111, 1220–21; —as foremost among, 433, 1221; Gautama, 304, 614, 737–44; Hanumān cursed by, 324–25, 787, 807; —harasses when young, 324–25, 805–7; —immune to chastisement from, 803; Ilūṣa, 447; Jamadagni, 756; Kālagautama, 1329, 1401–2; Kāla in guise of, 429–30, 1203–5; Kāñcana (Cyavana), 1237; Kapila, 491, 1304; Kaśyapa, 50; Kauśika, 445; Kubera as, 229, 463–65; Kuśadhvaja, 31, 267, 601; — Vedavatī as daughter of, 31, 267, 601; Lakṣmaṇa says Sītā going to visit, 338, 870; Lava and Kuśa as, 416–17, 1145, 1147; Mārkaṇḍeya, 71, 511; meditate on Viṣṇu, 1380; Namucu, 492; Nara as primordial, 1364; Nārada, 8, 274, 280, 624, 627–29; —as foremost among, 273, 624; Narmadā's waters frequented by, 752; Nimi asks, to sacrifice for him, 141; Parvata, 1291–92; —as foremost of, 1291, 1341; pot-born, 44n39, 142, 148n149, 213, 355, 456; —Agastya as, 44, 142, 213, 227, 355, 387, 388, 392, 393, 396, 397; praise lavishness of Rāma's aśvamedha, 1131; —Rāma for killing rākṣasas, 41; Pramodana, 1111–12; Pulastya and Gālava as tigers among, 1295; Pulastya, 30, 43, 227–29, 458–59, 770–72; —as bull among, 227, 461, 773; —as foremost of, 314, 773; Raibhya, 446; as rākṣasas' prey, 55; Rāma goes to sacrificial enclosure with, 417; —assembles, to hear Uttarakāṇḍa, 423, 1181; —counseled by, about dog, 1323; —dismisses, 1155; —departs world in company of immortal, 437, 1237; —as guru of triple world for liberation-seeking, 1289; —promises to kill Lavaṇa for, 363; —salutes Agastya, 397; at Rāma's consecration, 225, 445–50; Rāma's mission to save vedic, 8; Rāma summons to witness Sītā's oath, 1171, 418; —urged to kill intruder out of respect for, 430; as Rāmāyaṇa auditors, 417, 1002; —as first auditors, 118n27; Rāmāyaṇa performance delights, 1004; Raudreya, 225, 447; Rāvaṇa in guise of, 534; —as son of, 26; —preys upon, 165; Ṛcīka, 1127; Śambūka referred to as, in UttaRāC, 108–9; Saṃvarta, 610; Sanatkumāra, 1309–13, 1375, 1379–82; Śatrughna does not wish to disrupt, 998; —sees Rāma in company of, 437; —stays with, on banks of Yamunā, 371, 977; —takes leave of, 380; sight of, purifies all, 878; Sītā's entrance into the earth amazes, 421; —gifts to the wives of, 338; —oath witnessed by, 419; —wish to visit, on banks of Ganges, 7, 96, 333, 851, 871–72; —worries about explaining abandonment to, 341, 880; sons of, find Sītā, 342, 886; —report to Śatrughna on Sītā's childbirth, 370, 975–76; —report to Vālmīki on finding Sītā, 342, 886; Sumukha and Vimukha, 447; Svastyātreya as name of,

446; Tṛṇabindu, 42, 228, 458; Tvaṣṭṛ, 1085; Uśanas Kāvya, 7, 99, 144, 153, 394, 477, 676–78, 1056–64, 1138; —as foremost of, 357; Vālmīki, 7, 9–10, 20, 86, 94, 96, 100, 138, 341–43, 370–71, 378–80, 417–18, 888, 963, 971–76, 998–1007, 1138, 1147–62; —as bull among, 343, 368, 379–80, 414, 417–19, 1132, 1147, 1150, 1154; —as foremost of, 343, 367, 419, 1157; —honored by, 1134; Vāmadeva, 1208; Vasiṣṭha, 7, 92, 142, 353, 355, 448, 919, 927, 930, 966; —as one of primal, 920; —pot-born, 142, 148n149, 213, 355, 456, 920, 926; Viṣṇu as, 1298; —installed in temples by, 1380; under Viṣṇu's power, 1288, 1337; Viśravas, 25, 228–29, 247, 254, 461–62, 522–25, 546, 553; —as bull among, 126, 229–30, 254, 341, 380, 414, 461, 525; —as foremost of, 247, 522; Viśvāmitra, 445; Vṛtra as son of, 1085; wives of, at Vālmīki's ashram, 890; Yamunā-area, 360, 939–40; —delegation from, to Rāma, 8, 145–46, 165, 360–61; —led by Cyavana, 360, 977

Śailūṣa (king), 256, 1189; sons of, 425

Śaivala, Mount, 152–53, 393, 396, 1056, 1065; Rāma finds Śambūka on slope of, 385, 1030

Śaivite theology. See theology, Śaivite

Sāketa: Cr on, Agastya wishing to attain, 1038; —assembly's awareness of Rāma's and Sītā's plan to depart for, 1172; —Brahmaloka as, 903; —forest as pleasure grove in, 435, 1230; —"great highway" from Ayodhyā as path to, 438; —as heavenly abode of Ikṣvākus, 1185, 1263; —Lakṣmaṇa's concentration on, 1227; —Lakṣmaṇa's home (svagṛha) referring to both Ayodhyā and, 1226; —as place of Rāma's origin, 1218, 1222; —Rāma and Sītā not departing for, 1176–77; —Rāma causing gods to attain, 1038; —Rāma departing for, 437, 1249, 1278; —Rāma ruling eternally in, 903; —Rāma sending Sītā to, 1175; —Santāna worlds being in or near, 185, 1271; —śapatha (oath) as path to, 1153–56, 1164–66; —Sītā going to, 96; —Sītā wanting earthly (Ayodhyā), 1152–53; —Sītā's entering earth as her departure for, 1167–68; —svarga (heaven) referring to, 1177, 1186, 1217, 1236, 1275–76; —vaiṣṇavī tanu referring to, 179, 1262; —Vasiṣṭha foreseeing Rāma's departure for, 1225; —world of gods as, 1274; Cr's unusual theology regarding, 1266; as heavenly world of Rāma and Sītā, 96; as Rāmaite parallel to Kṛṣṇa's Goloka, 185

Śakra. See Indra

Śākta element, 93

śakti. See javelins

Śakti (sage), 419

Sālakaṭaṅkaṭā: commentators on, as rākṣasī, 475; counter-normative behavior of, 45–46, 51; etymology of name of, 46n51, 475; as matriarch of rākṣasa lineage, 46, 246, 518; Sukeśa abandoned by, 48, 233, 476; Sukeśa's mother, 45; Sandhyā gives in marriage to Vidyutkeśa, 49

śalya. See darts

Samāgadha (courtier of Rāma), 132n94, 333, 852

sāmanta, 160, 165, 167, 823

samastarūpaka. See under poetic figures

Śambara (asura), 646; Indra burns up, 294, 702; Mṛtyu slays, 278

Śambhu (daitya king), 596, 602; kills Vedavatī's father, 267, 646; Mṛtyu slays, 278

Śambūka: asceticism practiced by, 385–86; —threatens kingdom, 148; beheaded, 105; gods inform Agastya of Rāma's mission to kill, 1036; heaven in earthly body as aim of, 386, 1032, 1227; Rāma asks about his class, 386, 1030–31; Rāma's killing of, 9, 15, 104–13, 145, 147, 162, 386, 1227; —Agastya praises, 388; —Aklujkar on, 109; —in Ānandarāmāyaṇa, 109–10; —Bhat on, 108–9; —Bhavabhūti on, 107–9; —Brockington and Chatterjee on, 106; —as controversial, 104–13, 219; —Cr on eschatological implications of, 1032–33; —as disruption of Rāma's ideal kingship, 145–46; —as evidence of Rāma's transgression, 145; —EVR on, 110–11; —gods grant boon for, 386–87; —gods felicitate Rāma for, 9, 148; —gods' gratitude for, 1033; —in MBh, 106; —in RaghuVa, 107; —in RaghuVa, Śambūka attains state of the virtuous by, 1033; —Rāma despondent after, in PadmaP, 149; —Rāma's character illuminated by, 14; —Rāma's return to Ayodhyā delayed after, 9, 14; —Ranganayakamma on, 111–13; —restores dead child to life, 387–88, 1033; —restores dharmic equilibrium, 147; —Shah on, 1033; —Tamil play about, 111–13; —in UttaRāC, 108–9; —in UttaRāC, Śambūka liberated from curse by, 1033; Rāma questions class of, 385–86; śūdra identity of, 386, 1032

Śambūkavadha, 82, 106n83. See also Śambūka: Rāma's killing of Saṃhrādi (minister of Rāvaṇa), 236, 294, 485

Saṃkarṣaṇa: as emanation (vyūha) of Viṣṇu, 176, 991; Lakṣmaṇa as, 991, 1229
Saṃkṣiptarāmāyaṇa, 66–67
Saṃpāti (minister of Vibhīṣaṇa), 236, 486, 818
saṃvarta (astra). See under astra saṃvarta (mantra), 1102–3
Saṃvarta (seer): brother of Bṛhaspati, 269; Ila summons for sacrifice, 410; Marutta as disciple of, 411, 1114; —as son of, according to Cr, 1114; —warned not to fight Rāvaṇa by, 270; officiates at Marutta's sacrifice, 269–70, 610
Saṃyodhakaṇṭaka (yakṣa), 261, 572
Sanatkumāra: Brahmā's son, 1309; as omniscient, 1380; Rāvaṇa dismissed by or takes leave of, 1375, 1381; —questions, 1280, 1309–10; —told Rāmāyaṇa story by, 1312–13; —told about Sītā's beauty by, 1375; —told about Viṣṇu by, 1310–18 sandalwood (candana): forest, 478; paste, 307, 327, 375, 690, 755, 988, 1166–67, 1290; trees, 331, 843; —kālakeya as black, 331, 843; —kālakeya as red, 843
Sandhyā, 45, 475; as harbinger of disruption, 45, 50; as rākṣasa matriarch, 46; Sālakaṭañkaṭā given in marriage by, 45, 49, 232 sandhyā rites, 315, 396–97, 1066
śaṅkha (conch). See conch; Pāñcajanya
Śaṅkha (treasure), 263–64, 577
Santānas (heavenly worlds): animal devotees of Rāma attain, 441, 1270–71; human devotees attain, 182, 184, 441, 1257, 1269–70, 1274–75; location of, 182, 184–85, 1257, 1271
Sāntānakas. See Santānas
Sāntānikas. See Santānas śāntarasa, 62. See also rasas Śāntiparvan, 78n18, 121, 129, 1016
śapatha (oath): ātmanepada used for verbal root of, 1169; of Lakṣmaṇa, 340, 876; of Sītā, 20, 421, 1156, 1169; —during aśvamedha, 118, 138, 420–21; —Cr on, 96, 1152–56, 1164–69; —Cs on, 1171–72; —Ct on, 1167; —devotional versions of Rāma story avoid, 70; —Dharaṇī arrives during, 421; —of faithfulness or fidelity to Rāma, 31, 20–21, 85, 96, 155, 420–21, 1168–69; —Rāma summons Sītā for, 10, 70, 138, 154, 417–18, 1151–54; —taken from eagerness to return to her true home, 1167; —taken three times, 1169; —witnesses gather for, 418–19, 1165–66; as satyakriyā (truth act), 21n54 (see also satyakriyā); —structural importance of, 118; of Vālmīki to verify purity of Sītā, 138, 419–20, 1160–61; —Ct on, 138, 1161; —Rāma accepts, 420, 1163, 1169
Śarabha (minister of Vibhīṣaṇa), 486, 818 śarabha (mythical beast), 242, 319, 507, 788, 1299–300, 1355, 1357
Śarabha (vānara), 328, 832
Śārada manuscripts, 204–6
Saramā: dogs as descendants of (see under dogs); as mother of watchdogs of Yama, 611
Saramā (wife of Vibhīṣana): identity of, in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 555; naming of, 256–57, 555–56; Śailūṣa's daughter, 256, 1189; Vibhīṣaṇa's wife, 256
Sāraṇa: bathes in Narmadā, 307; fights army of Arjuna Kārtavīrya, 310–11; —gods, 294; —Māndhātṛ, 1293; —yakṣas, 260; flees battle, 621; identity of, 567, 758; Rāvaṇa sends, to investigate Narmadā River, 309, 757; Rāvaṇa's minister, 294, 1293
sārañga, 1126–27
sārasa. See birds: krauñca
Sarasvatī, 1301, 1359; Kumbhakarṇa and, 251, 538–39; vānmayī as epithet of, 601; Vedavatī as incarnation of, 601, 608
Śaravaṇa, 264, 586
Sarayū River, 161, 1257–58; Brahmā greets Rāma on bank of, 178, 439–40; Lakṣmaṇa experiences yogic death on bank of, 11, 174, 434; Rāma and devotees enter waters of, 11, 177, 183, 441, 1234, 1261, 1273–75
sārikas. See under birds
Śarmiṣṭhā: in MBh, 213–14, 931; Pūru's mother, 357; Vṛṣaparvan's daughter, 143, 356; Yayāti's wife, 143, 356–57 śārṅga bow, 1315, 1317, 1378, 1382. See also horn bows sarus crane. See birds: krauñca sarvamedha. See under sacrifices
Sarvārthasiddha (brahman), 1319–24
Sarveśvara (primordial form of Viṣṇu), 176, 1229 Śaśabindu (son of Ila), 409, 411, 1107–8, 1111 śāstrakāvya, 70
Śatabali (vānara), 328
śataghnī. See hundred-slayer
Śatānanda (sage), 419
Śatapathabrāhmaṇa: kṛṣṇasāraṅga in, 1126; Prajāpati as term for Viṣṇu in, 1127; purification of queen for aśvamedha in, 1152; sacrificial horse in, color of it and its eye, 1126; —number of guards for, 1128
Śatrughātin, 167n33, 437

Śatrughna: apsarases honor, 993; arrow of, like one Rāma used on Rāvaṇa, 988; —as Viṣṇu's blazing energy (tejas), 993; in Ayodhyā, for five nights or not permanently, 380–81, 947; —for a month, 367, 959–60; —for seven nights, 1009; —mode of travel to palace, not specified for, 859; begs forgiveness, 364–65, 948–51; —to be sent to kill Lavaṇa, 146, 364; Bharata left in Ayodhyā by, 946–47; Bharata's name avoided by, 945; Bharata spared hardship by, 947; Biardeau on, 117; as bhūmanārāyaṇa according to Cr, 1250; consecration of, delights brahmans, 952; Ct and Ck on encampment by Ganges of, 977; Cyavana tells tale of Māndhātṛ to, 371–72; does not question Vālmīki about singers, 1006; does not meet Rāma's sons, 1001; Durvāsas prophesies about, 345, 894; etymological play on name of, 373, 982–83, 986, 993, 1007; gods et al. honor, 993; guests welcomed with food, etc. by, 413, 1125; hears Rāma praised, 370, 975; Kāñcana (Cyavana) as purohita of, 437, 977, 1237; kingdom and wealth divided between sons by, 167, 437, 1237; Lakṣmaṇa's banishment explained by, 1237; Lava and Kuśa's birth announced to, 975; —defeat of, 164; —in PadmaP, 164n23; Lavaṇa's killing by, 219, 373–77; —compared to Rāvaṇa's, 954–55; —provides with role in epic, 146; —to be only by Bharata or, 945; as lord of the earth according to Cr, 902; in Madhurā, 377–78, 994; Madhurā city's founding by, 215, 377; —gods praise and grant boons for, 377; Madhurā, journey of, to, 145, 219, 366, 367, 371, 963; —Bharata and Lakṣmaṇa accompany on, 381; Madhurā palace adorned by, 378, 995–96; morning activities of, 1006–7; as Pāñcarātra vyūha Aniruddha, 991, 1229; as portion of Viṣṇu that is Viṣvaksena, 175, 179, 1228–29, 1262; portion of Viṣṇu's energy (tejas) or body, 170, 991; prophecy not told to, 897; Rāma abandons, according to Cs, Ct, 894; —advises about his journey, 366; —asked to exonerate, 365, 951; —asks about people's opinion of, 333; —begged by, to let return, 380; —consecrates, 948; —consecrates as king of Madhurā, 8, 364–65, 951; —embraces, 381, 1008; —equips for campaign, 366; —explains about divine arrow to, 365; Rāma followed in mahāprasthāna by, 437, 439, 1239, 1252; —alone, according to Ck, 1260–61, 1266; —along with Bharata, 1260; —along with womenfolk, 439, 1252; Rāma gives arrow to, 365, 986; —instructs about two things, 1008; —longed for by, 8, 80, 215, 378, 380, 947, 1007–8; —sends back to Madhurā, 8, 165–66, 381, 947; —sends for, 11, 335, 435–37, 1125; —sends to kill Lavaṇa, 8, 58, 146, 165, 363–64; —taken leave of by, 367, 381, 961; Rāma tells, he may visit Ayodhyā, 381, 1008; —how to kill Lavaṇa, 365–67; —to kill Lavaṇa, 363–64; —to return to Madhurā, 8, 381; —to rule in Madhurā, 363–64, 1125; as Rāma's (younger) brother, 991; —identifies himself as, 373; in Rāma's assembly, 380, 1007; as Rāma's attendant, 816, 818; Rāmāyaṇa heard at Vālmīki's ashram by, 8, 378–80, 1001–3; —Ck, Cg, and Ct on, 1001–2; —Kālidāsa omits, 998; —Shah on incongruity of, 998; Rāmāyaṇa's ending keeps awake, 1006; retinue of, despondent at hearing Rāmāyaṇa, 1004; —small when returns to Ayodhyā, 378, 997; returns with gifts after escorting allies, 327, 826; sacrificial horse escorted by, in PadmaP, 164; Śatrughātin and Subāhu consecrated by, 437; Sītā (not) directly spoken to by, 976; —observed to be in presence of Rāma by, 1006; Sītā's scandal and banishment heard of by, 336–38; troops of, described, 366, 958–61; —forbidden to investigate singing, 998; —put in order and sent by, 367; —remain camped by Ganges, 977; Vālmīki's ashram visited by, in episodes critical to main story, 145; —on night of Lava and Kuśa's birth, 8, 367–71; —while twins recite Rāmāyaṇa (see Rāmāyaṇa heard at Vālmīki's ashram by in this entry); Vālmīki narrates tale of Saudāsa to, 145, 368–70; —recites sweet tales to, 378, 999–1000; as Viṣṇu's discus, Sudarśana, 176, 1128–29, 1276, 1279; Viṣṇu's primordial body internalized by, 991; vows to follow Rāma, 437; —to disobey Rāma's order forbidding, 1239; Yamunā journey of, 371 satyakriyā (truth act): of Bharata, 1230; of Anaraṇya, 28, 273, 622–23; as mechanism to prevent rape, 33n109; of Rambhā, 291, 694; of Sītā, 21n54, 86; of Vedavatī, 31, 268, 505–6. See also śapatha

Satyatīrtha (Cs): on abandonment of Rāma's kin, 894; on Ayodhyā as ashram, 2068; on Bharata's matronymic being avoided, 102; Ck critiqued by, 176; Ct and/or Cm critiqued by, 218, 621, 656, 696, 918, 937, 990, 1014,

Satyatīrtha (Cs) (cont.)
1108, 1158, 1177, 1187, 1200–11, 1239–40, 1248, 1253, 1366, 1384, 1391; on duration of monkeys' stay in Ayodhyā, 830; —of Rāma's reign, 1187; eccentricities of, 218; on golden image of Sītā, 1123–24; on identification of edible plants, 1067; on Ila/Ilā's choice of genders, 1097; —kingdom, 1107–8; —pregnancy, 1110; —story's textual variants, 1097; on inanimate objects experiencing joy, 1171; on Indra's use of both hands to hurl vajra, 1084; on Indrajit's killer's identity, 452–53; ingenious interpretations of, 452, 456, 462, 472–73, 486, 501–2, 504, 510–11, 585, 590, 597, 620, 625, 660, 664, 665, 668, 671, 675, 678–79, 683, 687, 692–93, 868, 872, 875–76, 882, 903, 907–8, 920, 965–66, 992, 1047–48, 1056–57, 1063–64, 1070, 1072–73, 1085, 1127, 1131, 1195, 1200, 1202, 1222, 1348, 1351, 1353, 1360, 1379, 1397; on Kalmāṣapāda as man-eater, 969; on Lakṣmaṇa's ascension, 1227–28; on offering meat to a brahman, 965–66; on omission of Yayāti's sons, 931; on order of twins' conception and birth, 973–74; PadmaP favored by, 178, 1260; —contrasted with Uttarakāṇḍa by, 1233, 1236; Pāñcarātra explanations from, 176–77, 991, 1229; on plural being used for two brothers, 1196, 1260–61; on power of Rāvaṇa and Lavaṇa vs. Rāma and Śatrughna, 955; prakṣipta passages ascribed to Vālmīki by, 1384; on Rāma's desire for Bhṛgu's curse to become true, 853; —desire for Sītā, 133–34, 855; —heaven being Vaikuṇṭha, 1177 —imitation of humanity, 1173, 1178; —judgment in owl–vulture dispute, 1401; —monogamy, 1182–83; —omniscience, 1082; —sacrifices as exemplary, 1074; Sāṃkhya philosophy referenced by, 1208–19; on Śatrughna's embarrassment, 948; —retinue's size, 997; on Śeṣa as Lakṣmaṇa's primordial form, 174, 1227–28; on Sītā's oath, 1153; Śiva disliked by, 1114; struggles with readings by, 1391, 1397; on survival of those Rāma leaves behind, 1244; on term brahma, 1248; on Vālmīki telling twins that Rāma is their father, 1137; on Viṣṇu as hidden in body of Rāma, 181, 1267; on Viṣṇu's primordial body, 991; on a woman performing sacrifice, 606; on a woman's testimony, 698
Saudāsa. See Mitrasaha Saudāsa
Saumitri. See Lakṣmaṇa
Sāvitra (eighth among the Vasus), 295, 707
Sāvitrī, 50n77
Sāvitrīmantra, 187, 439, 1250, 1311, 1373. See also Gāyatrīmantra sāyujya (absorbtion in God), 184, 1269–71 secondary narratives. See under narratives, secondary seers (ṛṣis): accompany Brahmā to greet Rāma, 440; —gods approaching the fallen Indra, 403; —Śatrughna's army, 367; Agastya and Vasiṣṭha as foremost among, 355; Agastya as brahman, 305, 319, 387, 391–92, 393, 814, 1052, 1305, 1309, 1371; —as foremost of, 305, 387–88, 1035; ashrams as sacred space of, 51; Bharadvāja as brahman, 126, 229; Bhṛgu, 900; —begs seven, for protection, 900; —told to propitiate Nārāyaṇa by, 900–901; blazing energy (tejas) of, 927; Brahmā as, 1201–2, 1205; Budha as foremost of, 408, 1104; —as royal, 1102–6; cow dispute of, 349, 910; daughters of, 32, 42, 227, 284; depart Ayodhyā, 326; diet of, 852; —foam of milk ocean as, 281, 659; Durvāsas, 94, 345, 433, 895; —as tiger or foremost among, 432; Gārgya as brahman, 425–26, 1188–89; Gautama, 304, 744, 770; gods as allies of, 238; Hanumān cursed by, 22, 319, 325, 787, 809; —harasses, 22, 324; —mischief of, tolerated by, 324, 806; —pitied by, 322, 796, 803; Ila as royal, 405, 409, 1116; Kāla in guise of messenger from a, 429–30; Kaśyapa, 493, 1319; Kṛṣṇa welcomed to heaven by, 171; Kubera as scion or son of a, 55, 465; Kumbhakarṇa devours, 248, 251, 537; Kuśadhvaja as brahman, 267, 600; Lakṣmaṇa escorted or welcomed to heaven by, 11, 174, 434–35, 1228; —showered with flowers by, 434; Lava and Kuśa perform before, 415–16, 1135; Marutta as royal, 411, 1114; monkeys wait upon, 413–14, 1125; Nalakūbara's curse of Rāvaṇa delights, 699; Nārada and Parvata as divine, 350–51, 912, 919; Nārada as divine, 105, 273–75, 624, 1305, 1314, 1318; —explains why Rāvaṇa carried off Sītā, 1314; Nimi as royal, 351–53, 916–17; Nimi's body churned by, 356, 929; —sacrifice performed by, 355, 928; Nṛga as royal, 350; ornamented, 1258; Parvata as divine, 1291–92; peaceful-natured, 805–7; Pracetas, 1160; Pṛṣadgu as, 447; Pulastya as brahman, 25, 42–43, 126, 227–28, 313, 459; Pulastya names Vaiśravaṇa in consultation with, 229; Purūravas as royal, 354–55; as rākṣasas' prey,

235–37; rākṣasas–yakṣas battle watched by, 261, 571; Rāma acts on behalf of, 361, 941, 1384; —assembles, to hear Rāmāyaṇa, 416; —attended by, 816; —felicitated by, 225–26; —followed to heaven by, 439; —greeted by at Sarayū River, 178, 439, 1258; —invites to return to Ayodhyā, 814; —invites to witness Sītā's oath, 418; —sends Śatrughna to aid, 363–64; —as supreme, 423, 1179; Rāma's aid sought by Yamunā-dwelling, 360–63; —aśvamedha attended by, along with wives, 412, 1120; —aśvamedha impresses, 414; at Rāma's consecration, 225, 445–55; Rāma summons to court, 383, 1015; Rāmāyaṇa heard in heaven by, 1277; —worshiped by, 1277; Raudreya as, 225; Rāvaṇa abducts daughters of, 32, 284, 665–66, 1355; —devours, 35, 270, 527; Rāvaṇa harasses, torments, or kills, 6, 27, 258; —but does not see harm of, 579–80; Rāvaṇa's death delights, 1317–18; —destruction plotted by gods and, 259; Rāvaṇa–Yama battle watched by, 278; return from heaven to hear Uttarakāṇḍa, 423, 1179–80; as ritual experts, 1124; Saṃvarta, 269–70; Sanatkumāra, 1309–11, 1372, 1380; Śatrughna honored by, 375, 993; —stays with, on banks of Yamunā, 371–72; Śatrughna's consecration seen as equal to Lavaṇa's death by, 952; Śatrughna's wounding alarms, 375; semidivine sons of, 437; those of divine origin to return to original forms, 441; seven great, 225, 448, 900, 1337; Sītā believes she is going to visit, 19, 338–39, 870; Sītā's innocence proclaimed by, 337; —oath witnessed by, 420, 1165–66; Sītā wishes to visit, 131, 333, 851; Śiva asked for protection by, 237, 490; sons of, to return to their divine origins, 183, 1271–72; Sumukha, 447; Śveta, 392; Tṛṇabindu as royal, 126, 227, 458; Uśanas as brahman, 153, 358, 1065–66; —as divine, 395–97; Uttarakāṇḍa heard by, 423–24, 1179; Vālmīki as poet, 19, 63, 86, 185, 189, 342, 368, 370, 380, 415–16, 419, 886, 888, 901, 970–75, 1132, 1138–39, 1148–49, 1152, 1166, 1280–82; —tells twins to sing Rāmāyaṇa for, 414–15; Vālmīki avoids encampments of, 414, 1133; Vasiṣṭha as brahman, 141, 352, 968; —as foremost of, 916; in Vasiṣṭha's ashram converse, 346; Vedavatī's asceticism follows ordinances of, 266, 599; vedic, 8, 51, 365, 383, 446; Vibhīṣaṇa waits upon, 414, 1125, 1129; Viṣṇu asked for protection by, 50; in Viṣṇu's limbs, 1304; Viṣṇu's power over, 1288; Viśravas as brahman, 127, 247, 254, 256, 524, 554–55; wind's path as dwelling place of, 1296, 1349; worship Lakṣmaṇa as fourth part of Viṣṇu, 435, 1228; —Rāma, 440; —sun in Agastya's ashram, 396, 1066; —Viṣṇu, 180; Yamunā-area, 360–63; Yayāti as royal, 357–59

semen: bīja as euphemism for, 1307, 1396; Ck quotes Tantrāloka on, 1069; Cs on birth order of twins and, 973; —on skannam as, 1368; of Indra Vāsava, 1307, 1369; ManuSm on creator's, 470; of Mitra and Varuṇa, produces Vasiṣṭha and Agastya, 142–43, 213, 353–55, 920–27; —Vasiṣṭha must enter, 142, 353; in pot as a means of procreation, 43–44, 456; rajas as, 1061; of Śiva produces Skanda, 476, 586, 788

senā. See spears serpents (nāgas/urugas): Bhogavatī as city of, 280, 653; Brahmā creates, 1328; coils of, 1211; cosmic, Śeṣa (Ananta) as (see Śeṣa); enraged, 1322, 1390; Garuḍa defeats, 273, 624–25; —as enemy of, 312, 316, 1301, 1360; —as king of, 1276; great, adorned with jewels, 421, 1170; —as class of semidivine beings, 27, 42, 181, 183, 227, 236, 240, 250, 265, 322, 404, 500, 547, 596, 625, 646–47, 716, 782, 796–97, 805, 848, 993, 1166, 1286, 1295, 1304, 1312, 1347, 1380; —return to those from whom they issue, 441, 1272; —in ocean depths, 280; —in Pātāla, 421; —Rāvaṇa abducts daughters of, 284, 665–66; —Rāvaṇa vows to control, 274; —Sītā enters world of, 1177; —Sītā's throne carried by, 421, 1170; —strength of, 421; —Takṣaka as, 1170, 1301; —Upatakṣaka as, 1301; —Vāsuki as lord of, 280, 653, 702; —Vedavatī sought in marriage by, 267; —Viṣṇu worshiped by, 440; —women of, 407; hoods of, 1211; Indra compared to writhing, 403, 1087; kicking of, 1390; Kṛtānta's body consists of, 1288; lords of, 171, 242; —as comparison, 242, 506, 777–78; Nārāyaṇa's bed, of, 816–17, 1361; nectar drunk by, 242, 510; as rākṣasas' mounts, 239, 289, 298, 496, 685, 496; Rāvaṇa's chariot encircled by, 298, 716; scorpion and, proverb of, 1008; seizing sleeping, 1302; shuddering like, 1307, 1368; sloughing, 1087; snakes distinguished from, 647; split tongues of, 510, 750–51; Sumālin's chariot of, 295, 710; as symbols of anger, 1322, 1390; turned into females, 405; Vṛtra as serpents (nāgas/urugas) (cont.)

primodial, 496, 646, 790, 1079; wearer of (sarpadharī), as epithet of Śiva, 1354. See also snakes Śeṣa (Ananta): enters womb of Devakī, 172; Lakṣmaṇa as incarnation of, 176, 1229; Nārāyaṇa rests on in cosmic ocean, 172, 1373; as Nārāyaṇa's manifestation, 1289, 1311; upholds mountains and earth, 1311, 1373, 1380; Vindhya mountains compared to, 751; Viṣṇu creates through māyā, 431, 1211 seven great seers. See Atri; Bharadvāja; Gautama; Jamadagni; Kaśyapa; seers: seven great; Vasiṣṭha; Viśvāmitra sexual aggression, 16, 24, 27, 31–34, 50, 51, 153–55 sexual assault. See rape sexual intercourse: of earth and sky in TaiĀ, 1206–7; Indra tricks Ahalyā into having, 33; prohibited, with pregnant woman, 95, 858; —three nights a month, 1090; Rāma's fear of having with pregnant Sītā, 95–96, 858, 866, 1159–60, 1164–65; Rāvaṇa loses desire to have, 699; —said to have with Vedavatī, 604; of Urvaśī and Mitra or Varuṇa, 354, 921–22; Urvaśī cannot engage in, 926; vibhramaḥ (infatuation) leads to adulterous, 743. See also rape Shah, U. P.: on amarakaṇṭaka, 478; on appendix passages, 212–16, 908, 915, 998, 1178; on devakaṇṭaka, 487, 746; on kaṭaṃkaṭaiḥ, 206n35; passages relegated to apparatus by, 4, 5, 212, 210–16, 908, 915, 998–99, 1033, 1036, 1172, 1383–84; on prakṣipta passages, 210–12, 1383–84; on Sālakaṭañkaṭā, 206n35, 475; use of critical principles by, 206–8; —higher criticism by, 130, 139n120, 212; —Malayalam manuscripts by, 204, 208–9; —Śārada manuscripts by, 205, 213n54, —southern readings by, 206; —Telugu manuscripts by, 205, 207n38; —wavy line by, 207–8; —western recension by, 207; on uttara, 1277; as Uttarakāṇḍa editor, 199, 202–3, 218; on Uttarakāṇḍa's lateness, 1277; as Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa general editor, 200, 203, 204; on Vālmīki and Bhṛgu lineage, 1280; sharks, 310
Sharma, R., 38, 46–47
Shastri, Hari Prasad: blessings added to translation by, 890; Dutt followed by, 222, 478, 52, 563, 1090, 1230–31, 1258, 1346, 1352–53, 1356, 1359, 1367–68, 1375, 1377, 1382, 1388, 1394–95, 1400; may use unknown commentary, 1375; prakṣipta passages translated by, 1330; Roussel followed by (see under Roussel, Alfred) shooting stars. See meteors; signs: meteors falling to earth as short javelins, 1293
Shukla, R. K., 39, 47–48
sibling rivalry: among Rāma's brothers, 945; of Rāvaṇa, 26–27; —provoked by his mother, 53, 248; of Saṃvarta, 610
Siddhārtha (minister of Rāma), 1326, 1398 side locks (kākapakṣa), 1352 siddhas. See perfected beings signs: of anger (see under anger); auspicious, of women abducted by Rāvaṇa, 287, 680; —Sītā sees, 871; bodily, 1049, 1141–42; dancing of apsarases as, 531; flowers raining down as, 531; inauspicious, of sacrificial horse, 412–13, 1117, 1126; —prolonged separation from husband as, 871; —Sītā sees, 338, 871–72; knowledge of, 606; meteors falling to earth as, 525; of pregnancy, 7, 154, 228, 333, 459, 851, 884; rolling of eyes as, of anger, 1356; —of exhaustion, 317; —of terror, 243; shooting stars as, 525. See also omens Siṃhikā: Naraka's mother, 646; Rāhu's mother, 320–21, 790; rākṣasī, 52, 790 simulacrum. See chāyāsītā or māyāsītā sins: Ahalyā's (see Ahalyā; rape: of Ahalyā); aśvamedha as expiation for, 123, 1113; —as purification for, 9, 124, 126, 128, 399, 1078–79, 1113, 1118 (see also under aśvamedhas); brahmahatyā as (see brahmahatyā); burned away, 1312, 1326; Daṇḍa's (see Daṇḍa); Indra's (see Indra); killing a fleeing foe as, 245, 515; —a woman as, 899–900; kings suffer for, of subjects, 742, 1027; Lakṣmaṇa begs Sītā not to think him as possessed of, 875; master fears suffering from servant's, 1024; of Rāma in PadmaP, 124–25, 149; —brahmahatyā as, 147, 1012; —not made explicit, 129; Rāma's followers all free from, 1254; Rāma summons Sītā if she is free from, 138, 417, 1151–52; of Rāvaṇa, 680; —do not include Rambhā attack, 696; removed by austerities, sacrifice, and/or charity, 120, 814; —by Ganges water, 873; —by knowing Viṣṇu as Puruṣa, 1289, 1338; —by Nārada's tale, 1314; —by Narmadā bathing, 307, 753; —by rājasūya, 1074–75; —by Rāma story, 124; —by Rāmāyaṇa, 211n45, 1277, 1282; —by supreme Vaiṣṇava tale, 1381; sages as free from, 814; Sītā as remover of, 890; —without, 343, 344, 417, 340, 889, 1159, 1163–64; —wonders if she committed, 341, 879; of śūdras, 111; taking back a woman touched by another man as, 857; Vedavatī without, 605; Viṣṇu cursed for, of killing a woman, 899–900; —not guilty of, 516; of Yudhiṣṭhira, 120–22. See also transgressions Sindhu River, 425, 1189. See also Indus River

sīra. See ploughshare
Śiśira (lunar month), 830–31
Śiśupāla, 1070, 1381
Sītā (Jānakī, Maithilī, Vaidehī): abandonment of (see Sītātyāga); abduction of, 21, 27n85, 34, 91, 534, 1317–18; —Rāma prophesies in AdhyāR, 90; —Rāma's madness at, 1174; Agastya tells Rāma that Vedavatī is, 601; as agent of divine play, 91; Agni emerges from pyre carrying, in AdhyāR, 90–91; agnīparīkṣā ("fire ordeal") of, 14, 20, 84, 99–100, 118n30, 340, 877, 1163; —as device for chāyāsītā, 90–91; Agni proves, innocent in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 14, 83, 336, 340, 864, 1153–54; always close to Rāma, 1123; anxious about Rāma, 871; appears before Rāma, 419; in aśoka grove with Rāma, 142, 332; Ayodhyā's inhabitants' allegations against, 134; —in RaghuVa, 1153; believes meeting sages is vital to Rāma's well-being, 872; Bharata defends, in PadmaP, 102n66; Biardeau on, as earth goddess, 117; birth of, 606–7; —from earth, 422, 1174, 1313; —from furrow, 269; —in Vaiśākha, 609; as bodily form of absolute consciousness, according to Ct, 885; boys of Vālmīki's ashram spy, 342–43; Brahmā consoles Rāma over loss of, 216; —urges Rāma to take back, in Rāmopākhyāna, 864; camps in ashram on Gomatī, 339, 872; character of, 16–21; chāyāsītā or māyāsītā, 84n5, 90–91, 1246; —in AdhyāR, 90; compared to goddess, 420, 1163; —to Lakṣmī, 422, 1173; —to Śrī, 419, 1157; —to śruti (vedas), 1157–58; cosmic form of, revealed to Rāma in Adbhutarāmāyaṇa, 93; curse on Rāvaṇa prevents rape of, 34–35; departs on own terms, 155; described as future wife of Rāma, 1313, 1375; devotional representation of, 70; Dharaṇī takes, in arms, 421, 1170; discomfort of later tradition with Vālmīki's portrayal of, 87–104; duration of lovemaking of, 849–50; —in PadmaP, 1183–84, 1187; duration of marriage and stay in Ayodhyā of, 849–50; Durvāsas prophesies abandonment of, 94, 346; —Rāma will have two sons with, 903–4; dwells in Sāketa with Rāma, 185, 327; eager to return to true home, 1167; as emotional heart of story, 39; enters ashram of Vālmīki, 885, 891; enters earth, as appropriate ending, 62–63; —commentators on, 1168–69; —at conclusion of aśvamedha, 421, 424, 1183; —Rāma enraged by, 86, 422; —Rāma heartbroken at, 86, 216, 422, 424, 1170–71, 1173; —Rāma's reaction to, 1172; —as rejection of Rāma, 86; —as witnessed by all beings, 421, 1171–22; enters Rasātala on throne with Dharaṇī, 421; in esoteric explanation, 894–95; final words of, 155; in garments of ascetic, 20, 1167; —of ochre, 420, 1167; gives birth to twins, 8, 370; golden image of, for aśvamedha, 413, 424, 1123; —in RaghuVa, 616; —as Rāma's wife, 10, 137, 155, 413, 424, 1123–24, 1183; gotra used by when questioning Rāvaṇa, 975; grief of, 343; Hanumān gains confidence of, 318, 785; —given necklace by in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 1096; —helps Rāma recover, 318; —praised by Rāma for finding, 319; —searches for in Sundarakāṇḍa, 3n2, 12; illusory (see chāyāsītā or māyāsītā); as incarnation (avatāra) of Lakṣmī, 211, 607, 1229, 1264, 1313, 1318, 1375; —of Vedavatī, 16–17, 31, 268–69, 601, 606–9; innocence, fidelity, or purity of, 14, 17, 19–20, 57, 82, 85–86, 88, 96, 133–34, 138, 340, 418–20, 856, 864, 877, 882, 906, 1152–53, 1159–65, 1179–80 (see also sexual purity of in this entry); —Agastya reassures Rāma about, 699; —Agni proves, 14, 83, 336–37, 420, 906; —Rāma accepts Vālmīki's testimony on, 20, 420, 1166; —Rāma doubts, 1164; —Rāma knows, 83, 337, 420, 1163–64; —Vāyu et al. declare, 336–37, 864; Jayanta harasses, in Sundarakāṇḍa, 712; journey to Sāketa of, 1167–68, 1172, 1175–76; Kālidāsa on, 87–88; kings praise recovery of, 158, 327; Lakṣmaṇa abandons (see under Sītātyāga); —absolved of blame by, 19–20, 341; —chided for missing Rāma by, 19, 339, 873–74; —crosses Ganges with, 340; —feigns happiness to, 339, 872; —given message for Rāma by, 20, 85, 87, 341–42, 881–82; —obeys instructions of, 881; —orders carriage for, 338, 869; —reassures, 878; —takes to Ganges, 338–39; Lakṣmaṇa tells, of her banishment, 19, 340–41; —that she is going to visit sages, 338; —to hold

Sītā (Jānakī, Maithilī, Vaidehī) (cont.)
Rāma in her heart, 341, 879; —to live in ashram of Vālmīki, 341; Lakṣmaṇa told to accept Rāma's decision by, 341; —on unreality of grief displayed by, 904; —watches until, enters Vālmīki's ashram, 342, 344, 885, 891; lineage of, 40–41n27, 52; as locus of impropriety, 138; love of, for Rāma, 1165; as Māyā, 1263–64; morning obligations of, 332, 850, 977; name of, means "Furrow," 269, 609; never goes against wishes of Rāma, 1169; never to be insulted, 855–56; no hint of impropriety in, 1153–54; no tension exists between Rāma and, 855–56; not different from Rāma, 1177; not separate from Rāma, 907–8, 1375; parrots and, in PadmaP, 94–95; Pātāla as destination for, Ct's discomfort with, 1177; people's awareness of intention of Rāma and, 1172; oath of (see śapatha: of Sītā); as poignant figure, 16; prabho not used for younger brother by, 880; prays for family and people, 338–39, 871–72; pregnancy of, 7, 18, 95, 99, 131, 134, 137, 851, 858, 866–67, 878, 880, 884, 890, 906, 1160, 1164–65; —"auspicious glow" of, 7, 131, 333, 851; —Lakṣmaṇa asked to testify to, of, 884–85; —perceived by Rāma, 18, 131, 135, 333, 851; purification of, 1152; rākṣasīs guard, 39, 41n28, 52n85; Rāma accepts separation from, to fulfill Bhṛgu's curse, 1169; —allays concerns of, 852; —anxious about behavior of, 143; —asked by, to permit visit to seers, 333; —asks Bhadra what people are saying about, 333; —asks, to purify his mind, 1152; —claims, abandoned him in PadmaP, 902; —criticized for taking back, 18; —demands proof of fidelity, innocence, or purity from, 10, 417–18, 1152; —demands that goddess of earth return, 216, 422; —does not confront directly, 85, 135; —enjoys pleasures of married life with, 131; —exhorted by, 342, 883–84; —fears people will think him infatuated by, 1165; —gives pearl necklace first to, in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 836; —grants dohada (pregnancy desire) of, 7, 18, 131, 135, 333, 851 —lacks sexual desire for, 855; —no longer able to see, 424, 1181; —not criticized by, 882–83; —performs aśvamedha after separation from, 1183–84; Rāma recognizes Lava and Kuśa as sons of, 10, 138, 417, 420; —commentators on, 1151, 1165; Rāma returns to Ayodhyā with, 134, 337; —without, 424; Rāma sends messengers to, 418, 1152–53; Rāma's grief, at abandonment of, 83, 130, 134–36, 139, 337, 347–48, 865–66, 869, 877, 887, 906–7; —at return to her mother of, 10, 155, 422, 424, 1172–75, 1180–82; —ends, according to Cs, 912; Rāma's guilt over, 130–39; Rāma's love of, 63, 1165; Rāma suffers because of pain of, 344, 891–92; —summons, to aśvamedha, 20, 96, 417; —summons, to take oath, 10, 154, 417–18, 1153–54; —takes in his arms, 332, 847; —takes no wife after, 424, 1182–83; —tells to make simulacrum of herself, in AdhyāR, 90–91; —in thought, deed, and speech of, 419, 1157, 1168–69; —treatment of Sītā muted in Vālmīki, 84; —uses term bhadre in reference to, 599; —vows to destroy Dharaṇī unless, is returned, 422; —will show affection toward blameless, 420, 1165–66; Rāmāyaṇa as "Great Tale of," 16; Rāvaṇa attempts to seduce, 559; —carefully guards, 1318, 1383; —destroyed by, 601, 609; —preserves chastity of, 1383; as Rāvaṇa's daughter, 607; Rāvaṇa's lust for, 32; Rāvaṇa threatens to eat, in Araṇyakāṇḍa, 34; —told that Rāma is husband of, 1313; reaction of those gathered to return of, 419, 1158–59; remains in presence of Rāma, 1006, 1182; resides in ritual fire, 1246; romantic life of Rāma and, 7, 18, 131; rumors about (see under rumors); sages prophesy banishment of, 894; Saramā comforts, in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 556, 1189; Śatrughna's reponse to birth of sons of, 975–76; sectarian representations of, 95; sexual desire of Rāma for, 855; sexual purity of, 14, 34, 52, 57, 84n6, 134, 138, 142–43, 155, 417, 877, 1152–53, 1155, 1161–62, 1177; as sexual threat or object (or not), 138, 154; sons of, mentioned in Saundarananda, 68; —remind Rāma of, 1234; spring is time of abandonment and recovery of, according to commentators, 1384; suicide attempted or considered by, 880–81; supernatural powers of, in AdhyāR, 90; sūtaka (impurity from childbirth) of, 974–75; swears oath (see śapatha: of Sītā); taking back of, 154; as universal sovereign, 894–95; — according to Ck, 892; in Uttarakāṇḍa, abduction as reason for birth of, 35; —given voice only twice, 19; —only small portion concerns itself with, 75; Vālmīki brings, to aśvamedha, 9, 344; —comforts, 334; —has affection for, 1133; —promises to care for, 344 —rebukes Rāma over treatment of, 86; —recognizes, as wife of Rāma, 344; as Vālmīki's dependent, 879; Vālmīki swears that Lava and Kuśa are sons of, 419, 1160; —swears to and on innocence of, 419–20, 1159–62, 1164; —takes, to women of ashram, 20, 343–44; —tells Rāma that, will act in such a way as to satisfy him, 418; —welcomes to ashram, 20, 343; washerman's criticism of, 95; as wife, 8, 370, 975, 1151; witnesses evil omens, 99, 338, 871; as woman without protector, 342, 885–86; words to Rāma of, in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 84; yamajātakau and pregnancy of, 1160

Sītātyāga (abandonment of Sītā), 7, 9, 14, 57, 69, 82–104, 336–44, 853, 862–90, 894, 1068, 1159; Bālakāṇḍa reference to, 67; Bhavabhūti criticizes, 87–89; —foreshadows, 92; Ck and Cg on difficulty of, 869–70; commentators on, 219, 869–70, 892–93; —on spring as time of, 1384; as controversial, 14, 57, 82–104, 135; Cr absolves Rāma from agency of, 893; —has unique view of, 95–96, 858, 866–67, 878, 1159–60, 1164–65; critiques of, 96–104; Cs on, 853; curse absolves Rāma from culpability for, 94; —of parrot as cause of, in PadmaP, 95; —of Rāma by Bhṛgu as cause of, 94, 853, 899–902, 1169; in deserted place, 881–82; discomfort with, 89; duration of, 865; fear of gossip as cause of, 420, 906, 882–83, 1163–65; —not cause of, according to Cr, 878; —of sexual intercourse as cause of, 95–96, 858, 866–67, 1159–60, 1164–65; Kālidāsa on, 69, 87–88; Kishwar on, 99–100; Lakṣmaṇa accomplishes, 7, 18, 19, 85, 337, 340–42, 347, 866, 875; —announces, to Rāma, 347; —consoles Rāma over, 347–48, 907–8; —criticizes Rāma over, 85, 135–36, 344, 876–77, 892–93; —questions Sumantra about righteousness of, 344, 892–93; —returns to Ayodhyā after, 94, 347, 891, 905; —weeps and wishes for death during, 19, 340, 875; omitted in some versions, 66, 70–72; in PadmaP, Rāma blames Sītā or inhabitants of Ayodhyā for, 902; —Rāma tells Lakṣmaṇa secret of, 901–2; prophesied, 94, 346; purāṇic and folk versions of, 93; by Rāma, 82–104; —although convinced of her purity, 14, 18, 137, 1162–64; Rāma desolated or grieved by, 83, 85, 130, 134–36, 139, 337, 347–48, 865–66, 869, 877, 887, 906–7; —has Lakṣmaṇa carry out, 7, 18, 19, 85, 340–42, 347, 866, 875; —haunted by, 906; —indifferent to worldly objects after, 1068; —like a common person, 906; —Ramanand Sagar's depiction of, 100–102; Rāmarājya rent by, 13n5; Rāma resigned to, 136; —withdraws in distress over, 909; Rāma's agency in, 892–93; —character illuminated by, 14 —Rāma's reputation diminished by, 86; Rāma's unwillingness to tell Sītā about, 135; Ranganayakamma on, 98–99; Sītā as complicit in, 92; —unsuspecting of, 39; Sumantra tells Lakṣmaṇa that, was prophesied, 345, 894–95; Vālmīki on, 85–86; variations on, 94–96; washerman's role in, 95; when she is pregnant, 18

Śiva (Rudra, Hara, Mahādeva, Maheśvara): ahaṃkāra as body of, 1208; as Andhaka's slayer, 491; aśvamedha dedicated to, offered by Ila, 137, 411, 1112–14; —performed by Budha, 137; —proposed by Kardama and performed by Marutta, 411; —unusual, 1113; Bhava as name of, 233, 265–66, 477, 1380; commentators on, 486, 872, 957, 1114, 1115, 1117–18; as dark blue lord, 237; decree of, impossible to violate, 366, 957; as destroyer of Tripura, 477, 487, 639, 1209; enraged at Śukra in MBh, 477; Gaṅgā on head of, 872; gods request, to kill sons of Sukeśa, 237–38; —told by, to take refuge with Viṣṇu, 237; Haritanemin as epithet of, 1297, 1351; Ila takes refuge with, 405; —granted any boon but manhood by, 136; Ila's manhood restored by, 411, 1115; Indrajit granted boons by, 287, 301; as Kāma's foe, 486; as Kedāranātha, 562; Kubera undertakes vow to, 562; lance granted to Madhu by, 145–46, 360, 361, 365; —permitted to pass to Madhu's son, 362; —returns to, 377; lord of malignant spirits, 596; Madhu worships, 942; Mahādeva as epithet of, 233, 265–66, 361–62, 594–96, 598, 942, 1115, 1351; Maheśvara as epithet of, 266, 598; Nandīśvara as epithet of, 588; not primal deity according to Cs, 486; Pāṇini given new grammar by, 813; Pārvatī and, lovemaking of, 136, 259, 405; Paśupati as epithet of, 592, 677, 724; possesses qualities of warrior class, 748; Rāma as unshakable as, 815; —pays homage to, 1117; Ramaswamy Sastri on rākṣasas and cult of, 38; Rāvaṇa challenges, 27; —as devotee of, 1351; "Rāvaṇa" epithet given by, 28, 266, 595; Rāvaṇa given Candrahāsa sword by, 597; —granted long life span by, 597–98; —releases weapon of, 1294, 1396; Rāvaṇa's arms crushed by, 28,

Śiva (Rudra, Hara, Mahādeva, Maheśvara) (cont.) 266, 595; —strength delights, 28, 595; —worshipping of, 29, 307, 755; —worshipping of liṅga of, 308, 755; Śambūka seeks status of, according to Cs, 1032; Satī and, 32, 479; Skanda born from semen of, 476; Sukeśa granted boons by, 48, 223, 477–78; Sukeśa's sons and, 237, 488, 490; turns into a woman, 136, 1093; vedic fires as form of, 1114; Viṣṇu's anger creates, 486; weapon of, superior to Viṣṇu's, 957; Yama strikes with weapon, 511
Śivasahāya (Cr): on Agastya and Vasiṣṭha's births, 925–26; on chronology of monkeys' stay in Ayodhyā, 842; devotional readings of, 888–90, 893; on duration of Rāma's reign, 849; ingenious interpretations of, 649–50; on etymology, of Ahalyā, 738; —of Viṣṇu, Vedavatī, and sanātana, 607–8; on māṃsāni as rice porridge, 847; on rākṣasas' dharma, 494; on Rāma's concern about fate of dead rākṣasas, 864–65; —devotees, 184; —eating meat, 847; —power to bring about unprecedented events, 841–42; Rāma's suffering denied or minimized by, 894, 902; on Rāvaṇa not being killed by Nandin, 591; on Rāvaṇa's fear of an early death, 597; —rage at treatment of Kumbhakarṇa, 559; —reason for killing Vidyujjihva, 658; on sages' vegetarian diet, 966–67; on Santānas' location, 185, 1271; on śapatha as path to Sāketa, 96, 1153–54, 1155, 1156, 1164, 1165, 1166, 1169; on three dreaded diseases, 480; on Vaiśravaṇa being divinized, 465; on Vālmīki establishing Sītā and Lakṣmaṇa in or near ashram, 866–67; on Vibhīṣaṇa's inner concentration, 531–32; on Viṣṇu's four portions, 176, 1299; —proper abode, 179–81, 1256; —proper abode as Sāketa, 185, 1271; on women not fighting evildoers, 605; unique interpretation of scandal and Sītā's exile by, 95–96, 219, 855–56, 858, 863–66, 871–72, 877–78, 882; unique theology of, 181; Vedavatī story, account of unusual, 608
Śivasūtras, 811–12
six strategies (ṣaḍguṇya), 1320, 1387
Skanda, 952; birth of, 233, 476; Ganges as mother of, 233; as Guha, 516; as javelin-wielder, 245, 516; as Kārttikeya, 586, 813; Krauñca pierced by, 1293, 1344; as Kumāra, 788; as Mahāsena, 264, 404, 586, 1092; as Śarabhas' young king, 319, 788; Śaravaṇa as birthplace of, 264, 586; as Subrahmaṇya, 516, 1354
ślokas, 122, 904; created from śoka (grief), 61; final, according to Cg, 191; interpolated, 612, 731, 1338 (see also prakṣipta); Gāyatrīmantra and, 187–88, 190, 192n16, 838; number of, in Kiṣkindhākāṇḍa, 37; —in epic, 67, 187, 1147; as poetry, 61; —in Rāvaṇa's history, 39; —in sarga 15, 586; —in sargas 90–92, 166; spurious, according to Cv, 215n62 (see also prakṣipta) snakes: among animals rākṣasas ride, 496; distinction between serpents and, 647; as fond of milk, 510; rats vs. cats vs., 242, 507; subterranean world of, 1177. See also serpents social order. See classes; varṇa (traditional social class); varṇāśramadharma
Soma. See Candra southern readings: Malayalam manuscripts' influence on, 208–9; northern readings compared to, for Uttarakāṇḍa, 206–7; in preparation of crit. ed. of Uttarakāṇḍa, 206–7; —of Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa, 202–3; use of wavy line in, 207–8 southern recension: Akampana known to, 484; commentators follow, 206; Durvāsas's prophecy known to, 94; Malayalam manuscripts and, 203–4, 208–9; prakṣipta passages known to, 76; prioritized in crit. ed., 201–2; Rāmāyaṇa as expansion of Gāyatrīmantra known to, 193; records traditional length of Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa, 67–68; sahagamana known to, 602; Telegu manuscripts and, 205; textual evidence from, 546, 604, 666, 714, 1121, 1209, 1247–48, 1330; translators of, 1194; use of wavy line for, 201, 203, 207–8 spears: of Karṇa, 955; pattiśa/pattisa as, 283, 654, 663, 1300, 1357; senā, as, 767 śrāddha ceremony, 382, 1011, 1279, 1318 śrauta rites, 95, 161, 1123, 1128, 1246
Śrāvatī: identification of, 1236; Rāma founds, for Lava, 167n33, 436–37, 1233, 1236
Śrī: all wealth depends on, 1397; Dakṣa's daughter, 479; goddess of fortune, 233, 235, 483, 479, 1157, 1374; Lakṣmaṇa's wife, 1249–50; Lakṣmī another name of, 1249; on Rāma's left side, 438, 1249–50; —right side, 1249–50; Padmā as an epithet of, 438, 1249–50; Sītā as, 91; Viṣṇu associated with, 438, 1157; Viṣṇu possesses, 1326
Śrīharṣa, 69
Srinivasa Sastri, V.S., 96–97
Śrīvaiṣṇava commentators, 176, 185, 221. See also commentators sṛmara. See gaur śṛṅgārarasa. See erotic sentiment staff: ascetic, 803; —Indrajit holds, 286, 675–76; of Brahmā, 803; of brahmans, 806; of Hara (Śiva), 1298, 1352; of kings, 1053–54 (see also rod: of punishment); of Sarvārthasiddha strikes dog, 1322; wooden, Rāma leans on, 422, 1072–73; of yajamāna, 1272; of Yama, 437, 1241 (see also rod: of Yama) stallions. See horses statecraft, 5, 92, 434, 547, 784, 1319, 1326

Sthāṇu. See Śiva sthāyibhāvas (fixed emotional states), 61 structure: annular, 60, 67; matrilineal and patrilineal as types of social, 48n53; of Uttarakāṇḍa, 12, 36n2, 60, 63, 64n38, 74–75, 82, 114–56
Subāhu (son of Śatrughna), 167n33, 437
Subrahmaṇya. See Skanda succession, 46, 1111; of Ila's kingdom, 1107, 1111; of Rāma's kingdom, 56, 58, 1231; of Yadu, 936
Sudarśana: as name of discus of Viṣṇu, 176–77, 1229; Śatrughna as essence of, 1229
Sudeva (father of Śveta and Suratha), 150, 390 śūdras: asceticism of, disrupts dharmic kingdom, 13; Daśaratha's accidental killing of ascetic, 106; eligibility for asceticism, by yuga, 8, 384, 1025–26; lowest of the four varṇas, 105; Nārada blames ascetic, for death of child, 384, 1026; Rāma searches for ascetic, 9, 385; Śambūka (see Śambūka) Sugrīva: Brahmaloka attained by, 1271–2; birth of, 211, 1305–9, 1366 (see also Ṛkṣarajas); Cs on levirate marriage of, 744; curse causes enmity between Vālin and, 325; friendship of Hanumān and, 325; gods create, 326, 813; Hanumān's power known to, 325, 809; —protection of, from Vālin, 21, 22, 319, 325, 809; in Kiṣkindhākāṇḍa, consecration of, 1370; —sends monkey troops to Prāgjyotiṣa, 646; naming of, 1307, 1366, 1369; Rāma advises, 328–9, 828, 829, 832; —dismisses, 22, 328–30, 836; —gives kingly gifts to, 327–28, 827; —followed to forest by, 1241; —questions Hanumān's protection of, 319; as Rāma's ally, 22, 157, 158, 773, 782, 816, 828; at Rāma's aśvamedha, 412–13, 1125; Rāvaṇa likened to, 318, 782; Rāvaṇa's tale heard by, 1318; Ṛkṣarajas as father of, 325; as son of Āditya, 1272–73, 1307, 1370; Vālin's place inherited by, 325, 808; —reason for, 31; in Yuddhakāṇḍa, slays Kumbha, 452; —Mahodara, 451; —Praghasa, 485 suicide, 122, 143, 880–81, 1375
Śuka (rākṣasa), 270; bathes in Narmadā, 307, 754; fights army of Arjuna Kārtavīrya, 310–11; —gods, 294; —Māndhātṛ, 1293; —yakṣas, 261; flees battle, 621; identity of, 567, 613, 758, 1228; Rāvaṇa sends to investigate Narmadā, 309, 757; as Rāvaṇa's minister, 260, 294, 1293
śuka. See birds: parrots
Sukeśa (rākṣasa): father of Mālyavān, Sumālin, and Mālin, 48–49, 234; Grāmaṇī gives Devavatī in marriage to, 48, 233, 478; Sālakaṭañkaṭā abandons, 48; —and Vidyutkeśa's son, 45; Śiva refuses to kill, 488; —rescues and grants boons to, 48, 233, 238, 488; Śiva's partiality to, protects asuras, 237; travels in city that flies through the sky, 233
Śukra (minister of Kubera), 263, 578
Śukra (sage). See Uśanas Kāvya
Śukrācārya (sage). See Uśanas Kāvya Sukthankar, V. S, 63n37, 201; on affinity between some manuscript traditions, 204; Bhatt influenced by, 201; on Bhṛgus in the MBh, 1280; as general editor of the MBh, 199; principles of textual reconstruction of, 199–201
śūla. See lances
Sumālin (rākṣasa): fights gods, 295; —Viṣṇu and the gods, 239–43; identity of, 288, 681; Kaikasī ordered by, to ask Viśravas to marry, 25, 50, 246–47; Laṅkā abandoned by, 246; offspring of, 50, 236; Rāvaṇa urged by, to take Laṅkā, 26–27, 252; Sālakaṭañkaṭā as grandmother of, 518; Sāvitra kills, 295–96; Sukeśa and Devavatī's son, 48–49, 234
Sumantra: charioteer and counselor, 7, 891; Daśaratha's minister, 1326, 1398; Lakṣmaṇa addresses, after abandoning Sītā, 85, 344; Lakṣmaṇa and Sītā driven by, 339, 873, 874; —per Rāma's order, 337, 951; Lakṣmaṇa instructs, to prepare chariot, 338, 340; —told by, that Rāma will be unhappy, 345; as low-caste sūta, 895–96; reveals secret reason for Sītā's banishment, 94, 345, 893, 895, 896, 897, 1251–52; seers' arrival announced to Rāma by, 360
Śumbha (dānava), 492, 832, 1288
Sumeru, Mount, 319, 788, 836, 1300, 1357, 100
Sumitrā: Daśaratha's wife, 882, 952, 953; gives birth to Lakṣmaṇa and Śatrughna, 170, 176,

Sumitrā (cont.)
1229; heaven attained by, 424, 1185; increaser of joy of, as epithet for Lakṣmaṇa, 4, 401, 1082, 1319; as one of Rāma's mothers, 1123; performs auspicious rites, 952–53; Śatrughna makes respectful salutations to, 367
Sundarakāṇḍa, 3, 17, 39, 41n29, 63n37, 131, 204, 20n37, 451; bodily signs (lakṣaṇa) in, 1141–42; crit. ed. of, 200; female infanticide in, 45n85; halahalā in, 846–47; Hanumān's adventures in Laṅkā in, 785; Indrajit in, 556; Jhala as critical editor of, 200n7, 205; Jhala's use of wavy line in, 203; kuthāstaraṇa in, 846–47; Laṅkā as setting of, 36, 40; naktaṃcara in, 502; Nikumbhilā in, 674; number of sargas in, 1149; Praghasa in, 485; Puṣpakavimāna in, 584; rākṣasas' libidinal excesses in, 40; Rāma "offstage" in, 12; Rāvaṇa identified in, 42; Rāvaṇa's antaḥpuram described in, 32; —boons in, 534; —representation in, vs. that of Uttarakāṇḍa, 35; —sexual threats against Sītā in, 34; red eyes associated with anger in, 565; samāśvasihi bhadraṃ te in, 1106; śṛṅgārarasa in, 40; Trikūṭa references in, 466, 482, 543; Vidyujjihva in, 550, 657; word bhāṣitam in, 78
Sundarī (gandharvī), 50; offspring of, 236, 484, 943; rākṣasa Mālyavān as husband of, 50, 236, 484
sun god. See Sūrya
Suparṇa: as Bharata, 175–76, 1228–29; as epithet of Garuḍa, 589; Hanumān possesses speed of, 317; as portion of Virāṭ Viṣṇu, 175–77, 1228–29; Viṣṇu mounted on, 500; wings of, drive back rākṣasas, 240. See also Garuḍa suparṇas (semidivine birds), 589
Supārśva (rākṣasa): son of Sumālin and Ketumatī, 236, 485
Suprabha (sage): son of Agni, 419, 1156
Suptaghna (minister of Rāvaṇa), 236, 484, 706
Surabhi (divine cow), 658
Surāji (courtier of Rāma), 132n94, 333
Surasā (terrifying female), 52
Śūrasenā (city), 377. See also Madhupurī
Śūrasenas (realm), 8, 165, 377, 994–95
Suratha (king): Rāvaṇa vanquishes, 271; Śveta's brother, 390–91, 619
Śūrpaṇakhā, 674; birth of, 25, 248, 1240; hideous face of, 248; Kumbhīnasī's relationship to, 682; male relatives not feared by, 672; marriage of, 4n46; —to Vidyujjihva, 255, 657; mutilation of, 104; —in Araṇyakāṇḍa, 85n27, 672; Rāvaṇa kills husband of, 27, 285, 657, 670, 672; Rāvaṇa's sister, 6, 25, 248, 670, 983; Rāvaṇa tells, to live in Daṇḍaka forest, 286; as sexually liberated female, 672; as taking on form at will (kāmarūpin), 670; Viśravas and Kaikasī's daughter, 6
surrogates: golden image as, for Sītā, 137, 1123–24, 1183; Lakṣmaṇa as, for Rāma, 135; in pregnancy, 43
Sūrya (sun god): Aruṇa as charioteer of, 1061; Daṇḍin as gatekeeper of, 1290; —as emissary to Rāvaṇa from, 1290; ejaculates on hair of Ṛkṣarajas, 1307, 1368; as form of Viṣṇu, 1311, 1380, 1386; Hanumān attempts to eat, 6, 21, 319–20; —given boons by, 323, 810; —leaves, 320; —not burnt by, 320, 789; —walks facing, to learn grammar, 325, 789, 801, 810; identified with Rāma, 1320; Indra gives to Rāhu to allay hunger, 320; as Mārtāṇḍa, 323, 801; Meru given boon by, 319, 788; Mitra as form of, 920; Piṅgala as gatekeeper of, 1290; Rāhu torments, 320; rākṣasas boast of identity with, 237, 487; Rāvaṇa battles son of (Yama), 274, 277–80, 640–52; Rāvaṇa's challenge of, to battle, 1289–90, 1339–40; —declined, 1290, 1309, 1340; as Ravi, 237, 396, 487, 1066, 1290, 1339–40; Sītā's innocence affirmed by, 337, 864; Uchaiḥśravas assigned to, 1290, 1339; Vālin born from semen of, 1307, 1369; Yama as son of, 1351
Sūryabhānu (yakṣa): gatekeeper of Kubera, 262
Sūryavaṃśa (solar lineage), 166
Suṣeṇa (vānara hero), 328, 775, 828 sūtaka (impurity from childbirth), 974–75 svadhā (sacred utterance), 321, 659, 793 svadharma (duties), 494, 548, 856, 1019, 1023
Svapnavāsavadattam, 448, 1135
svarūpa (inherent form), 514, 538, 611, 791, 1028, 1105, 1121, 1140, 1143, 1269, 1274; of Rāma, 906, 1036, 1176, 1207, 1257; of Rāmāyaṇa, Gāyatrīmantra as, 193, 1279, 1283; of Sītā, 885; of Śiva, 1114, 1167
Svastyātreya (sage), 225, 446
Śveta (continent). See Śvetadvīpa
Śveta (king): Agastya given jewel by, 151, 392, 1052–53; —given garland by, 1052; —releases from fate, 151, 391–92, 1051–52; —tells story of, 9, 148–51, 154, 387–92, 446, 1048–53; as ascetic, 150–51, 391, 1046, 1050; eats own corpse, 9, 150–51, 389–92, 1047–48
Śvetadvīpa (continent), 1381; MBh describes,

1377; Nārada describes, to Rāvaṇa, 1314–15; Rāvaṇa travels to, 211, 1315; —defeated by women of, 211, 1316–17 sword-belt, 500
swords (asi/khaḍga), 500, 703, 854, 1322; Indrajit (Rāvaṇi) attacks Jayanta with, 297; leaves as, 633; praharaṇa as type of, 684; rākṣasas beheaded by, 244; —wield, 1294; Rāma kills Śambūka with, 105, 108, 385–86, 1032; Rāvaṇa kills messenger with, 260; —Vidyujjihva with, 657; Rāvaṇa uses, 1300–1301, 1360; —called Candrahāsa, 596; Vedavatī's hand becomes, 605; Viṣṇu as bearer of, 240, 242, 294, 500, 501, 510, 703; yakṣas attack Rāvaṇa with, 261
Syamantaka gem, 1244–45 synonyms: commentators distinguish between, 449, 455, 506, 635, 679, 811, 851, 875, 1131; in commentarial interpretation, 452–53, 462, 511, 513, 570, 579, 675, 748, 812, 823, 1044, 1102, 1339; for place names, 487, 1268; in translation, 555, 597, 684, 742, 898, 979, 1087, 1100, 1382; in Uttarakāṇḍa vs. other kāṇḍas, 78, 491, 829, 987, 1079, 1091; Vālmīki's use of, 591 syntax: ambiguous, 445, 518, 542, 559, 727, 869, 1096; awkward or confusing, 77, 445, 455, 468, 492, 653, 708, 712, 713, 714, 715–16, 717, 750, 762, 770, 791, 804, 859, 876, 892, 935, 941, 947, 952, 953, 975, 1006, 1013, 1017, 1025, 1031, 1037, 1096, 1111, 1117, 1125, 1170, 1217, 1236, 1254, 1264, 1347, 1366–67, 1374, 1391, 1400; commentators on, 445, 455, 468, 478, 509, 518, 519, 538, 556, 618, 629, 691, 703, 708, 712, 714, 715, 724, 727, 741, 750, 767, 792, 804, 859, 869, 892, 911, 934, 930, 935, 941, 952, 953–54, 956, 959, 975, 988, 993, 996, 1001, 1024, 1025, 1031, 1044, 1048, 1076, 1077, 1093, 1096, 1111, 1117, 1125, 1165, 1217, 1239, 1264, 1272, 1274–75, 1279, 1347, 1367, 1374; Cr on, 448, 492, 559, 675, 704, 714, 928, 935, 941, 973, 986, 1061, 1170, 1231, 1273; defective, 717, 767, 774, 784, 792, 817, 834, 934, 970, 988, 993, 1093, 1096, 1231, 1254, 1273, 1274; disjointed or loose, 618, 930, 1048, 1061, 1076, 1279, 1351; elliptical, 468, 519, 538, 607, 715, 724, 767, 859, 869, 911, 928, 956, 996, 1001, 1048, 1077, 1096, 1370; forced, 746, 932, 946, 973, 1024, 1273, 1283, 1379; misunderstood, 576; redundant, 1393; unusual, 538, 654, 741, 1044; of Uttarakāṇḍa compared to other kāṇḍas, 79 tagara (medicinal plant), 689, 1028, 1121
taila (sesame oil), 928, 1028
Taittirīyāraṇyaka: common vedic utterances in, 1086, 1262; descendants of Brahmā in, 1206; Hrī and Lakṣmī as Viṣṇu's wives in, 1250
Taittirīyabrāhmaṇa: Brahmā in, 1213; common vedic utterances in, 1086, 1113, 1114, 1206, 1262; Indra and Namuci story in, 492; protection of sacrificial horse in, 1127–28; sacrifice's ten requisites (daśahotṛ) in, 1211; sāṃgrahaṇī iṣṭi in, 1102
Taittirīyasaṃhitā: aśvamedha in, 123, 1078; brahmahatyā in, 1089; Brahman in, 121; Prajāpati as wind in, 953; Viṣṇu and sacrifice in, 180
Taittirīyopaniṣad, 607 taking on any form at will. See kāmarūpins
Takṣa (son of Bharata), 10, 166, 427, 1194
Takṣaśīlā (city), 10, 166, 427, 1194 tālāvacara (cymbalist), 1120
Tamasā River: as location of Vālmīki's ashram, 337, 866–67; as goddess in UttaRāC, 61n32, 880. See also Ganges tapas. See asceticism
Tārā: identity of, 315; Aṅgada as son of, 813, 775
Tāra (minister of Vālin), 30; gods created, 326; Rāma tells Sugrīva to be affectionate toward, 328; Rāvaṇa informed of Vālin's location by, 315; as Tārā's father, 315, 775
Tārkṣya, 273, 624–25, 1276. See also Garuḍa
Tāṭakā (rākṣasī), 52; Mārīca as son of, 567
Telugu manuscripts, 205 territorial expansionism. See conquest text reconstruction, 63; critical principles for, 199–201; higher criticism in, 199n4, 200, 130, 139n120, 212, 998; problematic, 506, 708, 770, 1330; of Uttarakāṇḍa, 203–16
Thapar, Romila, 37–38n6, 47, 114n1, 160n9, 760, 1146, 1231 theology, Brahmaite. See Kataka: Brahmaite theology of theology, Śaivite, 1297–99, 1351–55 theology, Vaiṣṇava: Agastya's revelation to Rāma reflects, 1317–18, 1379–83; avatāra topos in, 169–70; commentators' interest in, 218; —hostility to Śiva reflects, 1112–14; —remarks on Kāla's identity reflect, 1201–19, 1202; —remarks on Viṣṇu's primordial form reflect, 1213–14, 1261–65; —remarks reflect, 180–86, 218, 1259–77; Cr's exegeses as, 835, 885; Cr's unusual, 1266; Cs's exegeses theology, Vaiṣṇava (cont.)

as, 853, 1036, 1171–72; Ct, Ck on Rāma's suffering in context of, 1175; Kṛṣṇa's and Balarāma's deaths in, 171–72; "Kṛṣṇafication" of Rāmaite, 18; Lakṣmaṇa's ascension in, 434–35, 1226–29; Nara and Nārāyaṇa's association in, 1364; Pāñcarātra, 176–77, 991; Rāma and his brothers in, 174–81, 1228–29; —end of incarnations of, 172–86, 438–41, 1260–66; Rāma's and Kṛṣṇa's births in, 169–70; Rāma's transformations in, 180, 1261–63; Rāmāyaṇa as foundational text of, 58–60, 89, 169–86; Rāvaṇa's encounter with and vision of Viṣṇu in, 1299–303, 1303–4, 1333–38, 1363–64; Sanatkumāra's praise of Viṣṇu in, 1310–12, 1355–60; sarga 94's idiosyncratic, 1206–19; Sītā's exile in, 89, 92–93; Śvetadvīpa in, 1315, 1361–62; of Uttarakāṇḍa, 169–86; —different, 185; of Uttarakāṇḍa's sarga 94, 1206–19; Viṣṇu as creator in, 431, 1209–14; Viṣṇu's arrow in, 991 tigers (vyāghra/śārdūla) 242, 306, 310, 312, 507, 576, 945, 1325; Bharata's army preceded by, 426; Lavaṇa consumes, 363; as metaphor, among gods, 402; —among kings, 120, 357, 384, 1027; —among men, 163, 347–48, 370, 365–66, 369, 377, 379–80, 384, 399, 404, 412, 416, 419, 421, 423, 434, 619, 1119, 1156; —among monkeys, 323, 1309; —among Raghus, 374; —among rākṣasas, 1291; —among sages, 1295; —among seers, 432, 1220; as rākṣasas' mounts, 239, 496; rākṣasas take on form of, 368; Rāvaṇa takes on form of, 582–83; skin of, as garment, 1297
Tilottamā (apsaras), 614
Tokunaga, M. 74, 77
tomara. See iron weapons: cudgels; javelins tortoises: as rākṣasas' mounts, 239, 496; shell of, 1212 transformations: bodily, of Rāma, 178, 179, 180, 181, 81, 1259, 1260, 1261, 1262, 1263, 1265–67; during pregnancy, 409, 1109–10; gender (see gender: transformation) transgressions: of Ahalyā, 304–5, 744; of Arajā, 153, 1064; of ascetic who does not honor guests, 150; authors avoid direct implication of Sītā and Rāma in, 143; brahmahatyā as, 119–30; against brahmans, 140–46, 155, 395–96; —even minor have negative results, 154, 350; of Brahmā's boon not dared, 1303; —greatness is impossible, 957; Ct and Cv on adharma as, 1024–25; Ct on Sītā's non-existent or nullified, 1151–52; curses provoked by, 39; of Daṇḍa, 151–54, 394–95, 1060; of Daśaratha, 121n37, 132; of Diti, 523; expiated by aśvamedha, 123, 129, 137, 155–56, 677, 680; —by sacrifice, 121–39; false accusations of, 52; Hanumān commits, 324–25, 806; —stops committing, 325, 807–8; of Ilā/Ila, 136–37, 405, 563; of Indra, 122–23, 128–30, 136, 303–4; —brahmahatyā as, 122–23, 156, 399–402; —Ahalyā episode as, 744; Janaka accuses townsmen of, 88; of Kabandha, 39; of Kaikasī, 26, 51–52, 247, 523; of Kālagautama, 1329, 1402; of kings make kingdom perish or suffer, 147, 382, 1013; of Kubera, 259, 563; of Kumbhakarṇa, 251; of Lavaṇa, 145–46, 362–63, 372; —replicate and reinforce Rāvaṇa's, 146; of Madhu, 287, 680; of Mitrasaha, 369; Nārada's incitement to violence not a, 625; of Nimi, 141–44, 351–52; of Nṛga, 140–42, 348–51; rākṣasa birth due to, 39; rākṣasas', of all bounds, 236–38, 490; of Rāma, 121, 123–25, 130, 136–39, 142–43, 145–48, 155–56, 893, 1013; —avoided by banishing Lakṣmaṇa, 434, 1225–26; —in PadmaP, 124–25; —people allege, 334, 337; —Puṣpaka's acceptance not a, 839–40, 849; —result in brahman boy's death, 147, 382, 387, 1015; Rāma aware of his, 156, 348; —fears, of śāstras, 1164; —frees vulture (Kālagautama) from, 1329, 1402; —purified of all, 155; of Rāma's commands avoided, 437, 1238; Rāma searches kingdom for, 385; of Rambhā, 292; rape as (see rape); of Rāvaṇa, 258, 260, 263, 266–68, 270, 273, 284, 287, 290–93, 547, 578; —sexual, 53; Rāvaṇa as greatest agent of, 53; Rāvaṇa realizes folly of, 24; of Rāvaṇa's ministers, 310; receiving gift from brahman as, 149–50; of Śambūka, 385–86; of Śatrughna, 364–65; sexual, 51–53, 122–23, 133, 137–39, 146, 153–55; —and consequences, negotiated in Uttarakāṇḍa, 133, 139n116; —as central to Uttarakāṇḍa, 142–44; of Śiva's decree is impossible, 957; śūdra performing austerities as, 146; of Śveta, 150–51, 389–92, 1050; as theme of Araṇyakāṇḍa and PadmaP passages, 150; —of Uttarakāṇḍa, 51, 119–56; of Tṛṇabindu's daughter, 227–28; unintentional, 26; of Urvaśī, 354, 923; of Vasiṣṭha, 352, 917; of Virādha, 39; women as agents of, 51–52; —as complicit in, 153, 292; of Yadu, 359, 936; of Yayāti, 143–44, 356–58; of Yudhiṣṭhira, 119–23. See also sins translations, 221–22; of Appendix passages, 76, 217–18, 348–60, 386–88, 421–24, 1285–329; of prakṣipta passages, 76, 209–10, 212, 217, 222, 1330, 1366; text omitted or ignored in, by Benoît, 1114, 1200, 1330; by Brockingtons, 63n36, 74n3, 75n25, 102; —by Dutt, 899, 1140, 1194, 1198, 1210; —by Gallimard, 117; —by Gita Press, 972, 1114, 1330, 1395; —by Gorresio, 445, 449, 586; —by Parameswaran, 63, 72, 72n25, 74n3, 102–3; —by Raghunathan, 221, 576, 855, 874, 1124; —by Roussel, 616, 1330; —by Shastri, 1041, 1096, 1102, 1193, 1392; Uttarakāṇḍa omitted in, 72, 72n25, 63, 63n36, 74n3, 102. See also specific names of translators trees: āmalaka (myrobalan), 1315, 1377–78; āragvadha, 688–89, 843; arjuna, 688, 843–44; —twin, 1288, 1334; asana, 843; atimuktaka, 843–44; bakula, 688–89, 844, 1196; campaka, 688, 843, 1195; candana (sandalwood), 331, 843; cūta (mango), 331, 688, 843; devadāru, 331, 843; jambū, 331, 844; kadamba, 290, 331, 688; kāleyaka (aloe, black sandal, red sandal), 331, 843; karṇikāra, 290, 688; karpūra (camphor), 687; ketaka, 688, 843; kiṃśuka, 583; kovidāra and kurabaka, 331, 844; lodhra, 688, 843; lists of, 331, 688, 843; madhūka, 843; mandāra, 688, 690, 843–44; nāga, 843–44, 1365; nārikela, 689; nīpa, 843–44; panasa (jackfruit), 689, 843; parijāta, 843–44, 1298–99, 1352; pāṭala, 688, 843; pāṭalī, 331, 844; priyāla, 688–89, 843; puṃnāga, 688, 843; saptaparṇa, 843–44; śleṣmātaka, 252, 539, 543; tamāla, 688–89, 843, 1196; tuṅga, 331, 843; udumbara, 1172

Tretā Yuga. See Yuga, Tretā
tridents (śūla), 654, 763; of Śiva, 477, 942, 1298; —Śukrācārya threatened with, 477
Trikūṭa, Mount, 253, 541, 543, 548; Laṅkā on, 37, 49, 235, 238, 466, 482; Shah gives etymology of, 487
Tripura: city created by asura Maya, 639; Śiva as enemy of, 233, 237, 477, 486, 487, 491, 596, 639 trirātram (menstrual impurity), 1090
Triśiras (rākṣasa), 451, 455, 706; Indra slays, 123, 924, 1085
Triviṣṭapa: as heavenly abode, 623, 1087; —of Indra, 292, 332, 623, 1315
Tṛṇabindu (royal seer): ashram of, 42, 227; daughter of, married to Pulastya, 42, 126, 228; —tale of, 42, 44–45, 51–52, 227–28; questions daughter about pregnancy, 228
"truth act." See satyakriyā
Tully, Mark, 66n2, 101–2
Tvaṣṭṛ: Āditya as matronymic of, 708; Triśiras as son of, 123, 924, 1085; Vṛtra created by, 123, 1085 twins, 420, 971, 973, 1160; Agastya and Vasiṣṭha as, 143, 146; arjuna trees as, 1288, 1334; birth order of, 973; Hiraṇyākṣa and Hirāṇyakaśipu as, 973; Lakṣmaṇa and Śatrughna as, 170; Lava and Kuśa as, 8–9, 60, 118, 164, 370, 419–20, 971; Nalakūbara and Maṇigrīva as praiseworthy, 693; names of, 974–75; Rāma acknowledges as sons, 420, 1160, 1165; recitation of poem by, 999; sons of Sītā as, 20, 100, 115, 143, 419, 972

Ucchaiḥśravas (Āditya's horse), 1290, 1339
Uḍāli Varadarāja, 16n1, 204; commentary of, 212–16; date of, 202. See also Varadarāja Udaya, Mount, 300, 723 uddīpanavibhāvas (stimulant factors), 33
udumbara wood, 1172–73
Udyogaparvan, 78n18, 122–23, 660
ulūka. See owl
Umā. See Pārvatī universal ruler: Rāma as, 58, 66, 160n6, 161–62, 165, 167–68, 823, 894, 1076, 1251. See also cakravartin Unmatta (rākṣasa): son of Mālyavān and Sundarī, 236; as Mahodara, 454, 484 upākhyānas (secondary narratives), 1148; of MBh, 71, 75, 220. See also Rāmopākhyāna of Mahābhārata upāyas (strategic means), 488, 703, 960; four, 540
Upendra (Viṣṇu), 180–81, 901, 1169, 1214, 1251, 1261, 1265–66, 1278 upodghāta (preface): curse of Niṣāda in, 849; krauñcavadha episode in, 95n47; Tamasā River in, 866; Uttarakāṇḍa known to, 67; Vālmīki in, 60
Ūrmilā (wife of Lakṣmaṇa), 820, 1249–50
Urvaśī (apsaras), 923; as foremost of apsarases, 353, 354, 921; lives with Purūravas, 354, 923; Mitra curses, 354, 924; —solicits, 354, 921–23; narrative of, 142–43, 353–55, 918; Varuṇa seduces, 353–54, 922
Uśanas Kāvya: Arajā cursed by, 152–53, 395–96, 1064; Arajā's father, 394, 1058; Daṇḍa cursed by, 395; Daṇḍa's destruction threatened by, 152–53, 395–96; —kingdom destroyed by, 9, 33n109, 152–53, 395, 1061–62;

Uśanas Kāvya (cont.)
Daṇḍaka forest cursed by, 286, 674; Devayānī's complaint heard by, 357; —father, 213–14, 357, 931, 933, 1058; as purohita of asuras, 153, 676, 931, 1056; —of Daṇḍa, 393; Śukrācārya as name of, 214, 447, 676, 899, 1056, 1138; Yayāti cursed by, 7, 143–44, 358, 935–36
uśīra (khas-khas grass), 610
Uśīrabīja (mountain), 269, 610 utopian reign. See Rāmarājya
Uttarakāṇḍa: Agrawal on, as integrated, 116–17; Ahalyā story in, 15n11; Antoine on structure of, 115–16; anuprāsa in, 748; anxieties of adult male world expressed in, 156; appendix passages of, 212–18; aśvamedha and rājasūya's agonistic nature negotiated in, 161–64; aśvamedha as central moment in, 118; audience concerns addressed in, 59, 117; —curiosity addressed in, 54, 56, 117; avatāra's end addressed in, 59, 66–67, 75, 171–73; Ayodhyā as setting for main action of, 40; Bālakāṇḍa knows, 67; Biardeau on structure of, 117; Brockington on, 54, 56, 117; Bulcke on, 114–15; characters of, major, 12–35; commentators of, 218–21; —accept as part of original, 74; as composite work, 72–73, 78; controversial, 54, 63, 69, 74–75, 82; critical edition of, emendation and higher criticism in, 216–18; —history of, 199–200, 203–5; —Malayalam manuscripts' role in, 204–5, 208–9; —problematic choices in, 206–7; —Śārada manuscripts' role in, 205; —by Shah, 4, 199, 203–6; —Telugu manuscripts' role in, 205; —use of wavy line in, 207–8; criticism of, by later traditions, 70, 74; date of composition of, 68, 74, 77; —relative to other kāṇḍas, 54, 63, 73, 74, 77; —relative to other versions of Rāma story, 65, 68–70; —terminus ante quem for, 69; as different from other six kāṇḍas, 6, 12; —in representation of Rāma, 14–15, 65, 110, 113; —in representation of Rāvaṇa, 32; as end of Rāmāyaṇa story, 63–64, 75; as extended epilogue of tale, 4; final sargas of, deal with Rāma's last days on earth, 10–11, 171–73, 181, 185–86; as foundational text of Vaiṣṇava theology, 59–60, 75; frame narrative of, 41, 60; —as masculine, 43; Gāyatrī's problematic place in, 188–92; Gorresio's text of, aligns with Ct, 925; as guide to Rāmāyaṇa as ādikāvya, 60; Hanumān in, 21–23; Jacobi on, 6, 24, 36n2, 37n5, 63n37, 72, 74, 115–16, 128; Kālidāsa aware of, 69; Kosala's political and military history rewritten in, 160; Kulkarni on Paumacariya's relation to, 68; Laṅkan war historicized in, 158; as later addition, 65, 66, 72, 74; Lavaṇa's death critical to narrative logic of, 145; lexical choices in, 77–78; literary and rhetorical qualities of, 79–81; Mahābhāratra and, 70n16; mātāmahasya in, 47–48; narrative structure of, 117–18, 156; narratives about Rāma in, 220; —about relatives of Rāma in, 219; narratives of, function like MBh's upākhyānas, 75; omission of, 69–70; Parameswaran on, 63, 72, 77n14, 102–3; Paumacariya knows events of, 68; phalaśrutis in, 65n4; as political treatise on kingship, 58; prakṣipta passages of, 4, 210–12; as "Pretender Kāṇḍa," 72, 102; Pulastya not mind-born son of Brahmā in, 42; purāṇic versions of, 64n38; rākṣasas in, 36–53; —detailed treatment of, 40 —function of, 42–53; —genealogy of, 26n78, 46; rākṣasas' history accounts for half of, 37; Rāma as auditor or narrator of, 5, 12, 14, 220; —as cakravartin in, 167; —convinced of purity of Sītā in, 14; —critiqued in, 135–36; —gives Hanumān pearl necklace in, 23, 329; —not involved in half of, 54; —rarely active participant in, 5, 14; Rāma's brahmahatyā not explicit in, 126, 129–30; —emotional reactions muted in, 130, 136; —reputation, in, 16; —role limited in, 3, 56–57; —succession addressed in, 58; Rāmāyaṇa's length specified in, 67–68, 417, 1149; Rāmopākhyāna and, 70–72; rape in (see rape); Rāvaṇa in (see Rāvaṇa); Rāvaṇa's brahmanical lineage in, 129; —final martial conflicts in, 28; —grandeur demonstrated in, 55; Râvaṇeïs of, 115, 128; revamping of, 65; royal conduct in, 84; Śambūkavadha in, 104–13; —controversial, 82; satyakriyā (truth act) in, 31, 31–32n102; second half of, by different author, 78; self-referencing of, 67, 177–81, 423–24, 1227, 1280–81; sexual transgression and its consequences negotiated in, 133, 139n116, 142; —as a core concern of, 51–52; Sītā as emotional heart of, 17; —as incarnation of Vedavatī in, 16; —given voice only twice in, 19; Sītātyāga in, 82–104; —controversial, 82; —as core element of, 7; spuriousness of, 63, 65, 69, 74, 114; structural connectivity of episodes in, 126, 148, 156; śūdras' practice of asceticism forbidden in,

15, 385, 1025; tag verses in, 468; territorial expansion in, 165–68; three textual segments of, 75–76; Tokunaga on caesura shift in, 77; translations of, 221–22; Tretā Yuga references only in, 609, 1043; as unified narrative, 119, 124; in Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa (see Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki)
Uttarāphālgunī (lunar asterism), 483, 493
Uttararāmacarita: abandonment of Sītā in, 92; Lava drives off Rāma's army in, 164; Rāma blesses Śambūka in, 108, 1033; —self-criticism of, in, 88–89, 108–9; Śambūka pays respects to Agastya in, 108; Śambūka's poetic descriptions in, 108; Shulman on emotions in, 88; Sītā's ordeal in Laṅkā does not convince people in, 1153; —suicide attempt in, 880. See also Bhavabhūti

Vāc (goddess), 267, 601. See also goddesses: of speech
Vaideha. See Janaka
Vaidehī. See Sītā
Vaidiśa, 1237; Śatrughātin rules in, 167n33, 437 vaidūrya, 552, 558, 572–73, 584, 845–46, 863. See also emerald; lapis lazuli Vaidya, C. V., 37n6, 39
Vaidya, P. L., 20n7, 201–4, 206–35
Vaijayanta, 351, 915
Vaikuṇṭha: Bharata as lord of, 902; location of, 1252, 1276, 1278; as brahmaloka, 903; as Viṣṇu's heavenly realm, 110, 1177, 1266, 1282; —avatāras' abode, 1263; —blazing energy, 1265
Vainateya, 245, 500. See also Garuḍa vairāgya, 62
Vairocana (Bali). See Bali
Vairocana (grandfather of Vajrajvālā), 256
Vaiśākha (lunar month), 609, 689, 1105
Vaiṣṇava theology. See theology, Vaiṣṇava
Vaiśravaṇa. See Kubera Vaiśravaṇa
Vaiśvānara (Agni), 322. See also Agni vaiśyas: brahmans and kshatriyas served by, 384; eligibility for asceticism of, 384, 1025; MBh on natural activities of, 1023; Rāma asks Śambūka if he is a, 386, 1031; Sītā's oath witnessed by, 419; śūdras revere, 384, 1023; vedas and purāṇas regulate conduct of, 1019, 1023
Vaitaraṇī River, 633–34
Vaivasvata (Yama): abode of, 147, 282, 387; as another name for Yama, 1034; Brahmā addresses, 279; in highest heaven, 280; men with king spared by, 1327, 1399; Mṛtyu addresses, 278; Rāvaṇa resolves to slay, 274; —shoots arrows at chariot of, 278; warriors of, fall in battle, 277; wields rod of Kāla, 279. See also Death; Kāla; Mṛtyu; Yama vājimedha. See aśvamedhas vajra: of Indra, 510, 992, 1083; —Hanumān struck by, 22, 321, 792; —Hanumān made invulnerable to, 323, 801; —one-third of Viṣṇu as, 129, 401; —sound of, 594; —unable to strike Rāvaṇa, 723; —Vṛtra slain by, 129, 402, 923–24, 1084, 1085; Śatrughna's unfailing arrow likened to, 375, 988; in simile, 242, 243, 258, 502–3, 510, 559, 1301, 1381; wielder of the, as epithet of Indra, 402, 765, 1317, 1382
Vajrajvālā, 256, 256
Vajramuṣṭi, 236, 484
Vālin: Aṅgada's father (see under Aṅgada (vānara)); birth of, 211, 1305–9, 1366 (see also Ṛkṣarajas); cremation ceremony of, 1370; curse causes enmity between Sugrīva and, 325; Hanumān more powerful than, 318, 809; —protects Sugrīva from, 21, 22, 319, 325, 809; Kiṣkindhā protected by, 315, 775; Māyāvin destroyed by, 553; naming of, 1307, 1366, 1369; as only vānara able to stand against Rāvaṇa, 315; Rāma's killing of, 15, 83n1, 832; —rationalized, 30–31, 782; Rāvaṇa captured by, 30, 315–18, 778–81; —disregarded by, 316, 777, 778; —forms alliance with, 30, 317–18, 782; —informs minister Tāra of intention to battle, 315, 776, 777; Ṛkṣarajas as father of, 325; —succeeded by, 325, 808; Śakra presents golden necklace to, 1307; sandhyā rites performed by, 315–6, 317, 777, 780–81; Sugrīva driven out of Kiṣkindhā by, 325; Tārā's lament at death of, 63n35; unequalled in power, 30; Vāsavi as epithet of, 781; vedas and śāstras known by, 778
Vālmīki, passim; as ādikavi, who creates poetry, 61–62, 64n38, 75, 78, 80, 89, 202, 1139–40, 1148, 1280; —Ānandavardhana on, 62; Ānandarāmāyaṇa attributed to, 109; anger of, toward Rāma in RaghuVa, 87–88; —in UttaRāC, 1134; ashram of, 155, 965; —duration of Śatrughna's journeys to, 962–33, 999; —Lava and Kuśa dwell in, 164; —location of, 337, 866–68; —parrots hear Rāmāyaṇa in, in PadmaP, 94; —Rāma orders Lakṣmaṇa to abandon Sītā near, 19, 337;

Vālmīki, passim (cont.)
—Śatrughna visits, 8, 145–46, 215, 367–68, 378, 1001; —Shah on Śatrughna's visit to, 215, 998–99; —Sītā's anxiety dispelled by women of, 889; —Sītā gives birth in, 8, 67, 370; —Sītā's stay in, 862, 1169; at aśvamedha of Rāma, 96, 414; as Bhārgava, 1138, 1148, 1280; boys tell, about Sītā, 342–43; Brahmā on telling of Rāma's story by, 216, 423, 1177–78; caste groups who identify with, 100–101; Cr on special insight of, 887–88; as Daśaratha's friend, 341, 878–79, 889; disciples of, 415, 1136, 1281–82; —Sītā's sons as, in Saundarananda of Aśvaghoṣa, 68; does not enter birth chamber, 972, 974; as foremost of sages, 1157; genius of, 60; inner intentions of Sītā and, according to Cr, 1153; "king of poets" according to Cv, 1267; Lakṣmaṇa observes interaction between Sītā and, 891; —takes Sītā to ashram of, 341; —tells Rāma that he left Sītā at ashram of, 347; Lava and Kuśa, distinguished at birth by, according to Cr, 973; —given amulets by, 370, 974–75; —given injunctions by, 1135, 1137; —given instructions by, about how to act in presence of Rāma, 414–15, 1137; —given instructions by, about reciting twenty sargas a day, 415–16, 999, 1145, 1147, 1151; —identified as sons of Rāma by, 419, 1160; —identify, to Rāma as author of poem, 417, 1148; —named by, 370, 974; Lava and Kuśa's birth reported to, 370; Lava and Kuśa taught Rāmāyaṇa by, 67; —ordered to recite Rāmāyaṇa to Rāma, 414–15; —sent to recite Rāmāyaṇa by, 138, 414; Śatrughna welcomed by, 379; leaf hut of, 414, 976, 1133, 1180; —unlikely to be constructed by hands of, 1133; Mitrasaha Saudāsa's story narrated to Śatrughna by, 368–69; Nārada narrates Saṃkṣiptarāmāyaṇa to, 66–67; Niṣāda cursed by, 849; patriarchal worldview of, 52; popular tradition about humble social origins of, 100–102; as Prācetasa, "son of Pracetas," 192, 415, 419, 901–2, 1148, 1160, 1278, 1280; Rāma accepts view of, about Sītā's purity, 20, 420, 1166; —asks, to have Uttarakāṇḍa performed, 423; —begs, for forgiveness, 420; —criticized by, for abandoning Sītā, 86; —cursed by, in PadmaP, 94, 901–2; Rāma's food offerings to, refused, 1133–34; as Rāmāyaṇa's composer, 11, 60–61, 67–68, 183, 192, 202, 417, 441, 998, 1002, 1005, 1139–40, 1147–49, 1177–78, 1277–78, 1280–82 (see also Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki); Śatrughna and his troops hear poem by, 378–40, 998–99; Śatrughna goes to hut of, according to Cg, 976; —praised by, for slaying Lavaṇa, 378–79; —takes leave of, 371, 380; seers accompany, 1133; Sītā brought to assembly by, 9, 20, 96, 419, 1157; —given refuge by, 7, 20, 67, 86, 101, 343; —purity of, sworn to by, 10, 20, 89, 138, 154, 419–20, 1160–62, 1166, 1169; —put in care of ashram women by, 343–44; —recognized by, as wife of Rāma, 344; —recognized by, as being without sin, 343, 889; smile of, explained by commentators, 963; in Uttarakāṇḍa, role of, 101; vedas' authority invested in, 188; women ask, to prepare amulets, 370, 974; —considered impure cannot interact with, 974; yogic trance of, 1378
Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa. See Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki
Vāmadeva (sage), 1298, 1353; arrives at Rāma's court, 383, 1015; as Ikṣvākus' officiating priest, 1116–17; Rāma summons to aśvamedha, 412; realizes his own divinity, 1207–8; Sītā's oath witnessed by, 419
Vāmana (diggaja), 307, 754 vāmanāvatāra. See avatāras: vāmana vānaras: applaud Agastya's account of Rāvaṇa, 814, 1304, 1365; —Rāma's speech, 329, 746; army of, despairs at sight of ocean, 318, 784; brahman priests and vedic sacrifices of, 1370; departure from Ayodhyā of, as transition, 131; —their sadness on occasion of, 836–37; duration of Ayodhyā visit by, 829–31, 842, 849; —extended due to devotion to Rāma, 328; fasting to death discussed by, in Sundarakāṇḍa, 1013; gods create, on Rāma's behalf, 813; —father, on female monkeys et al., 184, 1240; Indrajit's chariot destroyed by Lakṣmaṇa and, in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 452, 678; kennings for, 829; Nandin prophesies destruction of rākṣasas by, 35, 265, 592; Rāma addresses, 828; —attended on by, 816; —delights in the company of, 328; —dismisses, 328–29, 424, 815; —distributes gifts and tribute to, 6, 328, 827; Rāma followed by, on mahāprasthāna, 11, 23, 59, 437–39, 1240–42, 1245, 1254–55, 1275; —except for Hanumān et al., 11, 23, 177n29, 438, 1243, 1244, 1245, 1272; Rāma praised for bringing under his sway, 133, 334; Rāma's army is mainly, 157, 161; at Rāma's aśvamedha, wait upon brahmans, 413–14, 1125, 1129–30, 1132; at Rāma's consecration, 130n86; as Rāma's devotees, 184, 439, 1185, 1254–55; under Rāma's rule, 424, 1184; as Rāma's saviors, 828; Rāma summons to aśvamedha, 412, 1119; —urges Sugrīva to look kindly upon, 328, 832; as Rāmāyaṇa auditors, 417; Rāvaṇa travels to capital of, 30; red faces of, 777; return to merge with their divine fathers, 182–84, 441, 1271–75; in Ṛkṣabila cavern, 52; Ṛkṣarajas as king of, 325, 1306, 1371; sacrifice their lives for Rāma, 184; seers father some, 1240; Sītā's oath witnessed by, 419, 1172; Sītā sought by, in Kiṣkindhākāṇḍa, 3; species of, 777; Sugrīva's madhuvana destroyed by, in Sundarakāṇḍa, 944; take forms at will (kāmarūpins), 328, 437, 534, 816, 1308, 1370; twenty most prominent among named, 818; Vālin and or as (see Vālin); as Vālin's ministers, 775 van Buitenen, J. A. B, 70n17, 122, 677, 864, 1111, 1263

Varadarāja (Cv): on ākāśa as referring to liberation (kaivalya), 179–80; as earliest known Rāmāyaṇa commentator, 179, 202n17; Shah on Malayalam mss. being older than, 204; on Viṣṇu's body (tanu) as his abode, 179. See also Uḍāli Varadarāja
Vārāṇasī, 326, 1324
varṇa (color or appearance), 271, 462, 614, 617, 667, 711, 738, 958, 996, 1110, 1126–27, 1131, 1146
varṇa (traditional social class): in Ayodhyā, 39–40, 52; of bards and performers, 972, 1231; as basis for critique, 82, 86; of brahmans predominant or superior, 1016, 1018, 1040; of Budha unclear, 1102, 1107; duties or svadharma of, 493–94, 548; eligible for asceticism, 1026; inequalities of, 98; kshatriyas vs. other, 1018–19; of rākṣasas or Rāvaṇa, 39, 55, 232, 474; Rāma asks Śambūka about his, 1030–32; Rudra has qualities of warrior, 748; ruling, 853; social history of, 895–96; śūdras, 386; —as lowest, 105, 384; Śveta dines with own, 1046; varṇa as, 738. See also classes; varṇāśramadharma
varṇāśramadharma, 106, 108–9, 111–13, 156, 184, 1020, 1053
Varuṇa: Añjana as elephant of, 763; becomes haṃsa from fear of Rāvaṇa, 269; boon of, to haṃsas, 271; —to Hanumān, 323; divine weapon-spell of, 264, 582, 1294; Go and Puṣkara as sons of, 660; identity of, 617, 920; Mitra attains position of, 398, 1075; noose of, 1327; ocean as abode of, 280–82; Rāvaṇa battles sons and grandsons of, 32, 282, 283, 661, 663; —vows to kill, 299; Urvaśī and, 141–43, 213, 353–54, 456, 922; semen of, deposited in pot, 354–55, 456, 920, 922, 924–26; —Agastya born from, 355, 925; —Vasiṣṭha born from, 355; voice of, 664; as world guardian, 230, 367, 464
Vāsantī (forest divinity), 88, 92n36 vaṣat, 321, 439, 793, 880, 1251
Vaṣaṭkāra, 420, 1112
Vāsava. See Indra
Vāsavi: as epithet of Arjuna Pāṇḍava, 78; —of Vālin, 781
Vasiṣṭha: ashram of, 345–46; at aśvamedha of Rāma, 412; birth of, after Agastya's, 142, 355; —commentators on, 920, 925–26; —from semen of Mitra and Varuṇa in pot, 141n126, 142, 213, 353, 355; —thematically tied to birth of Lava and Kuśa, 143; commentators on blazing energy (tejas) of, 927; —on curse of, on Nimi, 970; —on disembodiment of, 919; —on foreseeing of Rāma's death by, 1225; —on heavenly form of, 448; Durvāsas's prophecy about Rāma heard by, 345; as Ikṣvākus' purohita, 113, 355, 1117, 1224, 1319; Indra's sacrifice performed by, 352; maxim of brahmans and, 722; Mitrasaha's aśvamedha overseen by, 368; —curse by, 145n140, 369; —desire to curse, 968; in Murder of Sambuka, 112–13; Nimi asks, to perform sacrifice, 352; —curses and is cursed by, 352–54, 919; parentage of, confused, 143; rākṣasa takes on form of, 369; Rāma advised by, about treatment of brahmans, 1323; —narrates tale of, 7, 139, 351–56; Rāma ordered by, to banish Lakṣmaṇa, 434; —to listen to townspeople, 435; Rāma's rite of departure performed by, 438; Rāma tells, of death of brahman's son, 383; among seven great seers, 225; Sītā's oath witnessed by, 419; in UttaRāC, 92
Vasu. See Sāvitra
Vasu (son of Nṛga), 213n56, 350–51, 913
Vasudā (gandharvī), 50, 236, 486
Vāsudeva, 1336; Kṛṣṇa as, 13, 140n121, 349; Rāma as, 161, 176, 991, 1213–14, 1229; —as vyūha of, 176–77, 991, 1229
Vasudhā (earth goddess), 422, 486, 1173. See also Dharaṇī, Mādhavī
Vāsuki, 280, 653, 1301
Vasus (class of divinities), 293, 295, 297, 301, 705, 1298, 1300. See also Sāvitra

Vāyu: afflicts gods and all creatures, 793; "bearer of scents" as rare epithet of, 798; blocks breath, urination, and defecation, 321–22, 794, 798–99; as Brahmā manifested, according to Ck, 1166–67; Brahmā receives prostration of, 323, 798–98; deity vs. element, 794; as foremost of gods, 420, 1166; gods propitiate, 22, 322–23, 797; Hanumān is faster than, 320; —not restrained as child by, 325; —protected from solar heat by, 320; as Hanumān's biological father, 319, 788; Indra's wounding of Hanumān angers, 6, 321–22; as inner life breath of all, 22, 322; Rāma's speed compared to, 815; refreshes witnesses to Sītā's oath, 420, 1166–67; resumes circulation in creatures, 323, 798, 801; Sītā's innocence proclaimed by Agni and, 336, 864, 1153; as Viṣṇu, 1311; as "the whole world," 322, 795

vedas, 1304, 1310, 1317, 1352; Brahmā as primordial knower of, 323; —utters, 1202; brahmans as form of, 439; commentators on Rāma's recitation of, 1247; —on Rāvaṇa's mastery of Sāma-, 755; differences among varṇas proclaimed in, 1019; Gāyatrīmantra as mother of, 187n1; naigamas as knowers of, 952, 1385; one quarter of, on earth, 1020; Paulastya (Viśravas) conceived while father was reciting, 43, 228; primordial sound of, 1213; Rāmāyaṇa equal to, 1277–78; —as form of, 193n19; —has status of, 188; —slightly inferior to, 1278; —as supplement to, 1281; recitation of, by Kuśadhvaja, 267; —by Pulastya, 42–44; —by sacrificial priests, 321, 793; —by Śatrughna, 1006–7; —Tṛṇabindu's daughter overhears, 228; —by Vālin, 316, 778, 780–81; —by Vibhīṣaṇa, 249, 528; —by Viśravas, 126, 227, 229; revelation of, to Hanumān and Vālin, 778; sāṃgrahaṇī spell associated with Yajur-, 1102; Sītā compared to, 1157–58; Sumālin and Mālin have studied, 239; Supreme Brahman as, 1247; two sections of, 1251; Vedavatī as embodiment of, 60; Vibhīṣaṇa studies, 248, 528; Yavakrīta undertakes penance to attain knowledge of, 446. See also dhanurveda; Ṛgveda; vedic rites

Vedavatī, 16–17, 31, 266–69, 598, 601–9; Agastya informs Rāma that Sītā is, 601; ascetic power of, 606; austerities performed by, 31, 266–67; —make her omniscient, 267; Bṛhaspati's granddaughter, 31, 267; claims not possible for women to kill anyone, 268, 605; cuts off hair, 268, 605; immolates herself in sacrificial fire, 16, 268; —because Rāvaṇa violates her, 268, 605; Kuśadhvaja wants Viṣṇu for husband of, 31, 267; Kuśadhvaja's daughter, 31, 267, 602; Mantharā causes Bharata to marry, 608; mother of, immolated herself, 267; protests Rāvaṇa's contemptuous words about Viṣṇu, 604–5; Rāvaṇa assaults, 16, 266–69; —grabs hair of, 31, 268, 604; —not cursed by, 268, 606 —said to have had intercourse with, 604; —spies, 266–67; satyakriyā (truth act) of, 31, 268, 606; Sītā as incarnation (avatāra) of, 16–17, 31, 268–69, 601–2, 606–9; —to destroy Rāvaṇa, 17, 268–69, 606; as vedic speech, incarnated, 267, 601; vows to be reborn to destroy Rāvaṇa, 268, 605

vedic rites: Agastya's appearance compared to three fires of, 231, 469; Agni as agent of what is sacrificed in, 1114; —connected to all, 1118; agnihotra of Viśravas, 247, 523; —of Rāma before departure, 438; Anaraṇya's army consumed like oblation in, 272, 619–21; —truth act based on his, 273; asuras and dānavas perform, 492, 1335; aśvamedha (see aśvamedha); Aśvins excluded from, 1138; as atonement, 120–25; begin in Tretā Yuga, 1020, 1022; Biardeau on Rāma as King Soma in connection with, 174n19; brahmans' names at Ila's aśvamedha evocative of, 1112; brahmans perform Śatrughna's consecration according to, 365; conditions for tainting of, 1131; conduct of yajamāna in soma sacrifices, 1172–73; of Daśaratha, 169; experts in invited to Rāma's aśvamedha, 1142; failure to complete as catastrophic, 270, 613; Gautama performs for Indra, 352; Gāyatrī (Sāvitrī) mantra authorized for all, 1251; gods drink nectar of immortality according to, 1310; —rely on Viṣṇu when they perform, 1380; great beings sacrifice to Viṣṇu with five, 1380; Hanumān disrupts sages', 22, 324, 805–6; in heaven, 1133; of hotṛ, 352, 917; of Ikṣvāku, 393, 1055; of Indra, 352, 916; —vaiṣṇava, 305, 745; of Indrajit, 42n32, 286–88, 303, 675–79, 682, 736, 749, 956; kings not authorized to perform household, 1246; of Marutta, 35, 269, 610; —in MBh, 610; —Saṃvarta officiates at, 269–71; —to Śiva, 411, 1114; of Mitrasaha, 368–69, 964–67; of Nimi, 141–42, 352, 916–17; —performed by seers, 355–56, 927–28; perish for embezzlers, 1324, 1392; performance of, as most sacred of moments,

53; for purification of wives, 1152; Puṣpaka compared to fire pit of, 284, 668; of rākṣasas, 49, 239; Rāma and brothers discuss, 16, 398–411; —like fires of, 1200; —perform, 4, 10, 13, 56, 425, 429, 814, 816, 818, 849–50, 1186–87, 1199–202; of Rāma, completed before departure for Sāketa, 1176–77; —number and duration of, 1183–84; —performed despite Sītā's absence, 1182–83; —performed with golden image of Sītā, 10, 424, 1123–24, 1183; Rāvaṇa blazes like fire of, 585; —objects to gratification of gods through, 287, 679; Rāvaṇa's funeral according to, 15, 123n47; reside in Viṣṇu's body, 1301; royal umbrella consecrated for, 438, 1246; of Ṛṣyaśṛṅga, 92; of Śatrughna, 1006–7; sexual activity prohibited during, 95, 858, 866–67; Sītā found in sacrificial ground of, 606, 1174; —resembles flame of sacrificial fire, 268; Śiva excluded from Dakṣa's, 1113; —has form of three fires of, 1114; Śiva's association with, disturbs commentators, 1112–15, 1117–18; Sukeśa's sons compared to three fires of, 240, 499, 499; Śvetadvīpa not reached through fruits of, 1315; ten requisites of, 1211; of Triśaṅku, 1227; of Tvaṣṭṛ, 1085; Vasiṣṭha officiates at Indra's, 352; —at Mitrasaha's, 368–69; Vedavatī's performance of, 268, 606; —Cs disturbed by, 606; Viṣṇu as agent and object of, 1289, 1310, 1338, 1372; —identified with, 180, 1091, 1113, 1265, 1287; —as inner spirit of all who are objects of, 1086; —not to be seen through, 1312; —offered full complement of, 1086; —rewards everything to those who offer him, 1289; —worshiped by yogins with, 1310; Viśravas like fourth fire of, 247, 522; of Viśvāmitra, 745; women perform, 606; of Yayāti, 359, 936; "year" means "day" in connection with, 1010–11. See also aśvamedhas; Ṛgveda; sacrifices vedic sages and seers. See seers: vedic vedic speech, 31, 267, 601

vibhāvas (aesthetic stimulant factors), 33

Vibhīṣaṇa: Agastya's explanation of abduction delights, 1318; as ally of Rāma, 6, 158; birth of, 6, 25, 51, 248, 1240; Brahmā grants boons to, 250–51, 536, 1242; brahmāstra sought by, 535; as cirajīvin, 23, 536–37, 804, 1242, 1244; consecration of, compared to Bharata's sons', 1190; as dharmic rākṣasa, 23, 25, 48, 248; during aśvamedha, waits upon seers, 414, 1125, 112; human form assumed by four ministers and, 486; as immortal on par with Kubera, 536–37; Lakṣmaṇa advised by, about killing Indrajit, 956; in Laṅkā during expedition against Madhu, 289, 685; lives until end of kalpa, 1244; ministers of, 6, 485–86, 816, 818, 833; —Anala et al. as, 236; rākṣasas slain by vānaras named by, 451, 454, 484–45; Rāma attended upon by, 816; —dismisses, 22; —embraces, 330, 836; —exhorts to rule righteously, 329; —given Puṣpaka by, 838; —gives gifts to, 328, 827; —invites to attend aśvamedha, 412; —leaves behind on earth, 1244–45; —places on throne, 161, 786; Rāma tells, to remain on earth, 11, 23, 177, 438, 1242–43; —to remember him and Sugrīva, 329; Rāvaṇa criticized by, for abductions, 287, 680–83; Rāvaṇa's brother, 549; Rāvaṇa told about Kumbhīnasī by, 48, 287–88, 680–83; reluctant to perform Rāvaṇa's funeral rites, 15n14; reminded of Indrajit's capture of Indra, 746, 1304; Saramā married to, 256, 555, 1189; Vaiśravaṇa's messenger honored by, 258, 560; vedic study and asceticism of, 248–49, 528, 531–32; Viśravas does not curse, 25

vibhūtis (divine manifestations), 187

Vidarbha: Sudeva as king of, 150, 390, 392, 1049, 1053

Videha: Janaka as king of, 16, 356; Nimi in lineage of kings of, 915; play on name of, 356, 929; Sītā as princess of, 332, 1182

Vidyujjihva (rākṣasa): cannibalism of, 658–59; identity of, 550, 657; Kākala's son, 255; Rāvaṇa kills, 27, 657; Śūrpaṇakhā's husband, 27, 255, 672

Vidyutkeśa (rākṣasa), 45, 48–49, 232, 233, 474, 475, 476, 518

Vikaṭa (rākṣasa), 41n31, 226, 231, 236, 451, 485

Vimalasūri, 68

Vīṇā (goddess), 1359

vīṇā (lute). See lute

Vinatā (mother of birds), 589, 1276

Vindhya (mountains), 76n8, 152, 311, 750, 764, 116, 1352; Daṇḍa's city is between Śaivala and, 152–53, 393, 396, 1030, 1056, 1065; Lava's kingdom established on slopes of, 167, 438–39; Narmadā located in, 306

Virādha (rākṣasa), 34, 38–39; burial of, 123

vīrāsana (yogic posture, "warrior's stance"), 249, 530–31, 1346

Virocana (asura or daitya king), 214, 278, 602, 646

Virūpākṣa (rākṣasa), 41, 226, 236, 252, 294, 451, 484, 1344
Viṣṇu: abode of, 178–80, 184; —in Vaikuṇṭha, 1263; as Aditi and Kaśyapa's son in form of Rāma, 431, 1214, 1317; Ādityas as brothers of, 1214; affection of, for Vṛtra, 129, 401; Ananta as cosmic bed of, 1373; —as manifestation of, 170–72; arrow of, consists of blazing energy (tejas) of, 376, 991; —created to kill Madhu and Kaiṭabha, 365; —described, 375; —he alone knows, 376, 991; —is primordial body of, 276, 991; —powered by Agni's energy, 993; —Rāma gives to Śatrughna, 365, —Śatrughna kills Lavaṇa with, 376; —Śiva's weapon may be superior to, 957; aśvamedha to propitiate, 1086, 1113; avatāras of (see under avatāras); avatāric mission of, unresolved in earlier kāṇḍas, 59; Bali praises, 1287–89; Bharata as portion of, 181, 1269, 1266; —as famed form of, 902, 1278; Bhṛgu curses (see under avatāras: Rāma as Viṣṇu); body of, as consisting of blazing energy, 1265; —of food, 1262; —of suffering, 1259–60; body of, as pure energy, 180; Brahmā asked to grant heavenly worlds to devotees of, 182, 440; Brahmā born from, 1212; —from grace of, 486; —from lotus in navel of, 470, 1328; Brahmā invites, to return to heaven, 178–79, 440, 1217, 1259–68; —reminds Rāma that he is incarnation of, 422–23, 1175–76; in Brahmaloka, 902–3; casts off earthly body, 1266; chariot of, 509–10; commentators on meanings of name of, 181, 1267, 1278; —meanings of name Nārāyaṇa of, 602–3, 1036–37; commentators on transformations of, 178–81; compassion of, 1398; composite incarnation of, as sons of Daśaratha, 174–77, 1215, 1229; —precise distribution among sons unclear, 169–70; on cosmic ocean, 1211; demons follow, 1267; as destroyer of the world, 1334; devises strategies to destroy gods' enemies, 1335; devotees of, go to abode of, 1377; —to Sāntānikas, 441, 1270; —to Śvetadvīpa, 1315; earth enters belly of, 1328; earthly sojourn of limited, 1215; enters his own proper energy, 180, 440, 1265; as eternal ākāśa or brahman, 1263; foretells birth as Rāma Jāmadagnya in Tretā Yuga, 1016; Garuḍa aids against rākṣasas, 50, 240; Garuḍa's being wounded forces retreat of, 243; gods approach for aid, 58, 124, 169, 237–38; —for means of liberating Indra, 402, 1086; —for refuge, 50, 237–39; gods born as monkeys to aid, 813; —long to have him back in heaven, 11, 431–32; —as obedient subjects of, 1219; —promised by, that he will slaughter rākṣasas, 238; —protected by, 431, 1217; —told to propitiate with aśvamedha, 402; —welcome to heaven, 180; —worship, 402, 440; has no reason of own to kill rākṣasas, 495; heavenly ascension by, in vimāna in PadmaP, 1276; as Hiraṇyagarbha or Brahmā/Prajāpati, 181, 1086, 1127, 1157, 1214, 1218; as Hiraṇyagarbha's son, 1216; human body assumed by, through power of illusion, 1260; iconography of, 171, 179; imperceptibility of, 953; importance of, relative to Brahmā and Rudra, 1214; —to Śiva, 1115; incarnations of (see under avatāras); independence of, 1210; Indra begs him to kill Rāvaṇa, 293–94, 704–5; —to destroy Vṛtra, 129, 400–401; as Indra's younger brother, 511, 513, 901 (see also Upendra); —called Vāsavānuja, 513; —Cr on, 692–93; infatuates all beings, 1267; as inner spirit of all who receive sacrifice, 1086; Kāla as son of, 1206–9; Kaustubha jewel on chest of, 1361; kills Madhu and Kaiṭabha, 474, 954; —Naraka, 646; —Pañcajana, 813; kings as, 1041; as Kṛṣṇa will end curse of Nṛga, 140, 349; Lakṣmaṇa as fourth part of, 174; —commentators on, 174–77, 435, 1228–29; Lakṣmī as consort of, 479, 607; līlā of, 1374; as lord of gods, 1373; —of milk ocean, 1229; Mādhavī as wife of of, 1168; Madhu and Kaiṭabha born from earwax of, 474, 1211, 1328; Mālin beheaded by, 50; Mālyavān strikes with lance, 245; Nārada pleased by his slaughter of the daityas, 273; —praises Rāma as, 1317; as Narasiṃha, 513, 1336, 1381; never turns back without killing enemy, 704; non-difference of with respect to Upendra, 181; no one truly knows, 1263–64; omniscience of, 704; power of, compared with Śiva's, 957; Prahlāda as devotee of, 492; primordial body of, internalized by Śatrughna, 991; propitiation of, also propitiates Śiva, 1118; as purifier of the world, 1069; rākṣasas battled by, 240–45; —driven out of Laṅkā by, 26, 230, 467, 469; —force him to hold his breath, 241; —retreat from fear of, 246, 353, 519, 540; —slaughtered by, 253; Rāma as playful form of, 1070; —attains state of, 1267; —claims feats of not equal to Hanumān's, 318, 785–86; —compared with other incarnations of, 13; —enters blazing energy of, 180, 440, 439, 440, 1265–66; —tells Lakṣmaṇa of Bhṛgu's curse of in PadmaP, 901; Rāma returns to true form as, 11, 75, 431; —accompanied by allies, subjects, et al., 182 (see also mahāprasthāna); in Rāma's body according to Cs, 181, 991, 1266; Rāma's valor like that of, 815; Rāmāyaṇa as account of Rāma incarnation of, 3, 11–13, 75, 94, 169–74, 211, 220, 1218; —auditors and reciters of, attain world of or absorption in, 1282; —worshiped by Brahmā since Viṣṇu is its subject, 1277; Rāvaṇa and Kumbhakarṇa can only be killed by, 591; Rāvaṇa anxious for death at hands of, 1317; —denigrates, 268, 291; —desires to seek out for battle, 211; Rāvaṇa's boon circumvented by, 702; reestablished in triple world, 1277; return of, will free gods of anxiety, 1217; as sacrifice, 180, 1113; Śambūka attains heavenly realm of, in Ānandarāmāyaṇa, 110; Sanatkumāra praises, 1311–13; selectivity of, 1374; Śeṣa as bed of, 817; Sītā as innate, eternal wife of, 1264; —goes to world of, 1177; Śiva tells gods and seers to take refuge with, 237; Śrī and Hrī as wives of, 1249–50; as Supreme Lord takes on form, 431; —of Nārāyaṇa, 602; —of Padmanābha, 515; —of Puruṣottama, 504; —of Vāsudeva, 991, 1213; —of Virāṭ Prajāpati, 953, 1086, 1257; as Supreme Spirit, 1336–37, 1381–82; syllable A as name of, 486; three parts of, enter Indra, vajra, and earth, 129, 401, 1083; three strides of, 176; in trimūrti, 799, 1186; in universal destruction, absorbs all beings, 502; —phenomenal universe, 1210; Upendra as epithet of, 180–81, 901, 1169, 1214, 1251, 1261, 1265–66, 1278; vaiṣṇava sacrifice performed by, 677, 1265; Vālmīki curses, according to Ct, 901; Vedavatī protests Rāvaṇa's denigration of, 604–5; —reserved by father as bride of, 31, 267, 601; —vows to acquire, as husband, 608–9; Vṛtra not killed by, 129, 401; vyūhas of (see vyūhas); war cry of, 506; weapons of, conch as, 507, —discus as, 501, 572; —horn bow as, 500–501, 507, 1378 —ploughshare as, 501; —sword as, 501; —take on human forms to follow, 1249; wind as form of, 953; women impregnated in alternate ways by, 170; world pervaded and disciplined by, 1380, 1382, 1392. See also Nārāyaṇa

Viṣṇupurāṇa, 607

Viśravas, 6, 44; ashram of, 462, 527, 539, 543; Bharadvāja marries Devavarṇinī to, 126, 229; Cs on detachment of, 461–62; Kaikasī asks, to marry her, 25, 50–51, 246–47, 522–24; Kaikasī cursed by, 25, 51, 53, 127, 247, 254, 263, 547, 554; Kubera Vaiśravaṇa given Laṅkā by, 230–31; Kubera Vaiśravaṇa told to leave Lāṅkā for Kailāsa by, 254–55; lineage of, 126–27, 553; —in MBh, 126–27n67; offspring of Devavarṇinī and, 229; —of Kaikasī and, 46–47, 247–48; as Pulastya's and Tṛṇabindu's daughter's son, 25, 228–29, 461; Rāvaṇa as son of, 41n28; supernatural powers of, 247, 524

Viśvakarman: celestial ornament fashioned by, 149, 388; Hanumān given boon by, 324; Laṅkā built by, 230; Puṣpakavimāna fashioned by, 297, 585, 635–36, 716, 1308; rākṣasas given Laṅkā by, 235, 467, 469, 548

Viṣvaksena: as Śatrughna, a fourth part of Viṣṇu, 175–77, 179, 1228–29, 1262; —PadmaP contradicts identification, 175–76; use of name in epics, 1276; Viṣṇu identified with, in Yuddhakāṇḍa, 1276; as Viṣṇu's chamberlain in PadmaP, 1276

Viśvāmitra: Antoine on, 78n19, 116; as archrival of Vasiṣṭha, 969; arrival of, at Daśaratha's court, 967; attainment of brahmanhood of, 12; birth of, 170n6; Ck on Kuśadhvaja as ancestor of, 600–601; Gādhi as father of, 619; Gālava as son of, 1347; history of, 78n19, 116; Kauśika as patronymic of, 445; Kuśanābha as ancestor of, 600–601; narrates story of Ahalyā in Bālakāṇḍa, 744, 475; —of Kāma becoming Anaṅga, 486; as one of the seven seers, 225; as sage (muni), 445; and Triśaṅku, 1227; vedic rites of, 745; witnesses Sītā's oath, 419

Viśvāvasu (husband of Analā), 362, 943

Viśvāvasu (identity uncertain), 233, 478

Viśvedevas, 420, 700–701, 1165

Vivekatilaka. See Uḍāli Varadarāja voice: brahmanical, expresses transgressions of Rāma in Śambūka story, 147; —marks cultural morality, 151; —narrates histories of Rāvaṇa and Hanumān, 148; —provided by Agastya, 148, 154–55; commentarial, is influential, 185–86; disembodied, 527, 842, 1153, 1328, 1401; poet gives Sītā, 19; Rāma gives, to concerns, 139, 146; Vālmīki gives, to displeasure at Rāma's behavior, 135n103

Vṛṇḍāvana, 185
Vṛṣaparvan (daitya), 143, 357
Vṛṣṇis, 13, 62, 122
Vṛtra: affection of Viṣṇu for, 401; among asuras, defeated by Viṣṇu, 1288; —foremost, 401; as brahman (or not), 123, 1079–80, 1085; austerities of, 400; —distress gods, 129; as common object of comparison, 1079; earth ruled by, 400–401, 1079; earth's role in the killing of, 1083; gods terrified at sight of, 401–2; highly regarded, 400; Indra asks Viṣṇu to kill, 129, 400–401, 1081; —credits Viṣṇu with killing, 1086; Indra kills, 129, 294, 402, 701–2, 790; —becoming despondent after, 123; —becoming incapacitated after, 923–24; —at behest of Viṣṇu, 646; —incurring brahmahatyā because of, 164, 402, 924; as Indra's paradigmatic enemy, 496, 1079; MBh story of, discussed by van Buitenen, 122–23; Mṛtyu claims to have killed, merely through seeing, 278–79; Tvaṣṭṛ creates, to avenge Triśiras, 123, 1085; Uttarakāṇḍa's account of different, 129, 139–40; virtues of, 400; Viṣṇu gives Indra means to kill, 410, 1083; —refuses to kill, 129
vultures (gṛdhra): Brahmadatta in previous birth, 1329; intentions of, malicious, 1325; mark wreckage of battle, 298, 720; released from curse, 1329, 1402; spewing fire, as evil omen, 240, 498; story of owl and (Prakṣipta III, sarga 2), 5, 14n7, 57n11, 211–12, 1325–29; —as interpolated, 211–12, 1384; —judgment in, 1327–28; —in PadmaP, 119n33, 1395; —Rāma asked to adjudicate in, 1325
Vyas, S. N.: identifies Laṅkā with Sri Lanka, 37n5; —rākṣasas as aboriginal tribal people, 37n6, 38; on jāmbūnada gold, 755; on rape of Arajā, 1057; on three clans of rākṣasas, 38, 46n51
Vyāsa: aśvamedha suggested by, as expiation in MBh, 121–22, 125, 128, 161; birth of, 1109; as cirajīvin (immortal), 23, 537, 804; Yudhiṣṭhira consoled by, 120–22, 125
Vyavasāya ("Resolution"): accompanies Rāma, 438, 1250 vyūhas: Bharata as, of Pradyumna, 991, 1229; Lakṣmaṇa as, of Saṃkarṣaṇa, 991, 1229; in Pāñcarātra theology, 176; Rāma as, of Vāsudeva as, 176–77, 991, 1229; Śatrughna as, of Aniruddha, 991, 1229; Viṣṇu enters or pervades world through, 1229 war hammers (mudgara), 262, 276, 278, 635, 718 warrior's stance. See vīrāsana wars of conquest and annexation. See conquest washerman, 98–99, 102
wavy line: Bhatt on, 202; Divanji on, 202; Jhala's use of, 203; Mankad's silence on and use of, 202; as marker of multiple plausible variants of southern recension, 201; —of uncertain readings in crit. ed., 201; Shah's use of, 207–8; Sukthankar's use of, 201–2; Vaidya on, 201; Vaidya's use of, 202 weapons, 454, 466–67, 500–503, 514, 545, 569, 574, 583, 635–36, 638, 643–44, 651, 669, 708, 719, 748, 955, 1355; of Arjuna's ministers, 310, 761; astra as word for, 583; āyudha, 640, 684, 1382; broadsword (ṛṣṭi), 241, 1300, 1357; Candrahāsa (sword) as Rāvaṇa's, 597; commentators on brahmadaṇḍa as, 803; dagger (karṣaṇa), 763; discus as Viṣṇu's, 572, 1289; —yakṣa's, 572; divine (see astra); fangs as, 157, 591; flood as, 494; of gods, 294–95, 297, 298, 301, 706, 717, 727; hands used to hold, 868; Hanumān invulnerable to, 324, 801–4, 1243, 1346; —submits to, 957; hatchet (kuliśa), 654; in human form accompany Rāma, 1250; hundred-slayer (śataghni) as, 283, 297, 663, 713; of Indra, 723; of Indrajit, 296–97, 713, 809; javelin (śakti) as Skanda's, 516; of Kāla, 166; of Kumbhakarṇa, 288, 298; Kumbhakarṇa struck by, 298; of Lavaṇa, 366, 372–74, 943, 980, 984–85, 993 (see also lances: of Lavaṇa); mace (gadā), 583; of mass destruction, 167; of Nivātakavacas, 280; noose (pāśa) as Yama's, 640; in place of crocodiles, 298, 720; ploughshare (lāṅgala), 244, 514; ploughshare (sīra), 501; praharaṇa and āyudha as synonyms for, 684; praharaṇa, 574, 632, 641, 644, 663, 687–88, 706, 713, 718; —as handheld, 684; of rākṣasas, 157, 240, 243, 261, 276, 288, 294–95, 298, 312, 684, 706, 717–18, 769; —Rāvaṇa uses, 312, 769; Rāvaṇa requests, 596–97; Rāvaṇa's ministers wounded by, 307; Rāvaṇa struck by, 276, 278, 301, 653, 722, 727; rivers as, 239, 494; rod as Yama/Kāla's, 275, 277, 511, 632, 641, 651; śarapatra grass replaced by, 749; Śārṅga and Padma as, 1382; of Śatrughna, 375, 954–55, 987, 991 (see also arrows: of Śatrughna); short javelin, 1293; Śiva gives, to Madhu, 361 (see also lances: of Lavaṇa); of Sumāli, 295; sword (khaḍga) of Rāma used to kill Śambūka, 1032–33; syllable "Hum" as, 491; truth act (satyakriyā) as, of weak, 694; vajra as Indra's, 402, 501–3, 510, 594, 801, 992, 1084–85, 1381 (see also vajra: of Indra); of Varuṇa's sons, 283, 663; of yakṣas, 261, 276, 570; warrior wounded by, 1291. See also arrows; astra; conch; cudgels; darts; discus; horn bows; iron weapons; javelins; lances; maces; nooses; spears; swords; tridents; war hammers western mountain, 325, 808, 810, 904 western ocean, 306, 317, 780, 1299 whales (mahātimi), 241, 503 widows: of Ila's retainers, 1108; as inauspicious, 671–72, 686, 953; Kausalyā as, 602; misappropriation of wealth of, 1393; Śūrpaṇakhā as, 27n85, 285, 671–72

Winternitz, Moriz, 199 wolves (koka), 507 womanhood: brought to, as euphemism for rape, 604–5; of Ila/Ilā, 406, 1096 world guardians. See Indra; Kubera Vaiśravaṇa; lokapālas; Varuṇa; Yama worms, 633

Yadu: Devayānī's son, 357; lineage of, 359, 760, 936–37; refuses exchange with Yayāti, 358, 935; threatens suicide, 357; Yayāti curses, 359, 936; in Yayāti story, 143–44, 357–59
yajamāna (sacrificial patron), 95, 676, 964, 1088, 1114, 1123–24, 1172–73, 1246
Yājñakopa (rākṣasa), 236, 453–54, 706–7
Yajñavalkyasmṛti, 475, 1069
yakṣas: Brahmā told by,"we shall eat," 232; Daśagrīva called Rāvaṇa by, 266; etymology of, 45n44, 232, 471–73; forbidden to enter Śaravaṇa, 265; Ila paid homage to by, 404; Kubera as king of, 25, 465; —repopulates Laṅkā with, 545; Mṛtyu leads, to destruction, 646–47; primordial waters protected by rākṣasas and, 45, 232; as rākṣasas' mounts, 239, 496; Rāvaṇa abducts daughters of, 32, 284; —battles with Kubera and, 260–64, 567–83; —defeats, 262–64; —invulnerable to, 250, 625; —torments, 6, 258; semidivine monkeys return to, 183, 441, 1272; Vāyu approached by, for relief, 797; Vedavatī's hand in marriage sought by, 267; Viṣṇu lauded by, 500; in Viṣṇu's limbs, 1304, 1364 yak-tail fly whisks, 1046–47, 1276, 1300, 1302, 1357
Yama, 481, 640, 633, 634, 636, 641, 648, 800, 1132, 1208, 1325, 1343; abode of, 260, 261, 275, 284, 295, 299, 374, 570, 613, 627, 631, 669, 709, 722, 732, 985, 1336; Agni accompanies, 275; attendants or army of, 633, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 653; city of, 274, 629; as comparison, 243, 277, 279, 325, 363, 414, 453–54, 511, 639, 649, 813, 945, 1285, 1286, 1293, 1319, 1332, 1344; as death or god of death, 489, 1034, 1326, 1351, 1399; epithets of, binder of sinners, 649–50, —dragger of foes, 278, 644; —ender (of all things), 243, 277, 363, 454, 511, 639, 813, 945, 1286, 1332; fire from wrath of, 278, 645; Hanumān granted boon by, 324; iron arrow given by, 1294; as king of righteousness (dharma), 269, 279, 611, 615, 635; as manifestation of Viṣṇu, 1311, 1320, 1380; Nārada goes to, 275, 632; noose of, 640; offering to, 238, 489; punishment or favor distributed by, 632; Rāvaṇa battles, 276–80, 632, 642, 643–44, 650–51; —for seven nights, 278, 644; Rāvaṇa defeats, 277, 652; realm of, 122, 616, 627, 628, 634; rod or staff of, 397, 437, 802, 1070–71, 1241; —in comparisons ("like a second"), 141, 350, 352; Sukeśa's sons harass, 237, 239; Śyāma and Śabala as watchdogs of, 611; takes form of crow, 269; as time, 631; as witness to gifts and acts, 630; as world guardian, 126, 230, 299, 464, 465, 1040, 1293, 1319, 1396. See also Death; Kāla; Mṛtyu; Vaivasvata Yamunā River: Madhuvana located on, 944; Pratiṣṭhāna located on, 937; sages live on banks of, 8, 145, 165, 360, 952; Śatrughna crosses, 373; —stays in ashram located on, 371, 963, 999; Śatrughna's army encamped on banks of, 994; Śūrasenā located on, 378
yātudhānas (class of rākṣasas), 359, 936
Yavakrīta (seer), 225, 446
Yayāti (son of Nahuṣa): Devayānī's and Śarmiṣṭhā's husband, 357; narrative of, in MBh, 213–14, 931, 935–36; —Rāma tells to Lakṣmaṇa, 7, 56, 139, 143–44, 153, 356–59; Pūru consecrated by, 359; —trades youth for old age of, 358, 935–36; Uśanas curses, to senescence, 358, 933–34; Yadu cursed by, to father rākṣasas (yātudhānas), 359 yoga: brahmans devoted to, 1157; breath control in, 503; celestial, of Viṣṇu, 178, 1260; death through, 1226; final, of Balarāma, 171; —of Kṛṣṇa, 171; —of Lakṣmaṇa, 11, 174, 434, 1227; —of Manu, 1055; as mode of praxis, 1251; postures of, in Rāma's morning rou-

yoga (cont.)
tine, 1006; powers of, in Nimi's consciousness, 928; practiced by Brahmā, 1305; —Budha, 1103; —dānava lords, 1335; —those who always worship Nārāyaṇa, 1380; —Vālmīki, 888, 1378; —Vedavatī, 605; Rāvaṇa grew powerful through, 1381; sages possess power of, 1112; vīrāsana posture of, 530–31; wider range of meanings of, 1135; Yayāti uses power of, 936
Yogamāyā, 557, 1721
yojana (unit of distance). See league
Yuddhakāṇḍa, 17, 59, 63, 123, 131, 155, 162, 175–76, 200, 204, 205, 221, 467, 613, 706, 714, 823, 830, 837, 956, 1078, 1113, 1176, 1228; Ādityahṛdaya in, 1248; aestheticization of violence in, 489, 637; agniparīkṣā of Sītā in, 83, 118n30, 864, 877, 1001, 1153, 1163; Agni proves Sītā innocent in, 14, 83; Akampana in, 484; apasavya in, 525–26; astras ("divine weapon-spells") in, 582, 638; avatāric mission of Viṣṇu (not) completed in, 59, 220; bodily signs (lakṣaṇas) in, 1141–42; Brahmā et al. remind Rāma of true nature in, 1175–76; building of causeway in, 855; commentary Vivekatilaka on, 213n53; commentators on √han in meaning of √gam in, 555; crit. ed. of, 204, 204–5, 206n35, 207; culmination of heroic activity of Rāma in, 66; daṇḍa in, 540; descriptive tone of, 76; devakaṇṭaka in, 487; direct dynasty of Rāma not established in, 58; does not have disembodied voice, 1153; doves with red feet in, 498; Durmukha in, 479; Garuḍa, in inherent form, comes to Rāma in, 1228; Gomatī River in, 872; inauspicious omens in, 525; Indrajit in, 556, 705, 736; Indrajit's chariot in, 678; —death in, 445, 452; —sacrifice in, 749; Kālakeyas in, 657; -kaṭaṃkaraiḥ in, 206n35; Kumbhakarṇa in, 717–18; Kumbhakarṇa's cave described in, 557–58; Kumbhīnasī's abduction in, 680–82; lakṣmaṇaṃ śubhalakṣaṇam in, 858; Laṅkā, as setting for action of, 36, 40; —war in, 157; Mahodara in, 661; Mālyavān in, 479; Māṇibhadra/Māṇicāra in, 574; Mātāli in, 712–13; Matta and Unmatta in, 455, 484; māyā in, 678; ministers in, 1015, 1398; natyūha in, 845; Nikumbhilā in, 674; number of sargas in, 1149; as Rāmāyaṇa's original ending, 54, 66; paramārthavit in, 912; paṭṭiśa in, 654; phalaśrutis in, 11, 66; Praghasa in, 485; Prahasta in, 484; Pratardana not mentioned in, 159, 821; Puṣpaka in, 838; rākṣasas of, 451, 454, 479, 484; Rāma, consecration of, in, 3, 54, 97, 220–21; —gives pearl necklace to Sītā in, 836; —kills Kumbhakarṇa in, 451, 518; —rage of, in, 1172; —return of, to Ayodhyā in, 159; Rāmarājya described in, 124, 160, 908; Rāma–Rāvaṇa battle in, 41, 157, 220, 644; red eyes associated with anger in, 565; Saramā in, 555, 1189; Sītā's golden image not mentioned in, 1123; —treatment in, 14, 82–84, 97–98; —reunion with Rāma in, 220; Śuka and Sāraṇa in, 567, 758; svadharma in, 494; Tāra in, 775; Trikūṭa in, 466, 482, 543; Vaidya as critical editor of, 200n7, 21–4; Vibhīṣaṇa's ministers in, 818; Vidyujjihva in, 479, 657; word bhāṣitam in, 78
Yudhājit (Kekeya): Bharata accompanied by, to city of gandharvas, 427; —met by, 1192; Bharata's arrival with army delights, 477; departs for home leaving wealth and gifts behind, 819; gandharvas slaughtered by Bharata and, 15, 166; as Kaikeyas'prince and Kaikeyī's brother, 820, 1188; Rāma asked by, to conquer gandharvas, 166, 425; —dismisses, 819; —given ten thousand horses by, 1188. See also Kekaya
Yudhiṣṭhira: aśvamedha of, 119–22, 161; Bhārata as epithet of, 120–21; naramedha and, 120; rājasūya of, 160–62, 168, 1077; sarvamedha and, 120
Yuga, Dvāpara: adharma in, 384, 1024; asceticism in, 384, 1026
Yuga: Dvāpara adharma in, 384, 1024; —asceticism in, 384, 1026; Kali, 1243–45; —asceticism in, 384, 1025–26; —mahāprasthānika in, 1247; Kṛta, 361, 457, 1040; —asceticism in, 383, 1017–19; —Daṇḍa narrative set in, 151, 392–96; —Rāmarājya as re-creation of conditions of, 3; —Rāvaṇa molests Vedavatī in, 16, 266–68; —Rāvaṇa's lineage in, 227; Tretā adharma in, 384, 1020–22; —agnihotra in, 1020; —agriculture in, 1020–22; —asceticism in, 8, 383, 1017–19; —lifespan in, 384, 1022; —meat-eating in, 1021; —Rāmāvatāra in, 609, 1016, 1312; —Śveta narrative set in, 150, 389–92, 1043; —Vedavatī reborn as Sītā in, 17, 268–69
yugas: daśāvatāras of Viṣṇu in, 1016; Nārada gives discourse on, 105, 383–84; Mṛtyu destroys world at end of each, 641; ocean wishes to submerge land at end of, 813. See also cosmic eras